{ }In these verses from Brahma-samhita the abode of Shri Krishna is described as a great thousand-petaled lotus flower made of transcendental cintamani jewels. The phrase "mahat padam" may be interpreted to mean either "the greatest abode" or "the abode of the supremely great Personality of Godhead".

Because this transcendental abode of Shri Krishna is divided into three parts (Gokula, Mathura, and Dvaraka), the author of Brahma-samhita specifies the abode of Gokula as the object of his description. The word "gokula" is generally understood to mean "an abode of cowherd men and cows" and this meaning should be accepted in spite of any number of other fanciful interpretations, based on etymology, that may be offered. The rejection of other interpretations of this word is supported by the following statement of nyaya-shastra:

"The generally understood meaning of a word is its primary meaning, and etymology-based meanings are secondary to that generally understood meaning."

In this way the Gokula described in these verses should be understood as the abode of Shri Krishna, Nanda, Yashoda, and all their friends and relatives.

In this verse we may also note that the word "sambhavam" may also be interpreted to mean "residence", in which case the phrase "anantamsha-sambhavam" means "the place where Krishna and Balarama (from whom Ananta is expanded) enjoy transcendental pastimes".

{ }Although the eighteen-syllable Krishna mantra (klim krishnaya govindaya gopijanavallabhaya svaha) is written in many places, the most important place it is written is described in the Brahma-samhita verse quoted in Text 52. In this verse this mantra is described as written in a hexagonal figure in the form of a mystic diagram. Within that hexagonal mystic diagram is situated the form of Shri Krishna, who is luminous as a diamond. The six words of the mantra are written on the six sides of the hexagon. In that abode reside the predominated (prakriti) and predominating (purusha) aspects of the Absolute. Both the predominated and predominating aspects are described as "pramananda-mahananda-rasana avasthitam" (immersed in the bliss of countless varieties of exchanges of spiritual love).

The kama-bija syllable (klim) is described in these verses as situated within the eighteen-syllable krshna-mantra.

After the description of the internal abode of Shri Krishna, which is the whorl of the lotus-flower known as Goloka, there is a description of the petals situated about that abode. Those petals are the abodes of the cowherd residents of Goloka, who are all the relatives and friends of Shri Krishna. That the cowherds of Vrindavana are the relatives of Krishna is described by Shukadeva Gosvami in the following verse (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.36.15):

tasya-of that; kamalasya-lotus-shaped abode of Shri Krishna; patrani-the petals; shriyam-of the goddesses of fortune; tat-preyasnam-very dear to Shri Krishna; shri-radha-adinam-of Shrimati Radharani and the other gopis; upavana-rupani-consisting of the gardens; dhamaniti-abodes; iti-thus; arthah-the meaning; atra-there; patranam-of the petals; ucchrita-prantanam-raised; mula-sandhishu-at the place where the petal meets the whorl; vartmani-the pathways; agrima-sandhishu-on the extensions of the petals; goshöhani-the cow pastures; jneyani-may be known; akhanda-unbroken; kamalasya-of the lotus flower; gokula-akhyatvat-because of being named Gokula; tatha-in the same way; eva-certainly; samavesha-because of being situated together; ca-also.

{ }On this lotus flower of Goloka Vrindavana are many petals known as "patrani shriyam", the many gardens which are abodes of Shrimati Radharani and the gopis. Where these petals join the whorl of the Goloka lotus flower, the paths of Goloka are situated, and the extensions of these petals are the places of the cow-pastures of Goloka. In this way the different parts of the lotus flower of Gokula Vrindavana are described.

catuh-murteh-four forms; catuh-vyuhasya shri-vasudeva-adi-catushöayasya-of the quadruple expansion of Vasudeva, Sankarsana, Pradyumna, and Aniruddha; catushkritam-fourfold; caturdha vibhaktam-in four parts; catuh-dhama-four abodes; kintu-however; deva-of the Personality of Godhead; lilatvat-because of the pastimes; tat-Him; upari-above; vyoma-yana-sthah-situated in the sky; eva-certainly; te-they; jneyah-may be known; hetubhih-with causes; purusha-artha-sadhanaih-with the processes for attaining the four goals of human life; manu-rupaih-in the forms of mantras; sva-sva-with individual; mantra-atmakaih-mantras; indra-Indra; adibhih-beginning with; shyama-blue; iti-adibhih-beginning with; iti-thus; caturbhih-with four; vedaih-Vedas; iti-thus; arthah-the meaning; shaktibhih-with the potencies; shri-vimala-adibhih-Vimala and others; iti-thus; arthah-the meaning.

are situated in the four sides of the quadrangle of Shvetadvipa. These four sides of Shvetadvipa are also the places where the four-fold mundane requirements (piety, wealth, passion, and liberation), are situated. Also situated in these quadrants are the four Vedas which contain mantras enabling one to attain the four mundane requirements, the ten protectors (dik-palas) of the directions in the form of mantras, the associates of the hue of blue, yellow, red, and white, and the extraordinary potencies bearing the names of Vimala etc.

bhurlokaḥ-the entire planetary system from Patala to the earthly planetary system; kalpitā-imagined; padbhyam-situated on the legs; bhūvarlokaḥ-the Bhūvarloka planetary system; asya-of the universal form of the Lord; nabhitā-out of the navel abdomen; svarlokaḥ-the higher planetary system, beginning with the heavenly planets; kalpitā-imagined; mūrdhna-from the chest to the head; iti-thus; va-either; loka-the planetary systems; kalpana-imagination.

iti dvitīya-anusarena-in accordance with this statement from the Second Canto of Shrimad-Bhagavatam; svarlokaṁ-Svargaloka; arabhya-beginning with; satyaloka-Satyaloka; paryantam-concluding with; loka-planetary systems; pancakam-five; ucyate-are described.

{ }The word "svarga" is defined in the following verse (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 2.5.42):

"Others may divide the whole planetary system into three divisions, namely the lower planetary systems on the legs [up to the earth], the middle planetary systems on the navel, and the upper planetary systems [Svarloka] from the chest to the head of the Supreme Personality."*

tasmat-this; urdhvam-above; upari-above; brahmalokah-known as BrahmaloKa; brahma-atma-of the Supreme Spirit; lokah-the planet; vaikunöha-Vaikunöha; akhyah-named; sat-eternal; cit-full of knowledge; ananda-and full of bliss; rupatvat-because of it's feature; brahmanah-of the Supreme Brahman; bhagavatah-of the Supreme Personality of Godhead; lokah-the planet; iti-thus; va-or.

{ }The BrahmaloKa planet described in these verses as above Svargaloka is the spiritual world of Vaikunöha, the abode of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and not the abode of the demigod Brahma. The word Brahma, which means "great", here refers to the Supreme Personality of Godhead because He is supremely great, His greatness shown by the fact that His transcendental form is eternal and full of knowledge and bliss.

{ }That the word "brahmaloKa" means the spiritual world of Vaikunöha is confirmed by the words of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.28.17) where the word "brahmaloKa" is clearly used to mean the spiritual world:

"Thus Krishna led all the cowherd men, headed by Nanda Maharaja to the lake where Akrura was later shown BrahmaloKa (the Vaikunöha planetary system). They took their bath immediately and saw the real nature of BrahmaloKa (the Vaikunöhalokas)".

{ }The following verse from Shrimad-Bhagavatam (2.5.39) also uses the word "brahmaloKa" to mean the spiritual world of Vaikunöha:

"Satyaloka, the topmost planetary system is situated on the head of the universal form. The spiritual planets (brahmaloKa), however, are eternal."*

Text 81

öika-Shridhara Svami's commentary; ca-also; brahmalokah-the word "brahmaloka"; vaikunöha-Vaikunöha; akhyah-named; sanatanah-the word "sanatanah"; nityah-means "eternal"; na-not; tu-but; shrijya-antarvarti-within the material world; iti-thus; arthah-the meaning; iti-thus; esha-the commentary.

{ }This interpretation of the word "brahmaloka" is confirmed by Shridhara Svami, who comments on this verse:

"In this verse the word `brahmaloka' refers to the Vaikunöha planetary system, which is `sanatanah', or eternal. The Vaikunöha world is not within the material creation."

brahmani murtimanto vedah, rishayash ca shri-naradadayah, ganash ca shri-garuda-vishvak-senadayah, tair nishevita. evam nityashritan uktva tad-gamanadhikarina aha.

brahmani-the word "brahma"; murtimantah-personified; vedah-Vedas; rishayah-the word "rsi"; ca-also; shri-narada-adayah-Narada and others; ganah-the word "gana"; ca-also; shri-garuda-Garuda; vishvak-sena-Vishvak-sena; adayah-and others; tair-by them; nishevita-inhabited; evam-in this way; nitya-eternally; ashritan-residing; uktva-describing; tat-there; gamana-going; adikarinah-qualified; aha-describes.

{ }In the third line of the verse from Hari-vamsha quoted in Text 72, the word "brahma" means "the Personified Vedas", "rishi" means "Narada and the great sages", and "gana" means "Garuda, Vishvak-sena, and other great souls". These are described as the residents of Brahmaloka. These great souls are all perfectly qualified to reside in the spiritual world, and therefore the word "brahmaloka" here refers to the spiritual world.

tatra brahmaloka umaya saha vartta iti. somah shri-shivas tasya gatih. soma iti supam suluk ity adina shashöhya luk chandasah. tata uttaratrapati gati-padanvayah.

tatra-there; brahmaloka; on Brahmaloka (the spiritual Vaikunöha planets); umaya-by the goddess Uma (Parvati); saha-accompanied; vartate-remains; iti-thus; somah-Soma (sa-uma); shri-shivah-Lord Shiva; tasya-his; gatih-destination; somah-Soma; iti-thus; supam suluk iti adina-in the sutra "supam suluk"; shashöhya-by the genitive case; luka-elision; chandasah-from the verse; tatah-therefore; uttaratra-appears afterwards; gati-destination; pada-word; anvayah-following.

{ }In the third line of this verse the word "tatra" means "in Brahmaloka", and the word "soma" means Lord Shiva, who stays with (sa) Uma (sa+uma=soma). Brahmaloka is here described as the "gati" (destination) of Soma (Shiva). The word "soma-gati" is a shashöhi-tatpurusha-samasa, defined in grammatical terms by the phrase "supam suluk". The word "gati" is then added to that word.

jyotih-the word "jyotih"; brahma-impersonal brahman effulgence; tat-with that; aika-atmya-oneness; bhavanam-who have the conception; muktanam-of liberated souls; iti-thus; arthah-the meaning; na-not; tu-but; tadrishanam-like them; api-although; sarvesham-all; eva-certainly; iti-thus; aha-he describes; mahatmanam-by the word "mahatmanam"; mahashayanam-of the great souls; moksha-impersonal liberation; niradarataya-without aspiration; bhajatam-worshipping; shri-sanaka-adi-Sanaka Rishi, and other great devotees; tulyanam-equal; iti-thus; arthah-the meaning.

{ }In the last line of this verse, the word "jyotisham" means "the liberated souls who consider that they have become one with the impersonal effulgence." Not everyone there is like them. The word "mahatmanam" means "the great such, such as Sanaka-kumara and others like him, who worship the Lord and reject impersonal liberation." These are the definitions of the words in this verse.

muktanam-of those who are liberated during this life (who are unattached to the bodily comforts of society, friendship and love); api-even; siddhanam-who are perfect (because they understand the insignificance of bodily comforts); narayana-parayanah-a person who has concluded that Narayana is the Supreme; su-durlabhah-very rarely found; prashanta-fully pacified; atma-whose mind; koïshu-out of millions and trillions; api-even; maha-mune-O great sage; iti-thus; adau-in the passage beginning.

{ }That these mahatmas (the devotees) are better than the liberated impersonalists is confirmed in the following statement of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (6.14.5):

"O great sage, among many millions who are liberated and perfect in knowledge of liberation, one may be a devotee of Lord Narayana, or Krishna. Such devotees, who are fully peaceful, are extremely rare."*

{ }The superiority of the devotees of the Lord is confirmed by Lord Krishna Himself in the following verse from Bhagavad-gita (6.47):

"And of all yogis, he who always abides in Me with great faith, worshiping Me in transcendental loving service, is most intimately united with Me in yoga and is the highest of all."*

tasya-of that; ca-and; brahmalokasya-the spiritual Vaikunöha planets; upari-above; sarva-everything; urdhva-above; pradeshe-in the region; gavam-of the surabhi cows; lokah-the planet; shri-golokah-Shri Goloka; iti-thus; arthah-the meaning; tam-that; ca-also; shri-golokam-Goloka; sadhyah-advanced saintly persons; asmakam-of us; prapancika-material; devanam-of the demigods; prasadaniyah-pleasing; mula-rupah-original; nitya-eternal; tadiya-of them; deva-ganah-demigods; palayanti-protect; tatra-there; dik-of the directions; palatvena-as protectors; avarana-rupah-coverings; vartante-exist.

{ }In the next verse (quoted in Text 73), the word "tasya" means "Brahmaloka", "upari" means "above all", and "gavam lokah" means "Shri Goloka". The word "tam" (that) refers to Shri Goloka. "Sadhyah" means "the primordial, eternal demigods who bring great pleasure to us material demigods". "Palayanti" (they protect) means that as protectors of the directions they assume forms that cover Shri Goloka.

yadva tad bhuri-bhagyam iha janma kim apy aöavyam yad gokule 'pi ity ady uktanusarana tad-vidha-parama-bhaktanam api sadhyah tadrisha-siddhi-praptaye prasadanayah shri-gopa-gopi-prabhritayah, tam palayanti, adhikritya bhajanti.

yadva-because; tat-that; bhuri-bhagyam-extremely fortunate; iha-here; janma-birth; kim api-any; aöavyam-in the forest; yat-which; gokule-in Gokula; api-also; iti-thus; adi-in the passage beginning; ukta-spoken; anusarena-in conformity with; tat-vidha-of that caliber; parama-transcendental; bhaktanam-of the devotees; api-also; sadhyah-perfect; tadrisha-like that; siddhi-perfection; praptaye-for attaining; prasadanayah-worthy of attaining the mercy of; shri-gopa-the cowherd men of Vrindavana; gopi-and gopis; prabhritayah-beginning with; tam-that spiritual planet; palayanti-they protect; adhikritya-having become qualified; bhajanti-they worship.

"My dear Lord Krishna, I am therefore not interested in either material opulence or liberation. I am most humbly praying at Your lotus feet for You to please give me any sort of birth within this Vrindavana forest so that I may be able to be favored by the dust of the feet of some of the devotees of Vrindavana. Even if I am given the chance to grow just as the humble grass in this land, that will be a glorious birth for me. But if I am not so fortunate to take birth within the forest of Vrindavana, I beg to be allowed to take birth outside the immediate area of Vrindavana so that when the devotees go out they will walk over me. Even that would be a great fortune for me. I am just aspiring for a birth in which I will be smeared by the dust of the devotees' feet."*

From this verse we may understand the exalted spiritual perfection attained by the gopas, gopis, and other residents of Goloka Vrindavana, the personal abode of Shri Krishna.

The phrase "tam palayanti" (they protect it) in the verse quoted in Text 73 means "in this way they worship it".

sah-that; golokah-Goloka planet; sarva-gatah-all-pervading; shri-krishnavat-just like Lord Krishna; sarva-all; prapancika-the material world; aprapancika-the spiritual world; vastu-substance; vyapakah-extended.

{ }In this verse (quoted in Text 73), the Goloka planet is described as "sarvagatah" (all-pervading). As Shri Krishna is simultaneously present in every part of both the spiritual and material worlds, so is Goloka.

{ }In Text 73 the word mahan refers to the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This word is also used in reference to Him in the following words of Kaöha Upanishad (2.1.4):

mahantam vibhum atmanam

"The Personality of Godhead is the most powerful (vibhu) and the greatest (mahan)."

tatra-in this connection; hetuh-the cause; maha-great; akashah-sky; parama-vyoma-the spiritual sky; akhyah-named; brahma-visheshana-labhat-because of spiritual nature; akashah-sky; tat-if Him; linga-from the form; iti-thus; nyaya-of the Vedanta-sutra; prasiddhesh-because of the celebrated statement; ca-also; tat-to that; gatah-gone; brahma-spiritual; akara-form; udaya-arisal; anantaram-after; eva-certainly; vaikunöha-of Vaikunöha; prapteh-from the attainment; yatha-just as; shri-gopanam-of the cowherd men of Vraja; vaikunöha-of Vaikunöha; darshane-in the sight; tair-by them; eva-certainly; vyakhyatam-explained; yatha-just as; va-or; shrimat-ajamilasya-of Ajamila; vaikunöha-to Vaikunöha; gamanam-going; yadva-or; maha-akashah-the word "mahakashah"; parama-vyoma-the "parama-vyoma"; akhyah-named; maha-vaikunöhah-the topmost part of the spiritual world; tat-there; gatah-gone; tat-urdhva-bhage-in the topmost part; sthitah-situated.

{ }Because the Lord is the cause of the spiritual sky (mahakasha) the word "mahakasha-gatah" refers to Him. This is described in Vedanta-sutra (1.1.22):

akashas tal-lingat

"The spiritual sky is manifest from the body of the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

Another interpretation of the word "mahakasha-gatah" is that this word means "that place resorted to by those who have attained spiritual bodies". This explanation is confirmed by Shridhara Svami's commentary on the description in Shrimad-Bhagavatam of the cowherd mens' sight of Vaikunöha, and also by the history of Ajamila also recounted in Shrimad-Bhagavatam.

Another interpretation of the word "mahakasha-gatah" is "situated in the highest part of the spiritual world". Taken in this way the word "akasha" means "the spiritual sky".

{ }In the verse quoted in Text 74, the phrase "upari upari" means "splendidly manifested above all". The phrase "tava gatih" (Your destination) refers to Shri Goloka. Although the Personality of Godhead appears in many different forms and enjoys pastimes on many Vaikunöha planets and other places also, He still appears in His original form as Shri Govinda and enjoys pastimes on the Goloka planet. These are the definitions of the words.

{ }This "gati" (abode) is not ordinary, but it is "tapomayi", or "full of limitless transcendental opulences". This interpretation is corroborated in Shankaracarya's commentary on Vishnu-sahasra-nama's statement "paramamayo mahat-tapah". Shankara says:

"The word 'tapah' in this verse means `limitless transcendental opulences".

{ }In the verse quoted in Text 75 we find the explanation of the name "Goloka". In this verse the Vaikunöhaloka spiritual world is designated by the word "brahmaloka". That spiritual world is described as attained by they whose hearts meditate on Lord Vishnu with devotional love (tapasi yukthanam). This spiritual world is also described as "para", or "beyond the influence of the material energy". The name "Goloka" is defined as the residence of the surabhi cows" (gavam). Goloka Vrindavana as the residence of the surabhi cows is also described in the following verse from Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.35.25):

"Upon Krishna's return, the men, women, and cows of Vrindavana immediately forget the scorching heat of the day."

The cows of Vrindavana are also described in the verse quoted in Text 76:

"O Krishna, You protect the surabhi cows from all dangers".

{ }The residents of Goloka Vrindavana are filled with intense pure love of Krishna, and without attaining this exalted state of pure love of God, no one can enter the Goloka planet. For this reason, Goloka Vrindavana is described as "duraroha" (difficult to attain)" in the verse quoted in Text 75.

{ }After describing Goloka Vrindavana, he (Indra) then states that Goloka and Gokula are the same. He says "sa tu" (the same place). "Loka" here means "Goloka" and "dhrita" means "protected by lifting Govardhana Hill."

{ }That Goloka and Gokula are identical is confirmed by the following verse from the Mrityunjaya Tantra:

"Bhakti-devi, who delights the gopis of Vrindavana and places great devotion for the Supreme Lord in the hearts of the devotees, by her own wish brought the highest Vaikunöha planet from the spiritual world and placed it on the earth planet, where it became known by the name Gokula Vrindavana."

{ }At this point our critic may vehemently object to our interpretation of these verses from the Hari-vamsha (in Texts 72-100). He may say that our interpretations of the words "svargaloka" and "brahmaloka" are completely wrong. He may argue that Svargaloka is a specific planet, and three planets above that Svargaloka is the abode of the demigod Brahma, which is known as Brahmaloka or Satyaloka. He may further say that that word "soma-gatih" clearly means "the abode of the moon-god", and this also refers to a specific planet in the material world. In this way our critic will claim that the Brahmaloka mentioned in this verse is a material planet, and the Goloka planet is also another planet within the material plane.

To these objections I reply: Your interpretation of the word "soma-gatih" (which is situated on Brahmaloka) is not acceptable because the moon, sun, and other planets are all situated beneath Maharloka and Dhruvaloka. Your interpretation of the word "sadhya" to refer to a class of minor demigods is also unacceptable, for the minor Sadhya demigods are not at all qualified to protect the abode of Lord Brahma. We may also note that the Goloka planet is described as all-pervading (sarva-gatih) in Text 73 (hardly a word to describe an ordinary place). We are simply astonished that you are offering such a contradictory interpretation.

{ }Our critic would like to interpret the word "goloka" as simply an ordinary cow-pasture of the material world. He is, however, contradicted by Maharaja Indra, who says (in Text 74) "yam na vidmah" (We do not understand Goloka). Because these exalted persons cannot understand Goloka Vrindavana, therefore it cannot be an ordinary place of this material world. For this reason it is glorified in the confidential statements of Brahma-samhita and Hari-vamsha as an eternal spiritual abode.

{ }That Goloka Vrindavana is not a material place, but the highest planet in the spiritual world, is confirmed by the following verse from the history of Vijaya recounted in the Narada-pancratra:

"Goloka Vrindavana is the highest planet in the spiritual world. The Original Personality of Godhead, Shri Govinda, who is full of transcendental bliss and is the supreme master of the gopas, gopis, and surabhi cows, eternally enjoys pastimes there."

{ }Mathura, the best of holy places and the eternal abode of the Lord, is described in the following words spoken by Lord Varaha in the Varaha Purana:

"In the three planetary systems there is no holy place better than Mathura. O goddess, I eternally reside in Mathura."

{ }Someone may argue that since Lord Varaha says that He eternally resides in Mathura, then Mathura should be the abode of Lord Varaha. Mathura is the abode of Lord Krishna. Since Lord Varaha is a vishnu-tattva expansion of Lord Krishna, He said that He resides in Mathura in order to teach us that the Lord is not different from any of His vishnu-tattva expansions. That Mathura is the eternal abode of Lord Krishna is confirmed in the Patala-khanda in the Padma Purana:

"How auspicious is the holy land of Mathura, where Shri Krishna, the killer of Kamsa, eternally resides!"

{ }That Lord Krishna personally stays in Mathura is confirmed by the use of the words "svayam" (personally) and "sakshat" (directly) in the following verse from the Vayu Purana:

"Lord Hari, the killer of Kamsa, personally (svayam) and directly (sakshat) stays in the abode of Mathura, which is forty yojanas from Pushkara-tirtha".

atra-in this verse; sakshat-shabdena-by the word "sakshat"; sukshma-rupata-in a form not perceived by the material senses; svayam-shabdena-by the word "svayam"; shrimat-pratima-rupata-the form of the Deity; nisiddha-is contradicted; tatah-the word "tatah (from that)"; iti-thus; purva-previously; uktat-described; pushkara-akhya-tirthat-from Pushkara-tirtha; iti-thus; arthah-the meaning.

{ }In this verse the word "sakshat" means "in a form not perceivable by the material senses" and the word "svayam" (personally) means that the presence of the Lord mentioned to in this verse does not refer to His presence in the form of the arca-vigraha (Deity). The word "tatah" (from this) refers to Pushkara-tirtha, which was described in the previous verses.

As Vrindavana is the eternal abode of Lord Krishna, so Ayodhya is the eternal abode of Lord Ramacandra. This is confirmed in the following verse from the Ayodhya-mahatmya of the Skanda Purana:

"The Personality of Godhead, Lord Ramacandra, expanding Himself in the forms of His brothers (Lakshmana, Shatrughna, and Bharata), eternally enjoys pastimes in the transcendental abode of Ayodhya."

Wherever the Personality of Godhead stays is understood to be the spiritual world. This is confirmed in the following statement of Vedic literature:

"The learned know that wherever Lord Hari stays is not within the realm of matter, but is in the spiritual world."

From this we may conclude that the place where the Supreme Lord stays in His original form as Lord Krishna is the highest of all spiritual planets, above Lord Narayana's Vaikunöhaloka.

That the place of the Lord's pastimes is in the spiritual world, and not part of the material world, is confirmed in the Patala-khanda of the Padma Purana:

"O goddess please hear the glories of Mathura, the best of the seven holy cities. Mathura is not part of the material world. It is in the spiritual sky."

This is described in the Kaliya-hrada-mahatmya of the Varaha Purana:

"The wise see a great wonder there. O girl with beautiful large eyes, on the eastern shore of Kaliya lake is a large, graceful, fragrant kadamba tree with a hundred branches. O girl with beautiful large eyes, this tree gives a very pleasant shade. It bears flowers during all twelve months of the year. It shines in the ten directions."

In these verses the word "shata-shakham" means "with a hundred branches". "Prabhasantah" means "shining".

A little of the extraordinary nature of Vrindavana-dhama may be seen in the following description spoken by the Personality of Godhead in the Brahma-kunda-mahatmya of the Varaha Purana:

"O earth-goddess, listen and I will tell you of a great wonder in that holy abode where My devotees attain perfection. In the northern part of that place is a splendid white ashoka tree that at noon of the shukla-dvadashi day of Vaishakha suddenly bursts into full bloom. This tree brings great happiness to My devotee. Except for My pure devotee no one can understand this tree."

The word "dvadashi" here means "on the dvadashi". The sutra "supam suluk" confirms that this word should be understood in the locative, just as one of the pervious words is locative. The word "shuci" here means "without any other activity". Even the earth-goddess cannot understand the nature of this tree.

We may note that this verse may be interpreted in another way. If the word "yamuna-jala-kallose" is accepted as a bahuvrihi-samasa, the verse may be taken to mean: "Shri Krishna eternally plays in the land of Vrindavana, where the Yamuna flows."

This Supersoul is a four-armed expansion of Lord Vishnu. Although remaining in the material bodies of the living entities, the Supersoul remains always untouched by the sufferings of material existance. He is described in Shrimad-Bhagavatam (2.2.8):

"Others conceive of the Personality of Godhead residing within the body of the region of the heart and measuring only eight inches, with four hands, carrying a lotus, a wheel of a chariot, and conchshell and a club respectively."*

Each of the Lord's transcendental abodes is manifest in two ways: 1. in the spiritual world, and 2. in the material world. Because the Lord appears in the spiritual and material worlds, His residences are also manifested in these two places. Whether appearing in the spiritual or material worlds, each transcendental abode manifests the same form, name and qualities. Each abode is the same, whether manifested in the spiritual or material realms.

That the abode of the Lord is the same whether manifested in the spiritual or material world is confirmed by the following statement of Hari-vamsha (previously quoted in Anuccheda 106, Text 73):

"That great abode of Goloka is present everywhere, in both the spiritual and material worlds."

Some descriptions in the Vedic literatures single out either Goloka (in the spiritual world) or Gokula (in the material world) as the abode of the Supreme Lord Krishna. For example the Brahma-samhita says (5.48):

"All-pervading Supreme Lord Krishna remains in His abode, known as Goloka."

The Varaha Purana and other Vedic literatures present elaborate explanations of Gokula as the place where Lord Krishna eternally enjoys pastimes. Some may consider that this presentation of two different places as the abode of Lord Krishna is a contradiction in the scriptures. This is not so, for Goloka (in the spiritual world) and Gokula (in the material world) are the same place. There is no difference between them.

That the Vrindavana manifested in the material world is the same as Goloka Vrindavana in the spiritual world is confirmed by the following statement of the Hari-vamsha (previously quoted in Anuccheda 106, Text 76):

"O Krishna, O hero, Goloka Vrindavana in the highest part of the spiritual world is the same as this Vrindavana manifested on the earth. It is the very same place. It is this very Vrindavana that You have just now protected from great calamities, and where You remain to protect Your friends and the surabhi cows."

Although manifested in different places, Shri Mathura and each of the other places of the Lord's pastimes, are the same as their counterparts in the spiritual world. This is the conclusion of the Vedic literatures. For example, in the beginning of this passage from the Hari-vamsha, we may note that Shri Krishna showed the residents of Vrindavana that the Goloka Vrindavana of the spiritual world was manifest as their own Vrindavana in the material world.

These words of glorification spoken by the devotees prove that the earthly Vrindavana is not different from the limitless Goloka realm in the spiritual world. The Vrindavana on this earth is situated above all the Vaikunöhalokas in the spiritual world. This has been established by the previous statements of the Vedic literatures, where Vrindavana-dhama is glorified by the devotees. This supreme spiritual planet, which is divided into three realms: Mathura, Dvaraka, and Gokula, was seen in trance by Uddhava, who personally enjoyed pastimes with Lord Krishna. Uddhava's return to the material world after his vision of the Krishnaloka planet is described in the following statement of Shukadeva Gosvami (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 3.2.6):

Lord Krishna's departure from this world and return to His own abode in the spiritual sky is described in the following verses from Shrimad-Bhagavatam (12.2.29-30), where the word "divam" refers to the Krishnaloka planet:

"Shri Krishna is like the sun, and Lord Vishnu is like a ray of light expanded from the original sun of Lord Krishna. When Lord Krishna returned to His own abode in the spiritual world, Kali-yuga entered this earth.

Because of the entrance of kali-yuga, the people of the earth became addicted to sinful activities.

Now (in Texts 3 and 4) we will explain the meaning of these verses. The phrase "vishnor bhagavato bhanuh krishnakhyah" means "Shri Krishna is like the sun, and Lord Vishnu is like a ray of light expanded from the original sun of Lord Krishna." The word "divam" means the Krishnaloka planet, which consists of the realms of Mathura, Dvaraka, and Gokula, and which is situated in the topmost part of the non-material Vaikunöha planetary system." When Lord Krishna returned to that spiritual planet, then Kali was able to enter the earth.

The Lord stayed on the earth for some time and then, by the agency of His antardhana-shakti, left and no longer touched the earth. As long as the earth was not touched by this antardhana-shakti, the great kadamba tree described in the Varaha Purana and other great wonders were manifest before conditioned souls such as us. In this way Mathura and the Lord's other abodes were manifest before the senses of the people of the material world when the Lord, by His mercy touched the earth (prithivim sprishan). When people like us are touched by His mercy in this way we are able to see this kadamba tree and the other wonders of the Lord's abode. As long as the Lord's abode was manifest, the Lord touched the earth (sprishan eva aste). This is the meaning intended when the speaker of this verse said the word "yavat" (as long as).

The phrase beginning with the word "parakrantum" (Kali was unable to overpower the earth as long as Lord Krishna touched it with His lotus feet) shows that Kali entered the earth planet shortly before Lord Krishna's disappearance.

These verses (quoted in Texts 1 and 2) were spoken by Shrila Shukadeva Gosvami.

Because this verse states that Putana attained the post of Lord Krishna's mother in the svarga planet, the svarga planet must be Lord Krishna's planet, Goloka Vrindavana. The word svarga here cannot mean the planet of Indra. That Putana became Lord Krishna's mother in the transcendental world is also confirmed by the following statement of Lord Brahma in Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.14.35):

"O My dear Lord, even Putana, who came to cheat You by dressing herself as a very affectionate mother, was awarded liberation and the actual post of a mother. And other demons belonging to the same family, such as Aghasura and Bakasura, were also favored with liberation."*

The devotees' attainment of the spiritual world is also described in the following statements of the Kaöha Upanishad, where the word "svarga" is also used to meant the spiritual world (and not the planet of Indra):

"Lord Shiva asked: Who si the controller of the mind and the other senses?

"Brahma replied: the ability to see, the functions of all the senses, and indeed life itself, are all given to the living entities by the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Someone may question our interpretation of the words "svarga" and "brahma" in these passages. In order to allay their doubts we give the following evidence from Vedic literatures to confirm our understanding that the word "svarga" means "the planet of Shri Krishna" and the word "brahma means "the Personality of Godhead, Shri Krishna, who is known as Narayana".

"Lord Narayana is the Supreme Personality of Godhead".
-Narayana Upanishad

"Lord Narayana is the eternal Supreme Lord".
-Narayana Upanishad

"Lord Narayana is the Supreme Brahman."
-Prayers of the devotees of Lord Narayana

That the word "svarga" means "the abode of Shri Krishna" is described in the Vedic literatures:

"Saintly devotee will attain the highest Vaikunöha planet, which is a forest in the form of a great lotus flower full of transcendental knowledge."

In this way the blissful nature of Vaikunöhaloka's forest (Krishnaloka) is described. The ruler of that forest is Lord Krishna, who is known as Narayana. This is confirmed in the Atharva Veda:

"The son of Devaki is the Original Personality of Godhead."

The Shrimad-Bhagavatam verse quoted in Text 1 was spoken by Shrila Shukadeva Gosvami.

That Dvaraka is the eternal abode of Shri Krishna is described by Queen Rukmini in the following words (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.60.35):

"My dear husband, You have rightly said also that being afraid of the kings, You have taken shelter in the water of the sea. But who is the king of this material world? I do not think that the so-called royal families are kings of the material world. The kings of the material world are the three modes of material nature. They are actually the controllers of this material world. You are situated in the core of everyone's heart where you remain completely aloof from the touch of the three modes of material nature, and there is no doubt about it.

"You say You always maintain enmity with the worldly kings. But who are the worldly kings? I think the worldly kings are the senses. They are most formidable, and they control everyone. Certainly You maintain enmity with these material senses. You are never under the control of the senses; rather, You are the controller of the senses, Hrishikesha. My dear Lord, You have said that You are bereft of all royal power, and that is also correct. Not only are You bereft of material world supremacy, but even Your servants, those who have some attachment to Your lotus feet, also give the material world supremacy because they consider the material position to be the darkest region, which checks the progress of spiritual enlightenment. Your servants do not like material supremacy, so what to speak of you?"*

"My dear beautiful Queen Rukmini, you may know that I was so much afraid of Jarasandha that I could not dare to live on the land, and thus I have constructed this house within the water of the sea. It is not My business to disclose this secret to others, but you must know that I am not very heroic; I am a coward and am afraid of them. Still I am not safe, because all the great kings of the land are inimical to Me. I have personally created this inimical feeling by fighting with them in many ways. Another fault is that although I am on the throne of Dvaraka I have no immediate claim. Although I got a kingdom by killing My maternal uncle Kamsa, the kingdom was to go to My grandfather; so actually I have no possession of a kingdom."*

Krishna's teasing jokes to Rukmini consisted of a joking description of His own bad qualities. Krishna proposed to Rukmini that she divorce Him and accept a more suitable husband. "Why did you accept Me, who am so unqualified, as your husband?" Lord Krishna jokingly said. Rukmini-devi replied to Lord Krishna's joking words by saying: "What you have spoken is the truth," and then explaining how each point of Lord Krishna's self-criticism, is actually a glorification of His exalted transcendental qualities. These two verses are an example of Lord Krishna's and Queen Rukmini's replies.

We may note that in this verse (Text 1) that the word "atma" is in the nominative case, the word "tvam" is a first-person pronoun, and the verb "shete" is a verb in the third-person singular. These words do not agree with each other (to agree with "tvam" the word "atma" would have to be in the vocative and not the nominative case). In addition, the verb "shete" is in the third-person and also cannot agree with the pronoun "tvam". Actually, however, the words "tvam", "atma", and "sete" are intended to refer to each other. Their non-concordance is a use of the literary embellishment "luptopama" (an elliptical simile)". The word "atma" in this verse is intended to also mean "the Paramatma (Supersoul) who is the witness observing the activities of all living entities.

The word "gunebhyah" means "the three modes of material nature: goodness, passion, and ignorance". Afraid of these modes, Lord Krishna has taken shelter of "upalambhana-matra" (His own transcendental knowledge). The phrase "antah nityam shete" means "without any external disturbance, Lord Krishna eternally resides in the hearts of all living beings." The phrase "urukrama bhayat iva upalambhana-matre antah samudre" means "All-powerful Lord, afraid of the kings who are the material senses, sense-objects, and modes of material nature, You have taken shelter of Your own transcendental abode which is known as Dvaraka-dhama. You remain there and eternally enjoy blissful confidential pastimes there." We may note in this verse that the meaning of the sentence as a whole establishes the grammatical concordance of certain words which would otherwise not be in grammatical agreement.

Lord Krishna's eternal residence in Dvaraka will also be described in a further chapter of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (11.31.24) in the following words:

"Lord Madhusudana eternally stays in Dvaraka".

Both the Supreme Personality of Godhead and the individual living entity are by nature aloof from the material senses and sense-objects. Therefore, both the Lord and individual living entities who take shelter of the Lord remain always unafraid of the material senses. In the second part of this verse the enmity of the senses is described, and Lord Krishna is described as always at war with these enmity of the senses, which are metaphorically described as kings. Lord Krishna is always very courageous in the matter of defending Himself from the attacks of the senses.

As far as Lord Krishna's abandonment of the post of king, Queen Rukmini replies:

"What loss is there for You if You reject the royal post? This kingly post is rejected both by You and by the great devotees who become Your servants."

Queen Rukmini said (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.60.41):

"From the history of the world we can see that princes like Anga, Prithu, Bharata, Yayati and Gaya were all great emperors of the world, and there were no competitors to their exalted positions. But in order to achieve the favor of Your lotus feet, they renounced their exalted positions and entered into the forest to practice penances and austerities."*

In the last part of this verse, the position of a king is described as "tamah andham" (darkness of ignorance) because a king has great facility for material enjoyment, which leads one into ignorance.

In this verse we may especially note the description of Lord Krishna's eternal residence in Dvaraka (shete nityam). He stays there eternally.

atha-now; shri-mathurayah-os Shri Mathura-dhama; mathura-the place known as Mathura ; bhagavan-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; yatra-wherein; nityam-eternally; sannihitah- intimately connected, living eternally; harih-the Lord, the Supreme Personality of Godhead. arthat-because of the meaning; tatratamyam-there; shri-sukah-spoken by Shri Sukadeva Gosvami.

That Shri Krishna eternally remains at Mathura is confirmed by the following verse from Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.1.28) spoken by Shukadeva Gosvami:

"The city and district Mathura are very intimately connected with Krishna, for Lord Krishna lives there eternally."*

Lord Krishna's eternal residence in Mathura is also described in the following verse of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (4.8.42) spoken by Narada Muni to Dhruva Maharaja:

"My dear boy, therefore I wish all good fortune for you. You should go to the bank of the Yamuna, where there is a virtuous forest named Madhuvana, and there be purified. Just by going there, one draws nearer to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who always lives there."*

That the word "Hari" is another name of Lord Krishna is confirmed by the following verse (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 4.8.62):

"When Dhruva Maharaja, the son of the King, ws thus advised by the great sage Narada Muni, he circumambulated Narada, his spiritual master, and offered him respectful obeisances. Then he started for Madhuvana, which is always imprinted with the lotus footprints of Lord Krishna (Hari) and which is therefore especially auspicious."*

This verse explains that Lord Krishna eternally remains in Mathura. If it were not so that Lord Krishna eternally remains in Mathura, His presence would have been explained by describing His arrival in Mathura from another place. There is no such description, so we must therefore conclude that Lord Krishna eternally stays in Mathura. In Mathura, Dhruva Maharaja diligently worshiped Lord Krishna by chanting the 12 syllable mantra glorifying Him (om namo bhagavate vasudevaya). This verse (Text 1) was spoken by Maitreya Muni.

That Shri Krishna eternally remains in Vrindavana is described in the following statement of the women of Mathura in Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.44.12):

"Dear friends, just imagine how fortunate the land of Vrindavana is where the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself is present, always decorated with flower garlands and engaged in tending cows along with His brother, Lord Balarama. He is always accompanied by His cowherd boy friends, and He plays His transcendental flute. The residents of Vrindavana are fortunate to be able to constantly see the lotus feet of Krishna and Balarama, which are worshiped by great demigods like Lord Shiva and Brahma and the goddess of fortune."*

Although Lord Krishna was present before them in Mathura, the ladies of Mathura in this verse describe His presence in Vrindavana. By the Lord's mercy the ladies of Mathura were able to understand and properly describe the transcendental situation: that even though the Supreme Lord may appear in Mathura or so many other places, He always remains in Vrindavana and enjoys transcendental pastimes there. This is also confirmed in many verses from Vedic literature.

yadu-vara-parishat svair dorbhir asyann adharmam
sthira-cara-vrijina-ghnah susmita-shri-mukhena
vraja-pura-vanitanam vardhayan kama-devam

jayati-eternally lives gloriously; jana-nivasah-He who lives among human beings like the members of the Yadu dynasty and is the ultimate resort of all living entities; devaki-janma-vadah-known as the son of Devaki (No one can actually become the father or mother of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Therefore devaki-janma-vada means that He known as the son of Devaki. Similarly, He is also known as the son of yashoda, Vasudeva or Nanda Maharaja) yadu-vara-parishat-served by the members of the Yadu dynasty of the cowherd men of Vrindavana (all of whom are constant associates of the Supreme Lord and are the Lord's eternal servants); svaih dorbhih-by His own arms, or by His devotees like Arjuna who are just like His own arms; asyan-killing; adharmam-demons or the impious; sthira-cara-vrijina-ghnah-the destroyer of all the ill fortune of all living entities, moving and not moving; su-smita-always smiling; shri-mukhena-by His beautiful face; vraja-pura-vanitanam-for the damsels of Vrindavana; vardhayan-increasing; kama-devam- the lusty desires.

Shri Krishna's eternal residence in Vrindavana is also described in the following verse (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.90.48)

"Lord Shri Krishna is He who is known as jana-nivasa, the ultimate resort of all living entities, and who is also known as Devaki-nandana or Yashoda-nandana, the son of Devaki and Yashoda. He is the guide of the Yadu dynasty, and with His mighty arms He kills everything inauspicious as well as every man who is impious. By His presence He destroys all things inauspicious for all living entities, moving and inert. His blissful smiling face always increases the lusty desires of the gopis of Vrindavana. May He be all glorious and happy!"*

yadu-vara-parishat-this phrase; sabhya-of the assembly; rupa-consisting; yasya-of whom; sah-He; devaki-janma-vadah-this phrase; tat-janmatvena-by this birth; labdha- attained; khyatih-fame; devakyam-in the womb of DEvaki-janma-birth; iti-thus; vadah-statement; tattva-truth; bubhutsu- eager to know; katha-description; yasya-of whom; sah-He; iti-thus; va-or; shri-krishnah-Shri Krishna; jayati-the word "jayati"; parama-with great; utkarshena-glory; sada- eternally; eva-certainly; virajate-is manifested; lohita-ushniyah-with a red turban; pracaranti-performed pastime; itivat-in that way; yadu-vara-sabhya-vishishöataya-as the greates member of the yadu dynasty; jaya-abhidhanam-the word "jaya; atra-in this connection; yadu-vara-shabdena-by the word "yadu-vara"; shri-vrajesvara-of the King of Vraja, Nanda Maharaja; tat-his; bhratarah-brothers; api-also; grihyante- are intended; t/esam-among them; api-even; yadu-vamsha-of teh Yadu dynasty; utpannatvena-by the arisal; prasiddhatvat- because of fame.

In this verse the word "yadu-vara-parishat" means "He whose associates were the members of the Yadu dynasty", and the word "devaki-janma-vadah" means "He who was famous as having taken birth from Devaki-devi", or "the great sages who are eager to understand the truth explain that He has taken birth in the womb of Devaki." The word "jayati" means "All glories to Lord Krishna, who is eternally manifest with great splendor and opulence." The word "yadu-vara" refers to Nanda Maharaja, the king of Vraja, Vasudeva Maharaja, and their brothers, who were all members of the Yadu family.

That Maharaja Vasudeva and Maharaja Nanda were brothers is confirmed by the following statement of the Mahabharata-tatparya, where Brahma says to Drona and Dhara:

"My dear Drona and Dhara, please accept this benediction from me. I bless you, Drona that you may become Nanda Maharaja, the vaishya grandson of Maharaja Devamidha, and brother of Maharaja Vasudeva. O Dhara, I give you the benediction that you may become Nanda's wife, and you will be known as Yashoda."

sura-tata-sutasya-of this word; sura-of Sura; sapatni-of the co-wife; matri-from the mother; jasya-born; vaishyayam-in Vaisya; triitiya-varnayam-a member of the third (vaisyaAM□6:57:03 caste; jatasya-born; sakashat-nearby; asa- the word "asa"; babhuva-means "was"; iti-thus; arthah-the meaning; atah-eva-therefore; shrimat-ananakadundubhina-by Maharaja Vasudeva; tasmin-to him; bhratah-O brother; iti- thus; sambodhanam-in the grammatical form of an address; aklishöa-not unfavorable; artham-meaning; bhavati-is; bhrataram-brother; nandam-Nanda; agatam-arrived; iti-thus; shrimat-muni-indra-of the king of sages (Sukadeva Gosvami); vacanam-the statement; ca-also; tat-this; etad-that; api- also; upalakshanam-designation; tat-bhratrinam-of the brothers.

In this verse the phrase "sura-tata-sutasya" means "born from Vaishya-devi, the vaishya wife of Maharaja Devamidha, whose son was Maharaja Surasena. Because Nanda and Vasudeva were thus brothers, being both descendants of Maharaja Devamidha, it is therefore not improper for them to address each other as "brother". Shukadeva Gosvami also identifies the brotherhood of Nanda and Vasudeva in the following statement of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.5.20):

"When Vasudeva heard that Nanda Maharaja, his very dear friend and brother, had come to Mathura and already paid the taxes to Kamsa, he went to Nanda Maharaja's residence."*

In the following quote from the Hari-vamsha, Lord Balarama identifies Nanda Maharaja as a descendant of the Yadu dyansty in the following words:

"My dear Nanda Maharaja, among all the members of the Yadu dynasty, you are my dearmost relative."

In this statement, the locative case is used for the word "yadaveshu" to indicate "in the family". We may note that the Yadu dynasty is divided into two branches: the kshatriya branch, and vaishya branch (which prospered in the district of Mathura).

atra-in this verse; jayati-the word "jayati"; iti-thus; atra-here; lod-artham-the meaning of the imperative; na-not; sangacchate-goes; sada-always; eva-certainly; utkarsha-in glories; anantya-mite-unlimited; tasmin-in Him; ashirvada- benediction; avakashat-because of the impropriety; tat-avakashah-that occasion; va-or; ashirvada-of benediction; vishayasya-of the occasion; tadanim-then; ashirvada-benediction; krita-offered; anuvada-explanation; vishishöa- excellent; vishishöataya-by excellence; sthiteh-of the situation; avagamat-understood; pratipadayishtam-proven; tadrishatvena-by arguments like this; eva-certainly; tat-kalikatvam-simultaneity; agacchati-attains; eva-certainly; yatha-just as dharmika-sabhyah-pious; ayam-this; raja- king; vardhatam-may increase; iti-thus; tat-therefore; evam- in this way; patih-head; gatih-destination; ca-also; andhaka-one of the kings of the Yadu dynasty; vrishni-the first king of the Yadu dynasty; satvatam-the Yadus; anusandheyam-should be considered; anena-by this; yadu-varanam-of the members of the Yadu dynasty; api-also; tatha-in the same way; eva-certainly; jayah-glory; vivakshitah-is intended to be described.

We may note that the word "jayati" used in Text 1 is in the present tense (He is glorious), and not the imperative mood (loö) (May He become glorious). The imperative is used to indicated a blessing bestowed upon someone. Lord Krishna is eternally and unlimitedly glorious, and therefore no one can offer Him the benediction of becoming glorious. For this reason the word "jayati" is spoken here in the present tense and not the imperative mood. At the same time, the imperative mood may also be used for understanding the superexcellent glories of the Lord, or also for all the saintly devotees included along with Shri Krishna in the words of this prayer. A similar prayer was offered by Shrila Shukadeva Gosvami in the beginning of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (2.4.20) in the following words:

"May Lord Shri Krishna, who is the worshipable Lord of all devotees, the protector and glory of all the kings like Andhaka and Vrishni of the Yadu dynasty, the husband of all goddesses of fortune, the director of all sacrifices and therefore the leader of all living entities, the controller of all intelligence, the proprietor of all planets, spiritual and material, and the supreme incarnation on the earth (the supreme all in all), be merciful upon me."*

In these two verses from Shrimad-Bhagavatam, the members of the Yadu dynasty are also glorified, along with Lord Krishna.

Someone may question: If Lord Krishna is eternally enjoys transcendental pastimes in His own spiritual abode, then why should He descend to this material world (devaki-janma-vadah) at all?

This question is answered in this verse by the words "svair dorbhir asyann adharmam" (With His mighty arms He kills everything inauspicious as well as every man who is impious). Lord Krishna appears in this material world in order to kill the demons. We may note that the word "svair dorbhir" is in the plural (and not the dual). The reason is that although Lord Krishna manifests His two-armed forms in Vrindavana, Mathura and Dvaraka, He sometimes shows His four-armed forms of Vasudeva, Sankarshana, Pradyumna, and Aniruddha in Mathura and Dvaraka. For this reason the number of arms is expressed as more than two. Another reason for the use of this word "dorbhir" is that the devotees are considered like the arms of the Lord, and therefore this phrase may be interpreted to mean: "The Lord destroys the sins of this world through the endeavors of His pure devotees". This is confirmed by Lord Krishna Himself in the following words (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 11.14.24):

"My pure devotees purify the entire world".

punah-again; kim artham-why?; devaki-janma-vadah-did the Lord take birth as the son of Devaki; tatra-to this question; aha-it may be replied; sthira-cara-vrijinaghnah-the destroyer of all the ill fortune of all living entities, moving and not moving; nija-abhivyaktya-by His own appearance; nikhila-of all; jivanam-living entities; samsara-of repeated birth and death; hanta-the destroyer; tat-artham-for that purpose; eva-certainly; iti-thus; arthah-the meaning; tat uktam-it is said; yatah-from that; etat-this; vimucyate-becomes liberated; iti-thus.

Again someone may ask why Lord Krishna descended to this material world at all. To this question another answer may be given: "sthira-cara-vrijina-ghnah" (Simply by His presence, Lord Krishna destroys all things inasupicious of all living entities, moving and inert). Lord Krishna appeared in this world, then, to bless the conditioned souls and release them all from the cycle of repeated birth and death. This is also confirmed by the following statement of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.29.16):

"Simply by perceiving the presence of Krishna, one becomes free from the cycle of birth and death."

kim va-on the other hand; katham-bhutam-how is it? ; jayati-that He is the glorious; yadu-of the members of the Yadu dynasty; vraja-pura-vasinam-and of the residents of Vraja; sthavara-of the inert; jangamanam-and of the moving living entities; nija-of His own; carana-lotus feet; viyoga-of the separation; duhka-the distress; hanta-removing; san-being so; nitya-vihare-in eternal pastimes; pramanam-evidence; aha-he explains; jana-nivasah-the word "jana-nivasah"; jana-shabdah-the word "janah"; atra-here; svajana-vacakah-means "the devotees"; salokya-iti-adi-padye-in Shrimad-Bhagavatam (3.29.13); janah-the word "jana"; itivat-is used in this way; svajana-of His own devotees; hridaya-in the hearts; tat-tat-various; pastimes; viharitvena-performing; sarva-deva-avabhasamanah-appearing as the Supreme Personality of Godhead; iti-thus; arthah-the meaning; sarva-pramana-caya-of all evidence; cudamani-bhutam-the crest jewel; vidvat-of the great devotees; anubhavah-the direct experience; eva-certainly; atra-here; pramanam-the evidence; iti-thus; bhavah-the meaning.

Someone may ask: Why should Lord Krishna be glorified? The answer is found in the word "jana-nivasah" (He is the ultimate resort of all living entities). Lord Krishna remains among His devotees: the members of the Yadu dynasty, the residents of Vrajabhumi, or all those who are attached to Him, whether in the human species, or even in non-moving forms of life, such as trees or flowers. The Lord remains among His devotees and relieves the distress felt by them because of separation from the Lord's lotus feet. The Lord's continual stay among the devotees is also clear evidence that the Lord's pastimes are eternal. The word "jana" may be used to mean "devotees". It is used that way in Shrimad-Bhagavatam 3.29.23 and also in other places. Therefore, Lord Krishna always remains among His pure devotees, and He also manifests His eternal pastimes within the hearts of His pure devotees. This direct experience of the Lord and His pastimes within the heart is the most substantial of all forms of evidence. It is the crest jewel of all logical arguments to prove the glories of Lord Krishna.

Someone may ask: Why is Shri Krishna so wonderful that He is glorified in this verse by the word "jayati". What does He do that is wonderful?

To this the reply may be given: "vraja-pura-vanitanam vardhayan kama-devam" (His blissful smiling face always increases the lusty desires of the gopi s of Vrindavana). The word "kama" may be interpreted to mean either "lusty desires" or "cupid". Interpreted in either way, Shri Krishna increased the "kama" within the gopis' hearts. In order to reveal the supreme goal of life, Shri Krishna appeared before the gopis and the other devotees in His original transcendental form, full of transcendental bliss, and beyond any of the limiting factors of matter. This appearance of Shri Krishna as the original cupid is elaborately described in the Agama-shastra. Although the word "vraja-pura-vanitanam" refers to both the women of Vraja, and the women of the puras (Mathura-pura and Dvaraka-pura), the women of Vraja, the gopis, are the most exalted and the greatest lovers of Shri Krishna. The word "vanita" is defined in the Nama-linganushasana:

"the word `vanita' means `a woman who is ardently devoted to her husband or lover'".

We may also note that the phrase "devaki-janma-vadah" may also mean "Lord Krishna who is famous as the son of Yashoda". Devaki is another name of Yashoda, just as Meru-devi is another name of Sudevi, the mother of Maharaja Rishabhadeva. This is confirmed in the following statement of the Puranas:

"Nanda Maharaja's wife had two names: Yashoda and Devaki. Nanda's wife was a close friend of Vasudeva Maharaja's wife, who was also named Devaki."

We will now conclude this section of the Krishna-sandarbha, where it has been conclusively proven that Shri Krishna eternally enjoys transcendental pastimes in the three abodes Vrindavana, Mathura, and Dvaraka.

When Lord Krishna's transcendental abode is manifest in the spiritual world it is known as Goloka. In that Goloka planet the Lord enjoys aprakaöa pastimes, which He does not display in the material world. These pastimes are different from the prakaöa pastimes He reveals in the material world. We shall now discuss the difference between these prakaöa and aprakaöa pastimes, and also we shall discuss the nature of the Lord's abode in the spiritual world, known as Goloka Vrindavana. These topics are described in the following passage, which describes the vision of Goloka Vrindavana revealed to the cowherd residents of Vrindavana in the material world (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.28.10-17):

atindriyam-the word "atindriyam"; adrishöa-purvam-means "never before seen" loka-palah-the word "loka-palah" varunah-refers to Varuna; sva-gatim-the word "sva-gatim"; sva-dhama-means "His own transcendental abode; sukshmam-the word "sukshmam" durjneyam-means "difficult to be understood; upadhasyat-the word "upadhasyat"; upadhasyati-means "will give"; nah-the word "nah"; asman-means "us"; prati-to; prapayishyati-will cause to attain; iti-thus; sankalpitavantah-considering; iti-thus; arthah-the meaning;

In these verses the word "atindriyam" means "never seen before", the word "loka-palah" refers to the demigod Varuna, the word "sva-gatim" means "His own transcendental abode", "sukshmam" means "very difficult to understand", "upadhasyat" means "will give", and "nah" means "us". The cowherd men thought that Krishna would enable them to enter the spiritual world.

In these verses the word "janah" means the "residents of Vraja, who are all Krishna's relatives and friends". Krishna considered that the cowherd men of Vraja had wandered through various species of life in this material world, impelled by ignorance and other material faults, and therefore they were unaware of Lord Krishna's own transcendental abode. In order to expand His own transcendental pastimes the Lord manifested His own lila-shakti (pastime potency) and revealed His extraordinary abode to the residents of Vraja.

The Goloka Vrindavana planet, the ultimate destination of the cowherd residents of Vrajabhumi, is described in Brahma-samhita (5.29):

"I worship Govinda, the primeval Lord, the first progenitor, who is tending the cows, yielding all desires, in abodes built with spiritual gems and surrounded by millions of purpose trees. He is always served with great reverence and affection by hundreds and thousands of goddesses of fortune."*

The Goloka planet is completely spiritual and it is full of eternity, knowledge, and bliss. It is above the darkness of the material world (tamasah param). They who are above the three modes of material nature, and are in the transcendental position, are able to properly understand the Goloka planet. By manifesting His own transcendental potency, Lord Krishna revealed the Goloka planet to the residents of Vrajabhumi. In the Bhagavat-sandarbha we have already quoted from the Padma Purana and many other Vedic literatures many verses describing the Goloka planet as the highest of all the Vaikunöhalokas.

atra-in these verse; svam gatim iti-the word "svam gatim"; tadiyata-nirdeshah-description; gopanam-of cowherd men; svam-own; lokam-planet; iti-thus; shashöhi-in the genetive case; sva-shabdayoh-the two times the word "sva" is used; nirdeshah-indication; krishnam-Krishna; iti-thus; sakshat-directly; tat-nirdeshah-indication of that; ca-also; vaikunöha-Vaikunöhaloka; antaram-within; vyavacchidya- specifying; shri-golokam-Shri Goloka; eva-certainly; pratipadayati-establishes; atah-eva-therefore; tesham-of them; tat-darshanat-because of seeing Goloka; parama-ananda-nirvritatvam-transcendental bliss; suvismatvam-great astonishment; api-also; yuktam-engaged; uktam-it is described; tasya-of Him; eva-putratvat-because of the sonship; tatha-in the same way; eva-certainly; putra-of son; adi-rupena-and other relationships; eva-certainly; udayat-because of the arisal; ca-also.

In the words "svam gatim" and "svam lokam", the word "svam" is understood to function as if in the genitive case. In both places the word "svam" means "of the cowherd men". The spiritual abode described in these verses is Goloka Vrindavana, which is situated in the highest part of the Vaikunöhalokas, and which is the specific abode of Shri Krishna. By seeing the Goloka planet, the cowherd men became astonished and filled with transcendental bliss. When they saw child Krishna, whom they regarded with feelings of parental affection, glorified by the Personified Vedas on the Goloka planet, they became struck with wonder.

We may note in this description of Shrimad-Bhagavatam that there is no mention of Shri Krishna's revealing the Lord's associates on the Goloka planet. The reason for this is that the residents of Gokula Vrindavana on this earth are the same personages who accompany the Lord in the Goloka planet in the spiritual world. Because the residents of Gokula were unaware of their actual identity and abode in the spiritual world (na veda svam gatim bhraman) the Lord revealed to them their actual home in the spiritual world. The Lord's transcendental form, associates, abode, pastimes, and everything else in relation to the Lord possess unlimited opulence. They have the power to be manifest in many places simultaneously. Therefore it is not impossible that the residents of earthly Vrindavana were the same liberated souls who associate with the Lord in Goloka Vrindavana.

Having decisively proven that Vrindavana, Mathura and Dvaraka are the eternal abodes of Lord Krishna, we shall now begin our discussion of the Lord's liberated associates. Who are the Lord's associates in these three abodes? In the two cities of Mathura and Dvaraka, the Lord's associates are headed by the members of the Yadu dynasty, and in Vrindavana the gopas, gopis, and others are the associates of the Lord. There is no description in the Vedic literatures of any other associates of the Lord. The exalted status of the Lord's associates is described by Lord Krishna in the following verse from the Karttika-mahatmya of the Padma Purana:

"My dear Queen Satyabhama, the members of the Yadu dynasty are very dear to Me. They are all My intimate associates, and their transcendental qualities are equal to My own."

We may note that by using the "eva" (certainly) it is emphasized that this description applies only to the Yadavas and not to the demigods or anyone else.

That the members of the Yadu dynasty are more exalted than the demigods is confirmed by Akrura in the Aniruddhanveshana chapter of the Hari-vamsha:

"In order to benefit the demigods, we members of the Yadu dynasty are present on this earth, appearing as ordinary mortals."

The same pastimes the Lord enjoyed at Mathura during His manifest presence are secretly enjoyed by Him there even today. This is described in Gopala-tapani Upanishad (2.40):

"Lord Krishna, accompanied by His three potencies, and by Balarama, Pradyumna, Aniruddha, and Rukmini, eternally stays in delightful Mathura-puri."

That Shri Krishna eternally enjoys pastimes in Vrindavana accompanied by His associates is confirmed by the following statement of Padma Purana, Patala-khanda, where the Yamuna's glories are described:

"How unfortunate are they who have never drunk the waters of the Yamuna where, accompanied by the cows, gopas, and gopis, Shri Krishna enjoys pastimes eternally!"

This is also described in the Padma Purana, Nirmana-khanda, where Lord Krishna says:

"Know that My Mathura is eternal. So also is Vrindavana. So also are the Yamuna, to gopis, and the gopa boys. This incarnation of Mine is eternal. Do not doubt."

How is this transcendental abode described? The description is found in the phrase that follows the word "yatra". Synonyms for difficult words follow: "yatra" means "upon the surabhi cows"; "bhuri-shringah" means "there are beautiful horns" ("bhuri" means "beautiful" as well as "many". We see a similar secondary usage of the word "bhuman" which is used in the Upanishads not to express plurality, but to mean "great"). "ayasah" means "splendid", "atra" means "in the earthly Goloka Vrindavana, which is famous both in the world and in the Vedas", "urugayasya" means "of the original Personality of Godhead", "vrishnah" means "of Him whose lotus feet fulfill all desires", "paramam" means "beyond the reach of material energy", "padam" means "abode", "bhuri" means "in many ways"; and "avabhati" means "manifested". This description of Goloka Vrindavana is found in the Rig Veda.

Although we have proved that the cowherd residents of Gokula and the members of the Yadu dynasty are the eternal associates of Shri Krishna, some unintelligent people may think that these great devotees are simply ordinary human beings like themselves. They may quote the following pastimes to prove the ordinariness of these great devotees: 1. The Pandavas and Yadavas were wounded by weapons in their fighting pastimes as kshatriyas; 2. the cowherd boys fell unconscious after drinking the Yamuna's water that had been poisoned by Kaliya; and 3. Maharaja Vasudeva's asked about the nature of the Absolute Truth and the way to become free from the cycle of birth and death (Vasudeva asked these questions of Narada Muni at the time of the eclipse at Kurukshetra). These pastimes of the devotees appear like the activities of ordinary persons, just as the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself displays pastimes that appear like the activities of an ordinary living entity.

"My dear Rukmini, your affection for your brother Rukmi, who has created enmity with so many persons is a perverse consideration befitting an ordinary materialistic person. Your brother's character is not at all adorable, considering his treatment toward other friends, and yet, as an ordinary woman, you are so affectionate to him. tatra-there; pravayasah-the old men; api-even; asan- became; yuvanah-youthful; ati-with great; bala-ojasah- strength; iti-thus; virofhat-from the contradiction.

Another example of the so-called ordinary nature of the devotees is the description that the residents of Mathura were subject to the affliction of old-age, just as any ordinary conditioned souls. This is described in Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.45.19):

"Even the old-men of Mathura became fully invigorated with youthful energy and strength by regularly seeing Lord Krishna."*

kvacit-sometimes; ca-also; prakaöa-lilayah-of the manifest pastimes; prapancika-loka-with the material world; mishratvat-because of mixture; yatha-artham-proper; eva- certainly; tat-adikam-these examples; yatha-just as; shatadhanva-of Shatadhanva; vadha-of the death; adau-in the beginning.

Because the manifest pastimes of the Lord and His devotees are displayed within the material world, it is sometimes proper for these pastimes to appear like those of ordinary persons. An example of this is Krishna's seemingly cruel and vengeful killing of Shatadhanva, the murderer of the Lord's father-in-law.

That the confidential associates of the Lord are almost equal to the Lord Himself is confirmed in the following statements from Vedic literature:

"Although I am the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the members of the Yadu dynasty possess transcendental qualities equal to My own."

"The cowherd boys are equal to Lord Krishna Himself in their qualities, character, age, pastimes, and appearance".

"All the cowherd boys are great devotees, and they possess transcendental blissful forms, equal to the spiritual form of Lord Krishna Himself."

In this last quote the word "vaikunöha" is a name of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and the compound word "vaikunöhananda-murtayah" means that the cowherd boys had transcendental blissful forms, just like the form of Lord Vaikunöha Himself. The word "munayah" used in this last quote means that the cowherd boys are great devotees. It should not be taken to mean that the cowherd boys are incarnations of various great sages. This is confirmed by the following statement of Lord Balarama (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.13.39):

"O Supreme Controller! These boys are not great demigods, as I previously thought. Nor are these calves great sages like Narada. Now I can see that You alone are manifesting Yourself in all varieties of difference. Although one, You are existing in the different forms of the calves and boys."*

When Brahma had stolen the cowherd boys and calves, Krishna manifested Himself as so many boys and calves to replace His friends who were stolen by Brahma. Bewildered by this manifestation of Krishna's potency, Balarama exclaimed:

"Who is this mystic power, and where has she come from? Is she a demigod or a demoness? She must be the illusory potency of My master Lord Krishna, for who else can bewilder Me?"*

Someone may say that the cowherd boys, who had been stolen by Brahma and were sleeping under the spell of his mystic potency, were great sages and demigods, and it is only the vishnu-tattva expansions of Krishna whom Lord Balarama is declaring are not sages or demigods. Even though some may speak in that way, it should be understood that as intimate associates of Lord Krishna, the demigods should be understood to be much more than demigods or sages.

tasya-of Him; atma-tantrasya-being self sufficient, not dependent on any other person; hareh-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; adhishituh-who is the master of everything; parasya- the Transcendence; maya-adhipateh-the master of the illusory energy; maha-atmanah-of the Supreme Soul; prayena-almost; duta-the order carriers; iha-in this world; vai-indeed; manoharah-pleasing in their dealings and bodily features; caranti-they move; tat-of Him; rupa-possessing the bodily features; guna-the transcendental qualities; sva-bhavah- and nature; iti-thus; shri-yama-of Yamaraja; vakya-adi-anugatavat- according to the statement.

The exalted position of the liberated devotees, who have the same qualities and powers as the Lord Himself is described by Yamaraja (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 6.3.17):

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is self-sufficient and fully independent. He is the master of everyone and everything, including the illusory energy. He has His form, qualities and features; and similarly His order carriers, the Vaishnavas, who are very beautiful, possess bodily features, transcendental qualities and a transcendental nature almost like His. They always wander within this world with full independence."*

That the associates of the Lord are almost His equals is also described in the following verse of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (1.11.12):

"As Bhogavati, the capital of Nagaloka, is protected by Nagas, so was Dvaraka protected by the descendants of Vrishni-{ }Bhoja, Madhu, Dasharha, Arha, Kukura, Andhaka, etc.-{ }who were as strong as Lord Krishna,"*

In this verse the word "devah does not mean that Shridama and the other cowherd boys were incarnations of demigods, but rather that they were on the same level as Shri Krishna, the Supreme Lord (deva), and therefore they are also called "deva". That the cowherd boys are as worshipable as Lord Krishna Himself is confirmed by the Lord in the following statement (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 11.19.21):

"More important than the worship of Me is the worship of My pure devotee."

Krishna and Balarama were equal to the other cowherd boys, and therefore Krishna and Balarama were described as "gopala-rupinam". If Krishna and Balarama could be described as cowherd boys because of Their equality with Their companions, by the same token the cowherd boys may also be described as "deva" because they are as great as their great friend.

Lord Krishna personally tells Maharaja Vasudeva that the members of the Yadu dynasty are His confidential associates in the following verse of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.85.23):

{ }"My dear father, everyone, including Myself and My worshipable brother Balarama, as well as the inhabitants of the city of Dvaraka, and the whole cosmic manifestation, is exactly as you have explained. Balarama and I are the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and everything that exists is the manifestation of Our spiritual and material potencies. You and the members of the Yadu dynasty are our confidential associates."*

sattva-adi-beginning with the mode of goodness; gunanam-of the modes of material nature; tat-vrittinam-and their activities; ca-also; brahmani-in the Supreme Godhead; traikalika-in past present and future; sparsha-contact; asambhavat-because of non-existence; mayaya-by the illusory potency; eva-certainly; tat-adhyasah-controlling that; bhavata-by You; varnitah-described; tatha-in that way; drishöh-sight; atra-here; tu-but; na-not; karya-action; iti-thus; tatparyam-the explanation.

{ }In this verse the word "yuyam vimrigyah" means "My dear Maharaja Vasudeva and all members of the Yadu dynasty. You have all searched for the supreme goal of life with great diligence." Maharaja Vasudeva, and all the inhabitants of Dvaraka. (dvarakaukasah) including all moving and non-moving living entities (sacaracaram) have accepted as the supreme goal of life and the dearest associate: Lord Krishna, the Original Personality of Godhead, whose form is like that of a human being." Shri Krishna was previously described by Maharaja Vasudeva as the Supreme Lord in the following verse (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.85.13):

"My dear Krishna, You are the supreme cause of all causes, the eternal principle. Everything is, in fact, a manifestation of Your one energy. The three qualities of material nature-{ }sattva, rajas and tamas-{ }and the result of their interaction, are linked up with You by Your agency of yogamaya. They are supposed to be independent, but actually the total material energy is resting upon You, the Supersoul. Since You are the supreme cause of everything, the interactions of material manifestation-{ }birth, existence, growth, transformation, deterioration and annihilation-{ }are all absent in Yourself."*

Because Shri Krishna is always (in past, present and future) free from the influence of the three modes of material nature, His devotees are also free in the same way.

"The Supersoul is one and undivided. He is self-effulgent, eternal, non-material, and beyond the jurisdiction of the three modes of material nature. He is indeed the original creator of these modes of nature, from which the material bodies of the conditioned living entities are fashioned. Appearing simultaneously in many forms, He is manifested in the hearts of these conditioned souls."*

{ }On the surface this verse appears to be a description of Lord Krishna's expansion as the all-pervading Supersoul. However, another interpretation of this verse may also be given: describing the Lord's appearance in many forms within the city of Dvaraka. According to this second interpretation, this verse may be translated in the following way:

"Lord Shri Krishna is the eternal Supreme Personality of Godhead, spiritual and beyond the influence of the three modes of material nature. Displaying His own splendid transcendental qualities, by His own wish He has simultaneously appeared in many different forms in many different places within the city of Dvaraka".

The following synonyms may be given for this verse: "atma-shrishöaih" means "of His own transcendental forms"; "gunaih" means "the splendid qualities reproduced from the potencies of His transcendental forms"; "tat-kriteshu" means "in those transcendental forms"; "bhuteshu" means "those forms of the Absolute Truth, who is the Supreme Goal of life and who is manifested in Dvaraka" (we may note that the commentator on the Vishnu-sahasra-nama-stotra has explained the word "bhuta" as "the Absolute Truth who is the Supreme Goal of life"); "bahudha" means "in many forms"; "iyate" means "is manifested"; "svayam-jyotih" means "who appears by His own wish," (this word does not mean that the Lord is without qualities, He retains all the splendid qualities of His own transcendental form); "nityah" means "eternal"; "anyah" means that "although He appears within this material world, He Himself is purely spiritual, and not a product of material energy"; and "nirgunah" means "free from the influence of the three modes of material nature" or, it may also mean "without any material qualities."

{ }At this point someone may object: If this unusual interpretation of the verse is to be accepted, then how should we interpret the next verse, which clearly describes Lord Krishna's oneness and difference from the material elements, and thus supports the first interpretation of the verse. In this next verse (10.85.23), Shri Krishna says:

"Just as the five material elements, ether, air, fire, water, and earth are manifested in the great and small material manifestations, and just as these elements are manifested to appear as homogenous units or complicated varieties, and just as these elements are sometimes visible, and sometimes their presence is unnoticed, in the same way the all-pervading Supersoul is present in all the variety of this material world. Sometimes He may be seen, and sometimes He remains invisible."

{ }This verse should be interpreted in the following way: "The elements are manifested one from another. For example, at first ether is manifested, and from ether, air is manifested. From air fire is manifested, and so forth. By nature, ether carries sound, and therefore air and all the other elements can also carry sound, for they are manifested from ether. In the same way the nature of fire is to contain the sensation of touch. All the elements manifested from fire (water and earth) can carry the sensation of touch. In the same way, whatever is present within the city of Dvaraka is manifested from the Personality of Godhead, Krishna, and therefore He is present everywhere in that city, just as sound is naturally present in all the elements manifested from ether, or touch is present in the elements manifested from fire."

atah eva-therefore; aha-He says; tat-of Lord Krishna; darshana-sight; sparshana-touch; anupatha-travelling on the same path; prajalpa-talking; shayya-on the bed; asana-on the sitting place; ashana-taking meals; shayauna-by matrimonial relationship; sapinda-and by blood relationship; bandhah-relation; yesham-of whom; grihe-in the home; niraya-to hell; vartmani-on the road; vah-you; svarga-elevation to the upper planetary system; apavarga-and liberation; viramah-stopping; svayam-personally; asa-is; vishnuh-Lord Vishnu.

{ }The exalted position of the members of the Yadu dynasty, who associated with Lord Krishna as equals, is described in the following statement spoken by an assembly of Kings to Maharaja Ugrasena (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.82.30):

"Your majesty, King of the Bhojas, you are related with the Yadu dynasty by matrimonial relationship and by blood relationship also. As a result You are constantly in touch with Lord Krishna, and You have no difficulty in seeing Him at any time. Lord Krishna moves with You, talks with you, sits with you, rests with you, and dines with you. The Yadus appear to be always engaged in wordly affairs, which are considered to lead to the royal road to hell, but due to the presence of Lord Krishna, the Original Personality of Godhead in the Vishnu category, who is omniscient, omnipresent, and omnipotent, all of You are factually relieved from all material contamination, and are situated in the transcendental position of liberation and Brahman existence."*

yesham vah-the words "yesam vah"; yushmakam-mean "of you"; vrishninam-members of the Vrishni dynasty; grihe-in the home; vishnuh-Lord Vishnu; shri-krishna-Shri Krishna; akhyah-with the name; bhagavan-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; svayam-the word "svayam"; atmana-means "personally"; svabhavatah-by His own nature; eva-certain; asa-the word "asa"; nivasam cakre-means "resided"; na-not; tu-but; anyena-otherwise; hetuna-by another cause; iti-thus; arthah-the meaning; katham-bhute-what is your home like?; aniraya-vartmani-it is described by the word "aniraya-vartmani"; nirayah-the word "niraya"; samsarah-means "material existence"; tat-vartma-that path; prapanchah-is the material world; tatah-from that; anyasmin-in another place; prapanca-material existence; atitah-beyond; iti-thus; arthah-the meaning.

{ }In this verse the words "yesham vah" mean "of you members of the Vrishni dynasty"; "vishnuh" means "the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Lord Krishna"; "svayam" means "personally"; "asa" means "resides". The homes of the members of the Yadu dynasty are described by the word "aniraya-vartmani" which means "beyond the sphere of material existence."

kidrishinam-what were they like?; vah-you; tasmin-in that; eva-certainly; vartamananam-at present; svayam-personally; katham-bhuta-what is He like?; svarga-apavarga-viramah-He is described by the word "svargapavarga-viramah"; svargasya-of elevation to the upper material planetary system; apavargasya-of impersonal liberation; ca-also; viramah-the cause of cessation; yena-by whom; yah-who; nija-bhaktebhyah-to His own devotees; tat-bahirmukhata-karam-which makes one averse to devotional service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead; svargam-elevation to the upper material planets; na-does not; dadati-give; tat-His; bhakti-devotional service; udasinam-without reference; kevalam-monistic; moksham-liberation; ca-also; not; does not; dadati-give; kintu-but; tan-them; sva-carana-aravinda-tale-under His lotus feet; eva-certainly; rakshati-gives protection; iti-thus; arthah-the meaning.

{ }How is Lord Krishna described in this verse? He is described by the word "svargapavarga-virama", which means that He does not give to His devotees either elevation to the higher material planets, or impersonal liberation. Residence in the higher material planets makes one uninterested in spiritual life, or Krishna consciousness, and impersonal liberation removes one from the sphere of loving devotional service to Lord Krishna. For this reason these inferior benedictions are not given by the Lord. Instead He gives to His devotees shelter under the protection of His own lotus feet.

{ }Lord Krishna resides in the same house with the members of the Yadu dynasty. They have no difficulty in seeing Him (tad-darshanam). They move with Him (anupatha) talk with Him (prajalpa), rest with Him (shayya), sit with Him (asana), and dine with Him (ashana). They are related with Him by matrimonial relationship (sayana), and by blood relationship (sapinda-bandhah). In this sentence we may note the use of madhya-pada-lopi-samasa, and bahuvrihi-samasa.

{ }That the members of the Yadu dynasty are eternal associates of Lord Krishna is confirmed in the following statement of Shukadeva Gosvami (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.90.42) where the use of the present tense ("aste") indicates "eternally".

"Who will be able to count the great souls who are members of the Yadu dynasty. There numbers are certainly beyond counting. Eternally remaining among them, King Ugrasena alone has ten quadrillion soldiers as personal bodyguards."

{ }That the members of the Yadu dynasty are eternal associates of Lord Krishna is also described in the following simile spoken by Shukadeva Gosvami in Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.70.18):

"After entering the Sudharma assembly house, Lord Krishna used to sit on the exalted royal throne and would be seen to emanate glaring rays of transcendental effulgence. In the midst of all the great heroes of the Yadu dynasty, Krishna resembled the full moon in the sky, surrounded by multi-luminaries."*

The eternal relationship between Lord Krishna and the Yadavas may also be seen by (Mahabharata, Udyama-parva) Lord Krishna's revelation of His Universal Form to Duryodhana in order to protect the Yadavas and Pandavas.

{ }Someone may object, saying that according to the description in the Eleventh Canto of Shrimad-Bhagavatam Arjuna was defeated by a band of infidel cowherdsmen, and the Yadu dynasty became cursed by a brahmana and in an intoxicated condition killed themselves in a fratricidal war. Our objector will protest that these are not actions befitting eternal associates of the Lord.

To this objection I reply that Lord Krishna, who descended to this world for the benefit of the cows and brahmanas was unwilling to let the brahmana's curse go in vain, and therefore the Yadus were destroyed in a fratricidal war. Actually, even more important than that is the nature of the Lord's pastimes, where illusory things are sometimes acted out by the Lord's internal potency. This magical jugglery of the Lord may be seen in many pastimes. For example: when Ravana attempted to steal Sita-devi, Lord Ramacandra created a false-Sita-devi by His mystic potency. The illusory Sita was captured by Ravana, while the actual Sita was never taken by the demon. The defeat of Arjuna and the annihilation of the Yadu dynasty are similar magical feats performed by the Lord. This is specifically described by Lord Krishna Himself in the following statement spoken by Him to His chariot-driver Daruka (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 11.30.49):

{ }In this verse the words "tvam tu" refer to Daruka; "jnana-nishöhah" means "understanding the truth about My transcendental pastimes"; "mad-dharmam" means "My natural inclination to protect My devotees, such as yourself"; and "asthaya" means "having faith". Krishna tells Daruka that the present calamities, such as the destruction of the Yadu dynasty are like magical tricks performed by Him. Daruka should understand all this (vijñaya) and become free (upashamam vraja) from grief and agitation of the mind, which is produced by superficial understanding. By the word "tu" (but), Shri Krishna tells Daruka:

"Others may become bewildered by these pastimes of Mine, but you should not."

Daruka, a perfectly liberated devotee who had descended with the Lord from Vaikunöha understood this statement of the Lord. This is the proper explanation of the Lord's final pastimes and the destruction of the Yadu dynasty.

{ }The transcendental nature of the appearance and dissappearance of Lord Shri Krishna and His confidential associates is described in three verses from Shrimad-Bhagavatam (11.31.11-13). In the first of these verses (11), Shukadeva Gosvami says to Maharaja Parikshit:

"O king, please try to understand that the appearance of Shri Krishna and His confidential associates (who have spiritual forms just like that of the Lord), their pastimes, and their dissappearance from this earth are like a dramatic play enacted by Lord Krishna's internal potency. Shri Krishna is not an ordinary living entity, but in truth He is the Supreme Person who has created this entire material world, who entered into every atom of that creation as the all-pervading Supersoul, and who will destroy the entire universe at the time of annihilation. He is the Supreme Lord, who sometimes comes to this material world to display His pastimes here, although He always remains free from the influence of the material energy, and situated in His own transcendental glory."

parasya-the word "parasya"; shri-krishnasya-means "of Shri Krishna"; ye-which; tanu-bhritah-with forms; prayujyamane-engaged; mayi-Me; tam-this; shuddham-pure; bhagavatim-of the Lord; tanum-form; iti-thus; shri-narada-of Narada Muni (Bhagavatam 1.6.29); ukti-statement; anusarena-in accordance with; tadiyam-his; tanum-body; eva-certainly; dharayantah-manifesting; tat-parshadah-the associates of the Lord; yadava-adayah-the Yadavas and others; tesham-of them; janana-birth; anyaya-dissappearance; rupah-consisting of; ihah-the word "ihah"; ceshöah-means "activities"; kevalam-exclusively; parasya-of the Supreme Lord; eva-certainly; mayaya-by the illusory potency; vidambanam-the word "vidambanam"; anukaranam-imitation; avehi-please understand; yatha-just as; indrajalavattah-expert in magical tricks; natah-actors; kashcit-some; jivate-live; eva-certainly; marayitva-after killing; iva-just as; dagdhva-having burned; iva-just as; punah-again; ca-also; tat-that; deham-body; janayitva-having re-created; iva-just as; darsayati-reveal; tasya-his; iva-just as; ivshva-of the material universe; sarga-creation; adi-beginning with; hetu-cause; acintya-inconceivable; shakteh-of the potency; tasya-His; tadrisha-of the same nature; shaktitvam-potency; na-not; ca-and; citram-astonishing; iti-thus; aha-He says; srstva iti-the passage beginning with the word "srstva".

{ }In this verse the word "parasya" (of the Supreme) refers to Shri Krishna. The word "tanu-bhrit" means "with spiritual forms". Both the Lord and His liberated devotees have spiritual forms. This is confirmed by Narada Muni (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 1.6.29) in the following words:

"Having been awarded a transcendental body befitting an associate of the Personality of Godhead, I quit the body made of five material elements, and thus all acquired fruitive results of work [karma] stopped."*

For this reason the words "janana" (appearance) "anyaya" (dissappearance), and "iha" (activities) refer not only to the Lord but also to the Yadavas and other devotees who were the Lord's intimate associates. Shukadeva Gosvami says in this verse "maya-vidambanam avehi" (Please understand that the activities, dissappearance, and appearance of both the Lord and His intimate associates appear superficially to be under the jurisdiction of the illusory potency maya, although actually they are not so). Just as a magician may make a show of burning Himself in a fire, and then re-appear again, alive and unburned before His audience, in the same way Lord Krishna makes a magical show of His own dissappearance and the dissappearance of His associates.

That the Lord has such inconceivable potency to do wonderful things is confirmed in the second part of this verse where it is said that Shri Krishna creates and annihilates the entire material universe. If by His potency the Lord can create and destroy the universe, then it is not at all astonishing that He can make a magical show of His devotees' and His own dissappearance.

{ }In the eyes of the foolish conditioned souls, the appearance, activities, and disappearance of Lord Balarama may appear to be material, just as those of a conditioned soul, although of course, His activities and disappearance are transcendental, just as those of Shri Krishna. In the Skanda Purana we find the description of the extraordinary disappearance of Lord Balarama's expansion, Lakshmana. Lord Balarama's disappearance is similar to that of Lakshmana. The eternal position of Lord Balarama's expansion Ananta Shesha, His extraordinary potencies and His natural inclination to protect His devotees are all described in the scripture known as the Narayana-varma.

{ }Even when the demon Jarasandha attempted to defame Lord Balarama with many insults, all his insults may be interpreted as praises. For example, Jarasandha said (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.50.18):

"You Balarama! If you like You can fight along with Krishna, and if You have patience, then You can wait to be killed by my arrows. Thus you can be promoted to heaven. Come! Fight with me, and defeat me if You can."*

Shridhara Svami, in his commentary on this verse has explained the actual import of this statement of Jarasandha:

"Lord Balarama's body is spiritual, and thus cannot be cut by Jarasandha's arrows or any other weapon. Therefore the only possible outcome of Jarasandha's fight with Lord Balarama is explained by the words "mam jahi" (Balarama will defeat Jarasandha).

{ }In his comment on Shrimad-Bhagavatam 11.31.5 Shridhara Svami explains that the phrase "adagdhva dhamavishat" means that Lord Krishna left the material world and entered the spiritual world in His same transcendental body. In other words, He did not change His body. The same is also true for the Lord's associates. They accompany Shri Krishna to the material world and eventually they return to the spiritual world without changing their bodies. In other words, the associates of the Lord never had material bodies, but they appeared in this world in their eternal spiritual forms, just as Shri Krishna Himself does.

Because such great devotees are always protected by Shri Krishna, they do not die in the same way conditioned souls die, but rather they return to the spiritual world in their spiritual forms, for they had never accepted material bodies in the first place. That the Lord's associates return to the spiritual world without having to change bodies is confirmed by the following statement of Shri Shukadeva Gosvami (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 11.31.12):

"My dear Maharaja Parikshit, please know that Shri Krishna is always the protector of the surrendered souls. He protected you, when as an unborn child you were burned by the brahmastra weapon, and He delivered the son of His teacher from the planet of Yamaraja. His teacher's son did not even change his body, but the Lord brought him before his parents in the very same body in which he had first appeared before them. Lord Krishna defeated Shiva, who is victorious even over death himself, and He brought to Vaikunöha the hunter who shot Him in the heel with an arrow. This hunter also did not change his body, but entered Vaikunöha in the very same body. How is it possible for this omnipotent Lord Krishna to be weak and unable to protect Himself? It is not at all possible."

{ }In this verse the word "yah" (who) refers to Shri Krishna; the word "guru-sutam" means "the guru's son (who had been swallowed by the demon Pacajana, and eventually taken to Yamaraja)"; and the word "martyena" means "in the same body". We may note in this connection that by rescuing His guru's son, Shri Krishna displayed His great transcendental prowess. In other words, it was not merely ordinary brahminical power that was used by Shri Krishna to accomplish this extraordinary task. In this verse Shukadeva Gosvami also mentions Maharaja Parikshit (tvam) who was first burned by a brahmastra weapon and then rescued by Shri Krishna. In this connection the word "anayat" means "rescued". In the battle fought with Banasura, Shri Krishna also defeated Lord Shiva (isham), who is victorious even over death himself (antakantakam). Krishna also delivered a hunter (mrigayam) named Jara, and enabled him to enter the spiritual world (svah) without having to change his body (sa-shariram). If Shri Krishna is this powerful, why should we think He is not able to protect (avane) His own confidential associates (sva), the members of the Yadu dynasty? Certainly any conception that Shri Krishna did not protect the members of the Yadu dynasty and enable them to enter the spiritual world is not a factual understanding of Shri Krishna's pastimes. The members of the Yadu dynasty certainly returned to their own abode in the spiritual world, without having to change bodies. This is the proper understanding.

{ }Someone may raise the question: If the members of the Yadu dynasty had gone back to their own abode in the spiritual world, and if Shri Krishna, being self-sufficient, were not unhappy because of separation from them, then why did the Lord not stay within the material world for a time longer, and perform pastimes with His other associates in order to show mercy to the conditioned souls of this world?

The conclusive answer to this question is found in the following verse (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 11.31.13), which reveals the unbreakable bond of intimate friendship between Lord Krishna and the members of the Yadu dynasty:

Even more significant than that, He is the master of all unlimited potencies (ashesha-shakti-dhrik).

Even though Shri Krishna is the omnipotent Godhead, after the departure of the Yadu dynasty, He did not desire (naicchat) to remain in His transcendental form within this material world (vapuh atra sheshitam pranetum). He decided to return to His own abode in the spiritual world. What is the reason for the Lord to decide in this way? The reason is that He considered: what is the use of this material world (martyena kim), for I have already brought My pure devotees to the spiritual world (svastha-gatim pradarshayan). This verse shows the great affection felt by the Lord for the members of the Yadu dynasty.

{ }The members of the Yadu dynasty left this material world in much the same way as Lord Krishna Himself left (by the agency of the Lord's transcendental potency). The Lord's plan for causing the disappearance of the Yadu dynasty is described in the following statement of Shri Krishna related by Uddhava to Vidura (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 3.3.15):

"When they quarrel among themselves, influenced by intoxication, with their eyes red like copper because of drinking [madhu], then only will they disappear; otherwise, it will not be possible. On My [Krishna's] disappearance, this incident will take place."*

{ }In this verse Lord Krishna is considering: Anyone who fights with the members of the Yadu dynasty will be unable to kill them, and even if the Yadavas fight among themselves, they will still be unable to kill each other. In this way it will not be possible to effect the disappearance of the Yadu dynasty from this earth. What method of causing the Yadus to disappear exists: except for My own wish?" The Lord further thought: "Only if I wish it, will the Yadus leave this earth planet". This decision of the Lord is confirmed by the use of the word "sma", which means "certainly".

Another interpretation of this verse is that in truth there is no method that will succeed in the "vadha" (killing) of the Yadu dynasty, for their disappearance from this earth is not at all like the death of the conditioned souls. The Yadavas returned to the spiritual world without changing their bodies, and therefore they did not at all die (vadha).

Uddhava said:

"This universe with all its planets is most unfortunate. And even more unfortunate are the members of the Yadu dynasty because they cannot identify Lord Hari as the Personality of Godhead, any more than the fish could identify the moon."*

Although not explicitly stated, Uddhava intends to lament for Himself also in this verse. It is as if he had said: "I have been cheated by Lord Krishna and by the Yadavas, for I am now bereft of the good-fortune of their association. I am also unfortunate for I also am unable to understand Lord Krishna. All these things are not at all surprising for I am certainly unworthy to attain the Lord's association or qualified to understand Him. Still, somehow or other, in the past I did have Lord Krishna's association, and if it were not for that, I would not know enough to speak in this way."

In order to remove Vidura's doubt, Uddhava spoke the following verse, explaining that the Yadavas are able to understand Krishna to a certain extent. They know that He is the all-pervading Supersoul, but they are not aware that He is the Original Personality of Godhead, the origin of all expansion of Godhead. Uddhava said

(Shrimad-Bhagavatam 3.2.9):

"The Yadus were all experienced devotees, learned and expert in psychic study. Over and above this, they were always with the Lord in all kinds of relaxations, and still they were only able to know Him as the one Supreme who dwells everywhere."*

satvatam-the word "satvatam"; svesham-means "of the family"; eva-certainly; rishabham-the word "rishabham"; nitya-kula-patitvena-means "the eternal leader of the family"; vartamanam-remaining; svayam-bhagavantam-the Original Personality of Godhead; api-also; bhuta-vasam-all-pervading; tat-amsha-rupam-by His expansion as Kshirodakasayi Vishnu; bhutaantaryaminam-the Supersoul; eva-certainly; amamsata-could think; iti-thus; sarva-of all; bhuta-living entities; adhivasah-residing in the hearts; iti-thus; antaryami-description of the Supersoul; shrutah-from the Shruti-sastra; uktam-said; ca-also; vrishninam-of the members of the Vrishni family; para-devata-the supreme diety; iti-thus; shrimat-uddhavah-spoken by Uddhava; shri-viduram-to Vidura.

{ }In this verse the words "satvatam rishabham" mean "the eternal leader of the family". Even though Shri Krishna is the Original Personality of Godhead, the source of all incarnations, the Yadavas thought of Him (amamsata) as the all-pervading Supersoul (bhuta-vasam), who is one of the expansions (Kshirodakashayi Vishnu) of Lord Krishna. The Supersoul is described in the following statement of Shruti-shastra:

"The Supersoul resides in the hearts of all living entities."

That Shri Krishna is the leader of the Yadu dynasty is also described in the following statement of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.43.17):

"Shri Krishna is the supreme Deity worshiped by the members of the Vrishni dynasty."

{ }After the departure of Lord Krishna and the Yadavas from the earth, Uddhava offered the following prayer, begging the Lord to enable him to regain their former association. Uddhava said (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 11.6.43):

"O Lord Keshava, I am not willing to abandon Your lotus feet for even half a second. Please bring me to Your transcendental abode."

{ }In this verse the word "sva-dhama" refers to the abode of Dvaraka in the spiritual world, beyond the view of the material world. Uddhava says in this verse: "O Lord, You have brought the other members of the Yadu dynasty to Your abode, You should also bring me." Another meaning of the word "api" is "even". Interpreted in this way, Uddhava says "Please bring even me to Your abode". In this way Uddhava humbly describes his own uselessness and lack of good qualities.

{ }The appearance and activities of the Yadavas are transcendental, just as those of Shri Krishna. This is confirmed in the following statement of Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda:

"Just as Lakshmana and Bharata descend into the material world to accompany Lord Ramacandra, and just as Lord Balarama and others also descend to accompany Lord Krishna, in the same way the members of the Yadu dynasty descend from their own abodes in the spiritual sky, and take birth in the material world to accompany Shri Krishna. When Lord Krishna again returns to the spiritual world, the members of the Yadu dynasty again accompany Him. They thus return to their original eternal abodes in the spiritual sky. The Yadavas and other great devotees, therefore, never take birth in the material world, as the conditioned souls do. Neither are they bound by the reactions of fruitive activities, as are the conditioned souls."

{ }In these verses the words "nija-lokat" and "tat-padam" refer to the planets of Lord Krishna and Lord Ramacandra in the spiritual world. According to this statement of Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda, the incarnations of the Lord, (such as Lord Matsya and others), each have Their own planet in the Vaikunöhalokas.

{ }The word "kah" in this verse is explained by Shridhara Svami:

"In this verse the word 'kah' means 'otherwise'".

Now that we have proven that Maharaja Vasudeva and the other confidential associates of Lord Krishna are all the Lord's eternal associates in the spiritual world, someone may protest, saying that there are many places in the Vedic literatures where it is described that the Lord's associates were demigods or great devotees in their previous lives, and because of their great devotion they became eligible to become the Lord's associates.

To this objection I reply that in such cases it should be understood that such great devotees are empowered expansions of particular associates of the Lord. In other words, at the time of the Lord's appearance in this world, some of the Lord's eternal associates may empower certain great devotees to assume their roles in the Lord's pastimes within the material world. Such empowerment is like the empowerment of Pradyumna, who was the demigod Cupid empowered by (vishnu-tattva) Lord Pradyumna of the catur-vyuha.

{ }An example of one of the Lord's associates who did not descend from the spiritual world to accompany the Lord in His pastimes is Uddhava. This is described by Shri Krishna to Uddhava, where the Lord described Uddhava's previous birth as Vasu. Shri Krishna said (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 3.4.11):

"O Vasu, I know from within your mind what you desired in the days of yore when the Vasus and other demigods responsible for expanding the universal affairs performed sacrifices. You particularly desired to achieve My association. This is very difficult to obtain for others, but I award it unto you."*

In this verse Lord Krishna addressed Uddhava as "vaso" (in the vocative case) because in his previous birth he was the demigod Vasu. He was a partial expansion of the Lord's associate Uddhava. Uddhava's previous birth as Vasu should be understood in this way.

"Because Anakadundubhi was situated in the platform of pure goodness (vasudeva-sattva), he became the place where the Supreme Personality of Godhead made His appearance within this world. This is described by the great sages."*

This means that the sages say that Anakadundubhi became famous as Vasudeva, the place of the Lord's appearance. This verse was spoken by Shrila Shukadeva Gosvami.

"Devaki appeared in a spiritual form."

The word "deva" here means "of Lord Vasudeva" and "deva-rupinyam" means "a spiritual form of pure goodness."

The spiritual form of Devaki-devi is also described in the Vishnu Purana, where the demigods, offer the following offering prayers to her:

"O Devaki, your form is transcendental."

{ }Before Shri Krishna appeared in this material world, Vasudeva and Devaki were His parents in the aprakaöa-lila (unmanifest pastimes) of the spiritual world. These two parents entered this material world along with the Lord, and performed the manifest pastimes (prakaöa-lila) there. When Krishna would return to the spiritual world, Vasudeva and Devaki would automatically follow Him there, and again assume their parental roles there. It is with this understanding that Shri Krishna said to them (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.3.45):

"Both of you, husband and wife, constantly think of Me as your son, but always know that I am the Supreme Personality of Godhead. By thus thinking of Me constantly with love and affection, you will achieve the highest perfection; returning home, back to Godhead."*

In this verse we may note that the word "brahma-bhavana" means "with the understanding that the Supreme Personality of Godhead has appeared in a humanlike form" and the words "mad-gatim param" means "the unmanifest pastimes of the spiritual world, different from the manifest pastimes of the material world."

{ }In this verse the word "mayaya" means "by the Lord's potency which inspires transcendental love for Him". The word "maya" is also used in this sense in the following quote from Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.8.43), where Mother Yashoda's love for Krishna is described in the following words:

"Mother Yashoda, by the grace of the Lord, could understand the real truth. But then again, the supreme master, by the influence of the internal potency, yogamaya, inspired her to become absorbed in intense maternal affection for her son."*

The word "maya" may also mean "My mercy, which is the cause of intense love for Me." This interpretation is supported by the Vishva-prakasha dictionary, which defines the word "maya" in the following way:

"The word `maya' means either `deceit', or `mercy'".

Although pure love of Krishna is the natural cause of liberation from material entanglement, it also eclipses that benediction of liberation and makes it seem very insignificant. For this reason, Vasudeva and Devaki were not very eager to attain liberation. We may also note that the phrase "ajushöa-gramya-vishayau" does not mean that Vasudeva and Devaki were intent on material sense gratification as the conditioned souls are. Actually Vasudeva and Devaki were supremely renounced and free from all material desires.

"Lord Shri Krishna is He who is known as jana-nivasa, the resort of all living entities, and who is also known as Devaki-nandana or Yashoda-nandana, the son of Devaki and Yashoda. Shri Krishna also affirmed that the residents of Vrindavana are His eternal associates in the following words (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.25.18):

"The residents of Vrindavana have completely taken shelter of Me. They consider Me their supreme master, and they are all My eternal associates. { }In this verse Vrindavana-dhama, the home of Nanda Maharaja (nandasya vrajah) is described as eternally endowed with the opulence of all wealth (sarva-samriddhiman). When Shri Krishna appeared in Vrindavana with all His transcendental qualities (atma-gunaih), and enjoyed confidential pastimes there, the most exalted goddesses of fortune in the spiritual world came with Him to enjoy pastimes with the Lord. As long as the Lord stayed in the material world, these goddesses of fortune also stayed. In this way Vrindavana-dhama became the place of Shri Krishna's pastimes, and also the residence of the greatest goddesses of fortune. That Vrindavana-dhama is the abode of pastimes for the goddesses of fortune (rama-kridam) is confirmed by the following verse from Brahma-samhita (5.29):

"I worship Govinda, the primeval Lord, the first progenitor, who is tending the cows, yielding all desires, in abodes built with spiritual gems and surrounded by millions of purpose trees. He is always served with great reverence and affection by hundreds and thousands of goddesses of fortune."*

{ }That the residents of Gokula Vrindavana are the eternal associates of Shri Krishna is confirmed by Lord Brahma in six verses from Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.14.32-37), which I shall now discuss (in Anucchedas 138-143).

In the first of these verses (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.14.32), Brahma glorified the residents of Vrindavana, saying:

"How greatly fortunate are Nanda Maharaja, the cowherd men and all the inhabitants of Vrajabhumi! There is no limit to their fortune because the Absolute Truth, the source of transcendental bliss, the eternal Supreme Brahman, has become their friend."*

{ }In this verse the word "bhagyam" (good fortune) does not refer to the ordinary auspicious situation created by ordinary pious activities. The transcendental good fortune described in this verse was obtained by receiving the indescribable causeless mercy of Shri Krishna. We may also note that the word "bhagyam" is repeated twice to indicate the limitless extent of that good-fortune.

In the second part of the verse, the subject "brahma" refers to Shri Krishna. The subject is modified by the words "purnam" (complete), "paramanandam" (the supreme bliss), and "sanatanam" (eternal). The predicate is "mitram" (friend). The adjective "sanatana" (eternal) may be understood to modify either "brahma" (the Absolute Truth), or "mitram" (friend). In this way the construction may be interpreted: "The eternal Absolute Truth is the friend of the inhabitants of Vrajabhumi" or it may also be interpreted: "The Absolute Truth is the eternal friend of the inhabitants of Vrajabhumi." An example of this may be seen in the sentence "manoramam suvarnam idam kundalam jatam", where the adjective "manoramam" (beautiful) may be understood to modify either "suvarnam" (gold), or "kundalam" (earring). Interpreted in the first way, the sentence may be translated: "This earring is fashioned from beautiful gold", and interpreted in the second way the sentence may be translated: "This golden earring is beautiful". Both interpretations are possible.

In this verse both interpretations may be accepted simultaneously, and "sanatanam" may modify both "brahma" (the Absolute Truth) and "mitram" (friend) at the same time. Therefore we may say that "Shri Krishna is the eternal Absolute Truth", and we may also say that Shri Krishna, the Absolute Truth is the eternal friend of the inhabitants of Vrajabhumi". If we wish to completely reject the second interpretation, and say that Shri Krishna is the eternal Absolute Truth, and He is only temporarily the friend of the inhabitants of Vrajabhumi", we will create an interpretation that is hard for a reasonable person to accept. For this reason we may understand that this verse (by using the phrase "mitam sanatanam") affirms that the inhabitants of Vrajabhumi are the eternal associates of Shri Krishna just as Rukmini and the other intimate associates of the Lord are. Their relationship continuously exists in all three phases of time (past, present, and future).

"O infallible Lord, although the good-fortune of these inhabitants of Vrajabhumi is beyond compare, even the demigods, such as Shiva, Candra, and myself have become greatly fortunate, for we always drink through our senses the honey-like nectar of Your lotus feet."*

{ }In this verse the word "eka" means "unbroken" or "eternal", and the word "bhagya-mahima" means "the glorification of their good-fortune". "Sarvadayah" means "the demigods (headed by Shiva) in charge of the ten directions". We may note that Lord Shiva is put at the head of all demigods because he is the greatest devotee of Lord Krishna. The word "bhuri-bhagyah" indicates the good-fortune experienced by these demigods. The word "hrishika-casakaih" means "with the drinking vessels of the eyes and the other senses" and the word "te" means "Your". In the last part of the verse, Brahma says: "We always drink the nectar of Your lotus feet". By using the three words "madu", "amrita" and "asavam" which all mean "nectar", the swetness and beauty of the Lord's lotus feet is described. These three words form a samahara-samasa in order to indicate the limitless variety and amount of nectar present in the Lord's lotus feet. We may also note that the demonstrative pronoun "etat" (this) refers to the nectar of Lord Krishna's lotus feet.

Someone may argue that because the demigods are the administrators of the affairs of the material senses of the living entities within the material world, we may conclude that they perceived the Lord through the senses of the residents of Vrajabhumi, and this is what is meant by the phrase "hrishika-casakaih pibamah". This cannot be the case, for the inhabitants of Vrajabhumi all have eternal spiritual forms, not under the jurisdiction of the material demigods. But even if we accept that the inhabitants of Vrajabhumi had material senses, still, the demigods do not enjoy the activities of the senses of conditioned souls, or directly experience through those senses. This is confirmed by Shripada Shankaracarya in his commentary on Vedanta-sutra (2.4.17) in the following words:

"The demigods are administrators of the the conditioned souls' senses. Only the individual living entities directly experience through their senses. The administrative demigods do not experience through the living entities senses."

{ }The exalted position of the inhabitants of Gokula is confirmed in the following appeal spoken by Lord Brahma to Shri Krishna (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.14.30-34):

"Therefore, my Lord, either in this life or wherever I may take my birth, even as an animal or a bird, I pray that I may be so fortunate that I may be counted as one of Your devotees. Wherever I may be, I pray that I may be engaged in the devotional service of Your lotus feet."*

"My dear Lord, I am therefore not interested in either material opulences or liberation. I am most humbly praying at Your lotus feet for You to please give me any sort of birth within this Vrindavana forest so that I may be able to be favored by the dust of the feet of some of the devotees of Vrindavana. Even if I am given the chance to grow just as the humble grass in this land, that will be a glorious birth for me. But if I am not so fortunate to take birth within the forest of Vrindavana, I beg to be allowed to take birth outside the immediate area of Vrindavana so that when the devotees go out they will walk over me. Even that would be a great fortune for me. I am just aspiring for a birth in which I will be smeared by the dust of the devotees' feet.*

"I can see that everyone here is simply full of Krishna consciousness; they do not know anything but Mukunda. All the Vedas are indeed searching after the lotus feet of Krishna."*

In these verses Brahma requests a birth within the area of Vrindavana, because in that way he may attain the good fortune of eternal devotional service to the lotus feet of Shri Krishna. In these verses it is as if Brahma had asked: "What can compare to the good-fortune of taking birth within the area of Vrindavana?" By glorifying the land and residents of Vrindavana in this way, Brahma affirms that the residents of Vrindavana are the eternal associates of Shri Krishna.

{ }In the next verse (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.14.35), Brahma explains that Shri Krishna is greatly indebted to the residents of Vrindavana for their pure devotional service. Because of this unpayable debt, Shri Krishna thinks He must eternally remain among the residents of Vrindavana and accept their devotional service. Brahma says:

"My Lord, sometimes I am puzzled as to how Your Lordship will be able to repay, in gratitude, the devotional service of these residents of Vrindavana. Although I know that You are the supreme source of all benediction, I am puzzled to know how You will be able to repay all the service that You are receiving from these residents of Vrindavana. I think of how You are so kind, so magnanimous, that even Putana, who came to cheat You by dressing herself as a very affectionate mother, was awarded liberation and the actual post of a mother. And other demons belonging to the same family, such as Aghasura and Bakasura, were also favored with liberation. Under the circumstances, I am puzzled. These residents of Vrindavana have given You everything: their homes, wealth, friends, dear ones, bodies, children, lives and minds. Everything is being utilized for Your purpose. So how will You be able to repay their debt? You have already given Yourself to Putana! I surmise that You shall ever remain a debtor to the residents of Vrindavana, being unable to repay their loving service."*

{ }In this verse the word "sad-veshat" means "appearing like Mother Yashoda and the other pure-hearted devotees of Vrindavana". Because each of the residents of Vrindavana loves Shri Krishna with great intensity, therefore they have attained His association from time immemorial. Shri Krishna is their eternal friend (sanatanam mitram) and therefore they are extremely fortunate (tad-bhuri-bhagyam). By praying for a birth in the land of Vrindavana, Brahma has spoken properly. This is a very good request.

{ }Someone may object, saying that the residents of Vrindavana are ordinary householders and conditioned souls, for they manifest all the ordinary material attachments to family and home that are manifested by ordinary creatures. They are not great sages or renounced sannyasis. How is it possible, therefore, that they are eternal associates of the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

In order to answer this objection, Brahma replies that because the residents of Vrindavana are immersed in love for Krishna, they cannot be at all encumbered by material desires or attachments as the conditioned souls are. Brahma explains this in the next verse, where he contrasts the condition of the materially contaminated living entities with that of the pure devotees of Vrindavana. Brahma says (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.14.36):

"My Lord, I can understand that the superexcellent service of the residents of Vrindavana is due to their engaging all natural instincts in Your service. It is said that attachments for material objects are like thieves which steal away the valuable time of the living entity. The material illusions of such attached persons are like shackles which bind him by the legs to his house and paraphernalia which become no more than a prisonhouse for him. But this is only the case for persons who are not in Krishna consciousness. In the case of the residents of Vrindavana, such obstructions as attachment for hearth and home are non-existent. Because their attachment has been converted to You, and their home has been converted into a temple because You are always there, and because they have forgotten everything for Your sake, there is no impediment. For a Krishna conscious person, there is no such thing as impediments in hearth and home. Nor is there illusion."*

{ }In this verse Brahma explains that as long as one does not completely surrender himself at the lotus feet of Lord Krishna, or in other words, as long as one remains a non-devotee materialist, his material attachments will act as thieves (stenah), stealing away the valuable opportunity offered in the human form of life. On the other hand, if one becomes devoted to Lord Krishna, and offers himself with love at the Lord's lotus feet, then his so-called material attachments to home and hearth do not remain material in nature, but become spiritualized because of being engaged in the Lord's service in Krishna consciousness. Such so-called material attachments do not act as thieves, but on the contrary, they are a source of transcendental happiness for the devotees.

{ }If Prahlada Maharaja and other great devotees who have completely surrendered to the Supreme Lord may remain in family life, apparently attached to family and home, then why should anyone think that simply because the residents of Vrindavana are householders, and not renounced sannyasis, therefore they cannot be eternal associates of the Lord? The residents of Vrindavana are eternally dear to Lord Krishna, and they are perfectly situated in the highest platform of spiritual happiness free from all contact of the material energy. This is described in the following statement of Shrila Shukadeva Gosvami (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.11.58):

"In this way all the cowherd men, headed by Nanda Maharaja, enjoyed topics about the pastimes of Krishna and Balarama with great transcendental pleasure, and they could not even perceive material tribulations."*

{ }In this verse the word "bhava" means "material existence", and "vedana" means "awareness of material happiness and distress". We may note in this regard that the dictionary definition of "vedana" is:

"The word 'vedana' means 1. knowledge, or 2. suffering".

Although apparently situated in the material world as ordinary conditioned souls, the residents of Vrindavana were completely free from the bondage of material existence. They did not suffer any of the distresses of material life.

We may be proud of being controllers of the senses, but here the residents of Vrindavana are so transcendental that they are not under our control. Actually they are enjoying the senses through service to You. I shall therefore consider myself fortunate to be given a chance to take birth in this land of Vrindavana in any of my future lives."*

Although I know that You are the supreme source of all benediction, I am puzzled to know how You will be able to repay all the service that You are receiving from these residents of Vrindavana. I think of how You are so kind, so magnanimous, that even Putana, who came to cheat You by dressing herself as a very affectionate mother, was awarded liberation and the actual post of a mother. And other demons belonging to the same family, such as Aghasura and Bakasura, were also favored with liberation. Under the circumstances, I am puzzled. These residents of Vrindavana have given You everything: their bodies, their minds, their love, their homes. Everything is being utilized for Your purpose. So how will You be able to repay their debt? You have already given Yourself to Putana! I surmise that You shall ever remain a debtor to the residents of Vrindavana, being unable to repay their loving service."*

{ }My Lord, I can understand that the superexcellent service of the residents of Vrindavana is due to their spontaneously engaging all natural instincts in Your service. It is said that attachment for material objects and home is due to illusion, which makes a living entity conditioned in the material world. But this is only the case for persons who are not in Krishna consciousness. In the case of the residents of Vrindavana, such obstructions, as attachment to hearth and home, are nonexistent. Because their attachment has been converted unto You, and their home has been converted into a temple because You are always there, and because they have forgotten everything for Your sake, there is no impediment. For a Krishna conscious person, there is no such thing as impediments in hearth and home. Nor is there illusion.*

{ }Someone may say that if the residents of Vrindavana are free from the bondage of material existence, then why do they seem like ordinary inhabitants of the material world. In order to answer this objection, Brahma explains that the appearance and activities of both Shri Krishna and the residents of Vrindavana are spiritual, only superficially do they appear to be material. Brahma said (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.14.37):

"My dear Lord Krishna, I can also understand that Your appearance as a small cowherd boy, a child of the cowherd men, is not at all a material activity. You are so much obliged by their affection that You are here to enthuse them with more loving service by Your transcendental presence. In Vrindavana there is no distinction between material and spiritual because everything is dedicated to Your loving service. My dear Lord, Your Vrindavana pastimes are simply to enthuse Your devotees. If someone takes Your Vrindavana pastimes to be material, he will be misled."*

{ }In this verse Brahma explains that Shri Krishna is beyond the touch of the material energy, and He imitates the form and activities of the ordinary living entities in the material world, appearing as a small cowherd boy in Gokula. Even though this is true, still the form of Shri Krishna, the small cowherd boy in Gokula, is not a temporary manifestation of the Supreme Lord for a particular purpose, but rather it is the original feature of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. In other words, the form of Shri Krishna is the original form of God, and is not made of the five material elements, but is completely spiritual.

Someone may ask: Why does the Supreme Lord appear in this way as a small child? To this question the following answer may be given: Lord Krishna seems like an ordinary child, and performs activities that seem like those of an ordinary child, in order to grant transcendental bliss to the devotees who become His associates. In other words, they become charmed and pleased by the Lord's apparently ordinary activities. Because these devotees are so intimately associated with the Lord in this way, Brahma praised them in the verse beginning with the words "aho bhagyam" (quoted in Anuccheda 138, Text 1).

aloof from the contact of the material energy". Material existence is a condition imposed upon those who are ignorant (ajnana-sambhavah), but because the gopis were always enlightened by pure Krishna consciousness, they remained always free from the darkness of material existence. Although the brilliant sun of transcendental knowledge destroys the darkness of material existence, the exalted state of love of Godhead is situated on a platform above the condition of transcendental knowledge. The intimate love of the gopis for Krishna in the mood of parental love (vatsalya-rasa) is a very exalted condition, superior to ordinary love of God. The gopis are eternally situated in in that condition of intense love of Krishna (aviratam shri-krishne kurvatinam). Because in this verse Shukadeva Gosvami has used the word "aviratam" (eternally), we should understand that the relationship of the gopis with Krishna is eternal and beginningless. The gopis are also, therefore, eternal associates of Shri Krishna.

Someone may argue that because the Shrimad-Bhagavatam says "na punah kalpate samsarah" (the gopis never returned to the material world), therefore we must conclude that at a certain time the gopis were conditioned souls, or else how would it be possible for them to not return to the material world (if they had never been in it in the first place).

The answer to this question is that the gopis of Vrajabhumi may be divided into two classes: 1. eternal associates of Shri Krishna, and 2. those who are being promoted to that status from the material world.

The description "na punah kalpate samsarah" refers to this second class of gopis, who are becoming eligible to be eternal associates of Shri Krishna. It is this second class of gopis who are described by Shrila Shukadeva Gosvami in the following words (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.9-16):

"Some of the gopis were factually detained from going to Krishna by their husbands and were locked up by force within their rooms. Being unable to go to Krishna, they began to meditate upon His transcendental form by closing their eyes. They already had the form of Krishna within their minds. *

"If they had been bound by fruitive action, they were fully freed from the reaction of karma by constant meditation on Krishna. Their severe painful yearnings caused by their not being able to see Krishna freed them from all sinful reactions, and their ecstasy of transcendental love for Krishna in His absence was transcendental to all their reactions of material pious activities.*

"All the gopis who concentrated their minds on Krishna in the spirit of paramour love became fully uncontaminated from all the fruitive reactions of material nature, and some of them immediately gave up their material bodies developed under the three modes of material nature.*

"Maharaja Parikshit heard Sukadeva Gosvami explain the situation of the gopis who assembled with Krishna in the rasa dance. When he heard that some of the gopis simply by concentrating on Krishna as their paramour, became freed from all contamination from material birth and death, he said: The gopis did not know that Krishna is the Supreme Personality of Godhead. They accepted Him as a beautiful boy and considered Him to be their paramour. So how was it possible for them to get freed from the material condition just by thinking of a paramour?*

"On hearing this question of Maharaja Parikshit, Shukadeva Gosvami replied, "My dear King, your question is already answered, even before this incident.*

"Shishupala was always envious of Krishna, and because of this envy Krishna killed him. Since Krishna is the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Shishupala gained salvation simply by seeing Him. If an envious person can get salvation simply by concentrating his mind on Krishna, then what to speak of the gopis who are so dear to Krishna and always thinking of Him in love? There must be some difference between the enemies and the friends. If Krishna's enemies could get freed from material contamination and become one with the Supreme, then certainly His dear friends like the gopis are freed and with Him. *

"Krishna is not an ordinary person. He is the Supreme Personality of Godhead, full of all spiritual qualities. He appears in this material world out of His causeless mercy in order to benedict the conditioned souls, and whenever He appears, He appears as He is without change.*

"If one somehow or other becomes attached to Krishna or attracted to Him, either because of His beauty, quality, opulence, fame, strength, renunciation or knowledge, or even through lust, anger or fear, or affection or friendship, then one's salvation and freedom from material contamination is assured.*

"Rest assured that one attracted by Krishna attains liberation from material bondage because Krishna is the transcendental master of all mystic power. There is nothing surprising about this."*

atra-here; antah iti-the verse beginning with the word "antah" (10.29.9); sphuöam-the meaning is clear; eva- certainly; asubham-inauspicious things; shri-krishna-praptau-when Shri Krishna was attained; antaraya-rupa- consisting of impediments; guru-of superiors; bhaya-fear; adikam-beginnig with; mangalam- auspiciousness; shri-krishna-praptau-when Shri Krishna wa attained; sadhanam- practice; sakhya-adi- beginnign with friendship; sahayya- assistance; cintanam-meditation; na-not; karma-of fruitive actions; bandhanam-bondage; janma-no birth; vaishnavanam- of the pure devotees of the Lord; ca-also; visyate- exists; iti-thus; uktam-it is said; eva-certainly.

In Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.10 (the second verse quoted in Anuccheda 145), the word "ashubha" means "the gopis' fear of their superiors, and other inauspicious impediments, which obstructed their going to meet Krishna", and the word "mangalam" means "the auspicious process of thinking of Krishna as their dearmost friend, which enables the gopis to very quickly attain Him."

By intently meditating on Shri Krishna, these gopis became purified of all material defects and returned back to the spiritual world. That such an auspicious result is obtained by the devotees is confirmed in the following verse from Vedic literature:

"Pure devotees of Lord Krishna are always free from the bondage of fruitive actions (karma). Such devotees do not again take birth in the material world, for they return to the eternal spiritual world."

drishyate-may be seen; ca-also; anyatra-in another place; api-also; tat-of that; asmabhava-sthale-the unlikelyness; tat-of that; sabda-word; prayogah-usage; vatsyati-will eternally remain; urasi-on the chest; me-My; bhutih-Laksmi-devi; bhavat-your; pada-of the foot; hata- struck; amhasah-sins; iti-thus; adau-in the passage beginning; tatra-in this connection; yatha-just as; asi shrīi-bhagavat-of the Supreme Personality of Godhead; vakya- the statement; yatharthayaya-actual truth; artha-antaram- different meaning; anusandheyam-should be considered; tadvat- in the same way; iha-here; api-also; iti-thus.

When Shrimad-Bhagavatam says that the gopis became liberated (instead of already being eternally liberated) (10.29.9-16), we may take it in the opposite way. An example of a statement intended to be taken in the opposite way is the following verse spoken by Lord Narayana to Bhrigu Muni, who had just kicked the Lord's chest (to test whether the Lord were actually humble and situated in the mode of goodness). Lord Narayana said (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.89.11):

"My dear Bhrigu Muni, My chest has now become sanctified because of the touch of your feet, and I am now assured that the goddess of fortune, Lakshmi, will be very glad to live there perpetually."*

This statement of the Lord is actually untrue. The opposite is true: that Bhrigu Muni became purified by touching the Lord (although under extraordinary circumstances). In the same way, it may also be taken that the description of the gopis attaining liberation at a certain point actually means not that they attained liberation, but that they were already liberated eternally.

paramatmanam iti-the phrase beginning with the word paramatmanam" (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10. 29.11 quoted on page 1061); brahma-of Lord Brahma; stava-of the prayers; anta-at the conclusion (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.14.53) nirdista-indicated; siddhanta-conclusion; ritya-by the words; shri-krishnasya-of Shri Krishna; sva-bhavatah-by His own nature; eva-certainly; parama-supreme; prema-of love; aspadam-object; darshitam-revealed.

In these verses (quoted in Anuccheda 145) the word "paramatmanam" means "the all-pervading Supersoul" or "the supreme soul of all souls". Because Shri Krishna is the supreme soul of all souls, He is the supreme object of everyone's love. This is described in the following statement at the conclusion of Brahma's prayers to Lord Krishna (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.14.53):

"You should know Krishna as the original soul of all atmas (living entities). For the benefit of the whole universe, He has, out of His causeless mercy, appeared as an ordinary human being. He has done this with the strength of His own internal potency."*

In verse 11 (quoted in Anuccheda 145) we may note the word "jara-buddhya" (thinking of Him as their paramour). Although the love of the gopis for Krishna appeared to cross beyond all bounds of propriety and morality, actually it did not. The gopis thought of Krishna as their paramour, and thinking in that way their love for Him was unexcelled, but still, their contact with Krishna remained always free from the gross physical activity known in this world as adulterous love.

In verse 11, (quoted in Anuccheda 145), the word "bandhana" means " husbands, fathers, and other superiors, who stopped the gopis from going to Krishna". When Maharaja Parikshit heard that the gopis became liberated from their material bodies constructed from the three modes of material nature, and became liberated simply by thinking of Krishna, a doubt arose in his mind. He said:

"the gopis simply thought of Krishna as their paramour (shri-krishnam param kantham viduh), and they were completely unaware that He was actually the Supreme Personality of Godhead (brahma). Under these circumstances, how is it possible that they became free from the influence of the three modes of material nature simply by thinking of a paramour? Genarally, those who understand the actual truth about the Supreme Personality of Godhead become free from the modes of nature. How is it possible, then, that the gopis became liberated without understanding the actual truth about Shri Krishna?"

In verse 13 (quoted in Anuccheda 145), we may note that the word "guna-dhiyam" (meditating on the qualities) does not mean that the gopis were absorbed in thinking of the three modes of material nature, but that they were meditating on the transcendental qualities and beautiful form of Shri Krishna. How the gopis obtained liberation simply by thinking of Shri Krishna as their paramour is explained in the following verse (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.14):

"On hearing this question of Maharaja Parikshit, Shukadeva Gosvami replied, "My dear King, your question is already answered, even before this incident.*

"Shishupala was always envious of Krishna, and because of his envy Krishna killed him. Since Krishna is the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Shishupala gained salvation simply by seeing Him. puranjana-of King Puranjana; itihasa-the history (recorded in the Fourth Canto of Shrimad-Bhagavatam); adi- beginnig with; vat-like; duruhatvat-because of the difficulty; svayam-personally; uktasya-spoken; vyakhyanam- account; idam-this; evam-in this way; hi-certainly; drishöanta-balena-by an example; labhyate-is attained; yatha-just as; caidya-shabdena-by the word "caidya (Shishupala); karushah-the king of the Karusha province (Dantavakra); api-also; grihitah-is intended.

By reading the story of King Puranjana (Shrimad-Bhagavatam, Canto Four), and other accounts in the Vedic literatures, we may understand how difficult it is to become liberated and enter the spiritual planet of Shri Krishna. Shrila Shukadeva Gosvami has therefore described the actual path of liberation by speaking this verse. We may note that the word "caidya" in this verse does not only refer to Shishupala, but to Dantavakra as well.

tau-they; ca-also; jaya-Jaya; vijayau-and Vijaya; tayoh-of them; ca-also; deha-of a material body; indriya-material senses; asu-life breath; hinanam-of those devoid; vaikunöha-pura-of Vaikunöha; vasinam-the residents; deha-sambandha-in a material body; sambaddham-bondage; etat-this; akhyatum arhasi-please describe; iti-thus; yudhishöhira-of Maharaja Yudhishöhira; prashna-drisha-by the question; tu-certainly; aprakrita-not material; vigrahatvena-with a form; anasvara-eternal; vigrahayoh-of the firms; eva-certainly; satoh-of the two devotees.

We may note that Shishupala and Dantavakra had previously been Jaya and Vijaya, the doorkeepers of Vaikunöhaloka. In the following verse (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 7.1.35), Maharaja Yudhishöhira asked how it was possible that these two liberated residents of the spiritual world could fall into the material world and accept bodies made of the gross material elements. The king said:

"The bodies of the inhabitants of Vaikunöha are completely spiritual, having nothing to do with the material body, senses or life air. Therefore, kindly explain how associates of the Personality of Godhead were cursed to descend in material bodies like ordinary persons."*

In another place in Shrimad-Bhagavatam we also find the explanation that the bodies of Shishupala and Dantavakra were not material, but eternal and spiritual. In other words, Jaya and Vijaya never actually accepted material bodies. This is explained by the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself.

bhagavan-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; anugau-to His two attendants; aha-said; yatam-depart from this place; ma-let there not be; bhaishöam-fear; astu-let there be; sham-happiness; brahma-of a brahmana; tejah-the curse; samarthah-being able; api-even; hantum-to nullify; na icche- do not desire; matam-approved; tu-on the contrary; me-by Me; iti-thus; bhagavat-of the Supreme Personality of Godhead; ukti-the words; anusarena-according to.

Jaya and Vijaya descended to the material world to facilitate the Lord's pastimes there. Their being cursed by the Four Kumaras was simply a pretext. The Lord's pastimes was the actual reason. This is confirmed by the following verse from Shrimad-Bhagavatam (3.16.29):

"The Lord then said to His attendants, Jaya and Vijaya: Depart this place, but fear not. All glories unto you. Though I am capable of nullifying the brahmanas' curse, I would not do so. On the contrary, it has My approval."*

ittham-in this way; jaya-Jaya; vijayau-and Vijaya; sanaka-adi-by the four Kumaras; shapa-of a curse; vyajena- on the pretext of; kevalam-eclusively; bhagavatah-of the Supreme Personality of Godhead; lila-pastiimes; artham-for the purpose of; samshritau-in the material world; avatirya- havingd descended; iti-thus; padma-uttara-khanda-of the Uttara-khanda of the Padma Purana; gadya-the prose statement; anusarena-according to; ca-also; sva-bhakta-for the Lord's devotees; citta-the minds; akarsha-attracting; vinodaya- for pastimes; yuddha-adi-fighting and other activities; krida-pastimes; nimittataya-fashioned with; tasya-of Him; durghaöa-ghaöana-karinya-causing strife; icchaya-with the desire; eva-certainly; vara-trayam-three times; sviyasya- own; anima-adi-beginning with anima; siddhi-mystic perfections; maya-consisting of; parama-jyotih-spiritual effulgence; dehasya-body; gunamaya-consisting of the three modes of material nature; parthiva-of a king; deha-body; antara-within; praveshah-entrance.

The reason for the descent of Jaya and Vijaya to the material world is described in the following prose statement from the Uttara-khanda of Padma-Purana:

"On the pretext of being cursed by the Four Kumaras, Jaya and Vijaya descended to the material world. Actually, the only real reason for their descent was to perform pastimes with the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

In order to attract the minds of the devotees with His transcendental pastimes, the Lord desired to fight great heroic battles with certain demons. In order to fulfill this desire of the Lord, Jaya and Vijaya three times accepted the bodies of kings. The bodies they accepted were splendidly effulgent and fully invested with anima and other mystic powers. They were not ordinary bodies.

In his commentary on Shrimad-Bhagavatam 7.1.45, Shridhara Svami explains that Jaya and Vijaya did not accept material bodies when they descended to this world. Shridhara Svami says:

"By the phrase `krishna-cakra-hatamhasau' it should be understood that Lord Krishna destroyed the sinful reactions of Jaya and Vijaya. It was, therefore Jaya and Vijaya's sinful reactions that were killed, and not their bodies."

When Krishna played His flute to call the gopis to the arena of the rasa dance, the gopis went to meet Krishna in their original spiritual bodies, and left behind them imitation material bodies constructed of the modes of material nature especially for that occasion. This is described in the following statement of Shrila Shukadeva Gosvami (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.33.37):

"The so-called husbands of the gopis felt no enmity towards Lord Krishna. Enamoured by the influence of the external energy of Krishna, they thought that their wives were sleeping by their sides. They could not understand that they had gone to dance with Krishna."*

From this explanation we may understand that where it says in Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.29.11) that the gopis left behind material bodies (jahur gunamayam deham) when they went to join Shri Krishna in the rasa-dance, it does not mean that they left behind their own material bodies. The gopis always had eternal spiritual forms, and the bodies left behind by them were specially constructed for the occasion.

In the mood of enmity Jaya and Vijaya (Shishupala and Dantavakra) were constantly thinking of Krishna, and when they were finally killed by Krishna, they attained Krishna's association in the spiritual world. In the same way the gopis, who were always intensely absorbed in feelings of love for Krishna, also attained His association again in the spiritual world. These gopis were so attracted to the sweetness of Shri Krishna's handsome form, that they gave up their lives in order to attain His association.

nrinam iti-the verse beginning with the word "nrinam" (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.14), quoted on pps

1060 and 1061; samanyatah-in general; jivanam-of living entities in the material world; eva-certainly; nihshreyasaya-for the well-being; vyakta-manifested; satyam-when; bhaktanam-of the devotees; tu-certainly; sutaram-greatly; eva-certainly; iti-thus; ayatam-attains; anyatha-otherwise; tasya-His; vyaktih-personal presence; eva-certainly; na-not; sambhavet-would not be possible; iti-thus; aha-he says; avyayasya iti-of the phrase beginning with the word "avyayasya"; nirgunasya-the word "nirgunasya"; prakrita-material; guna-qualities; rahitasya- devoid of; guna-atmanah-the word "gunatmanah"; tatra- there; ye-which; ca-also; aishvarya-adayag-various powers and opulences; gunah-qualities; te-they; atmanah-of the self; svarupan-own forms; eva-certainly; yasya-of whom; tasya-of Him; tarhi-then; etadrisha-lilaya-with these pastimes; katham-how is it?; nrinam-of the human beings; nihshreyasam-auspiciousness; bhavati-is; ucyate-it is said; etat-bodhanena-by this understanding; bhavati-is; iti-thus; aha-he says; kaman iti-the next verse (10.29.15), which begins with the word "kaman".

In Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.14. (quoted in Anuccheda 145), Shrila Shukadeva Gosvami said that Lord Krishna appears in this material world in order to benefit the conditioned souls. Otherwise He has no reason to appear in this world. This is explained in the second part of the verse, where the word "avyayasya" means that Lord Krishna never falls down. In other words, He is never forced to descend to this material world, but only comes out of His own wish.

In this verse the word "nirgunasya" indicates that Shri Krishna has no material qualities, for He has all spiritual qualities, powers and opulences (gunatmanah).

The question may be asked: Why are that Lord Krishna's pastimes in this material world beneficial for the conditioned souls? The answer to this question is given in the next verse (10.29.15), where it is said:

"If one somehow or other becomes attached to Krishna or attracted to Him, either because of His beauty, qualities, opulence, fame, strength, renunciation or knowledge, or even through lust, anger, or fear, or affection or friendship, then one's salvation and freedom from material contamination are assured."*

In other words, by appearing in this world and manifesting His transcendental pastimes, Lord Krishna gives the conditioned souls an opportunity to hear about Him and thus become attracted to Him. Attraction to Krishna is the beginning of all-auspiciousness for the conditioned souls.

atra tan-mayata-shabdena-pracuratocyate. tatra kama-snehadisu tad-uparaktatmateti paryavasananam. stri-mayo jalma itivat krodha-bhayaikyeshu tu prayas tat-pralinateti. dugdhamayam jalam itivat.

atra-in this verse; tat-mayata-shabdena-by the word "tanmayata"; tat-pracurata-is meant "His greatness"; ucyate- it is said; tatra-there; kama-lust; snehao-affection; adisu-beginning with; tat-to Him; uparakta-attached; atmata-mind; iti-thus; paryavasananam-the conclusion; strih-mayah-lusty; jalmah-degraded man; itivat-just as; krodha-anger; bhaya- fear; aikyeshu-in oneness; tu-certainly; prayah-mainly; tat-pralinata-entering; iti-thus; dugdha-mayam-with milk; jalam- water; itivat-like.

In this verse (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10 29.15, quoted in Anuccheda 145), the word "tan-mayatam" means "the greatness of Shri Krishna". In the case of the devotees, who always remember Krishna with love and affection, this means that they become attracted to Shri Krishna. In the case of the demons, however, this means that by meditating on Krishna in a mood of fear and anger, they get the opportunity to merge into the effulgence of Krishna, just as a drop of water merges into a container of milk. In this way there are two separate destinations for the devotees and the demons, although both kinds of liberation are designated by the single word "tan-mayatam" in this verse.

ekasya shabdasya visheshana-vashad artha-bhedash ca yujyate. syac caikasya brahma-shabdavat iti nyayena krodha-bhayayor atra paõhanam anyesu kaimutyopapadanayaiva, na tu tad-upadesha-vivakshaya.

ekasya-of one; shabdasya-word; visheshana-vashat-according to characteristics; artha-bhedah-different meanings; ca-also; yujyate-are engaged; syat-there may be; ca-also; ekasya-of one; brahma-shabda-the word "brahma"; vat-like; iti-thus; nyayena-according to the Vedanta-sutra (2.3.4); krodha-of anger; bhayayoh-and fear; atra-here; paõhanam-reading; anyeshu-among others; kaimutya-upapadanaya-what to speak of?; eva-certainly; na-not; tu-but; tat-of that; upadesha- instruction; vivakshaya-with a desire to speak.

In this context the word "tan-mayatam" has these two meanings. The phrase "dugdhamayamalam" is an example of an ambiguous statement that can be interpreted in different ways. The fact that a single word may have many meanings is described in the following statement of Vedanta-sutra (2.3.4):

syac caikasya brahma-shabdavat

If the demons attained liberation simply by meditating on Shri Krishna in the mood of fear and anger, then the devotees, by meditating on Krishna with love, certainly attained a much greater result. Therefore the destination attained by the gopis was certainly much greater than the liberation attained by Jaya and Vijaya.

The gopis attained liberation from material existence (yata etad vimucyate) simply by meditating on Krishna in what was apparently lust, and the other residents of Vrindavana also became liberated by meditating on Krishna as their child or friend. One might be surprised to hear that the residents of Vrindavana became liberated by lust and other seemingly material emotions. One would have certainly expected a different result to be obtained from lust and other emotions. However, because these emotions were directed towards Krishna, Shukadeva Gosvami informs Maharaja Parikshit that this auspicious result obtained by the residents of Vrindavana is not at all surprising (na caiva vismayah karyah).

Parikshit Maharaja also described the great fortune of Nanda Maharaja and Yashoda-devi in the following verse (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.8.47):

"Although Krishna was so pleased with Vasudeva and Devaki that He descended as their son, they could not enjoy Krishna's magnanimous childhood pastimes, which are so great that simply chanting about them vanquishes the contamination of the material world. vatsalya-abhida-named vatsalya-rasa; prema- love; visheshena-by the specific; eva-certainly; shri-krishnah-Shri Krishna; putrataya-as a son; udeti-appears; na-not; tu-but; sva-dehat-from one's own body; avirbhavena-by appearance; hiranyakashipu-of Hiranyakashipu; sabha-in the assembly hall; stambhe-in the pillar; shri-nrisimhasya-of Lord Nrisimha; brahmani-in Lord Brahma; shri-varahasya-of Lord Varaha; ca-also; pitritva-fatherhood; aprayogat- because of unsuitability; na-not; ca-also; garbha-within the womb; praveshena-by entrance; parikshit-of Maharaja Parikshit; rakshana-protection; artham-for the purpose; tat-that; pravishöasya-entered; api-even; tasya-of Lord Krishna; uttara-of Uttara-devi; matritva-motherhood; ashhravanat-because of not being described in the Vedic literatures.

Shri Krishna appears as the son of a certain devotee when that devotee is immersed in parental love for the Lord. It is this parental love for Krishna that makes the Lord one's son, and not simply the Lord's appearance from the body of a certain living entity. For example, Lord Nrisimha appeared from the pillar in Hiranyakashipu's assembly hall, and Lord Varaha appeared from the nostril of Lord Brahma, but no one will say that the pillar is the father of Lord Nrisimha, or that Brahma is the father of Lord Varaha. In the same way, Lord Vishnu entered the womb of Uttara-devi in order to protect Maharaja Parikshit, but no one will say that Uttara was the mother of Lord Vishnu, even though He entered her womb. Therefore it is not the superficial appearance of being born as the "natural" son of a certain devotee that establishes the devotee's parental relationship with the Lord, but rather it is the increase of parental love that is the sole cause of that relationship.

Even though Shri Krishna was not born from the womb of Yashoda-devi, because of Nanda and Yashoda's intense pure love for Krishna in the mood of parental love, they are famous as the parents of Shri Krishna. The parenthood of Nanda and Yashoda is confirmed in the following verses from the Vedic literatures:

"Shukadeva Gosvami said: Nanda Maharaja was naturally very magnanimous, and when Lord Shri Krishna appeared as his son, he was overwhelmed by jubilation. Therefore, after bathing and purifying himself and dressing himself properly, he invited brahmanas who knew how to recite Vedic mantras. After having these qualified brahmanas recite auspicious Vedic hymns, he arranged to have the Vedic birth ceremony celebrated for his newborn child according to the rules and regulations, and he also arranged for worship of the demigods and forefathers."

"Nanda Maharaja's son is the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who brings auspiciousness to all planetary systems and all living entities".

Lord Krishna appeared, in His eternal, all-cognizant and blissful spiritual form within the mind of Maharaja Vasudeva, and from there He was transferred to the heart of Devaki. This is described in the following verse (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.2.18):

Shri Krishna is actually already always present in the material world in His all-pervading feature. He is present in everyone's heart, and great devotees such as Narada, Prahlada, and Dhruva are able to see Him because they are filled with love for Him. Just as Lord Krishna is always visible to Narada and other great devotees because of their love for Him, in the same way, the Lord appeared before the king and queen of Vrajabhumi as their son because of their pure love for Him, and also because of the benediction granted to them by Brahma in their previous life. This description is confirmed by all Vedic literatures, and this is the actual meaning of the word "tatah" in this verse (Text 7).

In this verse (10.8.51, quoted in Text 7) the word "putra-bhuta" indicates that because of the intense parental love felt by Vasudeva, Devaki, Nanda, and Yashoda for Lord Krishna, the Lord became their son. Without intense parental love for Him it is not possible for one to get the Lord as a son.

In the Lord's pastimes within the material world (prakaōa-lila), the relationship of parent and child exchanged by the Lord and His devotees in the parental mellow (vatsalya-rasa) begins at a certain point in time, and appears to be existing within the limitations of material time. The same parental mellow is experienced by the Lord's parents in the unmanifested pastimes (aprakaōa-lila) in the spiritual world also. The parental mellow actually has no beginning in time.

In some manuscripts of Shrimad-Bhagavatam we find the reading "putra-bhutam" (who is the son) instead of "putri-bhutam" (who became the son). The reading "putra-bhutam" refers to the beginningless mellow of parental love for the Lord tasted by the devotees in the spiritual world.

"My dear Nanda and Yashoda, Krishna is not your son, but the Personality of Godhead. He is one's son. He is actually everyone's father, mother, and supreme controller."*

The basic meaning of this verse is that, in order to pacify Nanda and Yashoda, Uddhava tells them that their son, Krishna, is actually the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is aloof from the entire cosmic manifestation and impartial to all living entities. There is, however, another, a deeper meaning of this verse. This verse actually means: Although Krishna is the Supreme Personality of Godhead (bhagavan harir yah sah), and although He is aloof to all living entities, impartial to friends and enemies, and without father, mother, or other relations, still He has become the son of Nanda and Yashoda (yuvayor evatmajah), even though He is never the son of anyone (naiva sarvesham). One may say also interpret this phrase as "atmaja eva sarvesham (He is the son of everyone), in which case it is understood that Lord Krishna expands as the Supersoul in the hearts of all conditioned souls, and in this way He becomes their son. This interpretation is a product of the illusory potency, maya. This second interpretation is not very sound, and we do not accept it. The great devotees who are liberated or aspiring to become liberated praise the other interpretation (yuvayor evatmajah) which describes the great parental love of Nanda and Yashoda for Krishna. We also endorse this interpretation, which emphasizes the parenthood of Nanda and Yashoda.

"When Uddhava saw Maharaja Nanda and Yashoda so extraordinarily overwhelmed with thoughts of Krishna, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and when he experienced their extraordinary affection for Him, he also became overwhelmed and began to speak as follows, `My dear mother Yashoda and Nanda Maharaja, you are most respectable among human beings because no one but you can meditate in such transcendental ecstasy'".*

"My dear father and mother, although I was born of Vasudeva and Devaki, you have been Our real father and mother, because from Our very birth and childhood, you raised Us with great affection and love. Your affectionate love for Us was more than anyone can offer one's own children. "Therefore, O Maharaja Parikshit, best of the Bharatas, when the Supreme Personality of Godhead became the son of Nanda Maharaja and Yashoda, they maintained continuous, unswerving devotional service in parental affection. And in their association, all other inhabitants of Vrindavana, the gopas and gopis, developed the culture of krishna-bhakti."*

Shri Krishna becomes controlled by the pure love of His devotees, and He increased the pleasure of the residents of Vrajabhumi in transcendental reciprocation for their pure love for Him. Even so, Lord Krishna arranged that the residents of Vraja obtained His association as a result of the benediction of Brahma. The Lord did this in order to demonstrate that the association of Lord Krishna is not ordinary. It is a great benediction bestowed upon the living entities. It is also possible to interpret this verse to mean: "Shri Krishna lived in Vrindavana just to increase the pleasure of His devotees there. Incidentally, He did this by fulfilling the benediction offered by Brahma".

Nanda and Yashoda did not become Lord Krishna's parents by achieving the blessing of Brahma. Actually,

Nanda and Yashoda are more fortunate and exalted than the demigod Brahma. This is confirmed in the Ninth Chapter of the Tenth Canto of Shrimad-Bhagavatam, where we find the description of the glories of mother Yashoda's maternal love for Krishna, how Lord Krishna is completely under the control of Mother Yashoda, and how she bound Him with ropes. Mother Yashoda obtained greater mercy from Lord Krishna than even Brahma, Shiva or Lakshmi could ever attain. This is described in the following verse, (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.9.20):

The exalted demigod Brahma is the original spiritual master of the devotees of the Lord. This is confirmed in the following statement of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (2.9.5):

"Lord Brahma is the first spiritual master."

Shiva is still more exalted. This is described in the following verse from Shrimad-Bhagavatam (12.13.16):

"Shiva is the best among all the devotees of Lord Krishna".

Because Lakshmi is considered the teacher of devotional service to Brahma and Shiva, she is more exalted than even Brahma and Shiva. The glories of Lakshmi are so great that they cannot be described by even Brahma and Shiva. Lakshmi's good fortune extends beyond the realm of ordinary devotional service, for she is an intimate friend of the Personality of Godhead. This is confirmed in this verse (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.9.20) by the word "anga-samshraya" (Lakshmi-devi is the better half of the Supreme Lord).

What kind of mercy did Yashoda-devi obtain from Lord Krishna? Lord Krishna gave her a benediction greater than liberation. This is described in the following verse from Shrimad-Bhagavatam (5.6.18):

"Those engaged in getting the Lord's favor attain liberation from the Lord very easily, but He does not very easily give the opportunity to render direct service unto Him."*

Yashoda-devi, the queen of the gopis (gopi) obtained an indescribable (yat tat) benediction (prasadam) from Lord Krishna, which could not be obtained (na lebhire) by even Brahma, Shiva, or Lakshmi. The phrase "na lebhire" (not attained) should be understood to be repeated three times to refer to Brahma, Shiva, and Lakshmi. In this way the rarity of the mercy obtained by Yashoda is emphasized.

Someone may say that Drona and Dhara are ordinary material demigods, and therefore they could not possibly have become Krishna's parents without receiving a benediction from Brahma. That Drona and Dhara become Krishna's parents because of Brahma's blessings is not an acceptable proposition, however, for Shrimad-Bhagavatam clearly says that Brahma himself is not able to attain the good fortune obtained by Drona and Dhara (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.9.20, quoted in Text 2). How can Brahma give as a gift what other great devotees and he himself are unable to attain? Brahma himself says this in the following prayer (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.14.34):

"My dear Lord, I am therefore not interested in either material opulences or liberation. I am not humbly praying at Your lotus feet for You to please give me any sort of birth within this Vrindavana forest so that I may be able to be favoured by the dust of the feet of some devotees of Vrindavana. Even if I am given the chance to grow just as the humble grass in this land, that will be a glorious birth for me. But if I am not so fortunate to take birth within the forest of Vrindavana, I beg to be allowed to take birth outside the immediate area of Vrindavana so that when the devotees go out they will walk over me. Even that would be a great fortune for me. I am just aspiring for a birth in which I will be smeared by the dust of the devotees' feet."*

Also, no Vedic literature says that Drona and Dhara performed great devotional service to the Lord to make themselves eligible to become his parents.

The truth is that Drona and Dhara are partial expansions (amsha-avatara) of Nanda and Yashoda, Krishna's eternal parents in the spiritual world. They descended to this material world, just as the Lord Himself did in order to display His pastimes on earth.

Shrimad-Bhagavatam is the best of scriptures because it describes pure love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead as the ultimate goal of life. That pure love of Godhead is perfectly manifested in the holy abode of Gokula, and Nanda and Yashoda, the king and Queen of Gokula, are perfect examples of that pure love for Krishna. For this reason, Brahma prays to attain any sort of birth in that holy land of Gokula.

Nanda and Yashoda are actually the eternal parents of Shri Krishna in the spiritual world. Now that we have clearly demonstrated this fact, we shall explain that such an intimate relationship with Shri Krishna can only be obtained by those engaged in devotional service to the Lord. It cannot be obtained by anyone else. That Lord Krishna may be attained only by devotional service is described in the following verse (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.9.21):

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead, Krishna, the son of mother Yashoda, is accessible to devotees engaged in spontaneous loving service, but He is not as easily accessible to mental speculators, to those striving for self-realization by severe austerities and penances, or to those who consider the body the same as the self."*

This verse explains that the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Krishna, the son of Mother Yashoda, is not easily accesible to the materialists, who consider the body the same as the self, even if they perform austerities and other similar practices to attain Him. Such persons may become somewhat purified at heart by prolonged austerities, and after a long time they may receive the merciful glance of a pure devotee of the Lord. By the mercy of such a devotee, the materialist may learn how to offer his performance of austerities and other spiritual practices as service to the Lord, and in that way Lord Krishna may become accesible to him. In the same way, Lord Krishna is also not easily accesible to the mental speculators who are from the bodily conception of life and who meditate on the impersonal Brahman. Only by the mercy of a devotee of the Lord can such speculators actually perceive the real nature of the Absolute Truth, and direct their meditation to Lord Krishna. These two processes (austerity and mental speculation) do not enable us to directly perceive the original feature of the Absolute Truth, but give us only a glimpse of His nature.

"For those whose minds are attached to the unmanifested, impersonal feature of the Supreme, advancement is very troublesome. To make progress in that discipline is always difficult for those who are embodied."*

The superiority of devotional service and the inferiority of other methods of spiritual realization is confirmed in the following question posed by Shrila Vyasadeva and the answer given by Narada Muni (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 1.5.7-8):

"Like the sun, Your Goodness can travel everywhere in the three worlds, and like the air you can penetrate the internal region of everyone. As such, you are as good as the all-pervasive Supersoul. Please, therefore, find out the deficiency in me, despite my being absorbed in transcendence under disciplinary regulations and vows.*

"Shri Narada said: You have not actually broadcast the sublime and spotless glories of the Personality of Godhead. That philosophy which does not satisfy the transcendental senses of the Lord is considered worthless."*

One may ask: Who, then, is able to attain Shri Krishna? This question is answered by the word "bhaktimatam" (by the devotees) in this verse. The Supreme Personality of Godhead (bhagavan), who is known as the son of Yashoda-devi (gopika-sutah) is attainable by Mother Yashoda, and the other devotees. What more need be said in this regard? The word "sukhapah" may also be interpreted to mean "the object of happiness". This mean that Shri Krishna appeared to be an ordinary child, the son of Yashoda-devi. Thinking of Krishna as her own son, Yashoda attained transcendental bliss by observing Shri Krishna's charming childhood pastimes. The mental speculators are always absorbed in meditation on the all-pervading impersonal feature of the Lord, and are thus unable to understand the transcendental happiness obtained by seeing the astonishing and beautiful transcendental form and pastimes of the Supreme Person.

yatha-as; iha-in this world; gopika-sute-to the son of Yashoda; bhaktimatam-of the devotees; iti-thus; nidarshanam- explanation; sukhen-easily; apyate-attained; jnayate- understood; iti-thus; va-or; sukhapah-the word "sukhapah"; subodhah-may mean "easily understood"; tatah- therefore; ca-also; ayam-He; deha-abhimanibhih-by those in the bodily conception of life; api-also; tat-tat-various; alaukika-extraordinary; karma-lingat-because of pastimes; tarkat-from the logical argument; janibhih-by the mental speculators; api-also; anavrita-visible; brahmatva-Supreme; avagamat-because of understanding; subodhah-easily understood; eva-certainly; satyam-in truth; tathapi- nevertheless; yatha-as; iha-in this world; shri-gopika-sute-of the son of Yashoda; bhaktimadbhih-by the devotees; subodhah-easily understood; tatha-in the same way; na-not.

The word "sukhapah" may also be interpreted to mean "easily understood". When Shri Krishna performs extraordinary feats (such as the lifting of Govardhana Hill), the mental speculators and materialistics immersed in the bodily concept of life become able to understand that Shri Krishna is the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The intimate devotees and associates of the Lord, however, continue to consider the Lord to be their friend or son, and thus, in one sense, it is difficult for them to understand the true position of the Lord, because of their intimate friendship with Him.

The devotees of the Lord are thus perfectly enlightened about the real purpose of life, and they are plunged in transcendental bliss (sukhapa) because of their awareness of the Lord's transcendental handsome form and charming pastimes. This is described in Shrimad-Bhagavatam (12.12.69):

"Shrila Shukadeva Gosvami was simply attracted by the charming pastimes of Lord Krishna, and therefore his mind was always filled with transcendental bliss. He had given up all attraction for everything else."

Three points may be noted in this verse. First, the word "iha" (here) may be understood to mean specifically the devotees attached to the form of Shri Krishna. In this way the devotees attached to the Lord in His other forms, such as Narayana, the master of Vaikunöha, are also considered to be unable to understand the Lord in His original form as Shri Krishna. The second and third points are that the conceptions that Shri Krishna is only the adopted son of Yashoda, and that instead He is the actual son of Devaki, are both refuted by the use of the word "gopika-sutah". That Nanda and Yashoda, the king and queen of Vrajabhumi, are the eternal parents of Shri Krishna is the true meaning of this word (gopika-sutah). This point is also supported by the great self-realized devotees who understand the true nature of Shri Krishna.

In Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.9.1-20 we find an explanation of Nanda and Yashoda's eternal parenthood of Shri Krishna, and in Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.8.49, we find the explanation of Nanda and Yashoda's previous birth as Drona and Dhara. The seeming contradiction of these two statements may be resolved by accepting the explanation that Drona and Dhara are partial incarnations of Nanda and Yashoda, the Lord's eternal parents in the spiritual world. We may also note that the description of the eternal parenthood of Nanda and Yashoda is given after the description of their previous birth as Drona and Dhara. If there are two contradictory statements in the scriptures, the second statement should be accepted, and the previous statement should be interpreted so that it does not contradict the later statement. This rule of interpretation is expressed in the Vedānta-sūtra in the following words (2.1.17):

We have thus quoted many statements from the Vedas and Puranas to clearly prove: 1. the form of Shri Krishna is eternal, 2. Shri Krishna eternally enjoys pastimes in Dvaraka, Mathura, and Vrindavana, and 3. Shri Krishna eternally associates with the Yadu dynasty and the inhabitants of Vrindavana. By proving these points we have strengthened the argument of the Bhagavatam's paribhasha-sutra (krishnas tu bhagavan svayam: Shri Krishna is the original Supreme Personality of Godhead, 1.3.28).

Now someone may doubt:

1. If Shri Krishna is the Original Supreme Personality of Godhead, who eternally enjoys pastimes with His liberated associates, as you say, then why is it that the Bhagavatam and other Vedic literatures say that Brahma and the other demigods presented an appeal to Lord Narayana, who then descended to the earth in the form of Shri Krishna?

2.If Shri Krishna eternally remains in Dvaraka, Mathura, and Vrindavana, then why did the demigods not approach Lord Krishna personally with their request? Why did they approach Lord Narayana instead?

3.If Dvaraka, Mathura, and Vrindavana are the eternal abodes of Shri Krishna, then why did Krishna first appear in Mathura, then travel to Gokula, then again return to Mathura, then travel to Dvaraka, and finally leave Dvaraka, Mathura, and Gokula, in order to go to Vaikunöhaloka?

To the first two questions we reply: The Original Personality of Godhead, Lord Krishna, who eternally enjoys pastimes in Dvaraka, Mathura, and Vrindavana, does not generally appear before Brahma and the other demigods. They cannot approach Him, although they may approach Lord Krishna's expansion as Kshirodakashayi Vishnu, who is known to them as the maintainer and creator of the universe. For this reason they appealed to Lord Kshirodakashayi Vishnu to relieve the burden of the earth.

After hearing the demigods' appeal, the Personality of Godhead indicated the He desired to personally appear on the earth. The description of this may be found in Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.1.22, and also in the description of the incarnation of a hair found in some scriptures. When the time came for Lord Krishna to end His manifest pastimes on the earth, He ascended to Vaikunöha in the form of one of His expansions amsha-avatara, although in His original form He actually remained in Dvaraka, Mathura, and Gokula, and secretly enjoyed pastimes there, invisible to the eyes of ordinary human beings. This description is confirmed by the account found in the Tantra-bhagavata, Varaha Purana, and other Vedic literatures. That Shri Krishna eternally remains in Dvaraka, Mathura, and Gokula is also confirmed by the following verse from Shrimad-Bhagavatam (11.31.24):

"Shri Krishna eternally remains in the abode of Dvaraka."

We may also note that this mystery of the appearance and pastimes of the Original Personality of Godhead is difficult to understand, and not everyone was able to perceive these secret activities of the Lord.

Great sages say the appearance and disappearance of Lord Krishna from this material world is like the rising and setting of the sun (The sun remains unchanged, although it appears and disappears from the view of certain living entities). This is described in the following statement of the Shruti-shastra:

"The Personality of Godhead appears and disappears from this material world just as the sun seems to rise in the morning and then seems to enter the ocean again at sunset."

This comparison of Lord Krishna's appearance and disappearance to the rising and setting of the sun gives us only a partial understanding of the Lord's appearance in this world. Lord Krishna's pastimes may be divided into two types: 1. prakaöa (manifested) pastimes, and 2. aprakaöa (unmanifested) pastimes. Lord Krishna eternally remains in Dvaraka, Mathura, and Gokula (which are simultaneously manifest in both the spiritual and material worlds and, invisible to the eyes of ordinary conditioned souls, enjoys aprakaöa pastimes. When the proper time for the Lord's prakaöa (manifest) pastimes arrives, Lord Narayana and the other vishnu-tattva expansions of the Lord enter the transcendental body of Lord Krishna and appear along with Him in His prakaöa pastimes, which may be seen by the living entities in the material world. When the time for the Lord's prakaöa pastimes is ended, Lord Narayana and the other forms of the Lord leave the earth planet and return to the Vaikanöhalokas. The original form of Shri Krishna remains, however, and, invisible to the eyes of ordinary living entities, enjoys aprakaöa pastimes in Dvaraka, Mathura, and Gokula. We have already described the Lord's manifest and unmanifest pastimes, quoting many statements from Vedic literatures. We may note the following verse from Gopala-tapani Upanishad (2.48), where the Lord's unmanifest (aprakaöa) presence and pastimes are described:

Lord Krishna's manifest (prakaöa) pastimes in Vrindavana are described in Brahma-samhita (5.29):

"I worship Govinda, the primeval Lord, the first progenitor, who is tending the cows, yielding all desires, in abodes built with spiritual gems and surrounded by millions of purpose trees. He is always served with great reverence and affection by hundred and thousands of goddesses of fortune."*

The Lord's unmanifested (prakaöa) pastimes are completely distinct from the material world and its influence, and are also completely free from the limitations of material time. In this way, Lord Krishna eternally enjoys pastimes, day after day entering the assembly hall of Dvaraka as the king of the Yadu dynasty, and day after day taking care of the surabhi cows as the young prince of Vrajabhumi. Although Lord Krishna's pastimes are always aloof from the influence of matter, in His manifested (prakaöa) pastimes, by His own wish, and by the workings of His internal potency, His pastimes appear to be material, and appear to be under the jurisdiction of time: with a beginning, growth, dwindling, and end.

To worship the Lord's unmanifested (aprakaöa) pastimes, two processes may be adopted: 1. mantropasanamayi, and 2. svarasiki. The first process (mantropasanamayi) entails remaining permanently in a place where the Lord enjoyed pastimes, and worshiping the Lord by chanting various mantras describing His pastimes. This process of mantropasana is described in the Brihad-dhyana-ratnabhisheka chapter of the Krama-dipika, and in other passages in the Vedic literatures. The Gautamiya Tantra also describes this process of mantra-meditation in the passage which begins with the following verse:

"I shall now describe the process of meditating upon Lord Krishna, whose eyes are like lotus-flowers, and who is dressed in yellow garments. Meditating on Lord Krishna in this way, one becomes free from the reactions to all past sins."

"In this way one should meditate on Lord Govinda, who remains in the midst of the herd of surabhi cows. He is handsome and auspicious, and His hair is decorated with a peacock feather. He wears a garland of forest flowers. He is attached to playing His flute and He is surrounded by the gopis of Vraja."

When the process of mantropasana (worship of the Lord by chanting mantras) becomes complete, the eligible devotee attains the stage known as sarasiki (direct perception), where Lord Krishna personally appears in the heart of the devotee and manifests His transcendental pastimes there. Even today, some devotees have attained this exalted stage of devotional service. This svarasiki stage of meditation on Lord Krishna is described in the following verse of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (3.9.11):

"O my Lord, Your devotees can see You through the ears by the process of bona fide hearing, and thus their hearts become cleansed, and You take Your seat there. You are so merciful to Your devotees that You manifest Yourself in the particular eternal form of transcendence in which they always think of You."*

"Lord Krishna eternally enjoys pastimes with Balarama, the cowherd boys, the calves, and the surabhi cows in the forest of Vrindavana."

In this verse the word "ca" (also) is used to describe the presence of Nanda Maharaja and the other residents of Vraja, and the word "rama" is used to indicate the presence of Lord Balarama's mother Rohini-devi. The phrase beginning with the word "kridati" describes Lord Krishna's pastimes: entering the pasture land of Vraja, taking a nap in the afternoon, and many other pastimes performed in various places of Vrindavana-dhama. The svarasiki pastimes are performed by the Lord according to His own wish and according to various circumstances. By remaining in a holy place, without traveling to other places, one may perform this process of mantropasana worship, and become eligible to directly percieve Lord Krishna's pastimes in the svarasiki way.

The trees there are all-fulfilling trees, and the land is made of transcendental touchstone. In the stage of svarasiki realization, the various pastimes of Lord Krishna appear before the devotee like a constantly flowing Ganges river. Some of those svarasiki pastimes become recorded in various mantras, and thus the mantropasana stage of realization may be compared to a series of lakes within the Ganges river of svarasiki realization. In the mantropasana stage one hears about Lord Krishna, Nanda Maharaja, and the residents of Vrajabhumi, whereas in the svarasiki stage one is able to directly see Lord Krishna and His associates. From this we may understand that the svarasiki stage is very elevated and difficult to achieve. The most confidential matters are understandable in that svarasiki stage of realization. The svarasiki stage is described in Shrimad-Bhagavatam, the most authoritative source of spiritual knowledge, and many svarasiki pastimes are described in its verses. The following verse, (6.8.20), describes Lord's Krishna's unmanifest (aprakaöa) pastimes, as seen in the svarasiki stage. The pastimes are presented in the form of mantras to be chanted by devotees in the mantropasana stage.

In this verse the word "govinda" refers to the form of Lord Krishna as the master of Vrindavana, and the name "keshava" refers to Lord Krishna as the Lord of Mathura. The Lord appears in these two forms as the Deity visible to the people in general, and He also appears directly before His intimate devotees. The second manifestation of the Lord's form before the devotee is described in the prayers to Lord Govinda in the Brahma-samhita and in other Vedic literatures as well. Realization of the Lord in the stage of mantropasana is described in the verses of Gopala-tapani Upanishad and the scripture known as the Narayana-varma.

Following Lord Krishna's instructions, Uddhava spoke the following words (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.46.36) to Nanda and Yashoda. Although seeming ambiguous, these words actually describe the svarasiki stage of spiritual realization. Uddhava said:

"My dear Mother Yashoda and Nanda Maharaja, Krishna promised that He would come back to Vrindavana after finishing His business in Mathura. This promise He will surely fulfill. I therefore request you both, who are the best among all fortunates, to be not aggrieved on account of Krishna's absence.*

"You are already perceiving His presence twenty-four hours a day, and yet He will come and see you very soon. Actually He is present everywhere and in everyone's heart, just as fire is present in wood."*

In this verse the word maha-bhagau" (greatly fortunate) refers to Nanda and Yashoda, the king and queen of Vrajabhumi. Uddhava says to them: "Do not be unhappy, you will see Krishna." Why does Uddhava say that? "Because Krishna is already staying nearby" is the answer Uddhava gives. Then he speaks the following example: "Just as fire and light are present within firewood, in the same way, Krishna, in His form as the all-pervading Supersoul is present in the hearts of all living entities." The second half of this verse may also be interpreted to mean: "It is as if (iva) Krishna is the Supersoul present in the hearts of all living entities." In this way there is some doubt as to whether Krishna will become visible as the Supersoul, or in some othe way. In this way it may be understood that Krishna will become visible to Nanda and Yashoda by the process of svarasiki realization. In this way Nanda and Yashoda will not see the form of the Supersoul but the original form of Krishna, who was enjoying His pastimes.

The svarasiki stage of realization is also described by Lord Krishna Himself in His message to the gopis (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.29):

"My dear gopis, you should understand that it is not possible for you to be separated from Me at any time."*

Although the gopis seemed to be separated from Krishna, as He appeared in His prakāṣa-līlā (manifested pastimes), they were always thinking of Him, and thus perceiving His presence directly in His aprakāṣa-līlā (unmanifested pastimes). Being situated in the stage of svarasikī realization, the gopis thus constantly saw Śrī Krishna. In this way, although they were separated from His prakāṣa form, they associated with Him in another way (in His aprakāṣa pastimes). In this way Śrī Krishna's statement that it is not possible to be separated from Him may be understood.

Because Śrī Krishna is full of all inconceivable potencies He is able to appear before His devotees in His aprakāṣa form when He is not visible to them in His prakāṣa form. The wonderful potencies of Lord Krishna's form were seen by Mother Yashoda and the other residents of Vrindavana in His pastimes of being bound with a rope by Mother Yashoda, and revealing His Universal form to Mother Yashoda when He was suspected of eating clay. These two pastimes may appear to be self-contradictory: the first showing Śrī Krishna as an ordinary child able to be bound up by His mother, and the second pastime showing Śrī Krishna as the all-pervading and omnipotent Supreme Personality of Godhead. Actually, however, there is no contradiction, for Lord Krishna may appear as a helpless child or as the Supreme Lord by His inconceivable potencies. These inconceivable potencies are described in the Vedic literatures, which are the most authoritative source of knowledge, as confirmed in Vedānta-sūtra 2.1.27:

shrutes tu shabda-mulatvat

"Vedic literature is the most authoritative source of knowledge."

The reader is referred to the Bhagavat-sandarbhā (Anucchedas 30-39) for a more elaborate explanation of this subject.

When Krishna manifests His forms in many different places simultaneously, He does not have to separately create many new forms, but He simply manifests His own original form in many places at once, as He wishes, by the agency of His inconceivable potencies. He manifests His own form in many places just as single form may be reflected in many places by the use of mirrors. A person who causes his form to be reflected in many mirrors cannot perform the functions of His senses through the reflected forms: for example he cannot see, hear, touch, etc. through his reflected forms. This may be true for an ordinary person, but for Lord Krishna He can see, hear, touch, and perform all sensory activities through these "reflected" forms. This is the specific potency of Lord Krishna's expanded or {sy 168}reflected" forms.

That all the vishnu-tattva expansions of Lord Krishna are perfect and complete manifestations of the Lord, equal to his original form in all respects, is confirmed in the following verse found in two Upanishads (Ishopanishad 1) and Brihad-aranyaka Upanishad 6.5.4):

"The Personality of Godhead is perfect and complete. And because He is completely perfect, all emanations from Him, such as this phenomenal world, are perfectly equipped as a complete whole. Whatever is produced of the complete whole is also complete by itself. And because He is the Complete Whole, even though so many complete units emanate from Him, He remains the complete balance."*

Shri Krishna is thus perfect and complete, and innumerable perfect and complete vishnu-tattva forms may emanate from Him, but He remains undiminished in all respects. By His inconceivable potency He may expand in many different forms simultaneously, and each of these forms may perform many different activities. These forms may perform different activities simultaneously. That this is described in Shrimad-Bhagavatam and other Vedic literatures and the great learned devotees also describe it and delight in learning about it is evidence to prove this remarkable feature of the Lord.

Lord Krishna's ability to be manifested in many places simultaneously and perform many different activities at the same time by His mystic potency is not shared by any one else. No yogi or sage can perform such wonderful activities, and therefore Narada Muni spoke the following verse after seeing the many expansions of the Lord at Dvaraka (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.69.2):

"It is astounding that Lord Krishna, who is one without a second, expanded Himself in sixteen thousand similar forms to marry sixteen thousand queens in their respective homes."*

By His own wish, Lord Krishna may expand into many different forms and perform many different activities simultaneously, although the Lord's associates in those pastimes generally do not give any thought to all these wonders. An example of this is the occasion of Lord Krishna's marriage to 16,000 queens simultaneously in the presence of Devaki-devi and His other relatives. An astonishing feature of this pastime is described by Shrila Shridhara Svami in His commentary on Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.69.2 (quoted in Text 6). Shridhara Svami says:

"When Lord Krishna married 16,000 queens in 16,000 palaces all at the same moment, Devaki-devi and the Lord's other intimate relatives also became expanded and witnessed all the Lord's simultaneous marriages."

That the intimate associates of Lord Krishna may also appear in different forms simultaneously, just as the Lord can, is described in the following verses of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.69.20 and 27), where Narada's visit to Krishna's palaces in Dvaraka reveals the simultaneous expansion of Uddhava, the Intimate associate of the Lord:

"In one palace Narada saw Lord Krishna engaged in playing chess along with His dear wife and Uddhava. The Lord immediately got up from His seat and invited Narada to sit on His personal seat. The Lord again worshiped Him with as much paraphernalia for reception as He had in the palace of Rukmini. Narada then left that palace and visited other palaces where he again saw Lord Krishna engaged in different activities. In another palace Narada saw Lord Krishna consulting with ministers like Uddhava and others on important matters of business."*

Shri Krishna appears in various forms according to the nature of His devotee's love for Him. If the devotee aspires to see the Lord in a certain way, the Lord appears in that aspect, and says to the devotee: "Here I am, just as you have desired Me." The Lord may sometimes appear before the devotee, and sometimes also may be far away from the devotee. For example, when Lord Krishna played the part of the ideal husband of 16,000 wives in Dvaraka, sometimes Devaki-devi would perform her household duties in the association of her great son, and she would feel transcendental bliss. Then again, sometimes she would not have His association, and she would long to see Him. In the same way Uddhava and the other devotees would sometimes have Lord Krishna's association, and sometimes they would be separated from Him. This meeting and separation of the Lord and His devotees is a very wonderful activity effected by the Lord's yogamaya potency.

When Lord Krishna is not directly present before His devotees He remains present in His aprakaōa (unmanifested) form. In this way, even when He had gone to Mathura and Dvaraka, He remained present before the gopis and other inhabitants of Vrindavana. By either His prakāōa (manifest) or aprakaōa (unmanifest) presence He always remains in Vrindavana, Mathura, and Dvaraka. Although superficially a description of His all-pervading feature as the Supersoul, Lord Krishna's instruction to the gopis that "It is not possible for you to be separated from Me" (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.29), is actually a description of His eternal aprakaōa presence in Vrindavana, and the gopis' constant perception of Him in the svarasiki form of meditation. In this way, while apparently speaking about the Supersoul, Krishna actually described His eternal presence in Vrindavana and His eternal association with the residents of Vrindavana. Such a method of indirectly expressing one thing while appearing to say another may be seen in many places in Vedic literature. For example, such a device was used by Vidura to warn the Pandavas travelling to the house of lac, and a similar method of expression was also used by Narada Muni in his allegorical explanations to the Haryashvas and Savalashvas, the sons of Maharaja Daksha (as described in the Sixth Canto of Shrimad-Bhagavatam).

Superficially describing the all-pervading Supersoul, Lord Krishna actually described the gopis' constant meditation on Him and their uninterrupted svarasiki perception of Him through strong feelings of separation in the following verse from Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.29):

"My dear gopis, just as the five material elements of earth, water, fire, air, and ether are all-pervading within this material world, and present in the bodies of all living entities, in the same way, I am always present within you. I reside in your minds, senses, and Your life-breath, for I have taken shelter in all these places."*

This statement of Shri Krishna may be interpreted in the following way: "The material elements are causes of each other. For example, ether is the cause of air, air of fire, fire of water, and water of earth. Each elemental cause is situated within its effect. For example, ether is situated within air, air within fire, fire within water, and water within earth. Because I am the cause of everything, I am situated within everything in the same way, because as a general rule a cause is always situated within its effect. Even though we have been externally separated, I am still remaining always within you in this way. Especially for you, O gopis of Vraja, who have dedicated your life and soul to Me, separation between us is not possible at any time, for I always reside within your minds and senses. How do I reside there? In what form? I remain always there in My original form, playing the flute with two hands and handsome with a dark complexion."

Someone may object: How is it possible for the gopis to be simultaneously associated with Shri Krishna, and then again separated from Him? This is very astonishing. In order to allay this doubt, Shri Krishna spoke the following words in His message to the gopis (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.30):

"My dear gopis, you should understand this appearance of Mine in My aprakaöa form in your meditation on Me. By My inconceivable internal potency I appear in this aprakaöa form with all My transcendental attributes and thus I relieve the distresses born from My absence."

atmani ananta-prakasha-maye shri-vigraha-lakshane svasmin atmana svayam atmanam prakasha-vishesham shrije abhivyanjayami. kena? nimitta-bhutena atma-mayanubhavana acintyayah svarupa-shakteh prabhavena; svarupa-bhutaya nitya-shaktya mayakhyaya yutah iti madhva-bhashya-dhrita-catur-veda-shikhatah.

atmani-the word; "atmani"; ananta-unlimited; prakasha- manifestations; maye-consisting of; shri-vigraha-lakshane-the form of Shri Krishna; svasmin-in His own; atmana-the word "atmana"; svayam-means "personally"; "atmanam-the word "atmanam"; prakasha-vishesham-means "specific manifestation; shrije-the word "shrije"; abhivyanjayami-means "I manifest" kena-how?; nimitta-bhutena-by His instrument; atma-maya-anubhavana-by His potency; acintyayah-inconceivable; svarupa-of His transcendental form; shakteh-of the potency; maya-akhyaya-named maya; yutah-endowed with; iti-thus; madhva-of Madhvacharya; bhashya-in the commentary; dhrita- quoted; catur-veda-shikhatah-from the Catur-veda-sikha;

In this verse the word "atmana" may be understood to mean "the form of Shri Krishna, which is manifested in unlimited kinds of expansion". The word "svayam" may mean "personally", and the word "atmanam" may mean "this specific form". The word "shrije" may mean "I manifest". Understood in this way, the verse may be interpreted to mean {sy 168}Out of all my unlimited forms, I personally appear in this specific form (the aprakaöa form perceived in svarasiki meditation)."

One may ask: By what method does Lord Krishna appear in this way? The answer to this question is that the Lord appears in this way by the agency of His personal inconceivable potency (atma-mayanubhavana). This potency of the Lord is described in the following statement from the Catur-veda-shikha quoted in Madhvacharya's commentary explaining this verse:

"The Supreme Lord possesses His own eternal potency, which is manifested from His own transcendental form, and which is known as maya."

kidresena-what is the nature?; bhuta-indria-guna-atmana- the word "bhutendriya-gunatamana" bhutani-

the word "bhuta"; prama-artha-satyani-means "transcendental"; yani-which; mama- My; indriyani-senses; ye-which; va-also; guna-qualities; rupa-rasa-adyah-beginning with the beauty of His transcendental form; tesam-of them; atmana-by the self; iti-prakasakena- manifesting; iti-thus; arthah-the meaning; buddhindriya-the word "buddhinriya; iti-thus; pathe-in the text; atmana-iti- the worde "atmana" asya-of that word; visesanam-modifier; buddhayah-the word "buddhi"; antah-karanani-means the mind and intelligence; indriyani-the word "indriya; bahih-karanani- means "the external senses"; gunah-qualifies; rupa-adyah- beginning with beauty; tani-them; sarvani-all; api-also; atma-self; svarupam-own form; yatra-where; tena-by that; iti- thus;

One may ask: How is this aprakaöa form manifested? To this question the answer may be given: Krishna appears with His own transcendental qualities and senses: "bhuendriya-gunatmana". In this word "bhuta" means {sy 168}transcendental", "guna" means the handsomeness of Lord Krishna's form and His other transcendental attributes", and "atmana" means "manifesting". In some texts of Shrimad-Bhagavatam we find the word "buddhindriya" instead of "bhutendriya". According to this reading, the Lord appears with His own transcendental mind and intelligence.

In this verse (quoted in Text 1) the word "anu" means "after appearing in this way" and "hanmi" means "I go". The verb "han" may mean either "to kill" or "to go". The word "palaye" means "after coming, I protect from the sufferings created by separation from Me". This will be described in Shrimad-Bhaagavatam 10.47.34.

hanteh-of the verb "han"; artha-antare-in the alternate meaning; trayanam-of the three; eka-karmakatve-in the single actor; api-also; tam-Him; atmana-own; prakasham-form; kadacit-at a certain time; tirodhapayami-disappears; tasmāt-from that; tam-that; prakasham-form; akrishya-pulling; prakasha-of form; vividhyam-plurality; eki-karomyi-I become one; iti-thus; arthah-the meaning.

If the alternate meaning of the verb "han" (to kill) is accepted, it may be interpreted to mean that the Lord sometimes makes His form invisible. One example of this is when the thousands of expansions (of Lord Krishna at Dvaraka meet together at a certain time and) become a single Krishna (who enters the Sudharma assembly house).

This is described in the following words by Shridhara Svami (in his commentary on Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.70.17):

"The many expansions of Shri Krishna, having each left His own respective palace in Dvaraka, become a single Krishna who then entered the Sudharma assembly house."

This is also confirmed by Shripada Madvacarya who, in his commentary on this verse quotes the following statement from the Padma Purana:"

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead, Lord Hari, is the original creator of everything. He is always free from any fault or defect, and He is always transcendental to the influences of the three modes of material nature. He sometimes expands Himself into many forms, and then again all His expansions enter Him, and He becomes one."

In this verse the phrase "atmanam palaye" means {sy 168}I appear before My devotees and enjoy transcendental bliss by performing pastimes in their association". One should not take it that the use of the word "hanmi" is a literary fault in this verse. A similar phrase is spoken by the Lord in the following words (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 3.16.6): "chindyam sva-bahum api vah pratikula-shilam."

After hearing Lord Krishna's explanation of His aprakaöa presence in Vrindavana, even after He had gone to Mathura, the gopis might protest: "My dear Krishna, at present You are enjoying pastimes in Mathura, how is it possible for You to be still present with us in the village of Vrindavana?" In order to answer the gopis' doubt, as well as to explain their svarasiki perception of Him, Lord Krishna spoke the following verse (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.31):

"This Personality of Godhead is free from all phases of material entanglement and from the grip of the three modes of nature. He is pure and full of all transcendental knowledge. He appears in the thoughts of His devotees whether they are awake, dreaming, or deeply asleep."*

He is expert in all kinds of knowledge (j"anamayah), pure and free from any fault (shuddhah), superior to all living entities (vyatiriktah), and full of all auspicious attributes (sarva-guna-shali). The perception of Lord Krishna's aprakaśa form in the gopis' meditation enlivened them, increased their love for Him, and made it possible for them to bear the long period of their separation from Him.

Lord Krishna appeared before them even in their sleep. That is the meaning of His statement: "I am always manifest before you." This proves that whether awake or asleep they did not do anything but meditate on Him. Whether awake, asleep, or in deep sleep, the gopis were always wonderfully able to see Lord Krishna in meditation. In this way Lord Krishna entered them and appeared before them. The gopis constantly saw Lord Krishna, even in the condition of dreamless deep sleep (the kind of sleep which, when experienced by ordinary conditioned souls, is described by them with the words "I slept well".).

At this point the gopis might reply: "We now feel the devastating effect of separation from You, O Krishna." How is it that You now tell us we are not separated from You?" Considering that the gopis might raise this objection, Shri Krishna decided to instruct them with the following words: {sy 168}My dear friends, if you become able to free Yourself from the illusion of thinking that You are separated from Me, you will find that will have My association at every moment." Intending to give this instruction to the gopis, Lord Krishna spoke the next two verses from Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.32-33) in which He describes the process of meditation prescribed in the yoga-shastras. The first of these verses (10.47.32) follows:

"The living entity in his sleeping or dreaming condition sees his dream body, senses, and sense-objects as real, and in his awake condition sees the same things as unreal. In the same way one who is awake to spiritual knowledge sees that the external material body, senses, and sense-objects are temporary. He should check the activities of the material senses, therefore, in order to actually understand the eternal Absolute Truth."*

This verse explains that just as a person who is awakened (utthitah) from a dream sees all the activities of the dream as unreal. In the same way a transcendentalist who is awake (vinidrah) to spiritual knowledge should consider (dhyayeta) that the sense-objects (indriarthan), such as sound, sight, smell, taste, and touch, when manifested in matter are similarly unreal because they are temporary. Such a wise person should restrict (niruddhyat) the activities of the material senses in order to attain a higher spiritual goal.

In the verse Shri Krishna hinted to the gopis that their conception of being separated from Him was an illusion, like the illusions one sees in a dream. He wanted to explain to them that if they were associating with Him in His aprakaöa feature, by constantly meditating on Him, they were certainly not separated from Him, but were continuously associating with Him.

In the next verse (10.47.33), Lord Krishna continued His explanation, hinting to the gopis that because they were always thinking of Him, they were therefore not actually separated from Him. Lord Krishna said:

"My dear gopis, all kinds of spiritual paths are intended to bring the follower closer to Me in Krishna consciousness. Different processes of spiritual realization such as Vedic study, yoga, study of sankhya philosophy (as followed by great thinkers), renunciation, austerity, self-control, truthfulness, and other auspicious activities, are intended to bring the followers closer to Me. All these different ways of determining the goal of life are compared to rivers. I am like the ocean, and as rivers flow down towards the ocean, all attempts for knowledge flow towards Me."*

In this verse Shri Krishna gives the example of the rivers and the ocean. Just as many rivers flow to the ocean, in the same way, study of the Vedic literatures, and other spiritual practices all find their ultimate conclusion in Krishna consciousness. Shri Krishna also explains to the gopis that they who understand the meaning of the Vedas carefully control the activities of the mind. Therefore Lord Krishna advises the gopis to control their minds and become free from the misconception of thinking that they are separated from Him.

At this point Shri Krishna considered that the gopis response to His instructions might take the form of the following thoughts:

"My dear Krishna, we are certainly distressed by Your long absence. You advertise Yourself as very merciful by giving this philosophical instruction to us. However, if you are actually merciful to us, then why do You not return to Vrindavana and appear before us as associate with us as before. We think that Your clever words and Your so-called mercy to us are simply meant for cleverly cheating us."

Considering that the gopis might be thinking in this way, Lord Krishna spoke the following words (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.34):

The gopis might reply to this statement by saying:

"If by thinking of You one quickly attains Your association, then why have You not already appeared before us?"

To answer this question, Shri Krishna spoke the following verse (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.37):

"My dear gopis, when I performed the rasa dance with you in the evening of the sharat season in this forest of Vrindavana, some fortunate gopis were forcibly prevented from going to see Me. These gopis immediately left their bodies and quickly attained My eternal association by constantly thinking of My transcendental glories. In this way they quickly attained Me by thinking of Me."*

In this verse Shri Krishna says that when certain gopis were prevented from entering the arena of the rasa dance He personally appeared before them in His aprakaöa form, and those gopis gave up their bodies meditating on Krishna and directly seeing Him in His aprakaöa feature, and in this way they attained the direct association of Shri Krishna, who eternally enjoys wonderful pastimes with His devotees. The same incident is also described in the following verse from the Markandeya Purana, quoted in the Vasana-bhashya:

"When some of the gopis were prevented from entering the arena of the rasa-dance, they gave up their bodies meditating on Lord Krishna, who is full of transcendental bliss, handsomeness, and opulence, and who is full of love for His devotees. By meditating on Him in that way, those gopis attained His eternal association."

In this verse the word "kalyanyah" may be interpreted to mean either "free from all impediments" or "along with the body". If the second interpretation is accepted, it is to be understood that these gopis left behind material bodies in order to convince their husbands that they had not gone to Krishna, although in their original spiritual forms they attained the association of Lord Krishna in His aprakaōa pastimes.

These gopis entered the etenal spiritual world to associate with Lord Krishna and enjoy pastimes with Him in the specific way they desired. This is described in the previous statement quoted from Markandeya Purana and also in the following verse spoken by Lord Krishna in Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.82.44):

"Lord Krishna told the gopis: ~The means of attaining My favor is loving service unto Me, and fortunately you are all thus engaged. Those living beings who render service unto Me are eligible to be transferred to the spiritual world and attain eternal life with knowledge and bliss."*

"I am completely submissive to the pure love of My devotees, and therefore every day I leave the city of the Yadus and come to Vrajabhumi, revealing My prakaōa form to the residents there. This is just according My repeated promise to return to Vrindavana."

We may also note that the use of the word "asmin" (in this Vrindavana) (in Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.4737, quoted in Text 1) indicates Shri Krishna remaining in Vrindavana, even after it was understood by the people in general that He was living in the city of the Yadus.

The gopis were able to attract Shri Krishna to continuously stay among them in His aprakaōa form because they were situated in the platform of pure devotional service, a position more exalted than the attainment of transcendental knowledge or the performance of severe austerities. That devotional service to Shri Krishna is superior to the cultivation of knowledge or austerity is confirmed by Lord Krishna Himself in the following verse (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 11.20.31):

" A pure devotee who is completely dedicated to My service is already situated in the topmost perfection of life. His position will not be improved by adopting the inferior activities of cultivation of transcendental knowledge or performance of severe austerities."*

The cultivation of impersonalism will not extinguish the burning fire of the gopis' separation from Krishna. Even for ordinary devotees, the cultivation of impersonal spiritual knowledge is never recommended. This is described in the following verse spoken by Lord Brahma to Lord Krishna in Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.14.3):

"My dear Lord, those devotees who have thrown away the impersonal conception of the Absolute Truth and have therefore abandoned discussing empiric philosophical thruths should hear from self-realized devotees about Your holy name, form, pastimes and qualities. They should completely follow the principles of devotional service and remain free from illicit sex, gambling, intoxication and animal slaughter. Surrendering themselves fully with body, words and mind, they can live in any ashrama or social status. Indeed, You are conquered by such persons, although You are always unconquerable."*

Even ordinary devotees reject the knowledge and liberation offered by the impersonalists. Ordinary devotees reject these things because they prevent one from seeing and understanding the handsome dark form of Shri Krishna. That the devotees reject the liberation offered by the impersonalists is described in the following verse of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (6.10.28):

"Devotees solely engaged in the devotional service of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Narayana, never fear any condition of life. For them the heavenly planets, liberation and the hellish planets are all the same, for such devotees are interested only in the service of the Lord."*

That the devotees reject the impersonalists illusory liberation is also confirmed in the words of the Four Kumaras to the Supreme Personality of Godhead (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 3.15.48):

"Persons who are very expert and most intelligent in understanding things as they are engage in hearing narrations of the auspicious activities and pastimes of the Lord, which are worth chanting and worth hearing. Such persons do not care even for the highest material benediction, namely liberation, to say nothing of other less important benedictions like the material happiness of the heavenly kingdom."*

"O Krishna, why are you trying to cheat us by speaking these theories of the impersonalists to us as if we were outsiders? You may speak in this way to others, but not to us. O Lord, we think that You are the ultimate in all handsomeness, and we are completely unable to tolerate being separated from You."

When traveling to the house of lac where Duryodhana had planned to kill the Pandavas, Vidura spoke a riddle to the five Pandavas hinting the nature of Duryodhana's plan, and Yudhishöhira was able to understand the information concealed in Vidura's words. In the same way Shri Krishna informed the gopis of His eternal presence among them in His aprakaöa form and the gopis were able to understand the meaning of this riddle He spoke to them.

The same instructions sent to the gopis in the letter carried by Uddhava were also personally spoken to the gopis at a later time at the holy place of Kurukshetra. At that time Lord Krishna personally said to the gopis (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.82.44):

"Devotional service rendered to Me by the living beings revives their eternal life. O My dear damsels of Vraja, your affection for Me is your good fortune, for it is the only means by which you have obtained My favor."*

In this verse Lord Krishna says that they who become His pure devotees (as the gopis were) are eligible to become liberated. Others, who take up a process of spiritual realization other than bhakti-yoga will remain unable to become liberated. Considering that the gopis might say: "My dear Krishna, at present You are always remaining at Dvaraka and enjoying pastimes there. We, however, must always remain in Vrindavana. Under these circumstances, how is it possible for us to attain Your association?", Krishna consoled them by saying that He eternally remains in their association in His aprakaōa form. This was explained by Him in the following wrds (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.82.45-46):

In these verses Krishna says: "Just as (yatha) the material elements are present within all material objects (which have the material elements as their origin), in the same way, because I am the origin of everything, I am also present within everything." Lord Krishna explains that He is present in both His manifest prakaöa (atma) and all-pervading aprakaöa (atmana) forms. He said: "In My prakaöa form (pare) you saw Me in the forest of Vrindavana. Now please see Me in My aprakaöa form (akshare) eternally manifested before you. I am the Supreme Lord and the ultimate shelter of all living entities, and there is no real difference between My prakaöa and aprakaöa forms."

After describing Lord Krishna instructions to the gopis, Shrila Shukadeva Gosvami described the gopis' response (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.82.47):

"By hearing and remembering Lord Krishna's instruction about His presence among them in His aprakaöa form, the gopis became free from all illusion. They constantly meditated on Krishna, and thus always associated with Him in His aprakaöa form."

By remembering (tad-anusmarana) Lord Krishna's instructions about His aprakaöa presence (adhyatma-shikshaya) among them, the gopis gave up their illusion of being attached to Shri Krishna's prakaöa form, and not being aware of His eternal presence in their midst in His aprakaöa form. Understanding Lord Krishna instructions, the gopis constantly meditated on His form and pastimes, and in that way continuously associated with Him. Shri Krishna's eternal presence among the gopis in His aprakaöa form is described in the following verses of Shrimad-Bhagavatam:

"Devotional service rendered to Me by the living beings revives their eternal life. O My dear damsels of Vraja, your affection for Me is your good fortune, for it is the only means by which you have obtained My favor."*

In this way it may be understood that by accepting Shri Krishna's instructions as true, the gopis did not accept the monistic conception of the all-pervasiveness of the Absolute, but rather understood Krishna's confidential explanation of His eternal presence among them in His aprakaöa form. Even though the gopis were able to understand that Lord Krishna was always present before them in His aprakaöa form, they became afraid of being again separated from His prakaöa form, and with great humbleness offered the following prayer (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.82.48):

We wish that these lotus feet may also be awakened within our hearts, although we are only ordinary persons engaged in household affairs."*

In this verse the gopis say: "O Lord, please permit us, who are very unfortunate, to have an occasional glimpse of Your lotus feet. O Lord whose navel is like a lotus flower, we wish that Your lotus feet may be awakenend within our hearts." If Krishna were to ask the gopis: "What is the difficulty? Why is it impossible or so difficult for you to remain content by meditating on My lotus feet?" then the gopis might reply: "O Lord, Your feet are worshiped and meditated upon by great mystic yogis and highly learned philosophers. We are only ordinary persons engaged in household affairs. How is it possible, then, for us to meditate on Your lotus feet, which are the proper object of meditation for great souls.

Always eager to directly associate with Shri Krishna, the gopis continuously meditated upon Him. This is described in the following verse (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.46.5) spoken by Lord Krishna to Uddhava:

"My dear Uddhava, the gopis are always absorbed in thoughts of Me, who am most dear to them. Since I have gone away to Mathura, they are always thinking of Me in such a way that they remain overwhelmed and almost dead in anxiety due to separation from Me."*

In this verse the gopis protest to Krishna that they cannot remain satisfied simply by remembering His lotus feet, but they insist that they must have His direct association. In this verse they intended to say: "O Lord, the highly learned philosophers are able to meditate upon You because their minds are tranquil and free from all desires, including the desire to directly attain Your lotus feet. This peaceful condition of the mind is certainly a prerequisite in the matter of meditation. We are not able to meditate on Your lotus feet because our minds are agitated with the desire to directly see You, and therefore, in that unpeaceful condition, we cannot fix our minds in meditation. The metaphor comparing Your feet to a lotus flower is very appropriate, for a lotus flower is very cooling to the touch, although simply thinking of a lotus flower is not at all cooling. Therefore, in the same way, our burning desire to associate with You can be relieved only by the direct contact of Your lotus feet. Our desires will not be satisfied simply by meditating on You.

The gopis thought that Krishna might say to them: "The great mystic yogis meditate on My lotus feet and thus become relieved from the sufferings of material existence. Please, therefore, take up this process of meditating on My lotus feet and you will become free from the suffering of separation from Me just as the yogis become free from suffering in the same way".

By distinguishing themselves from the yogis in this verse, the gopis intended to say to Krishna: "They who have fallen into the dark well of material existence may become delivered by meditating on Your lotus feet, but such meditation is not helpful for us, who are drowning in the ocean of separation from You. When we remember Your lotus feet we do not at all experience relief, but rather the intense suffering of our separation only increases."

The gopis also thought that Krishna might suggest that they return with Him to Dvaraka, where they may associate with Him without interruption. For this reason the gopis said the words "geham jusham" (we are only ordinary persons engaged in household affairs). In this way they reminded Krishna that they were the wives of others, and not independent of their husbands. It was not possible for them to leave their husbands and go with Him to Dvaraka. One may also interpret the words "geham jusham" to mean "My dear Krishna it is not at all suitable for us to associate with You in Dvaraka or any other place except for this land of Vrindavana. We are very attached to this land of Vrindavana, which seems to us to fulfill all our desires, and which is the place where we formerly enjoyed pastimes in Your company. This desire of the gopis to remain in Vrindavana and enjoy Krishna's association there is described in the following verse (Chaitanya-caritamrita Madhya-lila 13.122):

"That very personality who stole away my heart during my youth is now again my master. These are the same moonlit nights of the month of Caitra. The same fragrance of malati flowers is there, and the same sweet breezes are blowing from the kadamba forest. In our intimate relationship, I am also the same lover, yet still my mind is not happy here. I am eager to go back to that place on the bank of the Reva under the Vetasi tree. That is my desire."*

By these words (geham jusham) the gopis said to Krishna: "We cannot become relieved of our distress by meditating on Your lotus feet, and we are not able to return to Dvaraka with You, nor would we desire to do so if we could. Therefore the only solution to our plight is if You personally return with us to Vrindavana and grant us Your association there."

"The same Shri Krishna who appeared in Vrindavana in His prakaöa form and enjoyed pastimes in the company of the cowherd men of Vrindavana, also appeared in His aprakaöa form within the hearts of all of the Vraja-gopis and the cowherd men who were their husbands."

In His aprakaöa form Shri Krishna was manifested within (antah) the thoughts of the gopis (tat-patinam). Shri Krishna is known as "adhyaksha" (the monarch) both because He is the playful (yash carati) prince of Gokula, and because He is the supreme monarch and protector of all living entities (sarvesham dehinam). Lord Krishna is the real husband of the gopis and He has been enjoying pastimes with them from time immemorial. Because the relationship of Shri Krishna and the gopis is actually eternal, Shri Krishna cannot be criticized for "immorality" or "adultery".

Shri Krishna is the real husband of the gopis. The cowherd men who played the role of being the gopis' husbands were actually not their husbands. The husband and wife relationship between the various cowherd men and the gopis was existing only in their imagination and only for enhancing Krishna's parakiya relationship with the gopis. This is confirmed in the following statement of Shrila Shukadeva Gosvami (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.33.37):

"The gopis' husbands thought that their wives were sleeping by their sides. Enamoured by the influence of the external energy of Krishna, they thought that the gopis were their wives. They could not understand that they had gone to dance with Krishna."*

Just as the Supreme Personality of Godhead has many different forms in order to enjoy many different pastimes, in the same way, the transcendental abode of the Lord, although one, is manifested in many different forms. This is described in the following verse from the Rig Veda:

"The transcendental abode of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who fulfills all desires, is manifested in many different ways."

Each different abode of the Lord has its own specific feature, and specific pastimes are enjoyed in each abode. There is no overlapping of pastimes, where the pastimes of one abode are performed in another. However, even in the Lord's manifest pastimes within the material world, the Lord's abode manifests very wonderful features. For example, although the inner part of Dvaraka city is only 12 yojanas (96 miles) in diameter, within that relatively small place there are millions of palaces 2 krosas (4 miles) across, as well as many gardens, lakes, and so on, all very large. Another example is the valley Govardhana Hill, which although very small in size, contains the infinitely large spiritual realm of Gokula. Another example is the small animals and plants in the forest of Vrindavana, which were seen by Lord Brahma is be larger than innumerable universes. Another example may be seen in Dvaraka City, where Narada Muni observed the Lord's morning, midday, and evening pastimes occurring simultaneously (in other words, Narada saw that in Dvaraka it was morning, midday, and evening all at the same time).

In this way the Lord's abode of Goloka Vrindavana is manifested in many different parts, each part being the place of specific pastimes.

"My dear sweetly speaking Parvati, on each and every path in Goloka Vrindavana are many different kinds of desire trees. Some are splendid as the pristine full moon, and some are like the newly rising sun, or like an expansive ocean of brilliant light. Some have jeweled branches, and some have buds splendid as gold. Whatever flower or fruit one wishes to pick from these desire trees is at once manifest on their branches."

The sentence "eke kamante" means {sy 168}although some desire trees are as splendid as the moon, and others as splendid as the sun, some (eke) desire trees shine with a specific splendor, surpassing that of the others. The second verse means that whatever flower or fruit one may wish to take from the desire trees, they will immediately produce.

The wonders of the spiritual Goloka Vrindavana planet are also described in the following verses from Brahma-samhita (5.56-57):

I worship Lord Krishna's transcendental abode, known as Shvetadvipa, or Goloka Vrindavana. The damsels of Vrindavana, the gopis, are super goddess of fortune. The enjoyer in Vrindavana is the Supreme Personality of Godhead Krishna. The trees there are all wish-fulfilling trees, and the land is made of transcendental touchstone. The water is all nectar, the talking is singing, the walking is dancing, and the constant companion of Krishna is His flute. The effulgence of transcendental bliss is experienced everywhere. Therefore Vrindavana-dhama is the only relishable abode.*

"In that Vrindavana numberless milk-cows always emit transcendental oceans of milk, and in that Vrindavana there is eternal existence of transcendental time, who is ever present and without past or future and hence is not subject to the quality of passing away even for the space of half a moment. That realm is known as Goloka only to a very few self-realised souls in this world."

In these verses the word "jyotih" (effulgence) indicates that in the spiritual realm of Goloka Vrindavana there are a spiritual and eternal sun and moon, which are not destroyed at the time of cosmic annihilation. That delightful sun and moon are eternal, and full of knowledge and bliss. They are not material and are different from the material sun and moon in many ways. For example, the material moon waxes and wanes, appearing as a full moon on only one day a month. In Goloka Vrindavana, however, on each night the moon is full, and it never wanes. This is described in the Gautamiya Tantra in the following words:

"In Goloka Vrindavana there are a spiritual sun and moon. There a full moon rises on each night, for the moon never wanes."

We may also note in these verses the word "bhaje" (I worship). This word shows that the abode of Shri Krishna is worshipable as the Lord Himself. The word "bhaje" is used here just as some verses previously Lord Brahma used the same word to worship Lord Krishna (govindam adi-purusham tam aham bhajami).

The phrase "samayo na vrajati" indicates that the residents of Goloka Vrindavana are so immersed in love of Krishna and and enthralled by their pastimes with Him that they forget about time. This phrase should not be interpreted to mean that there is no sequence of events in the spiritual world, for if this were so it would be impossible for the Lord to enjoy pastimes there with His devotees.

The word "shvetam" (white) means "pure and free from all fault". The word "dvipam" (island) means that Goloka Vrindavana is situated far above the material worlds. It is free from any touch of matter, just as a lotus flower remains always untouched by water. This is described in the following statement of the Gopala-tapani Upanishad (2.30):

"As a lotus remains always untouched by water, so the spiritual world of Goloka Vrindavana remains always untouched by matter."

The Lord's abode of Vrindavana is also described in the Skanda Purana, where Narada Muni says:

"In that spiritual world is Lord Govinda's pure and splendid Vrindavana, which is filled with devotees of the Lord. I also stay there.

The on this earth where the Lord enjoyed His manifest pastimes are glorified in the Vishnu Purana, Hari-vamsha, and other Vedic literatures. At the time of the Lord's manifest presence on this planet, certain very fortunate residents of this world had the opportunity to personally see the Lord and His abode, and even today we may see the transcendental places on this earth where the Lord, appearing like an ordinary human being, enjoyed pastimes. Even when manifested in this world, the abodes of the Lord are always transcendental and above the influence of the material energy. This is confirmed by the Shruti and Smriti literatures.

The extraordinary nature of the Lord's abode in this world during His manifest pastimes is also described in the following verse spoken by Lord Krishna to Lord Baladeva (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.15.5):

"My dear brother You are superior to all of us, and Your lotus feet are worshiped by the demigods. Just see how these trees, their branches full with fruits and sumanah flowers, have bent down to worship Your lotus feet. It appears that they are trying to get out of the darkness of being obliged to accept the form of trees. It further appears that they have accepted the forms of trees in order to offer everything to You, so that those who see them or hear of their exemplary devotional service may become purified of the darkness of material life."*

devotees, who are equal to everyone, and inimical to no one. This confirmed by ShRila Shukadeva Gosvami
(Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.13.59-60):

"Then, looking in all directions, Lord Brahma immediately saw Vrindavana before him, filled with trees, which were the means of livelihood for the inhabitants and which were equally pleasing in all seasons.*

"Vrindavana is the transcendental abode of the Lord, where there is no hunger, anger or thirst. Through

We have thus explained that Vrindavana, Mathura, and Dvaraka are the transcendental abodes where Shri Krishna eternally enjoys pastimes. At this point someone may object, saying that because Lord Krishna is all-pervading, it is improper to limit Him to these three places. He is present everywhere. To this objection we may reply that the Vedic literatures describe Vrindavana, Mathura and Dvaraka as the places where Lord Krishna eternally enjoys pastimes, and the Vedic literatures also explain that Lord Krishna is all-pervading by His potencies. His potencies, which He uses to maintain the material creation, are all-pervading, and in that sense He is present in every corner of the universe. He does not, however, eternally enjoy pastimes in every corner of the material universe. His presence in His original form as Shri Krishna, and His eternal pastimes, are specifically manifest in Vrindavana, Mathura, and Dvaraka, and not in other places. This is confirmed in the following statements of Sruti-shastra:

"Where does the Supreme Personality of Godhead reside? He resides in His own glorious abode in the spiritual world.."

-{}Chandogya Upanishad 7.24.1

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead in His original form eternally resides in His own spiritual abode known as Gopala-puri (Vrindavana)."

-{}Gopala-tapani Upanishad 2.29

Shri Krishna eternally enjoys pastimes in Vrindavana, Mathura, and Dvaraka, without any interruption. He does not appear in His original form in the material world and He never directly touches the material energy. He is all-pervading within the material world by His potency, but not in His original form. In Lord Krishna's manifest pastimes we see that sometimes He travels outside of Vrindavana, Mathura or Dvaraka, and goes to other places, such as Mithila or Hastinapura. In such cases it could be understood that these places are not part of the material world, but are extensions of His abodes of Vrindavana, Mathura, and Dvaraka. Even the many Vaikunṭha planets, although completely spiritual without any touch of matter, are not suitable for the Lord's pastimes in His original form as Shri Krishna. Only Vrindavana, Mathura, and Dvaraka are residences suitable for Lord Krishna.

Although in the unmanifest (aprakaōa) pastimes of the spiritual world, Lord Krishna appears in all ages, beginning with His form as an infant, nevertheless, His form as a newly blossoming youth is prominent. This is also true in the Lord's manifest pastimes on this earth, where His pastimes as a youth are prominent. In His aprakaōa pastimes in the spiritual world, which remain invisible to the residents of the material world, Lord Krishna eternally appears as a fresh youth and eternally enjoys pastimes in Dvaraka, Mathura and Vrindavana, as the youthful son of Maharaja Vasudeva, and Maharaja Nanda, the king of Vraja. In this way it may be understood that of all ages in which Lord Krishna manifests His form, the age of fresh youth (kishora) is the most important.

Lord Krishna appeared in this world in order to remove the burden of the earth, teach the science of devotional service, and fulfill many other objectives as well. This is described in the following prayer spoken by Shrimati Kuntidevi to Lord Krishna (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 1.8.20):

"You Yourself descend to propagate the transcendental science of devotional service unto the hearts of the advanced transcendentalists and mental speculators, who are purified by being able to discriminate between matter and spirit. How, then, can we women know You perfectly?"*

As Lord Krishna was manifested in this material world to fulfill all these purposes, He also manifested the both ordinary and wonderful pastimes of His birth, childhood, adolescence, and youth. The Lord manifested these pastimes in order to astonish and delight His devotees and to fulfill this purpose He appeared in the Yadu dynasty, as a child in the home of Maharaja Vasudeva.

We have already proven that Shri Krishna eternally remains in His abodes of Dvaraka, Mathura, and Vrindavana. Therefore, it should be understood, that when He leaves one abode to go to another, He remains in the former place in His aprakaöa form and continues to enjoy pastimes with His associates who remain in that particular abode. Shri Krishna began His earthly pastimes by appearing in the home of Maharaja Vasudeva. Shortly afterwards He left that place in His prakaöa form (although He remained there in His aprakaöa form). He became manifested then in Vrindavana, the home of Nanda Maharaja and the cowherd men who were his subjects and associates. Nanda Maharaja was eternally filled with the most exalted sentiments of paternal love for Krishna, and when He got Krishna as His infant son, he said "This newly born child brings me great pleasure." When Krishna grew a little older, Nanda exclaimed in delight: "See how the little boy is crawling on His hands and knees." When Krishna grew into adolescence, Nanda proclaimed: "See how playful the boy is!" In this way Lord Krishna brought newer and newer delight to Nanda Maharaja by performing various pastimes.

While remaining in Vrindavana, Lord Krishna displayed His childhood, adolescent, and youthful pastimes, which are the crest jewels of all charming sweetness. He continually enchanted the minds and senses of the cowherd residents of Gokula, and He caused them to constantly remember Him with ecstatic feelings of transcendental love. After that, Lord Krishna traveled to Mathura, where He killed many demons and delighted Maharaja Vasudeva and the other members of the Yadu dynasty. After that, the Lord traveled to the ocean to manifest His transcendental abode of Dvaraka, and enjoy many sweet pastimes there. When the Lord had completed all these pastimes in the company of His associates, He left the material world and returned to the spiritual world. At that time the Lord's prakāōa (manifest) pastimes were no longer visible to the residents of the material world, and only the aprakaōa (unmanifest) pastimes of the spiritual world (where Lord Krishna delighted His associates without any impediment) remained. At that time there was no longer any distinction between prakāōa and aprakaōa pastimes, for the Lord's pastimes could no longer be directly seen by the ordinary residents of the material world.

In Lord Krishna's manifest pastimes in Vraja, He grew to the age of kaishora (15 years old), but at that age He left Vraja to go to Mathura. This is confirmed by the following verse from Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.44.8), where the audience in Kamsa's wrestling arena in Mathura describe Krishna and Balarama as being in the age of kaishora:

"Mushōika and Canura are just like thunderbolts, as strong as great mountains, and Krishna Balarama are two delicate boys of tender age, who have not even reached the age of yauvana (16 years)."*

"Passing through the streets of Mathura very slowly, and smiling, heroic, lotus-eyed Lord Krishna immediately stole the hearts of the women of Mathura. Lord Krishna, who is the husband of the goddess of fortune, passed through the street appearing as handsome as a maddened elephant. Casting his smiling lotus glances at the residents of Mathura, He delighted their eyes with the beautiful sight of His transcendental form."

We may note that although Lord Krishna entered Mathura at the conclusion of His kaishora age (the stage of adolescence which generally occurs at the end of the fifteenth year), He only remained in Vrindavana for eleven years. Shri Krishna's eleven year stay in Vrindavana is confirmed in the following statement of Shrimad-
 Bhagavatam (3.2.26):

"Thereafter, His father, being afraid of Kamsa, brought Him to the cow pastures of Maharaja Nanda, and there He lived for eleven years like a covered flame with His elder brother, Baladeva."*

From this statement we may understand that Lord Krishna grew up more quickly than an ordinary child, and He attained the full age of kaishora (which generally takes 15 years to attain) in eleven years. That Lord Krishna grew very quickly in His childhood is confirmed in the following statement of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.8.26):

"O King Parikshit, within a very short time both Rama and Krishna began to walk very easily in Gokula on Their legs, by Their own strength, without the need to crawl."*

Now let us consider the sequence of Lord Krishna's prakaöa and aprakaöa pastimes on this earth planet. Lord Krishna first enjoyed pastimes at Vrindavana, and after that He enjoyed pastimes at Mathura and then Dvaraka. After all the Lord's earthly pastimes were concluded, only His aprakaöa (unmanifest) pastimes remained on the earth. At that time there was no longer any distinction between the Lord's prakaöa and aprakaöa pastimes. The Lord's pastimes at Dvaraka are considered to be an extension of His pastimes at Mathura. The pastimes in both places are certainly very similar. It is even explained in some Vedic literatures that Shri Rukimini-devi and the Lord's other associates at Dvaraka are also present in Mathura in their aprakaöa (unmanifest) forms.

The separation felt by the residents of Vrindavana after Lord Krishna's departure to Mathura are specifically described in various Vedic literatures. In Krishna's absence, the Vrindavana residents were greatly afflicted with feelings of separation, and in that state they considered a momentary glimpse of Lord Krishna to be more valuable to them than the value of their entire lives multiplied by millions of times. Uddhava visited them in order to console them, and after Uddhava's departure, when the distress of the devotees in Vrindavana became again very great, Lord Balarama Himself returned to Vrindavana in order to pacify them.

The hearts of the residents of Vrindavana were filled with unlimited intense longings to again see Lord Krishna, and on the pretext of going on pilgrimage during the time of a solar eclips, they went to the holy place of Kurukshetra to see Krishna. At Kurukshetra the residents of Vrindavana were just like cataka birds (who do not accept water to drink from any source other than rainwater, drunk by them as it falls through the sky), who have regained their almost lost lives by seeing the dark cloud of Lord Krishna's form and hearing the grave thunder of His words. Then again, the residents of Vrindavana also seemed like poverty-stricken men on the brink of starvation who have jsut gotten the urgently needed meal that was the personal association of Lord Krishna. In this way, Lord Krishna, after satisfying the residents of Vrindavana with His own association, after enjoying some pastimes in their company, and after speaking (as He had also previously done) many words reassuring them that He would soon return to Vrindavana be with them again, Lord Krishna again sent them all back to their delightful abode of Shri Vrindavana-dhama.

This journey of the inhabitants of Vrindavana to Kurukshetra during the solar eclipse occurred only a few years after the killing of Kamsa, and some years before the killing of Shishupala, Shalva, and Dantavakra. Although Shrimad-Bhagavatam describes this pastime (the journey of the residents of Vrindavana to Kurukshetra) after the description of Lord Balarama's pilgrimage to many holy places, and His arrival at Kurukshetra during the war between the Pandavas and the Kurus, and the killing of Duryodhana, the journey of the residents of Vrindavana to Kurukshetra occurred before the Kurukshetra war, because the Bhagavatam also explains that Bhishma, Drona, and Duryodhana also came to Kurukshetra at the time of the solar eclipse. This would not have been possible after the Kurukshetra war (where they all died).

The sequence of events may be given as follows: First, the residents of Vrindavana traveled to Kurukshetra at the time of the solar eclips, then (2) there was the Rajusuya sacrifice of Maharaja Yudhishöhira, during which (3) Shishupala was killed. Then (4) there was the gambling match between the Kurus and Pandavas, and then (5) the killing of Shalva, the celebrated description of which is found in the Vana-parva of the Mahabharata. After that (6) Dantavakra was killed, and after that (7) the Pandavas were exiled to the forest. After that (8) Lord Balarama went on His tour of all the holy places, and after that (9) the Kurukshetra war was fought, and Duryodhana was killed. From this sequence of events we may conclude that the journey of the residents of Vrindavana to Kurukshetra at the time of the solar eclips happened not a very long time after the killing of Kamsa.

In this connection someone may raise the objection that Lord Krishna's grandson Aniruddha was already full grown when the residents of Vrindavana met Lord Krishna at Kurukshetra and therefore that event must have been many years after the killing of Kamsa. That Aniruddha was already an adult by that time is proven by the following statement of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.82.6):

"When the residents of Vrindavana and the members of the Yadu dynasty went to Kurukshetra at the time of the solar eclips, some important personalities like Aniruddha, the son of Pradyumna, and Kritavarma, the commander-in-chief of the Yadu dynasty, along with Sucandra, Shuka, and Sharana, remained in Dvaraka to protect the city."*

This objection is answered by the fact that both Pradyumna and Aniruddha grew very quickly. It did not take many years for them to change from new-born infants to fully grown adults. And therefore, there need not have been an period of many years between the killing of Kamsa and the adulthood of Pradyumna and Aniruddha. The rapid growth to adulthood by Pradyumna and Aniruddha is described in the following statement of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.55.9):

"Pradyumna, the son of Lord Krishna grew very swiftly, and before long he was fully grown."

Another explanation may also be given: Another person, one of the direct sons of Lord Krishna was also named Aniruddha. This Aniruddha was one of the 18 maharatha sons of Lord Krishna and he is mentioned at the end of the Tenth Canto of Shrimad-Bhagavatam. It may be that the Aniruddha who remained in Dvaraka at the time of the pilgrimage to Kurukshetra was this Aniruddha. At any rate, there was not a very long interval of time between the killing of Kamsa and the meeting of Lord Krishna with the inhabitants of Vrindavana at Kurukshetra.

"My dear sister, you know that we were very much harassed by King Kamsa, and by his persecutions we were scattered here and there. We were always full of anxieties. Only in the last few days have we returned to our own places, by the grace of God."*

We may also conclude that the meeting at Kurukshetra happened not long after the killing of Kamsa because Draupadi asked the different queens of Krishna how they had accepted the Lord's hand in marriage. That Draupadi was just then learning about Lord Krishna's marriages indicates that the meeting at Kurukshetra happened soon after the killing of Kamsa, and before the Rajasuya sacrifice. It was also before the Rajasuya sacrifice that Uddhava delivered Lord Krishna's message to the gopis and promised (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.46.34):

"Lord Krishna will soon return to Vrajabhumi."

Uddhava's delivery of Lord Krishna's message to the gopis occurred before the Rajasuya sacrifice, for he mentioned them when he advised Lord Krishna to kill Jarasandha and attend the Rajasuya sacrifice. Uddhava said (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.71.9):

"My dear Lord, when Jarasandha is killed then the queens of all the imprisoned kings will be so joyful at their husbands' being released by Your mercy that they will all begin to sing Your glories. They will be as pleased as the gopis were when they were relieved from the hands of Shankhasura. All the great sages, the King of the elephants, Gajendra, the goddess of fortune, Sita, and even Your father and mother, were all delivered by Your causeless mercy. We also have been thus delivered, and we are always singing the transcendental glories of Your activities."*

After the Rajasuya sacrifice had been concluded, and after the demons Shalva and Dantavakra were killed, Lord Krishna quickly returned to Gokula. This is described in the following prose and verse passage from the Uttara-khanda of the Padma Purana:

"Hearing that Shishupala had been killed by Krishna, Dantavakra arrived at Mathura to fight with the Lord, and when Lord Krishna heard about this, He mounted a chariot and went to Mathura to fight with the demon. Krishna and Dantavakra remained at the entrance of Mathura and fought day and night for a long time. In the midst of this battle Lord Krishna struck Dantavakra so heavily with His club that the demon immediately fell down dead to the ground, all his limbs crushed by the force of Lord Krishna's blow. He seemed like a great mountain smashed to pieces by a powerful bolt of lightning. Because he was killed by Lord Krishna, the demon Dantavakra attained a spiritual form like the Lord's and entered the eternal and blissful spiritual world, which is only approached by the perfect yogis. Dantavakra and Shishupala had actually been the gatekeepers of Vaikunöha, and their names were Jaya and Vijaya. On the pretext of being cursed by the four Kumaras, they had descended to the material world for three lifetimes in order to facilitate the pastimes of the Personality of Godhead. Now that the three lifetimes were completed, they were killed by the Lord, and they attained liberation, returning to their original posts in the spiritual world.

"After killing this demon, Lord Krishna crossed the Yamuna river, and entered Vrajabhumi, the kingdom of Nanda Maharaja. His foster parents, Nanda and Yashoda had been greatly aggrieved because of separation from the Him, and He greeted them and consoled them. Tears running down their necks, Lord Krishna's parents embraced their dear son. Lord Krishna also offered respectful obeisances to all the cowherd residents of Vraja, consoling them with many words, and offering them many gifts of costly garments, ornaments and other things.

It may seem to some readers that this account of the killing of Dantavakra and Lord Krishna's return to Vrindavana contradicts the description found in Shrimad-Bhagavatam. Actually there is no contradiction here, and the accounts of the Padma Purana and Shrimad-Bhagavatam are in perfect agreement. This may be understood in the following way: Dantavakra considered that, upon Uddhava's advice, Lord Krishna had asked Bhima to kill Jarasandha in a club duel, because Lord Krishna Himself was not very expert at fighting with clubs. Proud of His own skill in club-fighting, Dantavakra planned to challenge Lord Krishna to a private club duel, and then kill Him. Dantavakra wanted to fight with Lord Krishna alone in order to protect himself from any possible revenge Lord Krishna's friends might try to take on him after he had killed the Lord. Thinking in this way, Dantavakra specifically did not want to fight Lord Krishna in Dvaraka, but in some place far away from the Lord's capitol city. Thinking that Lord Krishna had remained in Indraprastha after the Rajasuya sacrifice had ended, Dantavakra sent a message challenging the Lord to come to Mathura and fight with him. The message came to Indraprastha, and Narada Muni, travelling on Lord Krishna's personal chariot, which moves as swiftly as the mind, instantly carried it to Dvaraka, where Lord Krishna had just finished killing Shalva. Lord Krishna and Narada Muni immediately travelled to Mathura on the Lord's transcendental chariot, (the place in Mathura where they arrived is still known, even today, as the "Dvaraka Gate"), and the Lord answered Dantavakra's challenge, and killed him. Because Vrindavana is so close to Mathura, Lord Krishna took the opportunity to visit the gopas and gopis there.

The Padma Purana's description of Lord Krishna's return to Vrindavana is in perfect harmony with the account of the Lord's pastimes found in Shrimad-Bhagavatam. This may be seen in the following quotation from Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.39.35):

Lord Krishna's promise to return to Vrindavana is also recorded in the following verse (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.45.23) spoken by the Lord to Nanda and Yashoda, shortly after the Lord had killed Kamsa:

"My dear father and mother, I know you will be feeling separation by returning to Vrindavana and leaving Us here, but please rest assured that I shall be coming back to Vrindavana just after giving some satisfaction to my real father and mother, Vasudeva and Devaki, My grandfather, and other relatives and family members."*

The following verses (spoken by Uddhava to Nanda Maharaja and Yashoda-devi) also record Lord Krishna's promise to return to Vrindavana (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.46.35 and 34):

"I have brought a message from Krishna to the effect that He will soon come back to Vrindavana and satisfy you both by His personal presence. Now that Krishna has killed King Kamsa, the Yadava's enemy, in the wrestling arena, Krishna has promised that He will come back to Vrindavana after finishing His business in Mathura. This promise He will surely fulfill."*

Many different times Lord Krishna promised that He would return to Vrindavana, and His devotees also repeated that promise. It is not reasonable to assume that Lord Krishna would not keep such a promise repeated so many times. Lord Krishna always speaks truthfully and does not break His promise. This is confirmed by the shruti-shastra, which says:

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is always truthful."

Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.33.31) also says:

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead always speaks the truth."

For example, Lord Krishna's return to Vrindavana is described in the following statement of the inhabitants of Dvaraka (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 1.11.9), where (according to Shridhara Svami) the word "madhun" refers to the residents of Vrindavana (which is situated within the district of Mathura):

"O lotus-eyed Lord, whenever You go away to Mathura, Vrindavana or Hastinapura to meet Your friends and relatives, every moment of Your absence seems like a million years. O infallible one, at that time our eyes become useless, as if bereft of sun."*

"By His mystic potency Lord Krishna brought all the residents of Vrindavana to Dvaraka."

The word "sarva" (all) here must include the residents of Vrindavana. This verse is spoken by the residents of Dvaraka about the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

That Shri Krishna visited Vrindavana after the killing of Dantavakra is confirmed by these verses of Shrimad-Bhagavatam, and also by the following verse (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.45.23), where Lord Krishna (just after killing King Kamsa) says to Nanda Maharaja and Yashoda-devi:

"My dear father and mother, I know you will be feeling separation by returning to Vrindavana and leaving us here, but please rest assured that I will be coming back to Vrindavana just after giving some satisfaction to my real father and mother, Vasudeva and Devaki, My grandfather, and other relatives and family members."*

That meeting of Lord Krishna with the residents of Vrindavana at the holy place of Kurukshetra occurred before His visit to Vrindavana and also before the killing of Dantavakra is confirmed by the following words spoken by Lord Krishna to the gopis during their meeting at Kurukshetra (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.82.41):

"My dear friends, you know that Lord Balarama and Myself left Vrindavana just to please our relatives and family members. Thus we were long engaged in fighting with our enemies, and were obliged to forget you, who were so much attached to Me in love and affection. I can understand that by this action I have been ungrateful to you, but still I know you are faithful to Me. May I inquire if you have been thinking of Us although We had to leave you behind? My dear gopis do you now dislike remembering Me, considering Me to have become unfaithful to you? Do you take My misbehavior with you very seriously?"*

Lord Krishna did not want to return to Vrindavana until after most of the important demons had been killed. After Dantavakra was killed, however, He considered that most of the demons had already been dispatched, and He could then return to Vrindavana for a visit.

Lord Krishna then returned to Vrindavana and enjoyed manifest pastimes with the devotees there for two months. When Lord Krishna became aware that the inhabitants of Vrindavana were very anxious about the possibility of being again separated from, He reassured them, telling them that He would never be separated from them. He remained in Vrindavana with them in His aprakaōa form, invisible to the eyes of ordinary conditioned souls, and He fulfilled their earnest desire to have His association constantly. At the same time in His prakaōa form He left Vrindavana and returned again to Dvaraka. Lord Krishna's eternal aprakaōa presence in Vrindavana in the spiritual world (Goloka) is described in the following verse from Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.28.18):

"All the cowherd men saw Krishna, who was being worshiped with excellent prayers on the Goloka Vrindavana planet."

After Lord Krishna's two month visit to Vrindavana He brought all the residents of Vrindavana back with to Goloka Vrindavana in the spiritual world. This is confirmed in the following prose passage from the Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda (which immediately follows the passage quoted in Anuccheda 175, Texts 23-24):

"Then, by Lord Krishna's mercy, Nanda Maharaja, and all the cowherd men of Vraja, along with all their wives, children, cows and other domestic animals, as well as all the deer and other wild animals in the Vrindavana forest, and every living entity in Vrindavana, all manifested eternal spiritual forms and, boarding transcendental airplanes, traveled to Goloka Vrindavana, the highest planet in the spiritual sky. Lord Krishna thus gave to His friends eternal residence in His own abode, which is free from all imperfection. After this, Lord Krishna, who was being glorified by the demigods in the upper material planets, entered Dvaraka and continued His manifest pastimes within the material world."

The phrase "nandadayah dara-sahitah" in this passage means that Nanda Maharaja, Krishna, Yashoda-devi, and all the cowherd men, boys, and gopis went to Goloka Vrindavana. Krishna remained with them, appearing as the youthful son of Maharaja Nanda, and all the residents of Vrindavana became unaware that Krishna had ever gone to Mathura, or that they had ever been separated from Him.

Someone may raise the objection: If previously (Shrimad-Bhagavatam Canto 10 Chapter 28) Lord Krishna had shown the highest planet in the spiritual world (goloka) to the cowerd men in Vrindavana, and thus revealed that the Vrindavana of this earth planet is in truth non-different from the Goloka Vrindavana in the spiritual world, then why did He take them to the Goloka Vrindavana in the spiritual world, if the earthly Vrindavana and the Goloka Vrindavana planet are actually identical? There is an adage "Why should one go to a mountain in search of honey, if honey is easily available nearby?" According to this understanding, therefore, there is no reason for Lord Krishna to transfer the residents of Vrindavana to the Goloka planet, because they are actually already living there.

The answer to this objection follows: In the Tenth Canto, 28th Chapter of Shrimad-Bhagavatam, Lord Krishna reveals His aprakaōa (invisible to the eyes of ordinary conditioned souls) presence in Vrindavana. In the spiritual world (goloka), Lord Krishna, His associates, and His pastimes are all aprakaōa (invisible to the conditioned souls), whereas in the Lord's pastimes in the earthly Vrindavana, these are all prakraōa (visible to the conditioned souls). Therefore when this passage says that the Lord traveled to Goloka Vrindavana with His associates, the primary understanding is that the Lord remained with them in His aprakaōa (invisible to the conditioned souls) form. These aprakaōa pastimes are known as the pastimes of Goloka Vrindavana, the highest planet in the spiritual world. Many scriptural passages confirm this explanation of the Lord's eternal pastimes in the Goloka Vrindavana planet.

atha-now; gadya-of the prose passage; ante-at the end; dvaravatim-Dvaraka; vivesha-entered; iti-thus; ca-also; shalva-of Shalva; vadha-killing; artham-for the purpose; nirgataih-left; shri-bhagavat-of the Supreme Personality of Godhead; pratyagamanam-return; pratikshyamanaih-waited; yadavaih-the Yadus; saha-along with; eva-certainly; labhyate-is attained; tam-Him; vina-without; svayam- personally; griha-homes; pravesha-entrance; anaucitya-because of impropriety; kshana-moment; ardham-half; menire-considered; arbhakah-the boys; iti-thus; adi-in the passage beginning; vat-just like; alpa-brief; kala-time; bhavanena- with the conception; va-or.

The words "dvaravatim vivesha" (and then the Lord entered Dvaraka) at the end of the prose passage from the Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda (quoted in Anuccheda 176, Text 4) may be explained in the following way:

Lord Krishna and the members of the Yadu dynasty left Dvaraka to kill Shalva. After Shalva was killed, the Yadavas waited for Lord Krishna to return without Him. Therefore, after the killing of Shalva, Lord Krishna entered Dvaraka, along with all the members of the Yadu dynasty. This description follows the account given in Shrimad-Bhagavatam. Although the Yadavas waited for two months for Lord Krishna to return from Vrindavana, that two months seemed to them to be only a few moments. A similar contraction of time was experienced by the Vrindavana cowherd boys stolen by Lord Brahma. This is described in the following words of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.14.43):

"Although they had been absent for an entire year, the cowherd boys thought that year to be as long as half a moment."

That Lord Krishna returned to Vrindavana after killing Kamsa, Shalva, and Dantvakra is alluded to in many verses that describe the worship of Lord Krishna as the master of Vrindavana, and the killer of Kamsa. That both descriptions are found in the same verses confirms the explanation that Lord Krishna returned to Vrindavana after killing Kamsa. Examples of this may be found in the following statements of the Baudhayana-shastra:

"O Lord Govinda, O Supreme Personality of Godhead who is worshiped by Lord Indra, the king of the demigods, O Lord who killed Kamsa, and who is very dear to the gopis."

"O Lord Govinda, O Supreme Controller, O killer of Kamsa, O Lord who is very dear to the gopis."

When Lord Krishna explained to the gopis that they would again meet Him, this should be taken as a prediction of His return to Vrindavana. The following verses may be taken as examples of this prediction:

"My dear gopis, by constantly remembering Me, you will quickly attain My association."*

Although the greatly elevated gopis were extremely dear to Lord Krishna from the very first time they met Him, they still were separated from Him for a certain time. Their reunion with Him and the end of their separation from Him is alluded to in the following verses of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (11.12.8, 11.12.10, and 11.12.11):

"All the inhabitants of Vrindavana, including the gopis, cows, unmoving creatures, the twin arjuna trees, animals, living entities with stunted consciousness, bushes and thickets and snakes like Kaliya all achieved the perfection of life by unalloyed love for Me and thus very easily achieved Me."

We may note that in these verses the verbs "dadrishuh" (saw) and "babhuvuh" (became) are in the past tense. Using the past-tense, these verses describe the gopis' unhappiness because of separation from Krishna and their experiencing a single night to be as long as a day of Brahma because of Lord Krishna's absence. Because these activities are described in the past, we may conclude that they are no longer happening at the time Lord Krishna spoke these verses to Uddhava. At that time the gopis' separation from Lord Krishna had ended, and they were continually enjoying pastimes with Him in His aprakaöa form.

The Lord's presence in His prakaöa (visible to the conditioned souls) and aprakaöa (invisible to the conditioned souls) forms is ultimately one. There is no real distinction between prakaöa and aprakaöa. Always engaged in ecstatic meditation on Lord Krishna and perceiving Him in His aprakaöa form, the gopis forgot even about their own names and forms. This is described in the following verse of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (11.12.12) where Lord Krishna says:

"My dear Uddhava, just as the great sages in yoga trance merge into self-realization like rivers merging into the ocean, and are thus not aware of material names and forms, similarly the gopis of Vrindavana were so completely attached to Me within their minds that they could not think of their bodies, nor of this world, nor of their future lives. Their entire consciousness was simply bound up in Me."

In this verse Lord Krishna describes the gopis' ecstatic love for Him in the mood of separation. Having gotten the blissful opportunity to again see Lord Krishna and associate with Him, the gopis became absorbed in continuously thinking of Him. This continuous thought of Lord Krishna absorbed all their attention, and eventually they could no longer think of who they were or what their possessions or status was. They could not understand if they were only remembering Lord Krishna (aprakaöa) or whether Lord Krishna was actually present before them (prakaöa), they were so intently meditating upon Him.

The gopis were unable to make any distinction between the names and forms (nama-rupa) in the Lord's prakaöa and aprakaöa pastimes. In both prakaöa and aprakaöa pastimes the Lord manifests the same form and His associates are also the same, He and His associates have the same names and forms, and the pastimes are also the same. Actually prakaöa and aprakaöa are the same, except that when the Lord and His pastimes are visible to the conditioned souls they are called prakaöa, and when they are not seen by the conditioned souls, they are called aprakaöa. We may also note in this connection that the phrase {sy 168}pravishöa iva" (as if they had entered) indicates that the prakaöa and aprakaöa pastimes of the Lord did not merge together and become one series of pastimes. The prakaöa and aprakaöa pastimes were always identical, even from the very beginning, and therefore it is not possible for them to join together, for they never had been separate. for this reason, Lord Krishna said "as if they had become one". We may also note that the word "nama-rupe" is a samahara-dvandva-samasa (names and forms).

In order to explain that the names and forms of the Lord and His devotees are the same in both prakaöa and aprakraöa pastimes, Lord Krishna gives the following example: "yatha samadhau munayah" (just as great sages in the yoga trance of nirvikalpa-samadhi merge into self-realization). In other words, the Lord explains that the names and forms of the prakaöa and aprakraöa pastimes are not different, just as the minds of the yogis are not different from the object of their meditation.

Lord Krishna then gives another example to explain that the prakaöa and aprakraöa pastimes are actually identical. The Lord says: "yathabdhi-toye nadyah" (just as rivers merge into the ocean). This example may be taken to describe the prakaöa and aprakraöa pastimes. In other words, just as the water flowing in different places of a river is not different from the water at the river's mouth about to enter the ocean, in the same way the Lord's prakaöa and aprakraöa pastimes are non-different. In other words, because the gopis were immersed in constant meditation upon Lord Krishna, they perceived His presence directly, and for them there was no distinction of prakaöa and aprakraöa.

These examples of the yogis' meditation and the rivers' entering the ocean should be taken as explaining the non-difference of the Lord's prakaöa and aprakraöa pastimes. They should not be taken to explain that all variety is meaningless, as the impersonalists would have it.

The Lord's pastimes are described in the following way in the Vedanta-sutra (2.1.33):

"The activities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead may appear like those of an ordinary human being, but they are not so in actual fact. They are all transcendental pastimes, and not in any way like the fruitive actions of the conditioned souls."

In this way we have described the Lord's prakāśa and aprakāśa pastimes, and the gopis' direct association with Lord Krishna by continuously meditating upon Him in ecstatic love.

That the gopis attained the direct association of Lord Krishna in His original form by always meditating upon Him is confirmed in the following explanation spoken by Lord Krishna (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 11.12.13):

"All those hundreds of thousands of gopis were unaware of My actual position, understanding Me to be their most charming lover and ardently desiring Me in that way. Thus, intimately associating with Me, the gopis attained Me, the Supreme Absolute Truth."

We may note in this verse that the word "brahma" means "the Supreme Absolute Truth", which should be understood to mean the transcendental form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. If one argues that the word "brahma" means the impersonal Brahman effulgence, still the word "brahma" means Lord Krishna, for the Brahman effulgence is the emanation of the bodily rays of Lord Krishna. This is confirmed in the following verse of Bhagavad-gita (14.27), where Lord Krishna says:

"I am the basis of the impersonal Brahman."

Therefore the phrase "brahma prapuh" indicates that the gopis attained the association of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Lord Krishna.

Some of the gopis were intimate eternal associates of Lord Krishna and manifestations of His internal potency, whereas many hundreds and thousands of other gopis and residents of Gokula were pure devotees who were being elevated to that position from the status of conditioned souls. This second group is described in the following words (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 11.12.8):

"It is only by pure love and devotion for Lord Krishna that the gopis, surabhi cows, and other residents of Vraja were able to attain His association."

In this way we may understand that the residents of Gokula were divided into these two groups.

Someone may ask what is the name of this "brahma" attained by the gopis. The Lord answers the question when He says "mam krishnakhyam eva" (I am the Supreme Brahman, and My name is Krishna).

Lord Krishna is the Supreme Brahman, the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is confirmed by all Vedic literatures. For example the Shrimad-Bhagavatam says:

"The Absolute Truth has a humanlike form."

In the Gopala-tapani Upanishad the question is asked:

"Of all the features and forms of the Absolute Truth, what is His ultimate feature and original form?"

To this question the following answer is given:

"Lord Krishna is the ultimate feature and the original form of the Absolute."

Therefore, when it is described that the gopis attained the Brahman, it does not mean that they attained something impersonal. Rather, it means that they attained the association of the Supreme Person, Lord Krishna.

One may ask: What relationship did the gopis have with Lord Krishna?

The answer to this question is found in the words {sy 168}ramanam jaram" (Lord Krishna was the gopis' lover). We may carefully note the distinction between the words "ramana" (lover) and "nandana" (son). For example, when we say "mitra-ramana", we mean "Mitra's lover or husband", and when we say "mitra-nandana" we mean {sy 168}Mitra's son".

We may understand that the word "brahma" in this verse refers to the personal form of Shri Krishna, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, by studying the context of the word. In this context to interpret the word "brahma" to mean the impersonal Brahman effulgence would be inappropriate. The word must mean Lord Krishna here. The appropriate meaning of a word may be seen by the context in which it is used. For example, the word {sy 168}kata" may mean "fearful," "expanded", {sy 168}visible", or "beautiful". The only way to determine the proper meaning in a particular sentence is obviously to study the context in which the word is used. In the context of this verse the word "brahma" clearly refers to Lord Krishna.

In this verse the word "jara" (paramour) should be understood to mean "husband". The word "jara" here is a playful figure of speech (as described in the nyaya-shastra), and does not exactly convey the simple face-value of the word. Actually Lord Krishna was the eternal husband of the gopis, and they had no other lover or husband other than Lord Krishna. The idea that the gopis had other husbands and that Lord Krishna was their paramour was an illusion existing only in the gopis' imagination. They considered Lord Krishna their paramour, although in fact He ws their husband.

That Lord Krishna is the eternal husband of the gopis is confirmed in the following statement of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.33.35):

"Lord Krishna was the gopis' husband."

It also may be understood that because Lord Krishna is the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the ultimate source of all emanations, and the supreme protector of all living entities, He is the natural master of all living entities and the natural husband of all women. For these reasons, therefore, it is appropriate to say that Lord Krishna is the husband of the gopis (and not their paramour).

That Lord Krishna is the ultimate master and husband of all living entities is described by Pingala in the following words (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 11.8.34 and 39):

"I am now completely satisfied and I have full faith in the Lord's mercy. Therefore I will maintain myself with whatever comes of its own accord. I shall enjoy life only with the Lord as my husband because He is the real source of love and happiness."

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is absolutely the most dear one for all living beings because He is everyone's well-wisher and Lord. He is the supreme Soul situated in everyone's heart. Therefore I will now pay the price of complete surrender, and thus purchasing the Lord I will enjoy with Him just as Lakshmi-devi."

Shrimati Lakshmi-devi also confirms that Lord Krishna is the ultimate husband of all living entities (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 5.18.20):

"He alone who is never afraid but who, on the contrary, gives complete shelter to all fearful persons can actually become a husband and protector. Therefore, my Lord, you are the only husband, and no one else can claim this position. If you were not the only husband, You would be afraid of others. Therefore persons learned in all Vedic literature accept only Your Lordship as everyone's master, and they think no one else a better husband and protector than You."*

In this verse (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 11.12.13, quoted in Anuccheda 178, Text 1) Shri Krishna is described in different ways. First He is described as the gopis' paramour (jaram), and then as the gopis' husband (ramanam). These descriptions are then superseded by the description of Him as the supremely opulent

Personality of Godhead. It should be understood that the conception of Lord Krishna as the gopis' paramour is corrected by the description of Him as the gopis' husband. This description also is corrected by the description of Him as the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

In this verse three conceptions of Lord Krishna are presented, each one correcting the preceding one. The idea that Lord Krishna is the gopis' paramour is superseded by the description of Him as their husband. That description is also superseded by the description of Him as the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Although the word "ramana" precedes the word "jara" in this verse, it should be understood to be before it in the sequence of ideas (which is more important than the mere sequence of words). This is described in the following statement of the nyaya-shastra:

"The Vedic literatures should be understood according to their context."

An example may be seen in the interpretation of the Vedic statement beginning with the words "dadhna juhöti".

nanda-gopa-of Nanda Maharaja; sutam-the son; devi-goddess Katyayani; patim-husband; me-my; kuru-please make; te-unto you; namah-I offer my respectful obeisances; iti-thus; krita-japanam-offering prayers; kumarinam-of the young girls; tu-also; pati-bhavana-purta-with the conception as husband; iti-thus; cet-if; tarhi-then; tasam-of them; anavadya-bhavanam-without any fault; sankalpa-of the desire; siddhih-attainment; eva-certainly; shri-bhagavata-by the Supreme Personality of Godhead; sutaram-nicely; karya-should be done.

We may also note that the unmarried gopis prayed to goddess Katyayani to have Lord Krishna as their husband. Their prayers are recorded in the following words of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.22.2):

"The unmarried girls used to pray with great devotion to the goddess Katyayani, addressing her as follows: O goddess please be kind to us, and arrange for our marriage with the son of Nanda Maharaja, Krishna."*

It should be understood that Lord Krishna is very inclined to fulfill this desire of the pure-hearted gopis. There is no reason for us to assume that He did not.

Lord Krishna personally fulfilled the gopis' wish, and He accepted them in the following words (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.22.21):

"My dear gopis, your desire to have Me as your husband will be fulfilled because with this desire you have worshiped goddess Katyayani. I promise you that during the next autumn season you shall be able to meet with Me, and you shall enjoy Me as your husband."*

That Lord Krishna returned to Vrindavana, and that He was the actual husband of the gopis is confirmed by all siddhanta-shastras and rasa-shastras, and by all philosophers and poets, ancient and contemporary, engaged in describing the Supreme Lord's pastimes, which are sometimes like the activities of an ordinary human being, and sometimes are extraordinary and superhuman. These conclusions are also confirmed in the Lalita-Madhava-naöaka by Shрила Rupa Gosvami, whose lotus feet are my life and soul, and they are also confirmed by the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself in the following words (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.34-37):

"My dear gopis, although you were accustomed to love Me from the very beginning of your lives, in order to increase your superexcellent love for Me, I have purposely separated Myself from you. I have done this so that you may be in constant meditation on Me.*

"When a women's beloved is away, she thinks of him meditatively, and he is present before her. In fact, she is more conscious of him than when he was actually present. In the same way you have become more conscious of Me in this condition of separation than when I was directly present before you.*

"My dear gopis, because you constantly think of Me without thinking of anything else, or ever forgetting Me, You will quickly attain Me.*

"My dear gopis, when I performed the rasa dance with you in the evening of the sharat season in this forest of Vrindavana, some fortunate gopis were forcibly prevented from going to see Me. These gopis immediately left their bodies and quickly attained My eternal association by constantly thinking of My transcendental glories. In this way they quickly attained Me by thinking of Me."*

From this we may understand that the conception that Lord Krishna is the gopis' paramour is fraught with danger and calamity. Such a conclusion is not correct and it is not supported by the evidence of Vedic literature.

When Lord Krishna was enjoying His prakaöa pastimes in Vrajabhumi, it was very difficult for the millions of gopis to conceal the great ecstatic love they felt for Him. This is described in the following verses of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.35.16-17):

"Another gopi said: My dear friend, when Krishna returns home with His cows, the footprint of the soles of His feet-{}with flag, thunderbolt, trident, and lotus flower-{}relieves the pain the earth feels when the cows traverse it. He walks in a stride which is so attractive, and He carries His flute. Just by looking at Him we become lusty to enjoy His company. At that time, our movements cease. We become just like trees and stand perfectly still. We even forget what we look like."*

As Lord Krishna was departing for Mathura, the gopis found it very difficult to conceal their ecstatic love for Him. This is described in the following statement of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.39.26):

"The gopis prayed to the demigods to create some natural disturbance, such as a hurricane, storm or heavy rainfall, so that Krishna could not go to Mathura. They then began to consider: `Despite our elderly parents and guardians, we shall personally stop Krishna from going Mathura. We have no other alternative than to take this direct action. Everyone has gone against us to take away Krishna from our sight. Without Him we cannot live for a moment.'"

The gopis' anxiety at Lord Krishna's departure from Vrindavana is also described in the following verse (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.39.29):

"The gopis became more and more griefstricken at Krishna's leaving Vrindavana. They could not check their minds, and they began to cry loudly, calling the different names of Krishna, `O dear Damodara! Dear Madhava!'"

Lord Krishna described the gopis' great love for Him in the following words (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.46.4):

"The gopis are always absorbed in thoughts of Me. They have dedicated body, desire, life and soul and to Me. I am anxious not only for gopis, but for anyone who sacrifices society, friendship, love and personal comforts for Me. It is My duty to protect such exalted devotees. The gopis are the most dear. They are always thinking of Me in such a way that they remain overwhelmed and almost dead in anxiety due to separation from Me. They are keeping alive simply by thinking that I am returning to them very soon."*

The gopis' great love for Lord Krishna in separation from Him is also described in the following words (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.9-10):

"Uddhava understood that gopis of Vrindavana were all simply absorbed in the thought of Krishna and His childhood activities. While talking about Krishna with Uddhava, they forgot all about their household business. They even forgot about themselves as their interest in Krishna increased more and more."*

The ecstatic love of gopis in separation from Lord Krishna is also described in the passage narrating Shrimati Radharani's taking a bumble-bee as Lord Krishna's messenger. This passage begins with the following verse (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.11):

"One of gopis, namely Shrimati Radharani, was so much absorbed in thoughts of Krishna by dint of Her personal touch with Him that She actually began to talk with a bumblebee, which was flying there and trying to touch Her lotus feet. While another gopi was talking with Krishna's messenger Uddhava, Shrimati Radharani took that bumblebee to be a messenger from Krishna and began to talk with it as follows: `Bumblebee, you are accustomed to drinking honey from the flowers, and therefore you have preferred to be a messenger of Krishna, who is of the same nature as you.'"*

The gopis also revealed their ecstatic love for Krishna when they spoke to Lord Balarama (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.65.9):

"When the gopis arrived, Lord Balarama glanced over them with loving eyes. Being overjoyed, the gopis, who had so long been mortified on account of Krishna's and Balarama's absence, began to ask about the welfare of the two brothers. They laughed and specifically asked Balarama whether Krishna was enjoying His life surrounded by the enlightened women of Dvaraka Puri. `Does He sometimes remember His father Nanda and His mother Yashoda and the other friends with whom He so intimately behaved while He was in Vrindavana? Does Krishna have any plans to come here to see His mother Yashoda, and does He remember us gopis, who are now pitifully bereft of His company? Krishna might have forgotten us in the midst of the cultured women of Dvaraka, but as far as we are concerned, we are still remembering Him by collecting flowers and sewing them into garlands. When He does not come, however, we simply pass our time by crying. If only He would come here and accept these garlands that we have made.'"

In these verses (Shrimad-Bhavagatam 10.39.26 and 29, quoted in Text 17 and 18) the gopis attempted to stop Lord Krishna from going to Mathura (nivarayamah). Impelled by ecstatic love, they could not restrain themselves (vishrijya lajjam), and they began to cry loudly, calling the different names of Krishna. Indeed, all the residents of Gokula were crying, and the gopis were trying to stop Krishna from going to Mathura.

The gopis' ecstatic love for Lord Krishna is seen in Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.9-10 (quoted in Text 20). How much more is it seen in the description of Shrimad-Bhavagatam 10.65.11 (quoted in Text 24)? This is not like the first stirrings of love. The gopis gave up their mothers, children, brothers and relatives for Lord Krishna's sake.

Sometimes the gopis manifested symptoms of transcendental insanity because of their intense love for Krishna and their separation from Him. For example (Shrimad-Bhavagatam 10.65.9 quoted in Text 23), when the gopis, aggrieved at their separation from Lord Krishna, inquired about Krishna from Lord Balarama, they laughed (gopyo hasantyah) as they spoke. Such distressed and inappropriate laughter is a symptom of insanity. Another example of transcendental insanity is seen when Shrimati Radharani addressed the bumble-bee, taking it to be a messenger of Krishna (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.11, quoted in Text 21).

The gopis' abandonment of their mothers and other relatives may also be taken as another symptom of their transcendental insanity (Shrimad-Bhavagatam 10.65.11, quoted in Text 24). In this way numberless gopis were unable to conceal their ecstatic love for Lord Krishna, and they often manifested the symptoms of transcendental insanity.

Because of the great suffering of separation from Krishna, the residents of Vrindavana became insane. In this condition they tried for some time to conceal their ecstatic love for Lord Krishna, and everyone in Vrindavana, impelled by this transcendental insanity, forgot about the marriages of Lord Krishna and the gopis. Imagining the gopis to be the wives of others, the maddened inhabitants of Vrindavana considered the love of Krishna and the gopis to be the relationship of a paramour with the wives of others. When the exalted devotees expert in understanding the mellows of devotional service carefully studied the entire situation in Vrindavana, they came to this conclusion. They were perfectly convinced that the dealings of Lord Krishna with the gopis did not in any way violate the principles of morality.

adharmamayatva-impiety; pratitau-in the belief; tu-but; ashliataya-with vulgarity; vyahanyate-is destroyed; eva- certainly; rasah-the mellow of devotional service; adharmamayatvam-impiety; ca-also; dvi-vidha-of two kinds; parakiyatvena-as adultery; para-sparshena-as illicit sex; ca-also; tasmad-therefore; yatha-as; aishvarya-of opulence; jnana-knowledge; mayyam-consisting of; shri-parikshit-of Maharaja Parikshit; sabhayam-in the assembly; aishvarya-of opulence; j{.sy 241}ana-ritya-with knowledge; eva- certainly; tat- that; parihritya-abandoning; rasa-avahatvam-with the mellows of devotional service; samahitam-composed; tatha-in the same way; lokavat-like those of an ordinary human being; lila- pastimes; kaivalya-in transcendence; avalambane-in the situation; prema-mayyam-consisting of pure love for Lord Krishna; shri-gokula-of Gokula; sabhayam-in the assembly; loka-ritya-appearing like that of the material world; samadheyam-may be considered.

Sexual immorality is of two kinds: parakiya and para-sparsha. The idea that Lord Krishna's dealings with the gopis are on the level of these sinful activities completely destroys the proper understanding of the mellows of devotional service. This misconception was carefully refuted by Shukadeva Gosvami (Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.33.29-36) in His explanation of the rasa-dance to Maharaja Parikshit. Shrila Shukadeva Gosvami presented to Maharaja Parikshit various arguments that could be appreciated by him and His associates, who were all aware of Lord Krishna's transcendental opulence. Although Shukadeva Gosvami's explanations were presented in terms of Lord Krishna's opulent feature (aishvarya), which is most prominently manifested in Dvaraka-dhama, these arguments apply very well to Lord Krishna's pastimes in Vrindavana, which appear like those of an ordinary person, but are actually beyond the limitations of the material world.

We may note in this connection that the cowerd men were unaware that their wives had gone to dance with Lord Krishna. This is confirmed in the following statement of Shrila Shukadeva Gosvami (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.33.37):

"The so-called husbands of the gopis felt no enmity towards Lord Krishna. Enamoured by the influence of the external energy of Krishna, they thought that their wives were sleeping by their sides. They could not understand that they had gone to dance with Krishna."*

This verse says that the cowherdmen did not blame Lord Krishna for performing the rasa-dance with the gopis. They thought: "Lord Krishna is more dear to us than our homes, land, wealth, friends, wives, children, or even our own life-breath. If He dances with the wives of others, that inauspicious action becomes supremely pure and auspicious because it is performed by Him. Therefore there is no reason to criticise Him in any way." This verse also states that the cowherd men, bewildered by the Lord's maya were unaware that their wives had gone to dance with Lord Krishna. The gopis went to Lord Krishna in their original spiritual forms, and by Lord Krishna's potency, illusory material forms that resembled the gopis' forms were left at the homes of the cowherd men, who took these forms to be their wives. In this way the cowherd men were unaware that their wives had gone to dance with Krishna. They thought their wives were sleeping by their sides.

In order to protect the gopis' morality, the Lord's supremely expert yogamaya potency arranged that the gopis, who are full of pure love for Lord Krishna, and most dear to Him, would marry Lord Krishna, whom they always consider to be their real husband. When associating with Lord Krishna, the gopis assume their original spiritual forms, and again, when associating with their so-called cowherd husbands, they manifest another, illusory form, different from their original spiritual forms. All this is performed by the agency of the Lord's yogamaya potency in order to preserve the moral conduct of the gopis and free them from a situation that would distress them.

In many places of Shrimad-Bhagavatam the original spiritual forms of the gopis are described. For example, the description of the gopis feelings of separation from Lord Krishna (Shrimad-Bhagavatam Canto 10 Chapter 35), is spoken by the gopis in their original feature, and the account of the rasa-dance (beginning with Shrimad-Bhagavatam Canto 10, Chapter 29) describes the gopis in their original forms.

When the gopis wanted to join Lord Krishna in the rasa-dance, their superiors and so-called husbands tried to check them. However, because the gopis are pure devotees of Krishna, they cannot be restrained in their attempt to meet Him. This is described in Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.8.18):

"Demons [asuras] cannot harm the demigods, who always have Lord Vishnu on their side. Similarly, any person or group attached to Krishna is extremely fortunate. Because such persons are very much affectionate towards Krishna, they cannot be defeated by demons like the associates of Kamsa [or by the internal enemies, the senses]."*

That the gopis were beyond the control of their so-called husbands, also demonstrates that the gopis did not really have any husband other than Krishna.

In Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.29.19) we find mention of the gopis' children. This should be assumed to refer to the yonger children of the gopis' mothers, or to the children of the other elderly gopis. The idea that the word "apatya" here refers to the gopis' own children is a vulgar idea. This idea is an inappropriate mixing of rasas (rasabhasa).

Shrila Shukadeva Gosvami explains (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.32.26):

"Simply by hearing about Lord Krishna's transcendental pastimes, one becomes attached to the Lord."

If the gopis had children by others, that would be an unpleasant and vulgar situation, and it would make the Lord's pastimes not at all pleasing and attractive. Because Lord Krishna's pastimes are always attractive, therefore, it must be understood that the gopis did not have children.

The idea that the gopis had husbands other than Krishna, and children also, is vulgar and incorrect. This is confirmed by Shrila Shukadeva Gosvami (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.33.25):

"While strolling on the bank of the Yamuna, Krishna recited various kinds of poetry. He thus enjoyed the company of the gopis in the soothing moonlight of autumn."*

That the children mentioned in this connection were not the gopis' own children, but the children of others, is also confirmed in the following statement of Shrimad-Bhagavatam: {sy 168}The gopis were feeding the children milk." We may note that this passage does not specify "their own" children, and does not say that the gopis were feeding the children milk from their breasts. From this we may conclude that these were not the gopis' own children.

When Lord Krishna was about to perform the rasa-dance, He joked with the gopis, saying (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.19):

"My dear friends, I can understand that you have left your homes without permission of your gaurdians; therefore I think your mothers, your fathers, your elderly brothers or even your sons, and what to speak of your husbands, must be very anxious to find you."*

This description of the gopis' husbands and sons should be taken as a joking fabrication invented by Krishna. This view may be easily accepted by studying the nature of these joking words spoken by the Lord. Accepted as joking words, this statement is perfectly compatible with the mellows of devotional service. If these words, however, are taken to be literally true, they are a vulgar expression of that which is incompatible with the mellows of devotional service. Therefore, in this instance the literal interpretation should be abandoned.

In some circumstances there may be reference to the gopis' {sy 168}husbands". These references are only according to the understanding of ordinary people. In truth, the gopis had no real husband except for Krishna. The description of the gopis' husbands found in Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.29 and other places should be understood in that way.

The gopis always thought of Lord Krishna as their husband. this is described by Lord Krishna Himself in the following statement to Uddhava (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.46.4):

"The gopis always meditate upon Me as their dearest husband."

The gopis themselves describe Lord Krishna as their only husband (Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.21.9):

"My dear gopis, what auspicious activities must the flute have performed to enjoy the nectar of Krishna's lips independently and leave only a taste for the gopis for whom that nectar is actually meant. The forefathers of the flute, the bamboo trees, shed tears of pleasure. His mother, the river, on whose bank the bamboo was born, feels jubilation, and therefore her blooming lotus flowers are standing like hair on her body."*

From these descriptions of Shrimad-Bhagavatam we may understand that Lord Krishna was the real husband of the gopis. The cowherd men who appeared to be the gopis' husbands according to external vision were illusory presentations fashioned by the Lord's yogamaya potency. Understood in this way, the statement of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.33.37, quoted in Text 31):

"The gopis' husbands harbored no ill feelings toward Lord Krishna."

does not at all contradict the statement that Lord Krishna was the only real husband of the gopis.

Shrimad-Bhagavatam also explains:

"The gopis had taken shelter of the Lord's internal potency known as yogamaya."

In order to facilitate the Lord's pastimes with His devotees, the yogamaya potency manifested the gopis in two differnt ways. By the agency of yogamaya, the gopis appeared in their original spiritual forms and associated with Lord Krishna. In these original forms Lord Krishna was their only husband. Then again, illusory representations of the gopis were also manifested in Gokula, and these illusory forms became the wives of the various cowherd men. In this way, when the gopis went to join Lord Krishna in the rasa-dance, they went in their original spiritual forms, whereas the illusory forms manifested by yogamaya remained with their various gopa-husbands. In this way, in their original forms, the gopis obtained Lord Krishna as their only husband (svarupena mam eva ramanam praptah).

These illusory representations of the gopis were expansions of their names and shadow reflections of their forms. Just as the reflection of a fruit cannot be tasted, however, these reflections of the gopis were not actually the wives of the cowherd men. The entire relationship was illusory. The gopis were actually the wives of Lord Krishna. The gopis' mothers, fathers, friends, and relatives desired that that Lord Krishna would become the gopis' husband, and the Lord fulfilled their desire.

Lord Krishna's prakaöa (visible to the conditioned souls) and aprakaöa (invisible to the conditioned souls) pastimes, which have already been discussed in these pages, were also described in Shrimad-Bhagavatam (11.12.16), in the following question by Shri Uddhava and the answer given by Lord Krishna:

In this verse the words "tava vacam shrinvatah" mean "hearing these words". "Atma-sthah samshayah" means "my inability to understand what You have said in the last three chapters has not gone away". Why? "Because my mind is bewildered by Your statement (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 11.12.10):

When Akrura took Balarama and Me to Mathura, the gopis, their hearts full of love for Me, were tormented by separation from Me and could see no happiness apart from Me.

How is it that they always have Your association? It seems that they do not have Your association."

"My dear Uddhava, I am the life of all living entities, and I am especially the life of the residents of Vraja. Although I appear in both prakāṣa and aprakāṣa forms, I am now present in Vrindavana in My aprakāṣa form, along with my friends, the cowherd men, boys, and gopis. Although present in My aprakāṣa transcendental form, endowed with transcendental senses, I am generally invisible to the conditioned souls, although they may perceive Me with their minds, by meditating upon Me with devotion."

In this verse the words "sa eṣa jīvaḥ" mean {sy 168}I, who am the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the life of all universes, and specifically the life of the residents of Vraja." The words "pranena goṣheṇa" mean "with the residents of Vraja, who are more dear to Me than life." The words "vivara-prasūtiḥ" mean "I, who appear in manifest (prakāṣa) and unmanifest (aprakāṣa) pastimes", and the words {sy 168}guham pravīṣṭhah mean "I am now appearing in Vraja in my unmanifest (aprakāṣa) feature, invisible to the eyes of the conditioned souls."

Lord Krishna explains His prakāśa appearance and pastimes by giving the following example (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 11.12.18):

"When firewood is rubbed together, heat is produced by contact with air, and by vigorously rubbing the sticks, a spark of fire appears. Once the fire is kindled, ghee is added and the fire blazes. Similarly, I become manifest in this world in My prakāśa pastimes."

In this verse an example is given to explain the Lord's birth-pastimes within this material world. This same example was also given by Shri Uddhava in the following words (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 3.2.15):

"The Personality of Godhead, the all-compassionate controller of both the spiritual and material creations, is unborn, but when there is friction between His peaceful devotees and persons who are in the material modes of nature, He takes birth just like fire, accompanied by the mahat-tattva."*

One who understands the confidential truth about Lord Krishna's descent to this material world can properly understand the meaning of this example (iyam vani).

Some readers may doubt that the words "iyam vani" mean "this explanation may be given". They may say that the words actually mean "The Supreme Personality of Godhead appears in the form of the Vedas". This interpretation cannot be accepted, however, because a few verses after this (11.12.27), in the verse beginning "evam gadih", Lord Krishna uses the word "gadhi" (synonymous with {sy 168}vani") to mean "speech". The two words should be accepted to mean the same thing (speech). They do not mean {sy 168}the Vedas" in this context. This explanation is corroborated by the comments of Shrila Shridhara Svami.

At this point someone may object, saying that although Lord Krishna's return to Vrajabhumi is clearly described in the Uttara-khanda of the Padma Purana, it is only hinted at in the Shrimad-Bhagavatam. The reason this is not openly described in Shrimad-Bhagavatam is that Shukadeva Gosvami wanted to conceal this confidential pastime from the understanding of the ordinary conditioned souls, and at the same time describe it to the intimate devotees of the Lord. In order to fulfill both purposes Shukadeva Gosvami described this pastime in an indirect way, so that the intimate devotees could understand it and others would not understand it. This method of speaking is described by Lord Krishna Himself in the following words of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (11.21.35):

"The explanation of the Vedas and the great sages are very obscure and are not easily understood. This is not accidental, but deliberate, for in this way I am not exposed to the materialists. Only the pure-hearted devotees can understand the truth about Me by reading the Vedas or hearing the descriptions of the sages."

At a certain point in Lord Krishna's pastimes, He became no longer present to the eyes of the conditioned souls in Vrindavana and Dvaraka. At that time He remained in those two holy places in His aprakaōa (unmanifest) form, and there was no longer any distinction between prakaōa and aprakaōa.

Because the members of the Yadu dynasty are the Lord's eternal associates, they also remained in Dvaraka with the Lord, although all of them were invisible to the eyes of ordinary living entities. The fratricidal war that destroyed the Yadu dynasty and the other activities culminating in the Lord's departure from the earth planet are the play of the Lord's illusory potency, and the reality of all these activities is different from what first seems to be. Lord Krishna considered that after His departure from the earth the members of the Yadu dynasty would be afflicted by separation from Him and in a maddened condition would destroy the earth. In order to prevent this, Lord Krishna arranged that the Yadu dynasty would leave the earth before His own departure.

The reason for the destruction of the Yadu dynasty is given in Shrimad-Bhagavatam (11.1.3):

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead used the Yadu dynasty, which was protected by His own arms, to eliminate the kings who with their armies had been the burden of this earth. Then the unfathomable Lord thought to Himself, 'Although some may say that the earth's burden is now gone, in My opinion it is not yet gone, because there still remains the Yadava dynasty itself, whose strength is unbearable for the earth.'*

It should not be thought that the earth was overburdened by the impiety of the Yadu dynasty. That the Yadu dynasty was supremely pious, and that the earth was not burdened by the Yadu's impiety is confirmed in the following verses of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (11.1.8. and 10.90.46):

"King Parikshit inquired: How could the brahmanas curse the Vrishnis, who were always respectful to the brahmanas, charitable, and inclined to serve senior and exalted personalities and whose minds were always fully absorbed in thought of Lord Krishna?"

The earth continually carries many great mountains, oceans, and limitless other things without feeling overburdened. Therefore we cannot properly say that the earth became overburdened merely by the increase of a kshatriya dynasty. Clearly Lord Krishna had certain reasons from removing the Yadu dynasty from the earth, and the mere number of Yadavas was burdening the earth was certainly not one of them.

Lord Krishna thought: "It is not proper that the illusory activities of the destruction of the Yadavas by fratricidal war occur in the holy place of Dvaraka, which delights My pure devotees, and which is like a great ocean of My transcendental pastimes. I shall therefore lead the Yadavas to Prabhasa-kshetra, and these illusory activities may occur there." For this reason Lord Krishna spoke the following words to the elder members of the Yadu dynasty (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 11.7.5.):

"My dear respected elders, we must not remain any longer in this place if we wish to keep our lives intact. Let us go this very day to the most pious place Prabhasa. We have no time to delay."

Lord Krishna spoke the following words to convince the Yadavas to leave Dvaraka and go to Prabhasa-kshetra, where the fratricidal war and destruction of the Yadu dynasty could take place (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 11.6.34-38):

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead said: Our dynasty has been cursed by the brahmanas. Such a curse is impossible to counteract, and thus great disturbances are appearing everywhere around us.

"Once the moon was afflicted with consumption because of the curse of Daksha, but just by taking bath at Prabhasa-kshetra, the moon was immediately freed from his sinful reaction and again resumed the waxing of his phases.

"By bathing at Prabhasa-kshetra, by offering sacrifice there to placate the forefathers and demigods, by feeding the worshipable brahmanas with various delicious foodstuffs and bestowing opulent gifts upon them as the most suitable candidates for charity, we will certainly cross over these terrible dangers through acts of charity, just as one can cross over a great ocean in a suitable boat."

To the eyes of the conditioned souls, it seemed that Lord Hari had abandoned Dvaraka, although actually He had not, for it is said that He never leaves Dvaraka (nityam sannihitas tatra). All the Lord's associates that had not descended with Him from the spiritual world were then sent by the Lord to Hastinapura, and by Lord Krishna's order, the water of the ocean, which had surrounded Dvaraka like a great moat, rose and flooded the city, covering all the palaces and other buildings of Dvaraka.

tatha-in the same way; racanam-construction; vishvakarmana-by Vishvakarna; tasya-of that; eva-certainly; prakaöa-lilayah-of the manifest pastimes; prapancika-with the material energy; mishratvat-because of being mixed; atah-therefore; sudharma-adinam-of the Sudharma assembly-house and other gifts; svargat-from the heavenly planets; agamanam-return; ca-also; yujyate-occurs; aprakaöa-lilayam-in the unmanifest pastimes; tatah-than them; api- even; divyataram-more splendid; sabha-antara-adikam-assembly houses and other paraphernalia; api-even; syat-is.

Although identical with the Dvaraka in the spiritual world, the earthly Dvaraka manifest during Lord Krishna's prakāśa pastimes became unmanifested after His departure. The parts of Dvaraka that had been specially created by Vishvakarma for the Lord's manifest pastimes, and were therefore somewhat tinted with matter, and those parts of Dvaraka that were gifts from the demigods, such as the Sudharma assembly-house, were returned to their original places in the upper material planets, where the demigods reside. The Dvaraka of Lord Krishna's aprakāśa pastimes in the spiritual world is equipped with assembly houses and other paraphernalia far more opulent and dazzling than the Suddharma assembly house of the demigods.

shrīman-the word "shrīmat"; yadava-of the Yadavas; adi- and the other residents of Dvaraka; griha-of palaces; vrinda- multitude; lakṣhaṇa-characterized by; shibha-upasobhavan-full of variegated beauty and opulence; yah-which; bhagavat-of the Supreme Personality of Godhead; alayah-abode; tam-that; varjayitva-having abandoned; tat-that; evam-in the same way; adya-today; api-even; samudra-of the ocean; madhye-in the middle; kadacid-sometimes; asau-this; durataḥ-from a distance; ki{.sy 241}cit-somewhat; drishyate-is seen; iti-thus; tatratyanam-of the local residents; mahati-great; prasiddhiḥ-fame.

In these verses the word "shrīmat" describes Dvaraka as full of all beauty and opulence because of the grand palaces of the Yadavas and other residents of the city. After Lord Krishna had abandoned Dvaraka, it was flooded by the ocean, and even today some ruins of what was once Dvaraka may be seen in the middle of the ocean. These remains of Dvaraka are famous among the people who live nearby.

atra-in this verse; maha-raja-iti-the word {sy 168}maharaja"; sambodhanam-in the vocative -case; drishṭānta-garbham-an example; yat va-or; mahantah-great; rajanah-kings; yadava-lakṣhaṇah-meaning the Yadu dynasty; yatra-where; tatha-bhutam-in that way; tat-that; alayam-place; śrī-kṛṣṇa- of Lord Krishna; nitya-eternal; dhama-abode; svarupam-the original form; dvaraka-of Dvaraka; puram-the city.

In this verse the (Shrīmad-Bhagavatam 11.31.23, quoted in Text 12) the word "maharaja" may be understood to be in the vocative-case. In this way it is used to address King Parikṣit "O great king." The word {sy 168}maharaja" may also be taken as part of a compound word {sy 168}maharaja-shrīmad-bhagavad-alayam" which would then mean {sy 168}Dvaraka, the eternal abode of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, which is full of all opulences and the residence of the great Yadava kings."

It is not only that the city of Dvaraka still remains on this earth, but Lord Krishna also remains there accompanied by the members of the Yadu dynasty. This is confirmed by the phrase (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 11.31.24, quoted in Text 13):

nityam sannihitas tatra
bhagavan madhusudanah

"Lord Krishna stays eternally in Dvaraka."

The word "bhagavan" here means "accompanied by all the opulences of the Yadu dynasty and the other residents of Dvaraka."

In these verses the abode of Dvaraka is glorified in the following words:

"Remembrance of the holy abode of Dvaraka brings all auspiciousness, and drives away everything that is inauspicious."

The use of the word "smritya" (by remembrance) in this verse indicates that the abode of Dvaraka is not directly visible at the present time. This is true for Dvaraka in general, although the principal palace of Lord Krishna is a notable exception to this. Lord Krishna's principal palace is directly manifest even today. This is described in the following verses of Vishnu Purana (5.9-11):

The relationship between Lord Krishna's prakaöa and aprakaöa pastimes is described in the following statement of Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda:

"When the Lord's prakaöa (manifest) pastimes are concluded, then the Lord enjoys aprakaöa (invisible to the conditioned souls) pastimes, which are eternal, and never end."

The Lord remains within the material world for a certain time, performs His astonishing prakaöa pastimes, where sometimes the devotees have the opportunity to associate with Him, and sometimes again they become separated from Him. When the prakaöa pastimes are completed, the Lord remains in His aprakaöa pastimes.

At that time they think: "Lord Krishna is the Supreme Personality of Godhead. He is our supreme master and the only goal of our lives. The Yadavas think: "Lord Krishna is the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and He is our greatest friend and relative. His transcendental activities plunge us in transcendental bliss. Although the Yadavas and other residents of Mathura and Dvaraka think of Lord Krishna as the dearest friend and relative, their love for Him is mixed with the knowledge that He is the Supreme, all-powerful, and all-opulent Personality of Godhead. The residents of Vraja, however, are unaware that Lord Krishna is the Personality of Godhead. They consider Him their master, friend, son, or lover, and they love Him with undivided pure devotion. When the Lord's prakāśa pastimes are concluded, and there is no longer any distinction between prakāśa and aprakāśa pastimes, the residents of Vraja think:

The Shrimad-Bhagavatam is like a wish-fulfilling kamadhenu cow in that it gives a great variety of information in every verse. There are thus many different explanations of each verse. For example, the following verse (10.90.48) may be understood to be spoken by the jubilant residents of Vrindavana, when Krishna returned there from Dvaraka:

The following verse (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.90.48) manifested from Shrila Shukadeva Gosvami's mouth may be interpreted as words of joy spoken by the residents of Vraja when Krishna had just arrived from Dvaraka:

"Lord Shri Krishna is He who is known as jana-nivasa, the ultimate resort of all living entities, and who is also known as Devaki-nandana or Yashoda-nandana, the son of Devaki and Yashoda. He is the guide of the Yadu dynasty, and with His mighty arms He kills everything inauspicious as well as every man who is impious. By His presence He destroys all things inauspicious for all living entities, moving and inert. His blissful smiling face always increases the lusty desires of the gopis of Vrindavana. May He be all glorious and happy!"*

Because it is a wise kamadhenu cow, Shrimad-Bhagavatam easily gives a wonderful variety of meanings.

In this verse the word "jayati" means "is very glorious". The residents of Vrindavana glorify Lord Krishna, saying that His fame is spread all over the land of Vrindavana, and He is millions of times more dear to them than their own lives.

The word "jayati" also means "conquers". In this sense the word means that Lord Krishna dispels the sufferings the residents of Vrindavana, including the gopas, gopis, cows, and even the inanimate plants and trees, felt because of separation from Him. In this way the intense ecstatic love of Krishna experienced by the residents of Vrindavana, including even the plants and trees, is described in this verse.

The residents of Vrindavana may be challenged in the following way: Lord Krishna is known as the son of Devaki, and therefore He is the associate of Devaki and the Yadavas. How can you claim that He is your intimate associate?

To this objection the residents of Vrindavana have replied with the word "jana-nivasa". "Jana" here means "with His own people" and "nivasa" means {sy 168}residence". (The residents of Vraja may say:) Lord Krishna resides with us, and He is our supreme shelter. Because He stays with us, He is our intimate friend.

Here someone may protest that Lord Krishna is known as "Vasudeva", the son of Maharaja Vasudeva, and therefore Lord Krishna's relationship with Maharaja Vasudeva and the Yadavas is prominent, and not His relationship with the cowherd residents of Vrindavana. Even if Gargamuni may describe Lord Krishna as Vasudeva (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.8.14), and may explain that He is the son of Maharaja Vasudeva, we understand the word Vasudeva as a name of Lord Krishna to mean {sy 168}He who enjoys transcendental pastimes". The question may be raised: If Lord Krishna is actually the son of Yashoda and Nanda Maharaja, why did He first appear as the son of Devaki?

The answer to this question is: Lord Krishna appeared as the son of Devaki so He could associate with His dear devotees, the members of the Yadu dynasty (yadu-varah parishat). The Lord's associates all took birth with Him, and with the aid of Arjuna and other associates (svair dorbhih), the Lord destroyed the demons (asyann adharmam).

That the residents of Vrindavana are the actual intimate relatives of Shri Krishns is confirmed by the following statement of Lord Krishna to Nanda Maharaja, spoken shortly after the killing of Kamsa (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.45.23):

"My dear father and mother, although I was born of Vasudeva, and Devaki, you have been Our real father and mother, because from Our very birth and childhood, you raised Us with great love and affection. Your affectionate love for Us was more than anyone can offer one's own children. You are actually Our father and mother, because you raised Us as your own children at a time when We were just like orphans. For certain reasons We were rejected by Our father and mother, and you protected Us. My dear father and mother, I know you will be feeling separation by returning to Vrindavana and leaving Us here, but please rest assured that I shall be coming back to Vrindavana just after giving some satisfaction to My real father and mother, Vasudeva and Devaki, My grandfather, and other relatives and family members."*

Always experiencing the topmost transcendental bliss, the residents of Vrindavana are unaware of the passing of time. This is confirmed in the following statement of Brahma-samhita (5.8): "There is no time in the spiritual world." The residents of Goloka Vrindavana, therefore are always maddened with transcendental bliss, thinking at every moment: "Lord Krishna has just returned to Vrindavana".

Actually there is no difference between the Lord's manifest and unmanifest pastimes. The Lord's ever-fresh pastimes are eternally performed, without any beginning in time. In order to display those pastimes within the material world, the Lord descends to this world again and again. When the Lord's pastimes are revealed to the material world, they are known as prakaöa (manifest), and when the Lord does not choose to visit this world, but remains in His spiritual abode, the Lord continues to enjoy pastimes, but they are known as aprakaöa (unmanifest).

We have proven that Shri Krishna is the Original Supreme Personality of Godhead and the most excellent manifestation of His transcendental form is displayed in Vrindavana. His transcendental glories may be divided into four broad categories: 1. opulence, 2. mercy, 3. sweetness, and 4. transcendental pastimes. An example of the display of His transcendental opulence may be seen in His revelation of millions of eternal, changeless, omniscient, and unlimitedly blissful Vishnu forms to Lord Brahma (In the pastime of Brahma-vimohana), and an example of His mercy may be seen in His granting the position of His own mother to the demoness Putana.

The Lord's sweetness is described in the following prayer of the queens at Dvārakā (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam 10.83.43):

"We simply desire the dust which accumulates underneath the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa as He travels on the land of Vrīndāvana as a cowherd boy. The gopīs especially, and also the cowherd men and the aborigine tribeswomen always desire to become the grass and straw on the street in Vrīndāvana to be trampled on by the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa. My dear Queen, we wish to remain as such life after life, without any other desire."*

"Although Krishna was so pleased with Vasudeva and Devaki that He descended as their son, they could not enjoy Krishna's magnanimous childhood pastimes, which are so great that simply chanting about them vanquishes the contamination of the material world. Nanda Maharaja and Yashoda, however, enjoyed these pastimes fully, and therefore their position is always better than that of Vasudeva and Devaki."*

The exalted position of Lord Krishna's personal associates is also described in the following verse (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.14.32):

"How greatly fortunate are Nanda Maharaja, the cowherd men and all the inhabitants of Vrajabhumi! There is no limit to their fortune because the Absolute Truth, the source of transcendental bliss, the eternal Supreme Brahman, has become their friend."*

The Lord's associates are also glorified in the following verse (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.12.11):

"In this way, all the cowherd boys used to play with Krishna, who is the source of the Brahman effulgence for jnanis desiring to merge into that effulgence, who is the Supreme Personality of Godhead for devotess who have accepted eternal servitorship, and who for ordinary persons is but another ordinary child. The cowherd boys, having accumulated the results of pious activities for many lives, were able to associate in this way with the Supreme Personality of Godhead. How can one explain their great fortune?"*

The Lord's associates are also glorified in the following verse (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.58):

"Among all the living entities who have accepted the human form of life, the gopis are superexcellently succesful in their mission. Their thought is thoroughly absorbed in the lotus feet of Krishna. Great sages and saintly persons are also trying to be absorbed in meditation upon the lotus feet of Krishna, who is Mukunda Himself, the giver of liberation, but the gopis, having lovingly accepted the Lord, are automatically accustomed to this habit. Among the gopis, Shrimati Radharani has the greatest love for Krishna. She is indirectly described in the following verse of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.30.24), where the word "aradhitah" hints at Shrimati Radharani's name:

"When the gopis began to talk among themselves, they said: Dear friends, the gopi who has been taken away by Krishna to a secluded place must have worshiped (aradhitah) the Lord more than anyone else."*

In the Bhagavat-sandarbha we have proven that the ultimate feature of the Absolute Truth is the Supreme Personality of Godhead, full of all opulences and known as "bhagavan". In that sandarbha we have also established that the Supreme Lord has two potencies: 1. the transcendental potency known as "lakshmi", which is as worshipable as the Lord Himself, and 2. the material potency, which is the material world, and is known as {sy 168}maya", or illusion. These conclusions are accepted by the pure devotees of the Lord. In this sandarbha (Shri-Krishna-sandarbha) we have demonstrated that the original name of the Supreme Lord (bhagavan) is "Krishna". We shall now proceed to consider what is the name of His transcendental potency (lakshmi).

The Lord's transcendental potency appears as the queens at Dvaraka and Mathura. Although in the Lord's manifest pastimes the queens only appear at Dvaraka, in the unmanifest (aprakaöa) pastimes, they also appear in Mathura. This is confirmed by the Gopala-tapani Upanisad, which describes the presence of Rukmini in Mathura, and thus suggests that the other queens are also present there. That the queens of Lord Krishna are His transcendental potencies is described in the following conversation between Lord Shiva and Gauri (Skanda Purana, Prabhasa-khanda, Gopy-aditya-mahatmya, Chapter 118, verses 4,5,10-16):

 .hee # Shri Krishna-sandarbha
 .heo Volume Six # of Lord Vishnu; ca-also.

In these verses Lord Krishna is also compared to the moon (candra-rupi). The last of the sixteen potencies is at first not named, and only afterwards named, separately from the other potencies. This great potency is called "sampurna" because she possesses the powers of all the other potencies. The phrase {.sy 168}pratipat-tithim arabhya sancaraty ashu candramah" completes the metaphor comparing Lord Krishna to the moon and His potencies to the moon's phases. They who understand this confidential instruction about the Lord's potencies, whose forms are all composed of transcendental knowledge, are known as Vaishnavas, pure devotees of Lord Vishnu (sa jneyo vaishnavo budhaih).

The Lord's three potencies Krura (Cruelty), Bhishani (Fear), and Shoka (Grief) are described in various places in Shrimad-Bhagavatam. For example, Krura (Cruelty) is mentioned in the statement "Lord Krishna appeared like a cruel thunderbolt to Kamsa's wrestlers (10.43.17). The potency Bhishani (Fear) is mentioned in the statement "Lord Krishna appeared like death personified to King Kamsa (10.43.17). The potency Shoka (Grief) is mentioned in the statement "Lord Krishna caused great pain to the demons" (10.43.17).

As the sun manifests its potency in the form of innumerable rays of light that illumine the darkness of night inhabited by owls and other creatures, in the same way the moon manifests its potency in the form of its sixteen phases. By comparing the queens of the Lord to the moon's phases and Lord Krishna to the moon itself, the relationship between the Lord, who is the master of all potencies, and the potencies themselves, which are manifested from His transcendental form, is explained. That the queens at Dvaraka are expansions of the goddess of fortune, Shrimati Lakshmi-devi the internal potency of Lord Krishna, manifested from His transcendental form, is explained in the following statement of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.59.43):

Shrila Shridhara Svami comments on this verse:

"The word `ramabhih' means `with the goddesses of fortune, who are all expansions of Shrimati-Lakshmi-devi'."

The word "nija-kama" means "with His transcendental pleasure potency" and the word "samplutah" means "manifest everywhere".

In this way we may understand that all the queens of Lord Krishna are the internal potencies of the Lord. In the Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda, Shrimati Satyabhama-devi is described as the Lord's bhu-shakti, and in the Hari-vamsha, she is described as both Bhu-shakti and Prema-shakti. In the Skanda Purana, Yamuna-mahatmya, Shrimati Kalindi-devi is described as the Lord's Kripa-shakti.

That Shrimati Rukmini-devi is personally the goddess of fortune, Lakshmi-devi, is confirmed in the following statement of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.54.60):

"All visitors as well as the inhabitants of Dvaraka City became joyful seeing Krishna and Rukmini together. In other words, the Supreme Lord, the maintainer of everyone, and the goddess of fortune were united, and all the people felt extremely jubilant."*

That Shrimati Rukmini-devi is personally the goddess of fortune, Shrimati Lakshmi-devi, and she and Shri Krishna are ideally suited for each other is confirmed in the following verse of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.53.37), where the residents of the city of Vidarbha say among themselves:

"Only princess Rukmini, and no one else, is fit to become the wife of Lord Krishna, and only the faultless Lord Krishna can be the suitable husband of Princess Rukmini."*

That Shrimati Rukmini-devi is directly the goddess of fortune, Lakshmi-devi, is also confirmed in the following verse (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.60.9):

"When we take account of Rukmini's beautiful face, it appears that the curling hair on her head, the beautiful earrings on her ears, her smiling mouth, and her necklace of gold, all combined to shower rains of nectar; and it was definitely proved that Rukmini was none other than the original goddess of fortune, who is always engaged in the service of the lotus feet of Narayana."*

That Shrimati Rukmini-devi is the original form of the goddess of fortune, Lakshmi-devi, just as Lord Krishna is the original form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, is confirmed in the following statement of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.52.16):

"O Maharaja Parikshit, Krishna then married Rukmini, the daughter of King Bhishmaka, ruler of the province known as Vidarbha. Just as Krishna is the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Vasudeva, Rukmini is the supreme goddess of fortune, Maha-Lakshmi."*

We may note that the word "matram" in this verse means "in completeness". This means that Shrimati Rukmini-devi is the original complete form of the goddess of fortune. The goddess of fortune manifested in the Vaikunöha planets and known as Lakshmi-devi is an expansion of Shrimati Rukmini-devi.

Someone may argue that Rukmini-devi is not the original goddess of fortune, and may quote the following statement spoken by Rukmini-devi herself (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.60.34):

"My dear lotus-eyed Lord, Your statement that we are not a fit combination is completely right. It is not possible for me to come to an equal level with You because You are the reservoir of all qualities, the unlimited Supreme Personality of Godhead. How can I be a fit match for You? There is no possibility of comparison with You, who are the master of all greatness, controller of the three qualities, and the object of worship for great demigods like Brahma and Lord Shiva. As far as I am concerned, I am a production of the three modes of material nature. The three modes of material nature are impediments towards the progressive advancement of devotional service. When and where can I be a fit match for You?"*

In this verse Shrimati Rukmini-devi expresses her humbleness by considering herself an insignificant part and parcel of Lord Krishna. The word "guna" here means {sy 168}insignificant", and the word "prakritih" means {sy 168}by nature". Even though she is the supreme goddess of fortune, she nevertheless thinks of herself in this humble way.

"My dear Lord, You are the master of the three worlds. You can fulfill all the desires of Your devotees in this world and the next because You are the Supreme Soul of everyone. I have therefore selected You as my husband, considering You to be the only fit personality. You may throw me in any species of life according to the reaction of my fruitive activities, and I haven't the least concern for this. Shrimati Rukmini's statement in this verse (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.60.34), that she is not at all similar in nature to Lord Krishna should be understood only according to the following interpretation: Shrimati Rukmini said: "O lotus-eyed Lord, You are the Supreme Personality of Godhead, always situated in Your own transcendental opulence and glory (sve mahimny abhiratah), and I am Your own transcendental potency, the personification of Your opulence and glory (guna-prakritih). You are the master of all potencies, and I am Your transcendental potency. Because the potency and the master of potencies are simultaneously one and different, we cannot be thought of as completely different or unrelated. When I say 'What is the comparison between us?' This means that we do not have merely some similarities, as two objects compared in a simile, but we are intimately related and very similar (kva). We are not sufficiently unrelated to invite comparison.

Therefore, O Lord Vishnu, when they who are actually intelligent worship and serve Your lotus feet, they also serve mine, for we are so similar in nature."

When Queen Rukmini says that she is traveling in the material world (shrutibhir bhramantyah), this means that she follows Lord Vishnu when He incarnates in the material world, and she appears as His companion. This is confirmed in the following statement of Vishnu Purana:

"When Lord Vishnu appears as a demigod, the goddess of fortune assumes a form like that of a demigoddess and accompanies Him, and when Lord Vishnu assumes a form like that of a human being, the goddess of fortune also assumes a human-like form to become His companion."

The transcendental position of Shrimati Rukmini devi is also explained in the following verse (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.60.46), where she says:

"My dear lotus-eyed husband, You are self-satisfied. You do not care whether or not I am beautiful or qualified; You are not at all concerned about it. Therefore Your non-attachment for me is not at all astonishing; it is quite natural. You cannot be attached to any woman, however exalted her position and beauty. Whether You are attached to me or not, may my devotion and attention be always engaged at Your lotus feet. The material mode of passion is also Your creation, so when You passionately glance upon me, I accept it as the greatest boon of my life. I am ambitious only for such auspicious moments."*

In this verse the word "asya" means "of the householder status of life", "upatta" means "accepted", and "rajo-'pi-matrah" means "the material mode of passion, which enlivens the conditioned souls". In this verse Shrimati Rukmini-devi is playing the part of an ordinary wife, humbly describing her attachment to Lord Krishna in the vocabulary of conditioned souls.

An explanation of the actual meaning of these words of Queen Rukmini follows: This verse is Rukmini-devi's reply to the following statement previously spoken by Lord Krishna (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.60.20):

"As I have already explained, I am not very much interested in family life or love between husband and wife. By nature, I am not very fond of family life, wife, children, home and opulences. As My devotees are always neglectful of all these worldly possessions, I am also like that. Actually, I am interested in self-realization; that gives Me pleasure, and not this family life."*

In reply to these words, Shrimati Rukmini says (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.60.46, quoted in Text 8):

"O lotus-eyed Lord, You take pleasure in both Yourself and in me (atman mayi ratasya). May my devotion and attention be always engaged at Your lotus feet."

This statement of Shrimati Rukmini-devi is confirmed by Lord Krishna Himself in the following words (Shriad-Bhagavatam 10.53.2):

"My mind is always absorbed in the thought of Rukmini-devi, and sometimes I cannot sleep at night because I am thinking of her."

Lord Krishna may ask: If I am self-satisfied (atma-rata), the Why should I take pleasure in you?

Shrimati Rukmini-devi answers (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.60.46, quoted in text 8):

"O Lord, You are the master of all potencies, and I am one of Your potencies. Because the master of potencies and the potencies themselves are in one sense the same in nature, You therefore do not see any difference between us (anatikta-drishöh). In this way when it is said that You take pleasure only in Yourself, it is to understood that You also take pleasure in me Your potency."

When Queen Rukmini says "when You passionately glance upon me, I accept it as the greatest boon of my life", Lord Krishna's passion should be understood to be not the material emotion experienced by the conditioned souls, but the transcendental eternal love between the Supreme Personality of Godhead and His potency. Also, when Lord Krishna describes His indifference to everything material (udasinah) it should be understood to mean that He is indifferent to everything except Shrimati Rukmini-devi and those persons and things directly in relation with her. This idea is expressed by Queen Rukmini-devi in this verse, and she affirms her strong conviction in this regard. From the proper understanding of all these statements of Shrimad-Bhagavatam we may understand that Shrimati Rukmini-devi is the original Lakshmi, the goddess of fortune.

That the gopis of Vrindavana are also manifestations of the internal potencies of Lord Krishna is confirmed in the following statement of Brahma-samhita (5.48):

"I worship Govinda, the primeval Lord, who resides in His own realm, Goloka, with Radha, who resembles His own spiritual figure and who embodies the ecstatic potency (hladini). Their companions are Her confidantes, who embody extensions of Her bodily form and who are imbued and permeated with ever-blissful spiritual rasa."*

tabhih-the word "tabhih"; shrii-gopibhih-means "with the gopis"; mantre-in this mantra; tat-sabda-of this word; prayogat-according to the usage; kalabhih-the word "kalabhih"; shaktibhih-means "who are parts of His pleasure potency"; nija-rupataya-the word "nija-rupataya"; svarupataya-means "with His own form"; shaktivam-status as potencies of the Lord; purva-previously; ukta-described; utkarshena-with the

In this verse the word "tabhih" means "with the gopis", "kalabhih" means "who are parts of His pleasure potency", and "nija-rupataya" means {sy 168}with His own form. That the gopis of Vrindavana are perfect and complete expansions of the goddess of fortune has been established both in this verse and the previously quoted verses describing their glories.

That the gopis of Vrindavana are all goddesses of fortune is also described in the following verse of Brahma-samhita (5.29):

"I worship Govinda, the primeval Lord, the first progenitor, who is tending the cows, yielding all desires, in abodes built with spiritual gems and surrounded by millions of purpose trees. He is always served with great reverence and affection by hundred and thousands of goddesses of fortune."*

That the gopis are goddesses of fortune is again described in the following verse (Brahma-samhita 5.56):

"The damsels of Vrindavana, the gopis, are super goddesses of fortune. The enjoyer in Vrindavana is the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Krishna. The trees there are all wish-fulfilling trees, and the land is made of

According to the Svayambhuva-agama, the best of the goddesses of fortune are manifestations of the Lord's Shri, Bhu, and Lila potencies. That the gopis of Vrindavana are the most exalted of the goddesses of fortune is also confirmed in the following description of the rasa-dance (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.33.7):

"While Krishna and the gopis danced they displayed extraordinary bodily features. The movements of their legs, their placing their hands on one another, the movements of their eyebrows, their smiling, the movements of their breasts of the gopis and their clothes, their earrings, their cheeks, their hair with flowers-{}as they sang and danced these combined together to appear like clouds, thunder, snow and lightning. Krishna's bodily features appeared just like a group of clouds, their songs were like thunder, the beauty of the gopis appeared to be just like lightning in the sky, and the drops of perspiration visible on their faces appeared like falling snow. In this way both the gopis and Krishna engaged in dancing."*

Someone may object to our description of the gopis as the internal potency of Lord Krishna, and may quote the following verse from Gopala-tapani Upanishad (1.8) to establish their case:

gopijanavidya-kala-prerakah

According to these critics, this passage should be interpreted to mean: "Lord Krishna is the master of the gopis, who are manifestations of the potency of ignorance (avidya)."

This interpretation is not valid, and the proper explanation of this 12-syllable name of Krishna follows: In this word the syllable "a" should be interpreted to mean pure love of Krishna, and therefore, the word should be translated: "Lord Krishna is the master of the gopis, who are the potencies of pure and transcendental love of Godhead". We may note that the word "vidya" (knowledge) is also used in connection with love of Krishna in the Bhagavad-gita (9.2), where the Lord says: "Devotional service to Me is the king of knowledge, and the most secret of all secrets."

The interpretation of our critics (that the word should be divided "gopijana-avidya-kala-prerakah" and that the gopis are manifestations of the Lord's potency of ignorance cannot be accepted, for the gopis are intimate associates of the Lord, who never intimately associate with His potency of ignorance (maha-maya).

The Supreme Personality of Godhead, Lord Krishna, desires to enjoy in the association of the gopis, who are all His internal pleasure potency (hladini-shakti) and are moved by pure love for Him (prema-rasa). This is described in the following statement of Brahma-samhita (5.37):

"I worship Govinda, the primeval Lord, who resides in His own realm, Goloka, with Radha, who resembles His own spiritual figure and who embodies the ecstatic potency [hladini]. Their companions are Her confidantes, who embody extensions of Her bodily form and who are imbued and permeated with ever-blissful spiritual rasa."*

In this verse the word "ananda-cin-maya-rasa-pratibhavitabhih means "full of the mellows of pure love". She expands into many forms, and the blissful Supreme Personality of Godhead, who desires to enjoy Her as a lover, also expands into many forms.

That Lord Krishna desires to enjoy in the association of the gopis is also described in the following verse (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.1):

"When Krishna saw the full moon night of the sharat season, He decorated Himself with various seasonal flowers, especially the mallika flowers, which are very fragrant. He then decided to enjoy transcendental pastimes in the company of the gopis."*

In this verse the word "yogamaya" means "the Lord's personal potency that makes the impossible possible". The word "ashrita" means "by performing many transcendental pastimes He took shelter of yogamaya". In this way the Lord began this pastime. That is the meaning here. This verse is spoken by Shrila Shukadeva Gosvami.

The gopis are all the greatest lovers of Lord Krishna, but among them, the highest degree of pure love for Lord Krishna is contained within Shrimati Radharani. We will discuss this point more elaborately in the Priti-sandarbha. Because Shrimati Radharani possesses such great love for Lord Krishna, all other good qualities and opulences are present within Her also.

This is described in Shrimad-Bhagavatam (5.18.32):

"All the demigods and their exalted qualities, such as religion, knowledge and renunciation, become manifest in the body of one who has developed unalloyed devotion for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Vasudeva."*

Because Shrimati Radharani is full of all powers and opulence on account of her pure devotion to Lord Krishna, it should be understood that she is the original goddess of fortune, personally appearing in the abode of Shri Vrindavana.

Shrimati Radharani is the most important of all the gopis, for among them all she is the queen not only of the forest of Vrindavana, but of the entire area surrounding Vrindavana. This is confirmed in the following statement found in the conversation between Narada and Shaunaka Rishis in the Karttika-mahatmya of the

Padma Purana:

"Being very pleased with Her, Lord Krishna gave Shrimati Radharani sovereignty over the forest of Vrindavana and the entire area surrounding it. In this way She became the queen of Vrindavana."

Shrimati Radharani's sovereignty over Vrindavana is also described in the following verse found in both the Skanda and Matsya Puranas:

"Durga rules over Varaynasi, and Vimala-devi presides over Jagannatha Puri. Rukmini-devi is the queen of Dvaraka, and in the same way, Shrimati Radharani is the queen of Vrindavana forest."

In this verse we may note that the four goddesses described are all potencies of the Lord. That is their common feature. Durga-devi is the Lord's external potency, and Lakshmi, Sita, Rukmini, and Shrimati Radharani are all internal potencies of the Lord and are in a position superior to that of Durga-devi. Sita-devi is described in the Rama-tapani Upanishad, and Rukmini-devi is described in the Gopala-tapani Upanishad. In these scriptures, both goddesses are described as the internal potencies of the Lord. Shrimati Radharani is described as the best of the Lord's internal potencies in the following statement of the Yamala Tantra:

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead, Lord Krishna, always remains in His original two-armed form. He never appears in with four arms. He eternally enjoys pastimes with a certain gopi."

We may note that this verse describes Shrimati Radharani, who eternally enjoys pastimes with Lord Krishna in Vrindavana-dhama. She is the best of the Lord's internal potencies.

That Shrimati Radharani is the best of Lord Krishna's potencies is described in the following verse from the Brihad Gautamiya Tantra spoken by Lord Krishna to Lord Balarama:

"My dear friend, I am the master of the three potencies of material cause (tattva), material effect (sattva), and the transcendental potency above the material nature (paratva). These three potencies are embodied in Shrimati Radharani, who is very dear to Me.

"Requested by Brahma, I appear in this material world millennium after millennium in order to destroy the enemies of the demigods and devotees. I come to this world accompanied by You, and also by Shrimati Radharani."

In the verse quoted in Text 8 the word "satya" means "the potency of material cause", "tattva" means "the potency of material effect", and "para" means "the potency superior to these two". These are the three potencies (tattva-trayam tad aham) mentioned here.

"O my Lord, Shri Krishna, son of Vasudeva, O all-pervading Personality of Godhead, I offer my respectful obeisances unto You. I meditate upon Lord Shri Krishna because He is the Absolute Truth and the primeval cause of all causes of the creation, sustenance and destruction of the manifested universes. He is directly and indirectly conscious of all manifestations, and He is independent because there is no other cause beyond Him. It is He only who first imparted the Vedic knowledge unto the heart of Brahmaji, the original living being. By Him even the great sages and demigods are placed into illusion, as one is bewildered by the illusory representations of water seen in fire, or land seen on water. Only because of Him do the material universes, temporarily manifested by the reactions of the three modes of nature, appear factual, although they are unreal. I therefore meditate upon Him, Lord Shri Krishna, who is eternally existent in the transcendental abode, which is forever free from the illusory representation of the material world. I meditate upon Him, for He is the Absolute Truth."*

In this verse the word "yatah" means "from whom", "adyasya" means "the mellow of madhurya-rasa", and "janma" means "manifestation". The meaning is that They are the transcendental abode of the science of madhurya-rasa. Next the great sweetness of Their wonderful pastimes is described in the words "artheshu", which means "in many pastimes" and "abhijnah", which means "expert". The word "svaraö" means {sy 168}in Her company He shines (raj) with great splendor".

Thinking "by Their mercy I shall completely describe the wonderful divine couple", he (Vedavyasa) then spoke the next part of this verse. "Adi-kavaye" here means "to me, Vedavyasa, who am now beginning the description of Their pastimes". "Hrida" here means "by the gateway of the heart," "brahma" means "the spiritual words that describe Their pastimes", "yah tene" means "who in the beginning revealed this entire purana in my heart." That is the meaning. The revelation of Shrimad-Bhagavatam to Vyasadeva is described in Shrimad-Bhagavatam (1.7.4-6):

"Thus he (Vyasadeva) fixed his mind, perfectly engaging it by linking it in devotional service (bhakti-yoga) without any tinge of materialism, and thus he saw the Absolute Personality of Godhead along with His external energy, which was under full control.*

"Due to this external energy, the living entity, although transcendental to the three modes of material nature, thinks of himself as a material product and thus undergoes the reactions of material miseries.*

"The material miseries of the living entity, which are superfluous to him, can be directly mitigated by the linking process of devotional service. But the mass of people do not know this, and therefore the learned Vyasadeva compiled this Vedic literature, which is in relation to the Supreme Truth."*

The phrase "tejo-vari-mridam yatha vinimayah" also describes the pastimes of Shri Shri Radha-Krishna. These words refer to Lord Krishna's playing His flute, for upon hearing the sound of His flute, all the living entities in Vrindavana become overwhelmed with transcendental bliss, and change their nature. The shining moon and stars (tejah) become dimmed, and they appear like water or earth. The Yamuna river and other bodies of water become stunned and solid as earth or stone, and the earth and stones begin to melt and take part on the properties of water. These astonishing things occur as a result of the wonderful pastimes of Shri Shri Radha-Krishna and Lord Krishna's melodious flute music.

yatra-the word "yatra"; yasyam-means "in whom"; ca-also; vidyamanayam-being so; tridha-in three ways; sargah- manifestation; shri-bhu-lila-iti-Shri, Bhu, and Lila potencies; shakti-potencies; trayi-three; pradurbhavah- manifestation; va-or; dvaraka-Dvaraka; mathura- Mathura; Vrindavanani-and Vrindavana; iti-thus; sthana- places; traya-three; gata-attained; shakti-varga-potencies; traya-three; pradurbhavah-manifestation; va-or; vrindavane-in Vrindavana; eva-certainly; rasa-vyavaharena-with the mellows of transcendental pastimes; suhrit-friends; udasina- neutral parties; pratipaksha-and enemies; nayika-rupa-of gopis; tri-bhedanam-of three divisions; sarvasam-of all; api-also; vraja-devinam-of the gopis of Vraja; eva-certainly; pradurbhavah-manifestation; va-or; mrisha-the word "mrsha"; mithya-means "false"; eva-certainly; yasyah-of her; saundarya-beauty; adi-beginning with; guna- transcendental qualities; sampada-by the opulence; tah tah- they; krishnasya-of Lord Krishna; na-not; kincit-anything; iva-as if; prayojanam-need; arhanti-obtain merit; iti-thus; arthah-the meaning.

The phrase "yatra tri-sargo mrisha" may be interpreted in the following way:

"Yatra" means "in Shrimati Radharani.{.sy 168}Tri-sargah" may be interpreted to mean the Lord three potencies of Shri, Bhu, and Lila-shakti, or it may also be interpreted to mean the Lord's abodes of Dvaraka, Mathura, and Vrindavana, or it may be interpreted to mean the three classes of gopis in Vrindavana: those friendly to Shrimati Radharani, those who are neutral parties, and those who are Shrimati Radharani's rivals. "mrisha" means "irrevelant". All these, the Lord's potencies, abodes, and the gopis of Vrindavana, are all insignificant in comparison to the transcendental opulence, qualities and beauty of Shrimati Radharani. Krishna does not need any of these to satisfy His transcendental desires, for all His desires may be fulfilled by Shrimati Radharani alone.

parama-shakti-shaktimattvenatishayita-maha-bhava-rasena va parasparam abhinnatam gatayor anayor aikyenaiva vivakshitam tad iti. ata eva samanyataya paramarshan napumsakatvam ca.

parama-transcendental; shakti-potency; shaktimattvena-and by the master of potencies; atishayita-great; maha-expanded; bhava-rasena-transcendental love; va-or; parasparam- mutually; abhinnatam-non-difference; gatayoh-attained; anayoh-mutually; aikyena-as one; eva-certainly; vivakshtiam- described; tat-the co-relative pronoun "tat" which is understood in this sentence; iti-thus; atah eva-therefore; samanyataya-in general; paramarshat-upon consideration; napumsakatvam- the neuter gender; ca-also.

We may note that the co-relative pronoun "tat" (in the singular), understood although not directly expressed in this sentence, refers to both Shri Shri Radha and Krishna, and in addition to that is in the neuter gender. Shri Shri Radha-Krishna are described in the singular because They are the supreme potency and the supreme master of all potencies. Because in one sense there is no difference in nature between the potency and master of potencies, They are both described with one pronoun in the singular. Another reason for using a singular word to describe Shri Shri Radha-Krishna is because there is such a great bond of transcendental love between Them, it is as if they are one. They are described by a neuter pronoun because a feminine pronoun would be inappropriate for Lord Krishna and a masculine pronoun would be unsuitable for Shrimati Radharani. For this reason the neuter pronoun "tat" is used, for this can be understood to be the common-gender, both masculine and feminine.

katham-bhutam-how may they be described?; svena dhamna- the words "svena dhamna"; sva-prabhavena-means "with their transcendental potency; sada-always; nirastam-negation by absence; sva-lila-to the pastimes; pratibandhakamam-of the obstacles; jarati-old-age; prabhritinam-of those things beginning with; pratipaksha-nayikanam-of Shrimati Radharani's rival gopis; ca-also; kuhakam-illusion; maya- illusion; yena-by whom; tat-them.

The phrase "dhamna svena sada nirasta-kuhakam" may be interpreted in the following way:

By their power and opulence (dhamna svena), Shri Shri Radha and Krishna remain always (sada) free (nirasta) from the illusions (kuhakam) of the material nature (birth, death, old age, and disease), as well as from the illusory interference offered by Shrimati Radharani's gopi rivals. None of these can offer any obstruction to the pastimes of Shri Shri Radha-Krishna.

The word "satyam" (eternal) in this verse should be understood to mean that Shri Shri Radha-Krishna are eternally situated in the highest perfection. They eternally relish transcendental bliss in Their pastimes, and this condition is never changed.

When a description is used to apply simultaneously to two or more nouns of similar nature, such a literary ornament is called prativastu-upama, and when a series of descriptions are used in this way, it is called mala-prativastu-upama. This verse (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 1.1.1) is an example of such a mala-prativastu-upama, for a series of descriptions intended equally for Radha and Krishna are given here. Shri Shri Radha and Krishna are described here as greater than the greatest, without any equal. They possess similar sublime transcendental qualities, and the flooding rivers of nectar of Their transcendental qualities is the very life of the devotees. Indeed, who would not become delighted by hearing the transcendental pastimes of Their lotus feet?

Those inherent in the words themselves, 5. those understood through the poet's own point of view, and 6. those seen through a character in the poet's composition. These six are then manifested as vastu-umpama or as artha-shakti. In this way there are twelve kinds of upama."

"O Arjuna, I am the Original Supreme Personality of Godhead, accompanied by Shrimati Radharani. There is no original Personality of Godhead other than Me. The Deities worshiped by the demigods in the upper planetary systems are My vishnu-tattva expansions."

"Lord Krishna made Shrimati Radharani close Her eyes in shame before Her friends by His words relating Their amorous activities on the previous night. Then He showed the highest limit of cleverness in drawing pictures of dolphins in various playful sports on Her breasts. In this way Lord Hari made His youth successful by performing pastimes in the bushes with Shri Radha and Her friends."*

In the next book (Shrimad-Bhakti-sandarbha) I shall describe abhidheya (devotional service, or the activities of the relationship between the individual living entities and the Supreme Lord) and in the last book (Priti-sandarbha), I shall describe prayojana (pure love for Krishna, the result of engaging in the activities of devotional service).

That Shri Krishna is the Original Supreme Personality of Godhead, (as the shruti-mantra explains : "Shri Krishna, accompanied by Shrimati Radharani, is the Original Supreme Personality of Godhead") has been explained in this Krishna-sandarbha.

Shri Bhakti-sandarbha

An Essay on Devotional Service

Some Words of Acknowledgement

Shrila Gopala Bhatta Gosvami, the great philosopher from the southern provinces who greatly pleased Shrila Rupa Gosvami and Shrila Sanatana Gosvami, left many valuable notes that defeat various philosophical misconceptions. Systematically arranging these notes, and considering their content, Jiva Gosvami writes this book.

Anuccheda 1

1 By the previous four sandarbhas the relationship (between Krishna and the living entities) was explained. There the form of the Supreme Truth was described as having the characteristics of perfection, eternity, and transcendental bliss, and the Supreme was also described as appearing in three features: Brahman, Paramatma, and Bhagavan. Of these Bhagavan was proved to be the highest. The incarnations headed by Lord Vishnu and other incarnations headed by the four Kumaras were shown to be His avatars. Also, Shri Krishna was proved to be the original form of Bhagavan. Also, in the description of Paramatma, were described the sufferings in the material world of the individual living entities (jivas), who are the Lord's marginal potency, who are spiritual in nature, and who, because of ignorance of the beginningless Supreme Truth and because of the crime of being averse to Him had the knowledge of their original spiritual identity covered by illusion (maya) and were placed in the material world of the modes of goodness, passion and ignorance.

2 The Supreme Personality of Godhead explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.22.34):

"The speculative argument of philosophers - "This world is real," "No, it is not real" - is based upon incomplete knowledge of the Supreme Soul and is simply aimed at understanding material dualities. Although such argument is useless, persons who have turned their attention away from Me, their own true Self, are unable to give it up."

3 For their benefit (the Lord) very mercifully teaches scriptures. Some individual spirit souls who in previous births performed religious ceremonies and became purified in order to directly see the Lord, and other individual spirit souls who attained the mercy of great souls by their glance or in another way, simply by hearing the description of the perfect qualities of the Supreme Truth, see Him face-to-face. This is described in Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.1.2):

"This beautiful Bhagavatam, compiled by the great sage Vyasadeva (in his maturity), is sufficient in itself for God realisation. What is the need of any other scripture? As soon as one attentively and submissively hears the message of Bhagavatam, by this culture of knowledge the Supreme Lord is established within his heart."*

This does not happen with any other teaching. Many other teachings may be heard, but it is the hearing of narrations that begin with the Supreme Truth's pastimes that makes one yearn to taste the nectar of the Lord. Shri Prahlada and other devotees are examples here. Hearing about the Lord gives the seed (to see the Lord face-to-face), and it also destroys the seed of lust and a host of vices.

4 Shri Prahlada explains (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 7.9.39)

"My dear Lord of the Vaikuntha planets, where there is no anxiety, my mind is extremely sinful and lusty, being sometimes so-called happy and sometimes so-called distressed. My mind is full of lamentation and fear, and it always seeks more and more money. Thus it has become most polluted and is never satisfied in topics concerning You. I am therefore most fallen and poor. In such a status of life, how shall I be able to discuss Your activities?"*

By following the example of these words of Shri Prahlada, who thinks Himself very fallen and lowly, many others have also attained the Lord.

5 This is explained in Brahma-vaivarta Purana

"As much as it is polluted with sins, to that extent the heart cannot place its faith in the Vedic scriptures or the bona-fide spiritual master.

6 "By hearing the Vedic scriptures in the association of saintly devotees love for the Lord is manifest. That is the great result of having performed many pious deeds in many previous births."

7 Now that the Supreme Truth has been clearly described according to the direct descriptions (of the Vedic literature), (one may ask:) "What may be said (abhidheya) about (the relationship between the Supreme Truth and the individual spirit souls) and what is the final goal (prayojana) of that (relationship)? These two may be explained according to the indirect descriptions (of the Vedic literature). Because it is the opposite of being averse to the Supreme, that relationship is one of turning one's face of the Lord and it is characterised by service to the Lord. From that service knowledge of the Lord becomes manifested. The final goal is that service is directly seeing the Lord and that is characterised by the Lord's making Himself visible within and without. When that happens one becomes free of all sufferings. Both are explained in an ancient story. Hearing "There is a treasure (hidden) in your house", a poverty stricken man searched for the treasure and eventually found it. These two things are like that. This story is told to dispel weakness (of heart in the devotees). Explaining that being unwilling to be aware of the perfect and beginningless Supreme Truth is the cause of suffering, (the scriptures) teach service to the Lord, which is the medicine to cure the disease (of material life).

8 (This is explained in Shrimad-Bhagavatam 11.2.37):

"When the living entity is attracted by the material energy, which is separate from Krishna, he is overpowered by fear. Because he is separated from the Supreme Personality of Godhead by the material energy, his conception of life is reversed. In other words, instead of being the eternal service of Krishna, he becomes Krishna's competitor. This is called viparyayo smrtih. To nullify this mistake, one who is actually learned and advanced worships the Supreme Personality of Godhead as his spiritual master, worshipful Deity, and source of life. He thus worships the Lord by the process of unalloyed devotional service."*

9 Shridhara Svami comments: "The fear here is created by the Lord's material energy. 'Budhah' means 'an intelligent person', and 'abhajet' means 'should worship'. Fear is created by absorption (abhinivesatah) in material things beginning with the material body. It is created by the false-ego of identifying with the material body and other material things. It is created because the original spiritual form of the living entity is not manifest. Why does the material energy (maya) do this? Because the living entity has turned away from the Supreme Lord (isad apetasya), the material energy makes him forget (asmrtih) and thus his own original spiritual form is no longer manifested. From this comes the misidentification (viparyayah) of thinking 'I am this body'. Thus, from being absorbed in something other than the Supreme Lord (dvitiyabhinivesatah) fear (bhayam) is created. In this way it is proved that fear is created by the material energy (maya). The Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself explains (Bhagavad-gita 7.14):

10 "This divine energy of Mine, consisting of the three modes of material nature, is difficult to overcome. But those who have surrendered unto Me can easily cross beyond it."*

11 "Therefore with unalloyed (ekaya) devotion one should worship the Lord. In the word 'Guru-devatatma' the word 'devata' means 'master', and 'atma' means 'dear most'. In this way the spiritual master should be seen. That is the meaning."

This verse is spoken by Shri Kavi to the king of Videha.

1 Furthermore, Shrimad-Bhagavatam (2.2.6) explains:

"Thus being fixed, one must render service unto the Supersoul situated in one's own heart by His omnipotency. Because He is the Almighty Personality of Godhead, eternal and unlimited, He is the ultimate goal of life, and by worshipping Him one can end the cause of the conditioned state of existence."*

2 Shridhara Svami comments: "What, then, should be done? Lord Hari should be served. Here with word 'evam' (thus) means 'being renounced'. In that way one should serve the Lord (tam bhajeta). The reasons why He should be worshipped follow: 1. He is situated in one's heart by His omnipotency (sva-citte svata eva siddhah). 2. He is the Supersoul (atma), 3. He is very dear (priyah), 4. Devotional service to Him, the dear one, is full of happiness, 5. He is the ultimate reality (arthah), 6. He is not false, as that which is not atma is, 7. He is the Lord, whose transcendental qualities are worshipable (bhagavan), and 8. He is eternal (anantah). Because He is like this, one should worship Him (tam bhajeta).

"Niyatarthah' means 'the ultimate goal of life'. Because by seeing him one becomes full of bliss, He is called 'nirvrtah' (bliss). As a result of performing devotional service, His blissful form is revealed. Furthermore, when (yatra) there is devotional service, then the ignorance that is the cause of the conditioned state of existence (samsara-hetoh) is destroyed (uparamah)."

From the word "ca" here that attainment should be understood. Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami speaks this verse.

1 Although the spiritual activities of jnana-yoga, which begin with hearing and meditation make one favourable towards the Supreme because they give one direct perception of His Brahman feature, and although sankhya-yoga, astanga-yoga, and karma-yoga also, each in its own way, make one also favourable towards the Supreme, and although they do instil, to a certain extent, some devotion for the Lord, karma-yoga by having one follow the Lord's orders and make offerings to the Lord, and jnana-yoga by having one, among other things, become detached from everything but the Lord, and although these kinds of yoga are therefore the friends of devotional service, still the previous verses quoted from Shrimad-Bhagavatam (11.2.37 and 2.2.6) which explain "One should worship the Lord by engaging in devotional service", do not consider them very important. These verses say that one should worship the Lord by directly engaging in devotional service, which has many activities beginning with hearing and chanting of the Lord's glories. This, along with an explanation of the reasons why, is seen in the beginning of Shri Suta Gosvami teachings, found in Shrimad-Bhagavatam beginning with 1.2.6 and ending with 1.2.22. There it is said (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 1.2.6):

2 "The supreme occupation (dharma) for all humanity is that by which men can attain to loving devotional service unto the transcendental Lord. Such devotional service must be unmotivated and uninterrupted to completely satisfy the self."*

3 In the beginning of the great Shrimad-Bhagavatam Purana (1.1.11) the question was asked: "What is the essence of all scriptures? Please explain it." That question is addressed in Shrimad-Bhagavatam 1.2.6 (which was quoted in the previous text). There the word "yatah" means "by that occupation", and "adhoksaje bhaktih" means "attraction for the activities (of devotional service), which begin with hearing narrations about the Lord" because a little later the opposite (of that attraction) will be shown in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.2.8):

"The occupational activities a man performs according to his own position are only so much useless labour if they do not provoke attraction for hearing the message of the Personality of Godhead."*

In Shrimad-Bhagavatam 1.2.6. (quoted in the previous text) the words "sa vai" mean "certainly that". The "that" mentioned here means "the best of all occupational duties, which means that which is done of the satisfaction of the Lord." This is so because it will be said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.2.13):

"It is therefore concluded that the highest perfection one can achieve by discharging the duties prescribed for one's own occupation according to caste divisions and orders of life is to please the Personality of Godhead."*

Because it is not averse to, or apart from the Personality of Godhead, devotional service is not merely renunciation. This is explained by Narada Muni in these words (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 1.5.12):

"Knowledge of self-realisation, even though freed from all material affinity, does not look well if devoid of the conception of the infallible (God). What, then, is the use of fruitive activities, which are naturally painful from the very beginning and transient by nature, if they are not utilised for the devotional service of the Lord?"*

This will be described in Shrimad-Bhagavatam 1.2.13. The meaning is that unalloyed devotional service is the best of spiritual paths. By this verse, therefore, it is said that devotional service is better than the activities of varnasrama-dharma. next he (Suta Gosvami) describes the nature of devotional service. He says that because devotional service is naturally and spontaneously blissful, it is unmotivated (ahaituki), which means it is devoid of the search for any result other than the service itself, and it is uninterrupted (apratihata), which means because it does not find either happiness or distress in anything other than devotional service, therefore it cannot be stopped by anything. When devotional service is characterised by attraction (ruci) to (the Lord), then devotional service in practice (sadhana-bhakti), which begins with hearing (about the Lord), has begun.

1 Shrimad-Bhagavatam (5.18.12) explains:

"All the demigods and their exalted qualities, such as religion, knowledge, and renunciation, become manifest in the body of one who has developed unalloyed devotion for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Vasudeva."*

Therefore knowledge of the Lord's form and qualities naturally brings renunciation of everything else. This is described (in Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.2.7):

2 "By rendering devotional service unto the Personality of Godhead, Shri Krishna, one immediately acquires causeless knowledge and detachment from the world."*

3 This verse means that simply by briefly hearing about Krishna (asu) devotional service creates (janayati) the knowledge revealed in the Upanisads (jnanam), which is beyond the sphere of those methods that begin with dry logic (ahaitukam).

Anuccheda 5

1 The result of the absence of devotional service is described in these words (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 1.2.8):

"The occupational activities a man performs according to his own position are only so much useless labour if they do not provoke attraction for the message of the Personality of Godhead."*

2 If (yadi) one does not please Lord Vasudeva, then there will not be (na utpadayet) attraction (ratim) to the descriptions of the Lord's various transcendental pastimes. Then the only result will be useless labour (sramh). This is said because of the great superiority and supreme importance of attraction to hearing about the Lord. Here also is hinted a description of attraction to devotional service. The word "eva" here means that the fruits of material labour are temporary. The word "hi" here is explained in Chandogya Upanisad (81.16), "The residence in a heavenly material planet that is attained by materially pious work is temporary and will end." The word "kevalam" is defined in Amara-kosa, "Kevalam means conclusion". The conclusion here is that the eternal benefit cannot be attained by either mere pious renunciation or by speculative knowledge. Even when these are perfected they bring only a temporary benefit. This is hinted here by the word "hi" and it is also confirmed by Svetasvatara Upanisad (6.23):

"Only unto those great souls who have implicit faith in both the Lord and the spiritual master are all the imports of Vedic knowledge automatically revealed."*

It is again confirmed in Shrimad-Bhagavatam (1.5.12):

"Knowledge of self-realisation, even though free from all material affinity, does not look well if devoid of a conception of the infallible (God). What, then is the use of fruitive activities, which are naturally painful from the very beginning and transient by nature, if they are not utilised for the devotional service of the Lord."*

It is again confirmed in Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.14.4):

"My dear Lord, devotional service unto You is the only auspicious path. If one gives it up simply for speculative knowledge or the understanding that these living beings are spirit souls and the material world is false, he undergoes a great deal of trouble. He only gains troublesome and inauspicious activities. His endeavours are like beating a husk that is already devoid of rice. One's labour becomes fruitless."*

It is again confirmed in Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.2.32):

"O lotus-eyed Lord, although non-devotees who accept severe austerities and penances to achieve the highest position may think themselves liberated, their intelligence is impure. They fall down from their position of imagined superiority because they have no regard for Your lotus feet."*

3 These two verses show that devotional service does not depend on anything else. Indeed, speculative knowledge and dry renunciation depend on devotional service. Therefore it is the presence of devotional service that makes other spiritual practices successful.

1 Some think the result of performing religious rituals or occupational duties is the attainment of economic development, and the result of economic development is sense gratification, and because one attains sense gratification in this way, one is inclined to perform religious rituals and occupational duties, in that way starting again the cycle of activities beginning with religious rituals and occupational duties. That (the truth) is other than this is explained in the following two verses (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 1.2.9-10):

2 "All occupational engagements are certainly meant for ultimate liberation. They should never be performed for material gain. Furthermore, according to sages, one who is engaged in the ultimate occupational service should never use material gain to cultivate sense gratification."*

3 "Life's desires should never be directed toward sense gratification. One should desire only a healthy life, or self-preservation, since a human being is meant for inquiry about the Absolute Truth. Nothing else should be the goal of one's works."*

4 Liberation is described in Shrimad-Bhagavatam 5.19.19-20:

"If one's position is ascertained by a bona-fide spiritual master and one is properly trained to engage in the service of Lord Vishnu according to the four social divisions (brahmana, ksatriya, vaisya, and sudra) and the four spiritual divisions (brahmacari, grhastha, vanaprastha, and sannyasa), one's life becomes perfect. After many, many births, when the results of one's pious activities mature, one gets an opportunity to associate with pure devotees. Then one is able to cut the knot of bondage to ignorance, which bound him because of varied fruitive activities. As a result of associating with devotees, one gradually renders service to Lord Vasudeva, who is transcendental, free from attachment to the material world, beyond the mind and words, and independent of everything else. That bhakti-yoga, devotional service to Lord Vasudeva, is the real path of liberation."*

According to this prose passage of the Fifth Canto devotional service is the real path of liberation. This is also explained in the following words of the Skanda Purana, Reva-khanda:

5 "O Lord Janardana, unwavering devotional service to You is the same as liberation. O Lord Vishnu, O Lord Hari, Your devotees are already liberated."

6 These passages describe devotional service. Shrila Shridhara Svami comments (on Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.2.9-10 in texts 2 and 3):

"The word 'artha' here means 'for material gain', and 'nopakalpate' means 'is not meant'. Therefore, the regular performance of occupational duties is not (na hi) meant for material gain (kamo labhaya). This is described (smrtah) by the sages who know the truth. The fruits of work are not meant for material pleasures (kamasya indriya-prite labhah). Rather, as long as one lives (yavata jiveta) one should desire (kamasya labhah) only a healthy life, or self-preservation (jivasya). One should not use the performance of occupational duties (karmabhih ya iha) in one's life (jivasya) as a means to attain material goals, such as attaining Svargaloka. Rather, they should be used for inquiry about the Absolute Truth (tattva-jijnasa)."

In this way (Shrila Shridhara Svami) explains that knowledge of the Absolute Truth is only a by-product of devotional service. The main result of devotional service is devotional service itself.

What is the Absolute Truth? That is explained in the following verse (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 1.2.11):

7 "Learned transcendentalists who know the Absolute Truth call this non dual substance Brahman, Paramatma or Bhagavan."*

8 By using the word "advayam", which here means "not divided into parts", and by thus intending that (these three aspects of the Supreme) are not different from each other, the nature of the Lord as the master of potencies is accepted. The potency of the knowledge of oneness, which is beyond the nature of the other potencies, is related to the Brahman feature (brahma sabdya). The material maya potency and the cit potency of transcendental knowledge are related to the Supersoul (paramatma). The best of all perfect potencies is related to the Supreme Personality of Godhead (bhagavan). This has been explained in the previous three sandarbhas.

1 That the three-fold Absolute Truth is directly realised by devotional service is explained in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.2.12):

2 "The seriously inquisitive student or sage, well equipped with knowledge and detachment, realises that Absolute Truth by rendering devotional service in terms of what he has heard from the Vedanta-sruti."*

3 This verse means, "With the great spiritual love (bhaktya) born from attraction to hearing about the Lord, they see (pasyanti) in their pure hearts (atmani) the Absolute Truth (tat), which was described in the previous (quote from Shrimad-bhagavatam)." What is the importance of knowledge (in comparison to this?) They directly see (the Lord). That is the meaning. What is the Lord like? He is described with the word "atmanam", which means "the shelter of the potencies names svarupa (internal), jiva (individual living entities), and maya (material illusion)."

"jnana-vairagya-yuktaya" means 'by devotional service, which is served by the knowledge and renunciation it has itself created.' The sages (munayah), according to their own individual desires, directly see (pasyanti) the Lord.

The words "sruta-grhitaya" (by hearing from the Vedanta-sruti), "munayah" (the sages), and "sraddadhanah" (seriously inquisitive) reveal that devotional service is rare and difficult to attain.

If one hears from a bona fide spiritual master the conclusions of the all Vedic scriptures, which begin with Vedanta sutra, he will understand that one absolutely must render devotional service to the Lord. This is described in the following words (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 2.2.34):

4 "The great personality Brahma, with great attention and concentration of the mind, studied the Vedas three times, and after scrutinizingly examining them, he ascertained that attraction for Supreme Personality of Godhead Shri Krishna is the highest perfection of religion."*

5 If he renounces what is opposed to devotional service, and instead engages in meditation on the Lord and becomes attached to the Lord, then, by worshipping the Lord, a faithful person will attain devotional service. This is confirmed in the Sruti-sastra, which explains (Brhad-aranyaka Upanisad 4.5.6.):

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead should be seen, heard of, meditated on, and worshipped."

Here the word "nididhyasitavyah" means "worshipped". That the Lord should be seen means that He will directly appear before one's vision.

1 By performing one's own occupational duties for the pleasure of Lord Hari, one attains this rare and difficult to attain devotional service. Therefore the ultimate result of performing one's occupational duties is being able to please Lord Hari. This is described in the following words (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 1.2.13):

2 "O best among the twice-born, it is therefore concluded that the highest perfect one can achieve by discharging the duties prescribed for one's own occupation according to caste divisions and orders of life is to please the Personality of Godhead."*

3 The word "svanusthitasya" here means that great efforts to attain insignificant material goals, such as the attainment of Svargaloka, should not be done. That is the meaning.

Anuccheda 9

1 If in this way the performance of occupational duties to please Lord Hari brings as its result devotional service, where one is attracted to the devotional activities that begin with hearing about the Lord, then mere knowledge, renunciation and other similar activities are subordinate to devotional service, and it is devotional service, which begins with hearing about the Lord, that should be performed. What is the use of performing these other (non-devotional) activities? All this is described in the following words (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 1.2.14):

2 "Therefore, with one-pointed attention, one should constantly hear about, glorify, remember and worship the Personality of Godhead, who is the protector of the devotees."*

3 Here "ekena" means "without those activities that begin with fruitive work." Instead one should hear about the Lord's names, qualities, and other features, and one should also glorify them.

Anuccheda 10

1 To describe devotional service, which from its first to its last stage is easy to perform, and which even in its first stage creates attraction for hearing the topics of Lord Hari and is free of the many troubles inherent in fruitive pious work or other activities, Shrimad-Bhagavatam (1.2.15) explains:

2 "With sword in hand, intelligent men cut through the binding knots of reactionary work (karma) by remembering the Personality of Godhead. Therefore, who will not pay attention to His message?"*

3 Here the word "kovidah" means "intelligent", "yuktah" means "with a controlled mind", "anudhya" means "remembering Lord Hari", and "asi" means "sword". With that sword one cuts (chindanti) the knots (granthim) of reactionary word (karma), which are the false ego that binds one in various material bodies. Who (kah) will (kuryat) not (na) pay attention (ratim) to the message (kathayam) of the Lord who thus frees one from great sufferings?

1 "Is it not so that the unfortunate mass of people will not be attracted to hear the Lord's message?" Fearing that someone would raise this objection, in the next five verses (1.2.16-20) (the speaker of Shrimad-Bhagavatam) says that devotional service, even up in its highest stage of unalloyed devotion, is easy to perform. The first of these verses (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 1.2.16) is given here:

2 "O twice-born sages, by serving those devotees who are completely freed from all vice, great service is done. By such service, one gains affinity for hearing the messages of Vasudeva."*

3 Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.87.35 explains:

"Sages free from pride live on this earth by frequenting the sacred pilgrimage sites and those places where the Supreme Lord displayed His pastimes. Because such devotees keep You lotus feet within their hearts, the water that washes their feet destroys all sins. Anyone who even once turns his mind toward You, the ever-blissful soul of all existence, no longer dedicates himself to serving family life at home, which simply robs a man of his good qualities."*

Shrila Shridhara Svami comments on this verse:

"The most important feature of this verse is the description of association with great devotees."

Taking into consideration this verse and comment, the verse quoted in Text 2 (1.2.16) should be understood to mean: "By serving those devotees who are completely freed from all vice (punya-tirtha-nisevanat), great service (mahat-seva) is done. By such service, one gains affinity for hearing the messages of Vasudeva (vasudeva-katha-rucih syat)."

This verse also means that by seeing, touching, conversing with, and in other ways serving the great souls who travel to or permanently reside in the holy places of pilgrimage, one develops faith in the great souls. One then thinks, "Why do they talk among themselves about the topics of the Supreme Personality of Godhead? I should also hear about those topics." In this way the desire to hear about the Lord is born, and by hearing about Him one becomes attracted to Him. By hearing in this way from the great souls one at once attains the real goal of life. This is described by Lord Kapiladeva (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.25.25):

"In the association of pure devotees, discussion of the pastimes and activities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is very pleasing and satisfying to the ear and the heart. By cultivating such knowledge one gradually becomes advanced on the path of liberation, and thereafter he is freed, and his attraction becomes fixed. Then real devotion and devotional service begin."*

1 Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.2.17) explains:

"Shri Krishna, the Personality of Godhead, who is the Paramatma (Supersoul) in everyone's heart and the benefactor of the truthful devotee, cleanses desire for material enjoyment from the heart of the devotee who has developed the urge to hear His messages, which are in themselves virtuous when properly heard and chanted."*

2 This verse means that when one hears about Him the Lord enters the heart (antah-sthah). He enters by walking there on the path of (the devotee's) meditation on Him. The inauspicious things (abhadra) in the heart (hrdi) are material desires.

1 Then Shrimad-Bhagavatam (1.2.17) explains:

"By regular attendance in classes on the Bhagavatam and by rendering of service to the pure devotee, all that is troublesome to the heart is almost completely destroyed, and loving service unto the Personality of Godhead, who is praised with transcendental songs, is established as an irrevocable fact."*

2 The words "nasta-prayesu" mean "almost completely destroyed". They are not destroyed in this way by mere cultivation of impersonal knowledge. In this way the limitless power of devotional service is described. The word "Bhagavata" here means either "the devotees of the Lord" or "the scripture Shrimad-Bhagavatam". By serving (sevaya) them one attains eternal (naisthiki) devotional service (bhaktih) where one meditates on the Lord.

1 Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.2.53) explains:

"The lotus feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are sought even by the greatest of demigods, such as Brahma and Siva, who have all accepted the Supreme Personality of Godhead as their life and soul. A pure devotee of the Lord can never forget those lotus feet in any circumstances. He will not give up his shelter at the lotus feet of the Lord for a single moment-indeed, not for half a moment-even in exchange for the benediction of ruling and enjoying the opulence of the entire universe. Such a devotee of the Lord is to be considered the best of the Vaishnavas."

This verse explains that when all material desires are destroyed the heart becomes plunged into pure goodness. At that time the heart is qualified to receive the direct appearance of the Lord. This is described in Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.2.19:

2 "As soon as irrevocable loving service is established in the heart, the effects of nature's modes of passion and ignorance, such as lust, desire and hankering, disappear from the heart. Then the devotee is established in goodness, and he becomes completely happy."*

3 The word "bhavah" here means that passion and ignorance are the causes of lust and the other vices. The word "etaih" refers to them. That is the meaning here.

1 Then Shrimad-Bhagavatam (1.2.20) explains:

Thus established in the mode of unalloyed goodness, the man whose mind has been enlivened by contact with devotional service to the Lord gains positive scientific knowledge of the Personality of Godhead in the stage of liberation from all material association."*

2 This verse means, "As was previously described (evam) by engaging in devotional service one becomes enlivened (prasanna-manasah) and liberated from association (mukta-sangasya) with lust and other vices. In that way is manifested (jayate) positive knowledge (jnanam), where the Lord appears in the heart, or, without the process of meditation, appears outside the heart."

1 Then Shrimad-Bhagavatam (1.2.21) describes the result obtained when the independent and supremely blissful Lord directly appears:

2 "Thus the knot in the heart is pierced, and all misgivings are cut to pieces. The chain of fruitive actions is terminated when one sees the self as master."*

3 Here the phrase "knot in the heart" (hrdaya-granthi) refers to the material misidentification of false ego. The words "all misgivings are cut to pieces" (sarva-samsayah chidyante) mean that by engaging in the devotional activities that begin with hearing and chanting the Lord is directly seen. At that time all doubts are destroyed. By hearing about the Lord all theories that oppose devotional service are cut to pieces and by meditating on the Lord all meditations that oppose devotional service (are cut to pieces). When the Lord personally appears (the devotee's personal) disqualifications (are also cut to pieces). The word "ksiyante" means "completely destroyed". Simply by the Lord's wish not the slightest trace of these things remains.

1 Revealing the devotees' activities, Shrimad-Bhagavatam (1.2.22) concludes this topic in these words:

2 "Certainly therefore since time immemorial, all transcendentalists have been rendering devotional service to Lord Krishna, the Personality of Godhead, with great delight, because such devotional service is enlivening to the self."*

3 Here the word "atma-prasadanam" means "purification of the heart". That, however, is not the only feature of devotional service. This verse explains that devotional service is performed with great delight (paramaya muda). Materialistic activities bring only suffering. When they are performed they bring suffering and when one attains the results they offer again there is only suffering. Devotional service, on the contrary, brings only happiness. When one is aspiring for advancement in devotional service there is happiness and when one becomes perfect in devotional service there is only happiness.

1 For these reasons one should abandon fruitive work, impersonal speculation, and dry renunciation and instead engage in devotional service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. One should not do any work other than devotional service to the Lord. This will be described in the next seven verses (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.2.23-29 quoted in Anucchedas 18-21).

What may be said of other works? Because they are not the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Lord Vishnu, who appears as a guna-avatara, because they are not in relationship with the mode of goodness, which alone can help spiritual progress, and because they expand the influence of the modes of passion and ignorance, Brahma and Siva are not worshipped by they who aspire for what is actually beneficial. This is explained in the following two verses (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 1.2.23-24) which were previously quoted in the Paramatma-sandarbha:

2 "The transcendental Personality of Godhead is indirectly associated with the three modes of material nature, namely passion, goodness and ignorance, and just for the material world's creation, maintenance and destruction He accepts the three qualitative forms of Brahma, Vishnu and Siva. Of these three, all human beings can derive ultimate benefit from Vishnu, the form of the quality of goodness."*

3 "Firewood is a transformation of earth, but smoke is better than the raw wood. And fire is still better, for by fire we can derive the benefits of superior knowledge (through Vedic sacrifices). Similarly, passion (rajas) is better than ignorance (tamas) but goodness (tattva) is best because by goodness one can come to realise the Absolute Truth."*

4 Here "sattva-tanoh" means "the potency of goodness", and "trayimayah" means "the many activities described in the three Vedas". The "wood" is the mode of ignorance, the "smoke" is the mode of passion, and the "fire" is the mode of goodness. The "three things" where these are described are the Vedas. Smoke is better than raw wood, and fire is better than smoke. Raw wood is not like fire. In raw wood the activities of the three Vedas are manifested only very slightly. In the same way passion is better than ignorance and goodness is better than passion. Ignorance is not like fire. In ignorance the activities of the three Vedas are manifested only very slightly. However, in fire the activities of the three Vedas are manifest directly. Only in goodness, and not in the two other modes of nature, is the Supreme Personality of Godhead directly manifested. That is the meaning. That the great souls abandon other deities and engage in devotional service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead is described in (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.2.25):

5 "Previously all the great sages rendered service unto the Personality of Godhead due to His existence above the three modes of material nature. They worshipped Him to become free from material conditions and thus derive the ultimate benefit. Whoever follows such great authorities is also eligible for liberation from the material world."*

6 Here the word "atha" means "for this reason". "Sattvam visuddham bhagavantam" means "the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is the form of the mode of pure goodness." That is the Supreme Personality of Godhead is beyond material goodness has already been explained in Shri Bhagavat-sandarbha (Anuccheda 100). The words "ksemaya kalpante ye nu tan iha" mean "They worshipped Him to derive the ultimate benefit in this material world."

1 Here someone may object: "Is it not seen that many others worship other deities headed by Lord Siva?"

I reply: That is true, but these are persons filled with material desires. They who desire liberation, what to speak of they whose only goal in life is devotional service to the Lord, do not worship anyone but the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.2.26):

2 "Those who are serious about liberation are certainly non envious, and they respect all. Yet they reject the horrible and ghastly forms of the demigods and worship only the all-blissful forms of Lord Vishnu and His plenary portions."*

3 Here the word "bhuta-patin" refers to the pitas, prajapatis and the other demigods like them. "Anasuyavah" means that the saintly devotees do not offend these other deities.

1 Here someone may object: If by worshipping Lord Narayana one attains what is desirable, then why do these people worship other deities?"

The following verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.2.27) explains:

2 "Those who are in the modes of passion and ignorance worship the forefathers, other living beings and the demigods who are in charge of cosmic activities, for they are urged by a desire to be materially benefitted with women, wealth, power and progeny."*

3 Here the word "sama-silah" means that these worshippers have the same nature as the pitas and other demigods, who are also under the influence of the modes of passion and ignorance. Because these worshippers have the same nature they worship these demigods.

1 In this way it is said that Lord Vishnu should be worshipped. That this is the conclusion of all Vedic scriptures is confirmed in the following two verses (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.2.28-29).

2 "In the revealed scriptures, the ultimate object of knowledge is Shri Krishna, the Personality of Godhead. The purpose of performing sacrifice is to please Him. Yoga is for realising Him. All fruitive activities are ultimately rewarded by Him only. He is supreme knowledge, and all severe austerities are performed to know Him. Religion (dharma) is rendering loving service unto Him. He is the supreme goal of life."*

3 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"In this way Lord Vasudeva is the ultimate topic described by the Vedas. Fearing that someone may say, "Do not the Vedas describe various yajnas? this verse states that because all methods of worship are directed to Him, therefore the Vedic sacrifices are performed to please Him. Fearing that someone may say, "Do not the yoga-sastras describe only the yogic activities, beginning with sitting postures and breath-control?" this verse states that these activities are methods employed to attain Lord Vasudeva. Fearing that someone may say, "Do not the jnana-sastras describe transcendental knowledge?" this verse states that Lord Vasudeva is the highest transcendental knowledge. What was said of knowledge may also be said of austerities. Fearing that someone may say, "Do not the dharma-sastras describe pious activities beginning with charity and vows, activities by which one attains Svargaloka and other heavenly realms?" this verse states that these results are ultimately dependent on Lord Vasudeva. The word "gatih" (goal), which comes from the verb "gam" (to go), refers to the attainment of Svargaloka and the other heavenly planets. That goal is dependent on Lord Vasudeva because it is manifested from a tiny portion of His transcendental bliss. This verse explains that because Lord Vasudeva is the root from which everything has grown, everything is meant for Him. fearing that someone may say, "Is it not so that the Vedas are about many different things, such as sacrifices, yoga, pious deeds, and they are not about one thing only?" this verse explains that these things beginning with Vedic sacrifices are dependent on and meant for Lord Vasudeva."

4 Devotional service is the friend and guide of the things, beginning with yoga, mentioned here. That is the primary meaning here. The Vedas certainly describe pious fruitive actions (karma-kanda), but in some parts of the Vedas the superiority of devotional service is also seen. This is described in Svetasvatara Upanisad (6.23):

5 "Only to those great souls who have implicit faith in both the Lord and the spiritual master are all the imports of Vedic knowledge automatically revealed."*

1 Now that he has shown that devotional service should be performed, (the author of Shrimad-Bhagavatam) proves that it is the conclusion of all Vedic literatures. He begins his explanation with these words (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 1.2.30):

2 "In the beginning of the material creation, that Absolute Personality of Godhead (Vasudeva), in His transcendental position, created the energies of cause and effect by His own internal energy."*

3 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"Someone may object, Is it not so that all Vedic scriptures describe the activities that begin with nature's creation, entrance into, and control of the material universes? How can it be that the scriptures describe Lord Vasudeva? To answer this objection the author of Shrimad Bhagavatam speaks these four (1.2.30-33) verses."

4 Here the word "idam" refers to the material world beginning with the mahat-tattva and reaching to the demigod Brahma. The activities that begin with (the Lord's) entrance into the material universe are seen in the verses following that quote (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.2.30). This verse was spoken by Shri Suta Gosvami to Shri Saunaka Rsi.

Anuccheda 23

1 This is also described in the following verse in a conversation, the conversation that was to give birth to Shrimad-Bhagavatam, between Shri Narada and Shri Vyasa, (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 1.5.12):

2 "Knowledge of self-realisation, even though freed from all material affinity, does not look well if devoid of a conception of the infallible (God). What then, is the use of fruitive activities, which are naturally painful from the very beginning and transient by nature, if they are not utilised for the devotional service of the Lord?"*

3 Shрила Shridhara Svami comments: "The word 'naiskarmyam' means 'Brahman-knowledge. which because of its oneness is free from fruitive actions'. 'Niranjanam', which is derived from the verb 'aj', means 'free from material designations'. This kind of knowledge, if devoid (varjitam) of love (bhava) for the infallible Lord (acyute) does not (alam na) look well (sobhate). In this way it is not possible to see the Lord. That is the meaning. Fruitive activities are always (sasvat), that is both when one is working to attain a goal and when the goal is attained, painful (abhadram). How can even non-fruitive actions, when not offered to the Lord, look well? This is so because such actions, due to being external and irrelevant, do not purify the self."

4 In this way transcendental knowledge and fruitive work, if devoid of devotional service, are both useless. (However, devotional service is not useless. Shрила Narada Muni explains to Shрила Vyasa, in Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.5.15-17):

"The people in general are naturally inclined to enjoy, and you have encouraged them in that way in the name of religion. This is verily condemned and in quite unreasonable. Because they are guided under your instructions, they will accept such activities in the name of religion and will hardly care for prohibitions.*

"The Supreme Lord is unlimited. Only a very expert personality, retired from the activities of material happiness, deserves to understand this knowledge of spiritual values. Therefore those who are not so well situated, due to material attachment, should be shown the ways of transcendental realisation, by Your goodness, through descriptions of the transcendental activities of the Supreme Lord."*

5 "One who has forsaken his material occupations to engage in the devotional service of the Lord may sometimes fall down while in an immature stage, yet there is no danger of his being unsuccessful. On the other hand, a non devotee, though fully engaged in occupation duties, does not gain anything."*

6 Shрила Shridhara Svami comments:

"Considering what may happen when one, ignoring his regular and special material duties, engages only in devotional service to Lord Hari, (Narada) speaks this verse.

"Here someone may object: 'If, after abandoning his material occupational duties, one becomes perfect in devotional service, and thus attains the goal of life and becomes successful, then for him there is no anxiety. But if one dies before he attains devotional perfection, or if one falls down from devotional service, then his abandonment of occupation duties is a mistake."

"Fearing that someone might say this, (Narada Muni) says here that even if a devotee falls down from devotional service or dies (before he can attain perfection), still, because he has tasted the nectar of devotional service, there is no fear that he will be put into distress because he abandoned his material occupational duties. In this way (Narada) speaks this verse. The word 'va' (or) here is in the sense of a sceptical glance. He says, 'How can one who has tasted the nectar of devotional service attain an inauspicious situation in a low birth?' The meaning here is that such a situation will never happen. This will not happen because of the desire for devotional service in his heart. That is the meaning. But what will they who do not engage in devotional service gain from their performance of material occupational duties? The word 'abhajatam' here is in the possessive case because it indicates the relationship to another word."

This verse was spoken by Shri Narada to Shri Vyasa.

1 The statement "Devotional service should be performed" is discussed in the conversation of Shрила Sukadeva Gosvami and Maharaja Pariksit. (Shрила Sukadeva Gosvami said, in Shrimad-Bhagavatam 2.1.2):

2 "Those persons who are materially engrossed, being blind to the knowledge of ultimate truth, have many subject matters for hearing in human society, O emperor."*

3 The phrase "grhesu grha-medhinam" hints that the people described here are materialists far from spiritual life. The word "atma-tattvam" here means "the truth of the Supreme Personality of Godhead". This is so because of what will be explained in the next verse.

1 He explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.1.5):

"O descendent of King Bharata. one who desires to be free from all miseries must hear about, glorify, and also remember the Personality of Godhead, who is the Supersoul, the controller, and the saviour from all miseries."*

2 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments: "By using the word 'sarvatma' here the speaker says that the Lord is most dear to everyone. By the word 'isvara' he says that the Lord's will cannot be thwarted. By the word 'harih' he says that the Lord removes the bondage (of repeated material existence). The phrase 'abhayam icchata' here means 'they who desire liberation'."

Liberation means attaining the Lord and thus becoming free of all miseries.

1 After this he describes meditation on the universal form of the Lord, and then, speaking against that meditation, he describes devotional service (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 2.1.39):

2 "One should concentrate his mind upon the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who alone distributes Himself in so many manifestations just as ordinary persons create thousands of manifestations in dreams. One must concentrate the mind on Him, the only all-blissful Absolute Truth. Otherwise one will be misled and will cause his own degradation."*

3 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"This verse means that one should concentrate his mind on the Lord (tam eva satyam bhajeta) who alone distributes Himself in so many manifestations (sa ekah sarva-dhi-vrtty-anubhuta-sarvah). One should not be attached to anyone or anything else (na anyatra sajjet) because from that attachment (yatah) one falls (atma-patah) into the material world of repeated birth and death. The Lord alone experiences everything (anubhuta-sarvah) with His senses. The example is given here of what is seen (iksita) by sleeping persons (svapna-jananam). Sometimes in a dream an ordinary living entity creates many different bodies and is able to see them all with his senses. In the same way the Supreme Lord sees everything with His senses. Because He is the master of the potencies of transcendental knowledge, the Supreme Personality of Godhead is never bound or limited (in His knowledge)."

4 Because with the activities of His mind the Lord sees everything, He is described with the words "sarva-dhi-vrtty-anubhuta-sarvah". The Sruti-sastra (Brhad-aranyaka Upanisad 1.2.5) explains that before the creation of the material mind and senses "The Supreme Personality of Godhead could see." As a sleeping person can create anything he wishes in his dream, so the Supreme Lord, simply by His wish, can create anything. that is what is said here.

5 Because the Lord is thus aware of everything, He is called "Satyam" (the Supreme Truth), and because He is the creator of everything He should be worshipped (bhajeta). That is the meaning. A yogi perfect in meditation on the Lord's universal form, all his knowledge-acquiring senses fixed on the universal form, sees everything in the universal form. In this way he worships (bhajeta) Lord Narayana, who is the Supreme Truth (satyam), an ocean of bliss (ananda-nidhim), the universal form, and the Supersoul present in everyone's heart. One should not (na) become attached (sajjet) to any benefits (anyatra) obtained by meditating on the universal form, for that attachment (yatah) will make one fall (atma-patah) into the cycle of repeated birth and death.

An example is given here to show the Lord's being aware of everything. As an ordinary living entity may see everything in a dream so the Supreme Personality of Godhead sees everything.

This is described in the Vedic scriptures:

"(Before the creation) the Supreme Personality of Godhead saw (everything)."

-Brhad-aranyaka panisad 1.2.5

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead has all knowledge and power."

-Svetasvatara Upanisad 6.8

In this way the Sruti-sastra proves that the Supreme Lord has transcendental potencies, beginning with the potency of knowing everything.

Shri Vedanta-sutra explains:

"The scriptures say that the Lord created the material worlds as if in a dream."

"Because it is not manifested by the Lord's spiritual potency, the material world is manifested by His illusory potency (maya).

In these quotes from the Nyaya-sastra it is shown that the Lord's creation of everything in a dream is completely different from the wakefulness, dreaming and dreamless sleep experienced by conditioned souls in the material world.

By the two words "satyam" and "ananda-nidhim" it should be understood that the person described here is the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

This verse was spoken by Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami.

1 In the next chapter (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.2.14) he says:

"Unless the gross materialist develops a sense of loving service unto the Supreme Lord, the seer of both the transcendental and material worlds, he should remember or meditate upon the universal form of the Lord at the end of his prescribed duties."*

2 After the word "para" the word "avara" means "the places of the living entities headed by Brahma." Who is there? The Supreme Lord (visvesvare) who sees (drastari) everything, but who, because He is perfectly spiritual remains invisible to the conditioned souls. Devotional service (bhakti-yogah) is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.2.8):

"Others conceive of the Personality of Godhead residing within the body in the region of the heart and measuring only eight inches, with four hands carrying a lotus, a wheel of a chariot, a conchshell and a club respectively."*

In this way the way to make spiritual advancement is described. The word "kriyavasane" means "at the end of one's prescribed duties". One should do this until he develops a sense of loving devotional service to the Lord (bhakti-yogah).

1 After describing in Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.2.15-21 and 2.2.22-32 the method of knowledge and the method of yoga, by both of which one quickly or gradually attains liberation, and after explaining the superiority of the form of devotional service where one offers the fruits of his work to the Lord, (the speaker of Shrimad Bhagavatam) declares, "How much greater is direct devotional service?" He says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.2.33):

2 "For those who are wandering in the material universe, there is no more auspicious means of deliverance than what is aimed at in the direct devotional service of Lord Krishna."*

3 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments: "In the material world there are many persons seeking the path of liberation by performing austerities, yoga, and other spiritual activities, but they are not the right path. That is confirmed in this verse by the word "na hi" (certainly not). Than devotional service (yato bhakti-yogah) no (na) other (anyah) path is (bhavet) that is auspicious (sivah), that is to say happy and free from obstacles."

4 The activities that please the Lord are described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.2.6):

"The supreme occupation (dharma) for all humanity is that by which men can attain to loving devotional service to the transcendent Lord. Such devotional service must be unmotivated and uninterrupted to completely satisfy the self."*

1 That devotional service is the conclusion of all the Vedas is explained in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.2.34):

2 "The great personality Brahma, with great attention and concentration of the mind, studied the Vedas three times, and after scrutinizingly examining them, he ascertained that attraction for the Supreme Personality of Godhead Shri Krishna is the highest perfection of religion."*

3 Here the word "bhagavan" means "the demigod Brahma", and "kutasthah" means "with great attention and concentration of the mind". That is the meaning. "trih" means "three times", "karstnyena" means "thoroughly", "brahma" means "the Vedas", and "anviksyā" means "examining". In this way he ascertained (manisaya adhyavasyat) that attraction (ratih) for the Supreme Personality of Godhead Shri Krishna (atmani), an attraction that is also called devotional service, (is the highest perfection of religion).

The word "atmani" refers to Lord Hari. This is described in the Tantras:

"Because He is all-pervading (at) and because He is the supreme mother (ma), the Personality of Godhead, Lord Hari, is called atma."

The word "bhagavan" here shows that the demigod Brahma, who is the master of the universe, has all-knowledge and a host of virtues. For this reason his studying the Vedas three times is only a pastime. He merely imitated the actions of other students of the Vedas. Seeing that they contained the limitless glories of Vaikuntha and were studied by numberless Brahmas, the demigod Brahma studied the Vedas. The word "kutasthah" means that while he was studying he manifested only one form.

The Lord Himself explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.21.42):

4 "What is the direction of all Vedic literatures? On whom do they set focus? Who is the purpose of all speculation? Outside of Me no one knows these things."*

5 Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami also explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.29.49):

"I offer my obeisances to Lord Krishna, the Supreme Person, who like a bumblebee collected the honey of the essence of Vedic knowledge and, to destroy their fear of repeated birth and death, made His servants drink it."

Anuccheda 30

1 How does attraction for the Supreme Personality of Godhead develop? That is explained in the following question and answer (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.19.38):

"Please let me know what a man should hear, chant, remember and worship, and also what he should not do. Please explain all this to me."*

The answer to this question is given in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.2.36):

2 "O King, it is therefore essential that every human being hear about, glorify and remember the Supreme Lord, the Personality of Godhead, always and everywhere."*

3 Here the word "ca" (and) hints at a host of devotional activities, beginning with serving the Lord's feet. The result obtained by engaging with devotional activities, beginning with hearing about the Lord, is described in these words (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 2.2.37):

4 "Those who drink through aural reception, fully filled with the nectarean message of Lord Krishna, the beloved of the devotees, purify the polluted aim of life known as material enjoyment and thus go back to Godhead, to the lotus feet of Him (the Personality of Godhead)."

5 The word "punanti" (purify) here shows that the previously described path of meditating on the Lord's universal form should be rejected. Because devotional service itself brings great purification, one should engage only in devotional service. This verse was spoken by Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami.

1 After, in the previous two chapters (Shrimad Bhagavatam Canto One, Chapters One and Two), explaining that devotional service is better than fruitive work, yoga, and impersonal speculation, in the next chapter (Canto One, Chapter Three) he explains that devotional service to the Lord is better than the worship of the demigods. First he says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.2.3-9):

"One who desires to be absorbed in the impersonal brahmajyoti effulgence should worship the master of the Vedas (Lord Brahma or Brhaspati, the learned priest), one who desires powerful sex should worship the heavenly king, Indra, and one who desires good progeny should worship the great progenitors called the prajāpatis. One who desires good fortune should worship Durga-devi, the superintendent of the material world. One desiring to be very powerful should worship fire, and one who aspires only after money should worship the Vasus. One should worship the Rudra incarnations of Lord Siva if he want to be a great hero. One who wants a large stock of grains should worship Aditi. One who desires to attain the heavenly planets should worship the sons of Aditi. One who desires a worldly kingdom should worship Visvadeva, and one who wants to be popular with the general mass of population should worship the Sadhya demigod. One who desires a long span of life should worship the demigods known as the Asvini-kumaras, and a person desiring a strongly built body should worship the earth. One who desires stability in his post should worship the horizon and the earth combined. One who desires to become beautiful should worship the beautiful residents of the Gandharva planet, and one who desires a good wife should worship the apsaras and the urvasi society girls of the heavenly kingdom. One who desires domination over others should worship Lord Brahma, the head of the universe. One who desires tangible fame should worship the Personality of Godhead, and one who desires a good bank balance should worship the demigod Varuna. If one desires to be a greatly learned man he should worship Lord Siva, and if one desires a good marital relation he should worship the chaste goddess Uma, wife of Lord Siva."*

2 Then he says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.2.10):

"A person who has broader intelligence, whether he be full of all material desire, without any material desire, or desiring liberation, must by all means worship the supreme whole, the Personality of Godhead."*

3 Shрила Shridhara Svami comments:

"Here the word 'akamah' means 'pure devotee', 'sarva-kamah' means 'one who has all desires, whether those mentioned before or other desires', and 'purusam param' means 'the perfect and limitless Supreme Person'."

"Tivrena" means "firmly", "naturally" and "easily". The devotee's desires are automatically fulfilled. This is explained in Mahabharata:

4 "The devotees enjoy a great festival of service to Lord Vishnu. They serve Him and meditate on Him, give charity to Him and offer the food in their homes to Him. In this way they attain a result even the demigods headed by Indra cannot attain."

5 The Supreme Lord Himself said to Shri Kardama Muni (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.21.24):

"My dear rsi, O leader of the living entities, for those who serve Me in devotion by worshipping Me, especially persona like you who have given up everything unto Me, there is never any question of frustration."*

6 Therefore whatever desires one may have, one should earnestly (tivrena) worship (yajeta) the Lord. That worship will eventually lead to pure devotional service. That is elaborately taught here.

Who are higher: the pure devotees, or one who yearns for impersonal liberation? The answer is given in the words "A person full of all material desires (sarva-karma) should still worship the Personality of Godhead." That is the final conclusion.

1 It is also said (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 2.3.11):

"All the different kinds of worshippers of multidemigods can attain the highest perfectional benediction, which is spontaneous attraction unflinchingly fixed upon the Supreme Personality of Godhead, only by the association of the pure devotee of the Lord."*

2 Shрила Shridhara Svami comments:

"Here he explains how the previously described worshippers of the many demigods can attain devotional service. The worshippers (yajatam) of Indra and the other demigods, by, in the course of their demigod-worship (iha), associating with (sangatah) devotees of the Lord (bhagavata), attain unflinching (acalah) devotion (bhavah) for the Lord (bhagavati). In this way they attain (udayah) the supreme goal of life (nihsreyasa). All other things are insignificant in comparison to what they attain."

3 In Shrimad-Bhagavatam 2.3.2-9 many results, beginning with expertise in enjoying the senses, were described. Later the devotion to the Lord that is attained by association with a devotee is also described. In this way the worshippers of the demigods attain a result much greater than what is attained by making offerings on a yupa of khadira wood.

1 Later, Shri Saunaka Rsi confirmed the importance of devotional service. He said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.3.17):

2 "Both by rising and by setting, the sun decreases the duration of life of everyone, except one who utilises the time by discussing topics of the all-good Personality of Godhead."*

3 In this verse "asau" means "the sun", "udyan" means rising, "astam" means "setting", and "harati" means "forcibly destroys, because it makes it useless." This happens to the life (ayuh) of all except (rte) one who utilises the time)ksano nitah) by discussing topics of the all-good Personality of Godhead (uttama-sloka-vartaya). This is so because (the latter persons, the devotees), attain all success. That is the meaning.

Anuccheda 34

1 Here someone may object: "Is it not so that this also happens to the life of the (devotees)? To answer this, he says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.3.18):

2 "Do the trees not live? Do the bellows of the blacksmith not breathe? All around us, do the beasts not eat and discharge semen?"*

3 "Na mehanti" means "Do they not enjoy sex?" Thinking the materialistic human beings to be actually animals, he refers to them with the word "apare" (other animals).

Anuccheda 35

1 Then he says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.3.19):

"Men who are like gods, hogs, camels and asses praise those men who never listen to the transcendental pastimes of Lord Shri Krishna, the deliverer from evils."*

2 Here he describes an animal like human being (purusah pausuh) who is praised by his followers, who are like dogs (sva) or other animals. If among these persons someone is very great or powerful he is still only a big animal. That is the meaning.

1 In the next five verses he explains that the parts of such a person's body are all useless. He says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.3.20):

2 "One who has not listened to the messages about the prowess and marvellous acts of the Personality of Godhead and has not sung or chanted loudly the worthy songs about the Lord is to be considered to possess earholes like the holes of snakes and a tongue like the tongue of a frog."*

3 "Na srnvatah" means "not hearing". Of such a person the ears are like useless holes. "Dusta" here means "wicked".

1 Then he says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.3.21):

"The upper portion of the body, though crowned with a silk turban, is only a heavy burden if not bowed down before the Personality of Godhead who can award mukti (freedom). And the hands, though decorated with glittering bangles, are like those of a dead man if not engaged in the service of the Personality of Godhead, Hari."*

2 Here "patta-kirita-justam" may mean either "wearing a silk turban" or "wearing a crown."

1 The he says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.3.22):

"The eyes which do not look at the symbolic representations of the Personality of Godhead Vishnu (His forms, name, quality, etc.) are like those printed on the plumes of the peacock and the legs which do not move to the holy places (where the Lord is remembered) are considered to be like tree trunks."*

2 Their birth is like that of the trees. They are equal to trees. That is the meaning.

1 Then he says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.3.23):

"The person who has not at any time received the dust of the feet of the Lord's pure devotee upon his head is certainly a dead body. And the person who has never experienced the aroma of the tulasi leaves from the lotus feet of the Lord is also a dead body, although breathing."*

2 Here "shri-visnu-padyah" means "clinging to His feet."

1 Then he says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.3.24):

"Certainly that heart is steel-framed which, in spite of one's chanting the holy name of the Lord with concentration, does not change when ecstasy takes place, tears fill the eyes and the hairs stand on end."*

2 Here the word "asma-saram" (steel-framed) means "very hard". The symptoms of ecstasy are described in the phrase beginning with the word "atha" (thus). The verse says that when (yada) ecstasy (vikarah) is not present then tears (jalam) do not fill the eyes (netre) and other ecstatic symptoms are not present in other parts of the body. That is the meaning. The king will confirm this when he says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.80.3-4):

"The capacity for talking can be perfected only by describing the transcendental qualities of the Lord. The capacity for working with one's hands can be successful only when one engages himself in the service of the Lord with those hands. Similarly one's mind can be pacified only when he simply thinks of Krishna in full Krishna consciousness. He sees everywhere the presence of His worshipable Lord in His paramatma feature. The function of the ear can be perfected by simply by engagement in hearing the transcendental activities of the Lord.*

"The function of the head can be fully utilised when the head is engaged in bowing down before the Lord and His representative. If one is able to do nothing more, he can simply bow down before the Lord and His representative and drink the caranamrta, the water that has washed the lotus feet of the Lord or His devotee."*

In this way, in the first three chapters of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (Canto One, Chapters One, Two and Three), it is explained that one should engage in devotional service to the Lord.

3 Shрила Shridhara Svami comments in his prefaces to the First, Second and Third Chapters of the Second Canto:

"In the first chapter meditation on the Lord's universal form by engaging in devotional activities beginning with hearing and chanting about the Lord is described."

4 "In the second chapter the mind's abandoning meditation on the Lord's universal form and accepting instead meditation on Lord Vishnu, who is the witness of everything and the master of all, is described."

5 "In the third chapter the superiority of service to Lord Vishnu, which is performed with great devotion, and which consists of many activities beginning with hearing about the Lord, is described as the sage listens."

This verse is spoken by Shri Saunaka Rsi to Shri Suta Gosvami.

Anuccheda 41

Also in the conversation of Brahma and Narada (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.5.9):

"Lord Brahma said: My dear boy Narada, being merciful to all (including me) you have asked all these questions because I have been inspired to see into the prowess of the Almighty Personality of Godhead."*

Anuccheda 42

1 That devotional service is the conclusion of all Vedic scriptures is also confirmed by these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.5.15-16):

"The Vedic literatures are made by and are meant for the Supreme Lord, the demigods are also meant for serving the Lord as parts of His body, the different planets are also meant for the sake of the Lord, and different sacrifices are performed just to please Him.*

"All different types of meditation or mysticism are means for realising Narayana. All austerities are aimed at achieving Narayana. Culture of transcendental knowledge is for getting a glimpse of Narayana and ultimately salvation is entering the kingdom of Narayana."*

2 This verse means that because Lord Narayana is the supreme object of worship therefore He is the subject matter described in the Vedas. Here someone may object: "Is it not so that the Vedas also describe other deities who are also worthy of worship?" That is true. Therefore this verse explains that the other deities, the demigods, are meant for serving the parts of Lord Narayana's body (narayanangajah). The different planets are also meant to attain His feet, and the different sacrifices are performed just to please Him. These things are done to give a little pleasure to Lord Narayana. That is the meaning. Yoga, that is astanga-yoga and sankhya-yoga, are means to attain Him. Austerity, which means concentration of the mind, is a means to attain Him, and the culture of transcendental knowledge is a means to attain Him. The culture of transcendental knowledge, yoga, and austerity are means to attain Him. What more need be said? He is the supreme goal (gatih) to be attained, the Supreme Brahman. This is so because all these things are manifested from Him and dependent on Him.

3 Therefore Lord Matsyadeva said to Satyavrata (Shrimad Bhagavatam 8.24.38):

"You will be thoroughly advised and favoured by Me, and because of your inquiries, everything about My glories, which are known as param brahma, will be manifest within your heart. Thus you will know everything about Me."*

The first verse quoted here was spoken by Lord Brahma to Shri Narada Muni.

1 In the conversation Vidura and Maitreya the following question was asked (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.5.4):

"Therefore, O great sage, please give me instruction on the transcendental devotional service of the Lord, so that He who is situated in the heart of everyone can be pleased to impart from within, knowledge of the Absolute Truth in terms of the ancient Vedic principles delivered only to those who are purified by the process of devotional service."*

2 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"Here the words 'sam vartma' mean 'auspicious path'."

"Bhakti-pute" means "purified by love", and "sa-tattvam jnanam" means "knowledge of the Lord's manifestations, which begins with Brahman, Bhagavan and Paramatma." This verse was spoken by Shri Vidura to Shri Maitreya.

1 The born and unborn demigods prayed (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.5.46-47):

"O Lord, persons who, because of their serious attitude, attain the stage of enlightened devotional service achieve the complete meaning of renunciation and knowledge and attain the Vaikunthaloka in the spiritual sky by drinking the nectar of Your topics."*

2 "Others, who are pacified by means of transcendental self-realisation and have conquered over the modes of nature by dint of strong power and knowledge, also enter into You, but for them there is much pain, whereas the devotee simply discharges devotional service and thus feels no pain."*

3 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"The word 'akuntha-dhisnyam' means 'Vaikunthaloka'."

"Visadasayah" means "abandoning all duplicity and accepting devotional service as the only goal of life." In the second of these verses the inferiority of both means and end of they who are attached to the path of philosophical speculation (jnana) is described. The word "apare" (others) here means "they who desire liberation". For them there is much labour and trouble (sramah). However, for they who accept the service of the Lord as the only goal of their lives there is no great labour and trouble. They always experience great bliss as a result of their devotional service and they also attain liberation as a by-product of that service. This verse was spoken by the born and unborn demigods to the Supreme Creator.

1 Then Maitreya Muni spoke the following words of praise (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.3.1):

"The royal dynasty of King Puru is worthy to serve the pure devotees because all the descendants of that family are devoted to the Personality of Godhead. You are also born in that family, and it is wonderful that because of your attempt the transcendental pastimes of the Lord are becoming newer and newer at every moment."*

2 From this it is understood that the devotional service described here is the ultimate good. That is the meaning. This verse was spoken by Shri Maitreya.

1 Shri Kapila explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.25.19):

"Perfection in self-realisation cannot be attained by any kind of yogi unless he engages in devotional service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, for that is the only auspicious path, called akuto-bhaya. They are doubtless and fearless, and their entrance into the spiritual kingdom is guaranteed."*

2 The "perfection in self realisation" (brahma-siddhi) here is the direct appearance of the Absolute Truth.

1 He also explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.24.44):

"Therefore persons whose minds are fixed on the Lord engage in the intensive practice of devotional service. That is the only means for attainment of the final perfection of life."*

2 Here the word "tivrana" means "intensive" and "pure because it is not mixed with yoga, fruitive work or other things". (The Lord says), "With this devotional service (bhakti-yogena), which consists of many activities, beginning with hearing, they fix (arpitam sthiram) their minds (manah) on Me (mayi). In this way (etavan) they attain the final perfection of life (nihsreyasa). In this world (asmin) devotional service is the best path." This verse was spoken by Lord Kapiladeva.

1 In the teaching of Sanatana Kumara, after he had already explained the path of philosophical knowledge (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.22.39-40):

"The devotees who are always engaged in the service of the toes of the lotus feet of the Lord, can very easily overcome hard-knotted desires for fruitive activities. Because this is very difficult, the non devotees - the jnanis and yogis - although trying to stop the waves of sense gratification, cannot do so. Therefore you are advised to engage in the devotional service of Krishna, the son of Vasudeva.*

2 "The ocean of nescience is very difficult to cross because it is infested with many dangerous sharks. Although those who are non-devotees undergo severe austerities and penances to cross that ocean, we recommend that you simply take shelter of the lotus feet of the Lord, which are like boats for crossing the ocean. Although the ocean is difficult to cross, by taking shelter of His lotus feet you will overcome all dangers."*

3 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments (on Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.22.37):

"In Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.22.37, the Lord said, 'Please try to understand (tam avehi) the truth I will teach you.' The Lord carefully gives that instruction in these two verses (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.22.39-40)."

He then comments on Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.22.39-40):

"Here someone may object: Does not the Sruti-sastra (Taittiriya Upanisad 2.1.2) say, 'One who understands Brahman attains the Supreme?' How, then, is it possible that the jnanis and yogis cannot overcome the hard-knotted desires for fruitive activities?

"To answer this objection, the Lord speaks the next verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.22.40). In that verse the word 'aplavesam' means 'They who have not taken shelter of the boat that is the Supreme Personality of Godhead to cross the ocean of nescience.' This verse says they find it very difficult to cross that ocean. By engaging in the difficult practices of yoga they hope to cross that ocean filled with sharks that are the six senses. One should take the boat (udupam) of the Lord's feet to cross that difficult to cross ocean (dustararnam).

4 Of these two paths (devotional service and impersonal speculation), which both have the same goal (to cross the ocean of nescience), the path of impersonal speculation is said to be very difficult to follow, whereas the path of devotional service of its own accord carries one to the destination. Here it is said that the impersonalists only desire to cross the ocean of nescience (titirsanti). They are not able actually to cross it. That is the meaning to be understood here. This verse was spoken by Shri Sanat-kumara to Shri Prthu.

1 In this way (Sanat-kumara) instructed (King Prthu). Only wishing to prove the practical effectiveness of devotional service, King Prthu engaged in devotional activities. Shrimad-Bhagavatam (4.23.9-10) explains:

2 "Thus the best amongst human beings, Maharaja Prthu, followed that path of spiritual advancement which was advised by Sanat-kumara. That is to say, he worshipped the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Krishna."*

3 "Maharaja Prthu thus engaged completely in devotional service, executing the rules and regulations strictly according to principles, twenty four hours daily. This his live and devotion unto the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Krishna, developed and became unflinching and fixed."*

4 Here the word "tenaiva" means "in this way". This verse was spoken by Shri Maitreya.

1 In the song of Lord Siva (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 4.24.69):

"My dear sons of the King, just execute your occupational duty as kings with a pure heart. Just chant this prayer fixing your mind on the lotus feet of the Lord. That will bring you all good fortune, for the Lord will be very much pleased with you."*

2 Lord Siva continued (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.24.70):

"Therefore, O sons of the King, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Hari, is situated in everyone's heart. He is also within your hearts. Therefore chant the glories of the Lord and always meditate upon Him continuously."*

3 Here Lord Siva says, "You should worship (pujayadhvam) Lord Hari (tam). This means "Do not perform ordinary material duties". "You should glorify (grnantah) and meditate (dhyayantah) on Him, the Supersoul situated in everyone's heart (atma-stham bhutesv avasthitam atmanan). Don't place the activities your mind and words in anything but Him. Always (asakrt) worship Him. Don't interrupt that worship with any other activity."

Anuccheda 51

1 Shri Narada Muni clarifies the nature of devotional service by describing what should and what should not be done. He says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.31.9-13):

2 "The great sage Narada said: When a living entity is born to engage in the devotional service of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is the supreme controller, his birth, all his fruitive activities, his life-span, his mind and his words are all factually perfect.*

3 "A civilised human being has three kinds of births. The first birth is by a pure father and mother, and this birth is called birth by semen. The next birth takes place when one is initiated by the spiritual master, and this birth is called savitra. The third birth, called yajnika, takes place when one is given the opportunity to worship Lord Vishnu. Despite the opportunities for attaining such births, even if one gets the life-span of a demigod, if one does not actually engage in the service of the Lord, everything is useless. Similarly, one's activities may be mundane or spiritual, but they are useless if they are not meant for satisfying the Lord.*

4 "Without devotional service, what is the meaning of severe austerities, the process of hearing, the power of speech, the power of mental speculation, elevated intelligence, strength and the power of the senses?*

5 "Transcendental practices that do not ultimately help one realise the Supreme Personality of Godhead are useless, be they mystic yoga practices, the analytical study of matter, severe austerity, the acceptance of sannyasa, or the study of Vedic literature. All these may be very important aspects of spiritual advancement, but unless one understands the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Hari, all these processes are useless.*

6 "Factually the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the original source of all self-realisation. Consequently, the goal of all auspicious activities - karma, jnana, yoga and bhakti - is the Supreme Personality of Godhead."*

7 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"In these verses is described the result of serving Lord Hari. Without serving Him, everything becomes worthless. That is the meaning. Here the word 'janma' (birth) means 'the seminal birth from a pure father and mother, initiation with a sacred thread ceremony and initiation into the performance of Vedic-sacrifices. Even if one gets a life span as long as that of the demigods, what is the use of his words (vacobhih), power of mental speculation (citta-vrttibhih), power of the senses (indriya-radhasa), performance of yoga (yogena), analytical study of matter (sankhyena) or other (sreyobhir anyaih) auspicious activities, such as renunciation and following vows, if he does not serve Lord Hari?

8 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments on Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.31.13:

"Here someone may object: 'How can it be that the results of all spiritual activities other than devotional service are worthless?' To answer this Narada says that Lord Hari (atma) is the goal (avadhih) of all auspicious activities (sreyasam). This is true (arthatah) because He is more dear (priyah) than anyone or anything.

To this our objector may reply: 'That maya be, but why is Lord Hari the goal of all auspicious activities.'" To this Narada replies: 'He (atma), by casting aside all ignorance, reveals to everyone (sarvesam) their spiritual identity (atma-dah). Another interpretation of the word 'atma-dah' is that before Bali Maharaja and other devotees He appeared in His spiritual form as the Supreme Personality of Godhead and gave Himself as a gift to them. He is also dear (priyah) because His form is full of transcendental bliss."

9 The phrase "atma sarvesam api bhutanam" means that He is the Supersoul in all pure living entities. This is so because He is like the sun and they are like the rays of sunlight. For this reason it is said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.54-55):

10 "Therefore it is his own self that is most dear to every embodied living being, and it is simply for the satisfaction of this self that the whole material creation of moving and non moving entities exist.

11 "You should know Krishna to be the original Soul of all living entities. For the benefit of the whole universe, He has, out of His causeless mercy, appeared as an ordinary human being. He has done this by the strength of His internal potency."*

12 The two "atmas" in this verse are the individual living entity and the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The word "atma-dah" (He who gives Himself) means either that the Lord reveals Himself to His devotees or that the Lord places Himself under the control of His devotees. That is Shrila Shridhara Svami's interpretation. Anuccheda 52

1 Furthermore (in Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.31.14 it is said):

"As pouring water on the root of a tree energises the trunk, branches, twigs and everything else, and as supplying food to the stomach enlivens the senses and limbs of the body, simply worshipping the Supreme Personality of Godhead through devotional service automatically satisfies the demigods, who are parts of that Supreme Personality."*

2 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"By satisfying Lord Hari one attains the same result as if he has satisfied the many demigods with many pious deeds. However, by worshipping the demigods one does not attain the result of satisfying Lord Hari. That is the example given in this verse. This verse was spoken by Shri Narada to the Pracetas.

Anuccheda 53

1 In this matter Lord Rsabhadeva's instructions to His sons should be consulted. There He said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 5.5.3 and 5.5.25):

"Those who are interested in reviving Krishna consciousness and increasing their love of Godhead do not like to do anything that is not related to Krishna. They are not interested in mingling with people who are busy maintaining their bodies, eating, sleeping, mating and defending. They are not attached to their homes, although they may be householders. Nor are they attached to wives, children, friends or wealth. At the same time, they are not indifferent to the execution of their duties. Such people are interested in collecting only enough money to keep the body and soul together."*

"I am fully opulent, almighty and superior to Lord Brahma and Indra, the king of the heavenly planets. I am also the bestower of all happiness obtained in the heavenly kingdom and by liberation. Nonetheless, the brahmanas do not seek material comforts from Me. They are very pure and do not want to possess anything. They simply engage in My devotional service. What is the need of their asking for material benefits from anyone else?"*

2 At the end of his conversation with King Rahugana, a brahmana said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 5.13.20):

"My dear King Rahugana, you are also a victim of the external energy, being situated on the path of attraction to material pleasure. So that you may become an equal friend to all living entities, I now advise you to give up your kingly position and the rod by which you punish criminals. Give up attraction to sense objects and take up the sword of knowledge sharpened by devotional service. Then you will be able to cut the hard knot of illusory energy and cross to the other side of the ocean of nescience."*

3 The knowledge (jnana) here is knowledge of devotional service.

1 Shri Rahugana replied (Shrimad Bhagavatam 5.13.21-22):

"This birth as a human being is the best of all. Even birth among the demigods in the heavenly planets is not as glorious as birth as a human being on this earth. What is the use of the exalted position of a demigod? In the heavenly planets, due to profuse material comforts, there is no possibility of associating with devotees.*

2 "It is not at all wonderful that simply by being covered by the dust of your lotus feet, one immediately attains the platform of pure devotional service to Adhoksaja, which is not available even to great demigods like Brahma. By associating with you just for a moment, I am now freed from all argument, false prestige and lack of discrimination, which are the roots of entanglement in the material world. Now I am free from all these problems."*

3 The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by a brahmana to King Rahugana.

1 At the conclusion of His instructions to King Citraketu, Lord Sankarsana said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.16.62):

"By the strength of one's discrimination one should give up the desire for fruitive results in the present life and in the next. Thus becoming experienced in transcendental knowledge, one should become My devotee."*

2 In Prahlada's teachings to the sons of the demons (Shrimad Bhagavatam 9.6.1-2):

"One who is sufficiently intelligent should use the human form of body from the very beginning of life - in other words, from the tender age of childhood - to practice the activities of devotional service, giving up all other engagements. The human body is most rarely achieved, and although temporary like other bodies, it is meaningful because in human life one can perform devotional service. Even a slight amount of sincere devotional service can give one complete perfection.*

3 "The human form of life affords one a chance to return home, back to Godhead. Therefore every living entity, especially in the human form of life, must engage in devotional service to the lotus feet of Lord Vishnu. This devotional service is natural because Lord Vishnu, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, is the most beloved, the master of the soul, and the well-wisher of all other living beings."*

4 These verses say "Here (iha), in this human birth, one should engage in devotional service (bhagavatan dharman acaret). Because in a birth among the demigods there is an abundance of sense gratification, and because in a birth as an animal there is no power of discrimination, one should not waste his time when he has attained a human birth. Therefore he says, "From the beginning of childhood (kaumare) one should engage in devotional service." This is so because this (tad api) human birth is temporary (adhravam) and rarely achieved (durlabham). The Vedic scriptures say that the human birth is the most valuable, because in it one can engage in the activities of devotional service. One should understand the human birth in that way.

5 In the second verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.6.2) he shows that the human birth is appropriate for engaging in devotional service. He says "The human form of life (iha) affords one a chance to return home, back to Godhead (purusasya visnoh padopasarpanam). This is so because Lord Vishnu is naturally dear (priyah) to the living entities (bhutanaam). They love Him and He loves them. Here the word "atma" means "the Supersoul", and it is said the devotees attain His abode (padopasarpanam). Here the Lord is called "isvara" (the controller) because He has the power to do anything, undo anything and change anything. He is also called "suhrt" (the friend) because He wishes auspiciousness for everyone.

6 Prahlada Maharaja concludes (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.6.26):

"Religion, economic development and sense gratification - these are described in the Vedas as tri-varga, or three ways to salvation. Within these three categories are education and self-realisation, ritualistic ceremonies performed according to Vedic injunction, logic, the science of law and order, and the various means of earning one's livelihood. These are the external subject matters of study in the Vedas, and therefore I consider them material. However, I consider surrender to the lotus feet of Lord Vishnu to be transcendental."*

7 Here the word "iksa" means "self-realisation". "Tad etat nigamasya" means "all the meanings of the Vedas", and the words "suhrah paramasya pumsah" refer to the Supersoul, who stays in everyone's heart. (Here Prahlada Maharaja says) "However, I consider (manye) surrender (svatmarpanam) to Him transcendental (satyam)." This is so because it brings a transcendental result. Or, it is so because it brings a valuable result, whereas the result of performing material duties and other non devotional activities is worthless. That is the meaning. This verse was spoken by Prahlada Maharaja to the sons of the demons Anuccheda 56

1 He also said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.7.29):

"Of the different processes recommended for disentanglement from material life, the one personality explained and accepted by the Supreme Personality of Godhead should be considered all-perfect. That process is the performance of duties by which love for the Supreme Lord develops."*

2 The meaning of the previous verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.7.28) and this verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.7.29) is: "Of the many thousands (sahasranam) of different processes (upaya) for burning the seed of fruitive activities (karma-bija-nirharanam) Lord Shri Narada (bhagavata) taught me this one. This is the best of the many thousands of these processes because it quickly (anjas) and without difficulty brings love (ratih) for the Supreme Lord (isvare bhagavati). The burning of the seed of fruitive activities is a natural by-product of the development of that love. That is the meaning.

1 He describes the different parts of that process in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.7.30):

"One must accept the bona fide spiritual master and render service unto him with great devotion and faith. Whatever one has in one's possession should be offered to the spiritual master, and in the association of saintly persons and devotees one should worship the Lord, hear the glories of the Lord with faith, glorify the transcendental qualities and activities of the Lord, always meditate on the Lord's lotus feet, and worship the Deity of the Lord strictly according to the injunctions of the sastra and guru."*

Then he says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.7.33):

2 "By these activities (as mentioned above) one is able to cut down the influence of the enemies, namely lust, anger, greed, illusion, madness and jealousy, and when thus situated one can render service to the Lord. In this way one surely attains the platform of loving service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead."*

3 That is not the only result obtained by performing the previously described activities that begin with serving the spiritual master with faith and devotion. One is also able to cut down the influence of the enemies, namely lust, anger, greed, illusion, madness and jealousy, and then one can render service (bhaktih kriyate) to the Lord.

1 In the beginning of his description of the duties of varnasrama-dharma, where he discusses the duties of human beings in general, (Shri Narada Muni said in Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.11.7):

2 "The Supreme Being, the Personality of Godhead, is the essence of all Vedic knowledge, the root of all religious principles, and the memory of great authorities. O King Yudhisthira, this principle of religion is to be understood as evidence. On the basis of this religious principle, everything is satisfied, including one's mind, should and even one's body."*

3 Here the phrase "the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the root of religious principles (dharma-sya mulam bhagavan)" means that the Lord is the authority that establish religious principles. He is the authority that supports the scriptures (smrtam) and they who know the scriptures (tad-vidam). For both these external things are worthless. These must be about devotional service to the Lord. Therefore Shri Manu-samhita explains:

4 "The Supreme Personality of Godhead is all the Vedas, the root of religion, the memory and good character of they who understand the Vedas, the spiritual activities of the saintly devotees, and satisfaction of the self."

5 This is also described in Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.1.2):

"Completely rejecting all religious activities which are materially motivated, this Bhagavata Purana propounds the highest truth, which is understandable by those devotees who are fully pure in heart. The highest truth is reality distinguished from illusion for the welfare of all. Such truth uproots the threefold miseries. This beautiful Bhagavatam, compiled by the great sage Vyasadeva (in his maturity), is sufficient in itself for God Realisation. What is the need of any other scripture? As soon as one attentively and submissively hears the message of Bhagavatam, by this culture of knowledge the Supreme Lord is established within his heart."*

6 By the religion of devotional service the "atma", that is the heart, mind, and self are pleased. This is described in Shrimad-Bhagavatam 1.2.6:

"The supreme occupation (dharma) for all humanity is that by which men can attain to loving devotional service unto the transcendental Lord. Such devotional service must be unmotivated and uninterrupted to completely satisfy the self."*

Because the word "su" which here means :to the highest degree", is used here, this verse describes direct devotional service, where there are many activities, beginning with hearing about the Lord.

7 At the end of this description of religious duties is the story of Narada Muni. There it is said that in his first birth, as a Gandharva, he performed devotional service by singing about the Lord. In his second birth, this time as a sudra, he heard the Lord's glories in the company of saintly devotees. In this way Narada became an intimate associate of the Lord. He did not perform the duties of varnasrama-dharma.

8 There is also the following verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.15.68):

"O King Yudhisthira, because of your service to the Supreme Lord, all of you Pandavas defeated the greatest dangers posed by numerous kings and demigods. By serving the lotus feet of Krishna, you conquered great enemies, who were like elephants, and thus you collected ingredients for sacrifice. By His grace, may you be delivered from material involvement."*

Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"The common people follow the duties of varnasrama-dharma, but for the devotees devotional service fulfils all the goals of their lives. This is seen in this verse describing the Pandavas."

The meaning of this is that the devotees engage in direct devotional service to the Lord.

9 That devotional service is superior to performance of varnasrama-dharma is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.5.17):

"One who has forsaken his material occupations to engage in devotional service of the Lord may sometimes fall down while in an immature stage, yet there is no danger of his being unsuccessful. On the other hand, a non-devotee, though fully engaged in occupational duties, does not gain anything."*

Later in this book (Shrimad Bhagavatam) the activities of devotional service, which should be performed by all living entities, and which bring the greatest benefit, are listed in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.11.11):

"These are the general principles...hearing about the activities and instructions given by the Supreme Personality of Godhead (who is the shelter of the saintly persons), chanting about these activities and instructions, always remembering these activities and instructions, trying to render service, performing worship, offering obeisances, becoming a servant, becoming a friend and surrendering one's whole self."*

10 Shri Jada Bharata's faith in devotional service is described in this prose passage (Shrimad Bhagavatam 5.5.9.3.):

"Due to his being especially gifted with the Lord's mercy, Bharata Maharaja could remember the incidents of his past life. Although he received the body of a brahmana, he was still very much afraid of his relatives and friends who were not devotees. He was always very cautious of such association because he feared that he would again fall down. Consequently he manifested himself before the public eye as a madman-dull, blind, and deaf - so that others would not try to talk to him. In this way he saved himself from bad association. Within he was always thinking of the lotus feet of the Lord and chanting the Lord's glories, which save one from the bondage of fruitive action. In this way he saved himself from the onslaught of non devotee associates."

Shri Jada Bharata understood the foolishness of his offensive brothers and he also understood that the spiritual science of devotional service is superior to the duties of varnasrama-dharma. This is described in the following prose passage (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 5.9.9):

"After the father died, the nine stepbrothers of Jada Bharata, who considered Jada Bharata dull and brainless, abandoned the father's attempt to give Jada Bharata a complete education. The stepbrothers of Jada Bharata were learned in the three Vedah-the Rg Veda, Sama Veda, and Yajur Vedas - which very much encourage fruitive activity. The nine brothers were not at all spiritually enlightened in devotional service to the Lord. Consequently they could not understand the highly exalted position of Jada Bharata."*

11 Shri Nrsimha Purana explains:

"Brahma engaged the sages headed by Sanaka in renunciation, the sages headed by Marica in fruitive work, and Narada Muni in unalloyed devotional service."

12 Here the word "tena" (by him) refers to Lord Brahma. Only an appropriate and forced explanation will place the internal activities of direct devotional service, which begin with hearing about the Lord, among the external activities of varnasrama-dharma. In other places are described the activities of devotional service when they are mixed with other activities. This verse was spoken by Shri Narada to Shri Yudhisthira.

1 In the story of Jayanta this question was asked (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.30):

"Therefore, O completely sinless ones, I ask you to kindly tell me what the supreme good is. After all, even half a moment's association with pure devotees within this world of birth and death is a priceless treasure for any man."

The answer is given in this verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.33);

2 "I consider that one whose intelligence is constantly disturbed by his falsely identifying himself with the temporary material world can achieve real freedom from fear only by worshipping the lotus feet of the infallible Supreme Lord. in such devotional service all fear ceases entirely."

4 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"In the first verse he explains what is the supreme good."

The question is asked (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.31):

"Please speak about how one engages in the devotional service of the Supreme Lord, if you consider me capable of properly hearing these topics. When a living entity offers loving service to the Supreme Lord, the Lord is immediately satisfied and in return He will give even His own self to the surrendered soul."

The answer is given (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.34-36):

"Even ignorant living entities can very easily come to know the Supreme Lord if they adopt those means prescribed by the Supreme Lord Himself. The process recommended by the Lord is to be known as bhagavata-dharma, or devotional service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

"O king, one who accepts this process of devotional service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead will never blunder on his path in this world. Even while running with eyes closed, he will never trip or fall."

"In accordance with the particular nature one has acquired in conditioned life, whatever one does with body, words, mind, senses, intelligence, or purified consciousness one should offer to the Supreme,, thinking, 'This is for the pleasure of Lord Narayana.'"

Then, after saying this, he says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.37):

"When the living entity is attracted by the material energy, which is separate from Krishna, he is overpowered by fear. Because he is separated from the Supreme Personality of Godhead by the material energy, his conception of life is reversed. In other words, instead of being the eternal servant of Krishna, he becomes Krishna's competitor. This is called 'viparyay smrtih'. To nullify this mistake, one who is actually learned and advanced worships the Supreme Personality of Godhead as his spiritual master, worshipful Deity, and source of life. He thus worships the Lord by the process of unalloyed devotional service."*

In this verse the word "bhaktya" means "by engaging in devotional service that consists of many activities beginning with hearing and chanting the Lord's glories and that is not mixed with impersonal speculation and other things." "Ekaya" means "without interruption and performed with love."

1 Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.2.36) explains:

"In accordance with the particular nature one has acquired in conditioned life, whatever one does with body, words, mind, senses, intelligence or purified consciousness one should offer to the Supreme, thinking 'This is for the pleasure of Lord Narayana.'"

From this it is understood that even ordinary work becomes devotional service when offered to the Lord. This path, the path of always working for the Lord, seems to be opposed to the path of always performing the devotional activities that begin with hearing and chanting the Lord's glories. Actually, either of these paths may be followed with steady conviction. This steadiness is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.38):

2 "Although the duality of the material world does not ultimately exist, the conditioned soul experiences it as real under the influence of his own conditioned intelligence. This imaginary experience of a world separate from Krishna can be compared to the acts of dreaming and desiring. When the conditioned soul dreams at night of something desirable or horrible, or when he daydreams of what he would like to have or avoid, he creates a reality that has no existence beyond his own imagination. The tendency of the mind is to accept and reject various activities based on sense gratification. Therefore an intelligent person should control the mind, restricting it from the illusion of seeing things separate from Krishna, and when the mind is thus controlled he will experience actual fearlessness."

3 Here the word "dvayah" means "the duality of material existence, which began with the pradhana, or unmanifested modes of nature." although this duality does not exist (avidyamanah) in the heart of one who is pure, it is manifest (avabhati) in the mind (dhiya) of one rapt in meditation (dhyatuh) on ignorance. In this way it is manifest to the living entity who is originally pure. It is like (yatha) a dream (svapna) or thinking of desires (manoratha). That is the meaning. In this way the mind accepts some things and rejects others. This activity of the mind should be controlled. In that way, by engaging in unwavering devotional service, one becomes fearless. That is the meaning.

1 Fearing that someone may object, saying, "Is it not true that when one attempts to control the mind by repeated practice of yoga interruptions in his devotional service remain?" I say that one who engages in devotional service is attached to devotional service is successful in controlling the mind. The way this is done is explained in this second quotation (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.39):

2 "An intelligent person who has controlled his mind and conquered fear should give up all attachment to material objects such as wife, family and nation and should wander freely without embarrassment, hearing and chanting the holy names of the Lord, the bearer of the chariot wheel. The whole names of Krishna are all-auspicious because they describe His transcendental birth and activities, which He performs within this world for the salvation of the conditioned souls. Thus the holy names of the Lord are sung throughout the world."

3 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"The words 'janmani karmani namani tadarthakani' mean 'the Lord's births, deeds and names'. Fearing that someone may say 'It is not possible for one to properly understand the Lord's names', this verse says 'One should wander freely, hearing and chanting the famous holy names of the Lord.' Here the word 'asangah' means 'without material desire'."

This verse was spoken by Shri Kavi Videha.

1 Rejecting fruitive work and other activities, he prescribes direct devotional service (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.3.44-47):

"Childish and foolish people are attached to materialistic, fruitive, although the actual goal of life is to become free from such activities. Therefore, the Vedic injunctions indirectly lead one to the path of ultimate liberation by first prescribing fruitive religious activities, just as a father promises his child candy so that the child will take his medicine."

2 "If an ignorant person who has not conquered the material senses does not adhere to the Vedic injunctions, certainly he will engage in sinful and irreligious activities. Thus his reward will be repeated birth and death."

3 "By executing without attachment the regulated activities prescribed in the Vedas, offering the results of such work to the Supreme Lord, one attains the perfection of freedom from the bondage of material work. The material fruitive results offered in the revealed scriptures are not the actual goal of Vedic knowledge, but are meant for stimulating the interest of the performer."

4 "One who desires to quickly cut the knot of false ego, which binds the spiritual soul, should worship the Supreme Lord, Kesava, by the regulations found in Vedic literatures such as the tantras."

5 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments on 11.3.44:

The word 'paroksa-vadah' means 'concealment of the real nature of something by claiming it is something different than what it really is'. The Sruti-sastra (Aitareya Upanisad 1.3.14) explains, 'They call the four Vedic priests catur-huta. In this way the demigods are fond of using paroksa-vada'. In this verse the paroksa-vada is in the phrase beginning with the words 'karma-moksaya'.

6 "Here someone may object, 'Is it not true that the activities (karmani) given (dhatte) in the Vedas are meant not for ultimate liberation but only for attainment of Svargaloka?' To answer this he speaks the words beginning with 'balanam anusasanam'. Here the example of medicine (agadam) is given. By making him desire khana-laddu candies, a father makes his child drink medicine. First he makes the child drink the medicine, and then he gives him the candy. The goal here is not to give the child some candy. The goal is to cure him of the disease. In the same way the Vedas offer many material benefits only to give activities by which the living entities attain liberation."

7 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments on Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.3.45:

"Here someone may object, 'Is it not true that if liberation were the real goal of life then the speaker here would first have rejected all fruitive work?' To answer this he speaks this verse (11.3.45)."

8 The word "ajnah" is defined in this way: A person whose intelligence is full of faith in the devotional activities that begin with hearing about the Lord is a wise man (jna). A person who has no such faith is a fool

(ajna). That is the meaning. In the same way a person who has not conquered his material senses (ajitendriyah) cannot attain renunciation from the host of material pleasures that culminate in the happinesses experienced by the demigod Brahma, and neither can he be eager to understand the nature of the Supreme Spirit. That is the meaning.

9 Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.20.9) explains:

"As long as one is not satiated by fruitive activity and has not awakened his taste for devotional service by sravanam kirtanam visnoh, one has to act according to the regulative principles of the Vedic injunctions."

This verse describes a person who has neither faith nor renunciation.

10 By working in defiance of the Vedic injunctions (vikarmana) a person attains death after death (mrtyor mrtym upaiti) and he attains tortures as painful as dying. That is the meaning (in Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.3.45). However, by somehow renouncing all work one will not attain liberation. It is by offering one's work to the Lord that one attains His mercy. This kind of work is described (in Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.3.46) in the word "vedoktam" (the works prescribed by the Vedas). Therefore one is not forbidden to perform the works prescribed by the Vedas (vedoktam eva kurvanah), for by performing them one attains the perfection of freedom from the bondage of material work (naiskarmyam labhate siddhim).

11 Here someone may object: "Is it not true that by working in that way one will become attached to fruit of that work?" Here the reply is: No. By working in that way one remains unattached (nihsangah) and attains freedom from the bondage of material work (naiskarmyam). This happens because the results of work are offered (arpitam) to the Supreme Lord (isvare).

12 Here someone may object: "Is it not true that if one works because of hearing in the Vedas of a certain result, then he will certainly attain the result of that work?" The answer given here is: No. The Vedas describe these results only to attract (rocanartha) the people to perform these beneficial activities. Here the example is given of promising khanda-laddu candies to convince a child to drink medicine. In this way one should understand the Vedas' offering of certain attractive results for performing certain activities.

13 Shri Brhad-aranyaka Upanisad explains:

"He is a miserly man who does not solve the problems of life as a human and who thus quits this world like the cats and dogs, without understanding the science of self-realisation."*

3.8.10

"By observing celibacy and studying the Vedas, brahmanas try to understand the Supreme."

When they understand the highest knowledge learned by performing Vedic sacrifices and other auspicious activities described in the Vedas, they engage in activities that bring no karmic result.

The scriptures say, "Desiring to attain Svargaloka, one performs sacrifices." One who desires to attain Svargaloka is certainly not desireless. Still, eventually by performing auspicious activities he is automatically promoted to become free from karmic results. If this is so, then what can be said of attaining the Lord's mercy by offering to Him the fruits of one's work? That is the meaning.

14 In this way one gradually becomes free of karma. Shrimad Bhagavatam (4.31.14), however, explains:

"As pouring water on the root of a tree energises the trunk, branches, twigs and everything else, and as supplying food to the stomach enlivens the senses and limbs of the body, simply worshipping the Supreme Personality of Godhead through devotional service automatically satisfies the demigods, who are parts of that Supreme Personality."*

This verse describes the way to quickly satisfy all occupational duties, become free of karmic reactions, and cut the knot of false ego in the heart. This way is also explained in these words (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 11.3.47):

"One who desires to quickly cut the knot of false ego, which binds the spiritual soul, should worship the Supreme Lord, Kesava by the regulations found in Vedic literatures such as the tantras."

This verse means that one who desires to quickly (asu) cut the knot of false ego in the heart (hrdaya-granthim), which binds the spiritual soul (aparatmanah), should abandon all other duties and (and), worship Lord Kesava according to the regulations found in Vedic literatures such as the tantras (tantroktena).

One should not see the various demigods as independent of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.3.55):

"Thus the worshipper of the Supreme Lord should recognise that the Personality of Godhead is all-pervading and should worship Him through His presence in fire, the sun, water and other elements, in the heart of the guest one receives in one's home, and also in one's own heart. In this way the worshipper will very soon achieve liberation."

Here the word "atmanam" means "the Supersoul". This verse was spoken by Shri Avirhotra to Videha. Anuccheda 64

1 They who do not worship the Lord are described in the passage beginning with these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.5.1):

"My dear Yogendras, all of you are most perfect in knowledge of the science of the self. Therefore, kindly explain to me the destination of those who for the most part never worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Hari, who are unable to quench their material desires and who are not in control of their own selves."

2 This question is answered in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.5.2-3):

"Each of the four social orders, headed by the brahmanas, was born through different combinations of the modes of nature, from the face, arms, thighs and feet of the Supreme Lord in His universal form. Thus the four spiritual orders were also generated."

3 "If any of the members of the four varnas and four asramas fail to worship or intentionally disrespect the Personality of Godhead, who is the source of their own creation, they will fall down from their position into a hellish state of life."

4 Previously, in Shri Drumila's instructions, in the prayers the demigods offered to Lord Narayana, it was said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.4.10):

"The demigods place many obstacles on the path of those who worship You to transcend the temporary abodes of the demigods and reach Your supreme abode. Those who offer the demigods their assigned shares in sacrificial performances encounter no such obstacles. But because You are the direct protector of Your devotee, he is able to step over the head of whatever obstacles the demigods place before him."

5 This verse means: "They who offer (dadatah) the demigods their assigned shares (sva-bhagan) in sacrificial performances encounter no obstacles from the demigods (sura-krtah). However, out of envy the demigods do place many obstacles before they who serve You (tvam)." The word "yadi" here is used to show a conclusion, as in the statement "yadi vedah pramanam" (The Vedas are the highest authority). The conclusion here is "You (tvam) become their protector (avita). In this way one who serves You places (dhatte) his foot (padam) on the head (murdhni) of any obstacle (vighna). Making these obstacles like a stairway, the devotee goes to the Lord. That is the meaning. Hearing of the fate of the conditioned souls in the material world, King Videha asked the question posed in Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.5.1. Shri Camasa Muni answered that question in Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.5.2-3 and especially in the last line of Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.5.3, by describing the terrible condition of the conditioned souls. This verse was spoken by Shri Camasa Muni to the King of Videha.

1 Now that it is established that devotional service should be performed, the King of Videha asks another question (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.5.19):

"In what colours and forms does the Supreme Personality of Godhead appear in each of the different ages, and with what names and by what types of regulative principles is the Lord worshipped in human society."

2 The sage answered (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.5.20):

"In each of the four yugas, or ages-Krta, Treta, Dvapara and Kali - Lord Kesava appears with various complexions, names and forms and is thus worshipped by various processes."

3 Here the words "nanaiva vidhina" mean "by many different paths". This verse was spoken by Shri Karabhajana Muni to the king of Videha.

Anuccheda 66

1 Also, conversing with Uddhava, the Supreme Personality of Godhead said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.7.6):

"Now you should completely give up all attachment to your personal friends and relatives and fix your mind on Me. Thus being always conscious of Me, you should observe all things with equal vision and wander throughout the earth."

2 The Lord Himself said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.4.31):

"Uddhava is not inferior to Me in any way because he is never affected by the modes of material nature. Therefore he may remain in this world in order to disseminate specific knowledge of the Personality of Godhead."*

Because the Lord Himself thus described Uddhava as a perfect liberated soul, the Lord's giving instruction to Uddhava (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.7.6) is not meant for Uddhava but for others. In this way the verse should be understood to be addressed to others. Speaking in an oblique way, the Lord's intention here is to say, "Following your path, the devotees should wander over the earth." Here the word "sama-drk" means "Being neither repelled nor enamoured by those things that have no relationship with Me." The word "tu" (indeed) emphasises that one should renounce those things that have no relation to the Lord. That is what the Lord intended to say here.

3 Before the Lord even gave this instruction, Uddhava Himself said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.4.46-49):

"Simply by decorating ourselves with the garlands, fragrant oils, clothes and ornaments that You have already enjoyed, and by eating the remnants of Your meals, we, Your servants will indeed conquer Your illusory energy."

4 "Naked sages who seriously endeavour in spiritual practice, who have raised their semen upward, who are peaceful and sinless members of the renounced order, attain the spiritual abode called Brahman."

5-6 "O greatest of mystics, although we are conditioned souls wandering on the path of fruitive work, we will certainly cross beyond the darkness of this material world simply by hearing about Your Lordship in the association of Your devotees. Thus we are always remembering and glorifying the wonderful things You do and the wonderful things You say. We ecstatically recall Your amorous pastimes with Your confidential conjugal devotees and how You boldly smile and move about while engaged in such youthful pastimes. My dear Lord, Your loving pastimes are bewilderingly similar to the activities of ordinary people within this material world."

1 Impersonal knowledge (jnana-yoga) cannot bring any good result. Devotional service, however, very easily brings one to the desired goal. Real knowledge is only manifested in relation to devotional service, which itself brings one to the real goal of life. The Lord describes devotional service in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.11.17):

2 "For the purpose of maintaining his body, a liberated sage should not act, speak or contemplate in terms of material good or bad. Rather, he should be detached in all material circumstances, and taking pleasure in self-realisation, he should wander about engaged in this liberated life-style, appearing like a retarded person to outsiders."

3 After thus describing the jnana-yoga, the Lord in order to show the nature of devotional service, explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.11.18):

"If through meticulous study one becomes expert in reading Vedic literature but makes no endeavour to fix one's mind on the Supreme Personality of Godhead, then one's endeavour is certainly like that of a man who works very hard to take care of a cow that gives no milk. In other words, the fruits of one's laborious study of Vedic knowledge will simply be the labour itself. There will be no other tangible result."*

4 The word "para-brahman" means "the Absolute Truth" and, considering Them the same, does not distinguish between the impersonal Brahman and the Supreme Personality of Godhead. When one studies the Vedas he must also fix his mind on the para-brahman. That is said here. If many millions of times one carefully studies the Upanisads and the other parts of the Vedas he will not attain faith in the para-brahman. But if one fixes his mind on the form, pastimes, and other features of the supremely opulent Personality of Godhead, then by studying the Vedas he will attain faith in the impersonal Brahman and the Supreme Personality of Godhead both.

5 For this reason it is said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.4.40):

"For a person who is suffering in the fire of countless miseries and who desires to cross the insurmountable ocean of material existence, there is no suitable boat except that of cultivating devotion to the transcendental taste for the narrations of the Supreme Personality of Godhead's pastimes."*

6 It is also said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.40):

"My dear Lord, devotional service unto You is the only auspicious path. If one gives it up simply for speculative knowledge, or the understanding that these living beings are spirit souls and the material world is false, he undergoes a great deal of trouble. He only gains troublesome and inauspicious activities. His endeavours are like beating a husk that is already devoid of rice. One's labour becomes fruitless."*

Anuccheda 68

One should not study even Vedic literatures that do not contain descriptions of the Supreme Personality of Godhead's transcendental pastimes. The Lord Himself says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.11.19):

"My dear Uddhava, that man is certainly most miserable who takes care of a cow that gives no milk, an unchaste wife, a body totally dependent on others, useless children or wealth not utilised for the right purpose. Similarly, one who studies Vedic knowledge devoid of My glories is also most miserable."

In this verse the word "maya" (by Me) means "by the Supreme Personality of Godhead" and "hinam" means "without descriptions of the Supreme Personality of Godhead's pastimes and features."

1 The Lord explains the words "maya hinam" (without Me) in the next verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.11.20):

"My dear Uddhava, an intelligent person should never take to literatures that do not contain descriptions of My activities, which purify the whole universe. Indeed, I create, maintain and annihilate the entire material manifestation. Among all My pastime incarnations, the most beloved are Krishna and Balarama. Any so-called knowledge that does not recognise these activities of Mine is simply barren and is not acceptable to those who are actually intelligent."

2 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"This verse says 'What is the use of a scripture that does not contain descriptions of My pastimes, which purify the whole universe? In these pastimes I create, maintain and annihilate the universe. For that reason My pastimes purify the universe. As I think of My pastime-incarnations I say that My birth and pastimes as Lord Rama and Lord Krishna are the best. They are desired by the worlds. They are a great reservoir of spiritual love. Without them even the words of the Vedas are worthless. A wise man will not study such worthless Vedas.'"

3 This is also confirmed by Shri Narada Muni in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.5.22):

"Learned circles have positively concluded that the infallible purpose of the advancement of knowledge, namely austerities, study of the Vedas, sacrifice, chanting of hymns, and charity, culminates in the transcendental descriptions of the Lord, who is defined in choice poetry."*

4 For this reason Lord Chaitanya Mahaprabhu, the avatar that purifies Kali-yuga said:

"The Four Vedas and the Upanisads are far from the nectar descriptions of Lord Hari. That is why these scriptures do not make the heart melt, the body tremble, the body's hairs stand erect, and eyes become filled with tears."

1 After thus explaining that by engaging in devotional service one attains the perfection of all knowledge, he describes the final conclusion of following the path of knowledge (jnana) in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.11.21):

2 "Coming to this conclusion of all knowledge, one should give up the false conception of material variety that one imposes upon the soul and thus cease one's material existence. The mind should be fixed on Me, since I am all-pervading."

3 The word jijnasaya is explained in the beginning of this chapter (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.11.1):

"My dear Uddhava, due to the influence of the material modes of nature, which are under My control, the living entity is sometimes designated as conditioned and sometimes liberated. In fact, however, the soul is never really bound up or liberated, and since I am the supreme Lord of Maya, which is the cause of the modes of nature, I also am never to be considered liberated or in bondage."

1 After thus describing devotional service mixed with impersonal knowledge, in the next four verses, treating that mixed service with contempt, he describes pure devotional service, which contains perfect knowledge. He says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.11.22):

2 "My dear Uddhava, if you are not able to free your mind from all material disturbance and thus absorb it completely on the spiritual platform, then perform all your activities as an offering to Me, without trying to enjoy the fruits."*

3 This verse is like Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.11.1 which says:

"The demigods place many obstacles on the path of those who worship You to transcend the temporary abodes of the demigods and reach Your supreme abode. Those who offer the demigods their assigned shares in sacrificial performances encounter no such obstacles. But because You are the direct protector of Your devotee, he is able to step over the head of whatever obstacle the demigods place before him."

They who desire impersonal knowledge are actually like the materialists. Assuming that Uddhava is like them, Lord Krishna speaks this verse.

4 It is also said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.4):

"My dear Lord, devotional service unto You is the only auspicious path. If one gives it up simply for speculative knowledge, or the understanding that these living beings are spirit souls and the material world is false, he undergoes a great deal of trouble. He only gains troublesome and inauspicious activities. His endeavours are like beating a husk that is already devoid of rice. One's labour becomes fruitless."*

On this evidence Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.11.22 should be understood to mean, "It is not possible for you to fix your mind on Brahman simply by following the path of impersonal speculation without devotional service. Therefore you should take shelter of the path of devotional service, which is served by all the virtues of the path of knowledge and all other paths also."

Then the Lord explains how to ascend the stairway of devotional service. He says, "Perform all your activities as an offering to Me."

This verse may also be interpreted to mean, "If because in your previous births you had not engaged in devotional service, you wish to understand impersonal Brahman, and you are not able to fix your mind on Brahman, then perform all your activities as an offering to Me."

Here the word "samacara" means "offer" and "nirapeksah" means "without any other desire".

1 Then the Lord says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.11.23-24):

"My dear Uddhava, narrations of My pastimes and qualities are all-auspicious and purify the entire universe. A faithful person who constantly hears, glorifies and remembers such transcendental activities, who through dramatic performances relives My pastimes, beginning with My appearance, and who takes full shelter of Me, dedicating his religious, sensual and occupational activities for My satisfaction, certainly obtains unflinching devotional service to Me, the eternal Personality of Godhead."

2 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"In this verse the Lord describes confidential devotional service, which is eventually attained by offering fruits of one's work to the Lord, and which is performed by a person in pure goodness."

3 Here the word "abhinayan" means "the devotees portray the Lord's birth and pastimes in theatrical performances". Here "dharma" means "pious activities, such as giving cows in charity", and "mad-arthe" means "when these pious activities are performed to celebrate great festivals in honour of My birthday and other days sacred to Me." "Kama" means "the desire to live in a great palace and other desires like that", and "mad-arthe" means "when that desire is fulfilled by living in My temple in order to serve Me". "Artha" means "great wealth in My service". "Mad-apasrayah" means "in one's heart taking shelter of Me and no one else". "Labhate niscalam bhaktim mayi" means "he attains eternally unwavering devotional service to Me, service that consists of many activities beginning with hearing about Me". By tasting the happiness of devotional service one treats impersonal liberation and other things with contempt. The object of the devotees' service is eternal and never changes or ceases to exist. For this reason the Lord says He is "sanatane" (eternal).

1 Fearing that someone may ask, "What does one do on the path of devotional service?" or "How does one attain faith in the path of devotional service?" the Lord tells what and how in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.11.25):

2 "One who has obtained pure devotional service by association with My devotees always engages in worshipping Me."*

3 Here "bhaktya" means "with attraction to devotional service", "sah" means "the devotee" and "mam upasita" means "worships Me". The Lord says, "In this way the devotee easily attains knowledge of the spiritual form of Me, the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

Anuccheda 74

1 Then the Lord says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.11.25):

"Thus he very easily goes to My abode, which is revealed by My pure devotees."*

2 Here "anjasa" (very easily) means "by engaging in devotional service" and "padam" means "My abode". This verse was spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

1 The path of devotional service is most perfect, important, and ancient because it is personally taught by the Lord. Other paths, being taught by various conditioned souls according to their own speculations, are insignificant by comparison and relatively modern. This is confirmed by Uddhava (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.1-2):

2 "My dear Krishna, the learned sages who explain Vedic literature recommend various processes for perfecting one's life. Considering the varieties of viewpoint, my Lord, please tell me whether all these processes are equally important, or whether one of them is supreme."

3 "My dear Lord, You have clearly explained the process of unalloyed devotional service, by which a devotee removes all material association from his life, enable him to fix his mind on You."

4 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"Here the word 'sreyamsi' means 'the means for attaining the best thing'. Here he asks 'Are all these processes important, or is one of them supreme?' To establish that one of them actually is supreme, he speaks the second of these two verses. Here he says, 'The other paths are not spoken directly by You (the Lord), but the path of devotional service is directly spoken by You. Others claim that their methods are the best ways to attain perfection. How can they all be the best ways to attain it? How can they all give the same result? One of them must be the best.'"

1 The Supreme Personality of Godhead answered (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.3):

"By the influence of time, the transcendental sound of Vedic knowledge was lost at the time of annihilation. Therefore, when the subsequent creation took place, I spoke the Vedic knowledge to Brahma because I Myself am the religious principles enunciated in the Vedas."

2 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

Because it brings the best result devotional service is the best. The other paths, each according to its own nature, bring results insubstantial as flowers imagined to float in the sky, although the followers think their path is the best. To distinguish between these different paths and to establish the actual message of the Vedas, the Lord speaks these seven verses (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.3-9). Here the word "mad-atmakah" means "he who fixes his thoughts on Me."

"Mad-atmakah" may also mean "manifested from My transcendental form". The Lord's form is free from the modes of material nature. This will be proved later in this book.

1 Next the Lord gives the reason the followers of these different patha each claim their path is the best (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.9):

2 "O best among men, the intelligence of human beings is bewildered by My illusory potency, and thus, according to their own activities and whims, they speak in innumerable ways about what is actually good for people."

3 This verse means that according to their own natures their intelligence is bewildered by My illusory potency (man-maya-mohita-dhiyah). In this way they proclaim many different things (anekantam) to be the goal of life (sreyah) and the way to attain the goal of life.

Anuccheda 78

Then the Lord says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.20):

"My dear Uddhava, neither through astanga-yoga (the mystic yoga-system to control the senses), nor through impersonal monism or an analytical study of the Absolute Truth, nor through study of the Vedas, nor through practice of austerities, nor through charity, nor through acceptance of sannyasa can one satisfy Me as much as one can by developing unalloyed devotional service unto Me."*

Anuccheda 79

1 The Lord also says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.22):

"Neither religious activities endowed with honesty and mercy nor knowledge obtained with great penance can completely purify one's consciousness if they are bereft of loving service to Me."*

2 Here "dharma" means "religious duties performed without material motive", "vidya" means "the spiritual knowledge taught in the Vedic scriptures", and "tapah" means "austerities performed to become able to see the Supreme Personality of Godhead".

1 The Lord describes devotional service in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.26):

"When a diseased eye is treated with medicinal ointment it gradually recovers its power to see. Similarly, as a conscious living entity cleanses himself of material contamination by hearing and chanting the pious narrations of My glories, he regains his ability to see Me, the Absolute Truth, in My subtle spiritual form."*

2 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"Someone may object, 'Is it not true that the Sruti-sastra says:

One who knows Brahman attains the Supreme.

-Taittiriya Upanisad 2.1.2

and

By understanding the Supreme one crosses beyond death and therefore one attains the Supreme by attaining knowledge and becoming free of ignorance? What is the need for devotional service?"

- Svetasvatara Upanisad 3.8

"Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.26 answers this objection. There the word 'atma' means 'the heart', and 'parimrjyate' means 'becomes purified'. This occurs by hearing (sravanah) My names and the sacred songs about Me (mat-punya-gatha). The path of knowledge is a secondary aspect of devotional service. It is not completely separate from devotional service."

This verse was spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

1 Discussing the relative merits of the yogas of work (karma-yoga), knowledge (jnana-yoga), and devotional service (bhakti-yoga), in the next five verses the Lord treats knowledge and work with contempt and declares the primacy of devotional service. There, to show contempt for the diligent performance of austerities, He says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.20.29):

2 "When an intelligent person engages constantly in worshipping Me through loving devotional service as described by Me, his heart becomes firmly situated in Me. Thus all material desires within the heart are destroyed."

3 Here the word "ma" means "to Me".

Anuccheda 82

1 To show contempt for the diligent pursuit of knowledge the Lord says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.20.30):

"Thus the knot in the heart is pierced, and all misgivings are cut to pieces. The chain of fruitive actions is terminated when I am seen as the Supreme Personality of Godhead".*

2 The Lord is seen (drste), that is He personally appears before the devotee, by the power of devotional service.

1 There the Lord also says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.20.31):

"Therefore, for a devotee engaged in My loving service, with mind fixed on Me, the cultivation of knowledge and renunciation is generally not the means of achieving the highest perfection within this world."

2 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"In this verse three methods of attaining spiritual realisation are described. Because devotional service does not depend on any other method, and because other methods depend on devotional service, devotional service is the best. That is the conclusion of the three verses that begin here. Here the word 'mad-atmanah' means 'one whose mind is fixed on Me', and 'sreyah' means 'the best method of spiritual realisation'."

3 This verse means that for they who engage in devotional service there is no need for diligent practice of austerities and yoga. Some follow the path that immediately leads to liberation and others follow a path that gradually leads to liberation. The Lord describes the path that gradually leads to devotional service (Bhagavad-gita 18.54):

"One who is thus transcendently situated at once realises the Supreme Brahman. He never laments or desires to have anything. He is equally disposed to every living entity. In that state he attains pure devotional service unto Me."*

In pure love of God, which is the king of the results attained by engaging in devotional service, there is no scope for the cultivation of impersonal knowledge or the following of any other spiritual path.

1 Whatever good results are attained by following the path of jnana and other spiritual paths are also attained by engaging in devotional service. The Lord confirms this in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.20.32-33):

2-3 "Everything that can be achieved by fruitive activities, penance, knowledge, detachment, mystic yoga, charity, religious duties and all other means of perfecting life is easily achieved by My devotee through loving service unto Me. If somehow or other My devotee desires promotion to heaven, liberation, or residence in My abode, he easily achieves such benedictions."

4 Here the Lord says, "Anything (sarvam) that may be attained by other (itaraih) spiritual paths, such as going on pilgrimage to holy places and following religious vows, My devotee (mad-bhaktah) attains (labhate) by engaging in My devotional service (mad-bhakti-yogena). He attains it easily (anjasa) and without any great effort." What is the everything (sarvam) mentioned here? The Lord answers with the words "svargapavargam" (promotion to Svargaloka or liberation). "Svarga" means "material happiness" and "apavarga" means "the happiness of liberation, which is attained by gradually becoming situated in the platform of pure goodness". Then the Lord describes a happiness greater than even the happiness of impersonal liberation. He says "mad-dhama" (My abode), which refers to the realm of Vaikuntha. Sometimes one's material desires help him attain devotional service. King Citraketu's desire to attain Svargaloka is an example of that. How his material desire helped him attain devotional service is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.17.2-3):

5 "Being praised by great sages and saints and by the inhabitants of Siddhaloka and Caranaloka, Citraketu, the most powerful mystic yogi, wandered about enjoying life for millions of years. With bodily strength and senses free from deterioration, he travelled within the valleys of Sumeru Mountain, which is the place of perfection for various kinds of mystic power. In those valleys he enjoyed life with the women of Vidyadhara-loka by chanting the glories of the Supreme Lord, Hari."*

6 Shri Sukadeva Gosvami and other devotees desire liberation. For example, only when Lord Krishna Himself promised that the illusory potency maya would stay far away, was Sukadeva Gosvami willing to leave his mother's womb. This is described in Shri Brahma-vaivarta Purana.

7 That the desire for liberation may also help one attain devotional service is explained by the Lord Himself (Bhagavad-gita 18.54):

"One who is thus transcendently situated at once realises the Supreme Brahman. He never laments or desires to have anything. He is equally disposed to every living entity. In that state he attains pure devotional service unto Me."*

8 They who desire to attain Vaikunthaloka and there become a personal associated of the Lord and they who with love desire to directly serve the Lord's lotus feet attain their desires. This is described in Shrimad Bhagavatam (3.15.25) in these words:

"Persons whose bodily features change in ecstasy and who breathe heavily and perspire due to hearing the glories of the Lord are promoted to the kingdom of God, even though they do not care for meditation and other austerities. The kingdom of God is above the material universes, and it is desired by Brahma and other demigods."*

1 At the end of the Eleventh Canto the Lord says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.29.22):

"This process is the supreme intelligence of the intelligent and the cleverness of the most clever, for by following it one can in this very life make use of the temporary and unreal to achieve Me, the eternal reality."

2 Shрила Shridhara Svami comments:

"Here the Lord says, 'Devotional service to Me is attained by the proper use of intelligence (buddhi) and cleverness (manisa). It reveals the eternal reality (satyam and amrtam). By engaging in devotional service in this birth (iha) a person using the temporary (martyena) and unreal (anrtana) human body, which is subject to death, can attain Me (ma)'. That is real intelligence and cleverness. Here 'buddhi' means 'the intelligence, or the power of discrimination and manisa means cleverness'".

3 This is described in theses words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.72.21):

"Many persons, such as Hariscandra, Rantideva, Unchavrtti, Mudgala, Sibi, Bali, and the legendary hunter and pigeon, all attained the permanent world by utilising their temporary assets."

4 The reason for this is given in the previous description of devotional service. The verse quoted in the beginning of this section was spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Anuccheda 86

1 At the end of Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami's teachings the activities of hearing the Lord's glories are described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.4.40):

"For a person who is suffering in the fire of countless miseries and who desires to cross the insurmountable ocean of material existence, there is no suitable boat except that of cultivating devotion to the transcendental taste for the narrations of the Supreme Personality of Godhead's pastimes."

2 Shрила Shridhara Svami comments:

"The words 'na anyah plavah' means that there is no other way to cross. Therefore, as far as one is able, one should hear the descriptions of the Lord."

Of all the activities of devotional service hearing about the Lord is the first, because without it is not possible to perform the others. That is explained in other chapters of Shrimad Bhagavatam and it is also explained in these words at the conclusion of Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami's teachings (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.5.1):

3 "This Shrimad Bhagavatam has elaborately described in various narrations the Supreme Soul of all that be-the Personality of Godhead, Hari-from whose satisfaction Brahma is born and from whose anger Rudra takes birth."

4 After saying this, he says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.5.13):

"Beloved King Pariksit, I have narrated to you the topics you originally inquired about-the pastimes of Lord Hari, the Supreme Soul of the universe. Now, what more do you wish to hear?"*

5 Here, at the end of Sukadeva's teachings, he says that because hearing the previously described pastimes of the Lord is the best of spiritual activities, therefore devotional service, which has that hearing among its activities, is the best of spiritual paths.

Before that conclusion, however, Sukadeva Gosvami gives a lesson in jnana-yoga. e says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.5.2):

"O King, give up the animalistic mentality of thinking, 'I am going to die'. Unlike the body, you have not taken birth. There was not a time in the past when you did not exist and you are not about to be destroyed."

When this is understood one can have faith in devotional service. There this teaching is intended to make one steady in devotional service. To His unalloyed devotees the Supreme Personality of Godhead gives the greatest kind of liberation. He gives it to them because they have faith in Him and because for that reason they have given up all fear of death. After hearing the truth of jnana-yoga, King Pariksit had faith in devotional service, as will be described later in the Shrimad Bhagavatam.

6 Actually King Pariksit had faith in Lord Krishna from the very first. This is seen in the First Canto of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (1.19.5):

"Maharaja Pariksit sat down on the banks of the Ganges to concentrate his mind in Krishna consciousness, rejecting all other practices of self-realisation, because transcendental loving service to Krishna is the greatest achievement, superseding all other methods."*

There it is also said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.19.7):

"Thus the king, the worthy descendant of the Pandavas, decided once and for all and sat on the Ganges' bank to fast until death and give himself up to the lotus feet of Lord Krishna, who alone is able to award liberation. So, freeing himself from all kinds of associations and attachments, he accepted the vows of a sage."*

Because he had faith in Lord Krishna, King Pariksit became free of fear. He said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.19.15):

"O brahmanas, just accept me as a completely surrendered soul, and let mother Ganges, the representative of the Lord, also accept me in that way, for I have already taken the lotus feet of the Lord into my heart. Let the snake-bird-or whatever magical thing the brahmana created-bite me at once. I only desire that you all continue singing the deeds of Lord Vishnu."*

After hearing the truths of jnana-yoga, King Pariksit became firm in his faith toward Lord Krishna. Then, not considering the three-verse instruction in jnana-yoga to be very important, he engaged in devotional service by hearing about the Lord. In that way he attained the goal of life. Then he said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.6.2-4):

7 "I have now achieved the purpose of my life, because a great and merciful soul like you has shown such kindness to me. You have personally spoken to me this narration of the Supreme Personality of godhead, Hari, who is without beginning or end."

8 "I do not consider it at all amazing that great souls such as yourself, whose minds are always absorbed in the infallible Personality of Godhead, show mercy to the foolish conditioned souls, tormented as we are by the problems of material life."

9 "I have heard from you this Shrimad-Bhagavatam, which is the perfect summary of all the Puranas and which perfectly describes the Supreme Lord, Uttamahsloka."

10 Accepting the spiritual knowledge given by his guru, the king explained why he was not afraid of the serpent Taksaka. He asked permission to chant the Supreme Lord's holy names, meditate on Him, and dedicate his words and thoughts to Him. The king said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.6.5-6):

11 "My Lord, I have no fear of Taksaka or any other living being, or even of repeated deaths, because I have absorbed myself in that purely spiritual Absolute Truth, which you have revealed and which destroys all fear."

12 "O brahmana, please give me permission to resign my speech and the functions of all my senses unto Lord Adhoksaja. Allow me to absorb my mind, purified of lusty desires, within Him and to thus give up my life."

13 Then, in another verse, he says, "Now I have the perfections of knowledge, which dispels all ignorance and brings the happiness in the heart that comes from seeing the lotus feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead." He says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.6.7):

14 "You have revealed to me that which is most auspicious, the supreme personal feature of the Lord. I am now fixed in knowledge and self-realisation, and my ignorance has been eradicated."

15 Here the word "pada" means "the lotus feet of the Lord". In the First Canto it was said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.18.16):

"O Suta Gosvami, please describe those topics of the Lord by which Maharaja Pariksit, whose intelligence was fixed on liberation, attained the lotus feet of the Lord, who is the shelter of Garuda, the king of birds. Those types were vibrated by the son of Vyasa (Shrila Sukadeva)."

16 Shrila Suta Gosvami further explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.18.2 and 4):

"Furthermore, Maharaja Pariksit was always consciously surrendered to the Personality of Godhead, and therefore he was neither afraid nor overwhelmed by fear due to a snake-bird which was to bite because of the fury of a brahmana boy."*

17 "This was so because those who have dedicated their lives to the transcendental topics of the Personality of Godhead of whom the Vedic hymns sing, and who are constantly engaged in remembering the lotus feet of the Lord, do not run the risk of having misconceptions even at the last moment of their lives."*

18 Further explanations are found in the Twelfth Canto Third Chapter and the final chapter of the First Canto. In the First Canto King Pariksit asked (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.19.37):

"You are the spiritual master of great saints and devotees. I am therefore begging you to show the way to perfection for all persons, and especially for one who is about to die."*

19 In answer to the king's question, Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami taught him about meditation on and glorification of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. He said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.3.49-51):

20 "Therefore, O King, endeavour with all your might to fix the Supreme Lord Kesava within your heart. Maintain this concentration upon the Lord, and at the time of death you will certainly attain the supreme destination."

21 "My dear King, the Personality of Godhead is the ultimate controller. He is the supreme soul and the supreme shelter of all beings. When meditated upon by those about to die, He reveals to them their own eternal spiritual identity."

22 "My dear King, although Kali-yuga is an ocean of faults, there is still one good quality about this age. It is that simply by chanting the Hare Krishna maha-mantra, one can become free from material bondage and be promoted to the transcendental kingdom."*

23 In these verses "tatah" means "on Lord Kesava", "avihitah" means "concentrating your thoughts", and "atma-bhavam" means "devotion to the Lord". Meditating on the Lord is performed with great difficulty. However, glorifying the Lord is very easily done. That is the meaning.

24 This is also stated in Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.2.33-2-3-1:

"For those who are wandering in the material universe, there is no more auspicious means of deliverance than what is aimed at in the direct devotional service of Lord Krishna.*

"The great personality Brahma, with great attention and concentration of the mind, studied the Vedas three times, and after scrutinizingly examining them, he ascertained that attraction for the Supreme Personality of Godhead Shri Krishna is the highest perfection of religion.*

"The Personality of Godhead Lord Shri Krishna is in every living being along with the individual soul. And this fact is perceived and hypothesised in our acts of seeing and taking help from the intelligence.*

"O King, it is therefore essential that every living being hear about, glorify and remember the Supreme Lord, the Personality of Godhead, always and everywhere.*

"Those who drink through aural reception, fully filled with the nectarean message of Lord Krishna, the beloved of the devotees, purify the polluted aim of life known as material enjoyment and thus go back to Godhead, to the lotus feet of Him (the Personality of Godhead).*

"Shri Sukadeva Gosvami said: Maharaja Pariksit, as you have inquired from me as to the duty of the intelligent man who is on the threshold of death, so I have answered you."*

In this way the conclusion of the scriptures is that one should engage in pure devotional service, which has many different activities.

25 Shrimad Bhagavatam (2.2.37) explains:

"Those who drink through aural reception, fully filled with the nectarean message of Lord Krishna, the beloved of the devotees,, purify the polluted aim of life known as material enjoyment and thus go back to Godhead, to the lotus feet of Him (the Personality of Godhead)."

From this it may be seen that the statement that one should hear the narrations of the Supreme Lord's transcendental pastimes is the final, highest conclusion of the scriptures.

26 It was only to create a situation where faith in devotional service could be manifested that saintly Sukadeva Gosvami said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.5.2):

"O King, give up the animalistic mentality of thinking, 'I am going to die.' Unlike the body, you have not taken birth. There was not a time in the past when you did not exist, and you are not about to be destroyed."

For this reason it should be understood that the final conclusion of Sukadeva Gosvami's teachings is that one should engage in devotional service to the Supreme Lord.

27 That King Pariksit's questions were intended to bring replies describing devotional service and nothing else is confirmed in Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.8.3. where the king says:

"O greatly fortunate Sukadeva Gosvami, please continue narrating Shrimad Bhagavatam so that I can place my mind upon the Supreme Soul, Lord Krishna, and, being completely freed of material qualities, thus relinquish this body."*

28 That one should hear the glories of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the final conclusion of the Vedic scriptures is again confirmed by Shrimad Bhagavatam in these words (12.5.1 and 12.4.40):

"This Shrimad Bhagavatam has elaborately described in various narrations the Supreme Soul of all that be-the Personality of Godhead, Hari from whose satisfaction Brahma is born and from whose anger Rudra takes birth."

"For a person who is suffering in the fire of countless miseries and who desires to cross the insurmountable ocean of material existence, there is no suitable boat except that of cultivating devotion to the transcendental taste for the narrations of the Supreme Personality of Godhead's pastimes."

1 At the end of his instructions, Shri Suta Gosvami speaks five verses describing devotional service. In the first of these he says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.12.53):

"Knowledge of self-realisation, even though free from all material affinity, does not look well if devoid of a conception of the Infalible (God). What, then, is the use of even the most properly performed fruitive activities, which are naturally painful from the very beginning and transient by nature, if they are not utilised for the devotional service of the Lord?"*

2 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"This verse explains that devotional service, which begins with hearing the glories of the Lord, is much more important than speculative knowledge (jnana) or fruitive work (karma). Here 'naiskarmyam' means 'Brahman', 'yaj-jnanam', means 'the path that reveals Brahman', and 'niranjanam' means 'free from material designations'. If a path is devoid of a conception of God (acyuta-bhava-varjitam) it does not look well (na sobhate). That means that the Supreme Lord will not become revealed by following such a path."

1 Then he says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.12.34):

"The great endeavour one undergoes in executing the ordinary social and religious duties of the varnasrama system, in performing austerities, and in hearing from the Vedas, culminates only in the achievement of mundane fame and opulence. but by respecting and attentively hearing the recitation of the transcendental qualities of the Supreme Lord, the husband of the goddess of fortune, one can remember His lotus feet."

2 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"The activities of varnasrama-dharma (varnasramacaradisu) are performed with great (parah) labour (parisramah), but still they bring only material fame (yasah) and opulence (shriyam). They do not bring the highest goal of life. The highest goal of life is to attentively hear the transcendental qualities (gunanuvada) of the Supreme Lord, the husband of the goddess of fortune (shridhara), and remember (avismrtih) His lotus feet (pada-padmayoh)."

Anuccheda 89

Then he says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.12.55):

"Remembrance of Lord Krishna's lotus feet destroys everything inauspicious and awards the greatest good fortune. It purifies the heart and bestows devotion for the Supreme Soul along with knowledge enriched with realisation and renunciation."

Anuccheda 90

1 Then he says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.12.56):

"O most eminent of brahmanas, you are all indeed extremely fortunate, since you have already placed within your hearts Lord Shri Narayana-the Personality of Godhead, the supreme controller and the ultimate soul of all existence-beyond whom there is no other good. You have undeviating love for Him, and thus I request you to worship Him."

2 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"In these two verses he addresses the hearers. He says, 'O most eminent of Brahmanas (dvijagryah), please always (sasvat) worship (bhajata) Lord Narayana (shri-narayanam), who has entered (avivesya) your hearts (atmani).' The verb here is respectfully used in the imperative mood. The word 'bhuri-bhagah' means that they have performed many pious deeds. What is the Lord like? He is the Supersoul present in the hearts of all (akhilatma-bhutam), the Lord who should be worshipped by all (devam), the Supreme Lord beyond whom there is no other god (adevam). What is He like? He is the supreme controller (isam). Therefore 'You (yuyam) who are fortunate (bhuri-bhagah) because you have performed many austerities and other pious deeds, should worship (bhajata) Lord Narayana (narayanam).'"

Shridhara Svami's intention here is to say that by worshipping Lord Narayana one attains the auspicious result of having performed many austerities and pious deeds.

1 Then he says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.12.57):

"I have also now been fully reminded of the science of God, which I previously heard from the mouth of the great sage Sukadeva Gosvami. I was present in the assembly of great sages who heard him speak to King Pariksit as the monarch sat fasting until death."

2 Here he says "I have been reminded of the Supreme Truth (atma-tattvam), Lord Narayana (narayana) who is present in the hearts of all (akhilatma-bhutam). Now I yearn to attain Him." That is the meaning. He says, "From the mouth of the great sage I (me) heard (srutam) about the Supreme Truth (atma-tattvam)." These verses were spoken by Shrila Suta Gosvami.

1 In this way, in this beautiful Purana, in the teachings that have come from conversations between guru and disciple, the truth that devotional service is the highest spiritual path described in the Vedic literature is proved.

2 This is seen in the following verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.3.22):

"Please describe all these incidents if they relate to the topics of Lord Krishna. The devotees of the Lord are accustomed to licking up the honey available from the lotus feet of the Lord."*

3 In all the Itihasas there are many similar quotations. Afraid of increasing the volume of this book, I will not quote them all. In other places they may be seen.

4 Shrimad Bhagavatam (6.3.22) explains:

"Devotional service, beginning with the chanting of the holy name of the Lord, is the ultimate religious principle for the living entity in human society."*

5 Here the word "pumsam" means "of the living entities" and "paro dharmah" means "the religion of the entire world". There is no religion better than this. Then he describes the nature of this religion (etavan). He says it is direct devotional service (bhakti-yogah), which begins with chanting of the holy name of the Lord (grahanadibhih). The word "eva" (indeed) here clearly indicates that it is different from any other kind of religion. If the activities of devotional service, beginning with chanting the Lord's holy name were meant to attain the same results attained by fruitive work and other similar paths, then devotional service would not be superior. When one is an offender he will use devotional service to attain these insignificant goals. That is the meaning. Therefore devotional service is not meant to give results that are temporary. This verse was spoken by Shri Yama to his soldiers.

This is also explained in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.1.17):

"The path followed by pure devotee, who are well behaved and fully endowed with the best qualifications, is certainly the most auspicious path in this material world. It is free from fear, and it is authorised by the sastras."*

The path here is the path of devotional service to Lord Narayana. This verse is spoken by Shri Sukadeva Gosvami.

1 That devotional service is the result attained by hearing all Vedic scriptures is explained in these words, which proclaim "How much greater is devotional service!" (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.13.4):

"Persons who hear from a spiritual master with great labour and for a long time must hear from the mouths of pure devotees about the character and activities of pure devotees. Pure devotees always think within their hearts of the lotus feet of the Personality of Godhead, who awards His devotees liberation."*

2 Here "pumsam srutasya" means "of the understanding of the Vedas", meaning, "arthah" means "what should be done", and "iditah" means "is proclaimed". What is that? One should hear (anusravanam) about the character and activities (tat-tad-gunanam) of pure devotees, who (yesam) think within their hearts (hrayesu) of the lotus feet (padaravindam) of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who awards liberation (mukundasya). That is the meaning.

3 This is also described in Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.2.28:

"In the revealed scriptures, the ultimate object of knowledge is Shri Krishna, the Personality of Godhead. The purpose of performing sacrifice is to please Him. Yoga is for realising Him. All fruitive activities are ultimately rewarded by Him only. He is supreme knowledge, and all severe austerities are performed to know Him. Religion (dharma) is rendering loving service unto Him. He is the supreme goal of life."*

Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.2.34 explains:

"The great personality Brahma, with great attention and concentration of the mind, studied the Vedas three times, and after scrutinizingly examining them, he ascertained that attraction for the Supreme Personality of Godhead Shri Krishna is the highest perfection of religion."*

4 In the Brhat-sahasra-nama from the Padma Purana it is said:

"Krishna is the origin of Lord Vishnu. He should always be remembered and never forgotten at any time. All the rules and prohibitions mentioned in the sastras should be the servants of these two principles."*

5 In both the Skanda Purana Prabhasa-khanda and the Linga Purana it is said:

"By scrutinizingly reviewing all the revealed scriptures and judging them again and again, it is now concluded that Lord Narayana is the Supreme Absolute Truth and thus He alone should be worshipped."*

6 The Vedarpana-mantra (3.13) explains:

"My unborn Lord Vishnu, who is the father of austerities and knowledge and the deliverer from troubles, and for whose sake the knowers of Brahman perform austerities, become dear to me."

Anuccheda 95

1 Devotional service is the incomparable final result obtained by performing the activities of varnasrama-dharma prescribed by the Vedic scriptures. Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.47.24) explains:

2 "Devotional service unto Lord Krishna is attained by charity, strict vows, austerities and fire sacrifices, by japa, study of Vedic texts, observance of regulative principles and, indeed, by the performance of many other auspicious practices."

3 The auspicious activities beginning with giving charity, described here should be performed for the satisfaction of Shri Krishna. That should be understood. Shrimad Bhagavatam (4.31.9) explains:

"When a living entity is born to engage in the devotional service of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is the supreme controller, his birth, all his fruitive activities, his life-span, his mind and his words are all factually perfect."*

4 In Shri Brhan-naradiya Purana it is said:

"They who have pure devotion for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the deliverer from troubles, attain pious credits that take many thousands and millions of births to earn in other ways."

5 In the Agastya-samhita it is said:

"By following vows, fasting, controlling the senses, and performing many sacrifices for many millions of years one attains devotion to Lord Krishna, the husband of the goddess of fortune."

6 The superiority of devotional service is explained in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.2.8):

"The occupational activities a man performs according to his own position are only so much useless labour if they do not provoke attraction for the message of the Personality of Godhead."*

Shrimad Bhagavatam (12.12.54) says:

"The great endeavour one undergoes in executing the ordinary social and religious duties of the varnasrama system, in performing austerities and in hearing from the Vedas culminates only in the achievement of mundane fame and opulence. But by respecting and attentively hearing the recitation of the transcendental qualities of the Supreme Lord, the husband of the goddess of fortune, one can remember His lotus feet."*

The verse quoted in the beginning of this section was spoken by Shri Uddhava to the goddesses of Vraja.

1 The cultivation of transcendental knowledge is also described in Shrimad Bhagavatam. By engaging in devotional service one attains transcendental knowledge. This is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.5):

"O almighty Lord, in the past many yogis in this world achieved the platform of devotional service by offering all their endeavours unto You and faithfully carrying out their prescribed duties. Through such devotional service, perfected by the processes of hearing and chanting about You, they came to understand You. O infallible one, one could easily surrender to You and achieve Your supreme abode."*

2 This verse means: "O Lord (bhuman), in this world (iha) many yogis (bahavo pi yoginah), unable to attain transcendental knowledge by practice of yoga, offered (arpita) to You (tvayi) their ordinary prescribed duties (nija-karma) and in that way, by engaging in devotional service (bhaktya), which made them become attracted to hearing about You (kathopanitaya) and thus enabled them to approach You, they easily (anjah) understood (vibudhya) and directly experienced all knowledge, beginning with knowledge of the true nature of the self, and culminating in knowledge of the Personality of Godhead, and in this way they attained the supremely confidential abode (gatim)."

3 In Bhagavad-gita 10.8-11, the Lord revealed the nature of pure devotional service:

"I am the source of all spiritual and material worlds. Everything emanates from Me. The wise who perfectly know this engage in My devotional service and worship me with all their hearts.*

"The thoughts of My pure devotees dwell in Me, their lives are surrendered to Me and they derive great satisfaction and bliss enlightening one another and conversing about Me."*

"Those who are constantly devoted and worship Me with love, I give the understanding by which they can come to Me.*

4 "To show them special mercy, I, dwelling in their hearts destroy with the shining lamp of knowledge the darkness born of ignorance."*

Anuccheda 97

1 All other ways to attain other goals of life are also said to have their roots in devotional service. Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.81.19) explains:

2 "The worship of His feet is the root cause of any person's attainment of heaven or of liberation, of all sorts of prosperity in the subterranean regions or on the earth, or of mystic perfections."*

3 Shrimad Bhagavatam (8.23.16) explains:

"There may be discrepancies in pronouncing the mantras and observing the regulative principles, and, moreover, there may be discrepancies in regard to time, place, person and paraphernalia. But when You Lordship's holy name is chanted, everything becomes faultless."*

Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.5.2-3) again explains:

"Each of the four social orders, headed by the brahmanas, was born through different combinations of the modes of nature, from the face, arms, thighs and feet of the Supreme Lord in His universal form. Thus the four spiritual orders were also generated."

"If any of the members of the four varnas and four asramas fail to worship or intentionally disrespect the Personality of Godhead, who is the source of their own creation, they will fall down from their position into a hellish state of life."

In this way it should be understood that one should perform devotional service always and in all ways. The many things that cannot be attained by external, non-devotional activities, may be attained by engaging in devotional service.

4 Skanda Purana explains:

"When performed by they who have no devotion for Lord Vishnu, the pious activities described in the Sruti and Smṛti bring results that torture the body, results like the sins of prostitutes."

5 Shri Yudhisthira explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.72.4):

"Purified persons who constantly serve the slippers on Your feet, meditate upon them and glorify them as the destroyers of all inauspiciousness are sure to realise the cessation of material existence, O lotus-aveled one. Even if they have some desires, they will obtain the fulfilment of these, whereas other person are never satisfied in the pursuit of material desires."

6 It is said in Brhan-naradiya Purana:

"As water gives life to everyone, so devotional service gives life to the attainment of desires."

7 The verse quoted in the beginning of this section was spoken by Shridama-viprah.

Anuccheda 98

1 In this way it is shown that devotional service gives life to these various methods by which one attains his desires. Therefore, in all the Vedas it is said that one should perform devotional service. Also, without even performing any other activities one can simply perform devotional service alone. This is shown in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.3.10):

"A person who has broader intelligence, whether he be full of material desire, without any material desire, or desiring liberation, must by all means worship the supreme whole, the Personality of Godhead."*

2 In Shri Vishnu Purana, Pulaha Muni said:

"What is not attained when the Supreme Lord, who is the deliverer from evils, who in Vedic yajnas is the Yajna-purusa, and who in yoga is the Supreme Person, is pleased?

3 "Without performing any other activities, a person who takes shelter of Lord Narayana automatically attains the four goals of life."

4 Therefore the result of hearing all the Vedic scriptures is that one comes to understand that he should engage in devotional service to the Lord, who Himself confirms this in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.3):

"By the influence of time, the transcendental sound of Vedic knowledge was lost at the time of annihilation. Therefore, when the subsequent creation took place, I spoke the Vedic knowledge to Brahma because I Myself am the religious principles enunciated in the Vedas."

5 This being so, they who are not very wise worship Lord Vishnu in order to attain the various benefits otherwise attained by the other spiritual processes beginning with karma-yoga. Because of committing offenses, these people's worship of the Lord brings them only the fulfilment of these desires and nothing more. In this way one need only engage in devotional service to fulfil these desires. However, much more than this, devotional service gives, the greatest benefit. Shrimad Bhagavatam (5.19.27) explains:

6 "The Supreme Personality of Godhead fulfils the material desires of a devotee who approaches Him with such motives, but He does not bestow benedictions upon the devotee that will cause him to demand more benedictions again. However, the Lord willingly gives the devotee shelter at His own lotus feet, even though such a person does not aspire for it, and that shelter satisfies all his desires. That is the Supreme Personality's special mercy."*

7 This verse means "He certainly (satyam) fulfils the requests (arthitam) of the human beings (nrnam) who ask (arthitah) Him." He never gives something that will lead one astray. In that sense He is not always "artha-dah" (the bestower of benedictions). He only gives benedictions that, once given, the receiver does not return. That is the meaning. This means that because of feeling unfulfilled when the happiness obtained in that benediction wanes, the person returns and asks for another benediction. This is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 9.19.14):

"As supplying butter to a fire does not diminish the fire but instead increases it more and more, the endeavour to stop lusty desires by continual enjoyment can never be successful. (In fact one must voluntarily cease from material desires)."

8 The supremely merciful Lord, understanding this, gives (vidhatte) His lotus feet (nija-pada-pallavam), which satisfy all desires (icchapidhanam), to the devotees (bhajatam) who, because they do not know the sweetness present in His lotus feet, do not desire to attain them (anicchatam). He is like a mother that takes from her son's mouth the clay he was eating and gives him a candy instead. That is the meaning.

9 The great power of devotional service is again shown in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.3.10):

"A person who has broader intelligence, whether he be full of material desire, without any material desire, or desiring liberation, must by all means worship the supreme whole, the Personality of Godhead."*

10 In Garuda Purana it is said:

"When someone meditates on Him, Lord Krishna gives, even though unasked, an unattainable rare treasure the mind cannot even comprehend."

11 It should be understood that in this way the knowers of Brahman, who have Sanaka-kumara as their leader, attained the lotus feet by engaging in devotional service.

Anuccheda 99

1 Glorifying devotional service and condemning fruitive work (karma), Shrimad Bhagavatam explains that fruitive work is painful to perform and brings an uncertain result, whereas devotional service is kind to the practitioner, is easily and happily performed, and brings a certain result. This is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.18.12):

2 "We have just begun the performance of this fruitive activity, a sacrificial fire, without certainty of its results due to the many imperfections in our action. Our bodies have become black from the smoke, but we are factually pleased by the nectar of the lotus feet of the Personality of Godhead, Govinda, which you are distributing."*

3 The words "asmin karmani" mean "in this sacrifice" and "anasvase" means "without certainty of result". The result is uncertain because of the presence of many unknown factors. The result is uncertain as, for example, it is in agriculture. However, it is said here that the result of performing devotional service is certain. The phrase "dhuma-dhumratmanam" means "our bodies and minds have become dirtied by the smoke". The word here is in the genitive case. It means "of us". That is the meaning.

4 Here "pada-padmasavam" means "the nectar of the lotus feet" and "madhu" means "honey". The two activities here are: 1. the fruitive activity of this sacrifice and 2. devotional service, where there is hearing the glories of the Lord. The sages here say, "These non-devotional fruitive activities have made us unhappy". In this way the superiority of devotional service is established.

5 This is also described in Shrimad Bhagavatam (12.12.54):

"The great endeavour one undergoes in executing the ordinary social and religious duties of the varnasrama system, in performing austerities, and in hearing from the Vedas culminates only in the achievement of mundane fame and opulence. But by respecting and attentively hearing the recitation of the transcendental qualities of the supreme Lord, the husband of the goddess of fortune, one can remember His lotus feet."

Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.2.22) again explains:

"Certainly therefore, since time immemorial, all transcendentalists have been rendering devotional service to Lord Krishna, the Personality of Godhead, with great delight, because such devotional service is enlivening to the self."*

6 In Brahman-vaivarta Purana Lord Vishnu tells Lord Siva:

"If the living entities desire to attain Me they should take shelter of Me. Their hearts polluted by Kali-yuga, the followers of varnasrama waste their lives and everything they possess. This is not true for they who take shelter of Me. They do not waste their lives."

This verse quoted in the beginning of this section was spoken by the sages to Shri Suta Gosvami.

1 This is also explained in Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.5.17:

"One who has forsaken his material obligations to engage in the devotional service of the Lord may sometimes fall down while in an immature stage, yet there is no danger of his being unsuccessful. On the other hand, a non devotee, though fully engaged in occupational duties, does not gain anything."*

2 By performing the activities of karma-yoga (fruitive work) and other spiritual paths like it, which require great effort, great expense and many other things, one attains only pathetically insignificant results, of which the attainment of Svargaloka is the most prominent. However, by performing the activities of devotional service, which require only slight effort, slight expense, and slight use of any other things, one attains the greatest result. Therefore the conclusion of the Vedic literatures is that one should perform devotional service. Many Vedic scriptures declare that one should perform devotional service and therefor the performance of devotional service is never done in vain. That is the meaning. Furthermore, Shrimad Bhagavatam (7.9.10)

explains:

3 "If a brahmana has all twelve of the brahmanical qualifications (as they are stated in the book called Sanat-sujata) but is not a devotee and is averse to the lotus feet of the Lord, he is certainly lower than a devotee who is a dog eater but who has dedicated everything-mind, words, activities,, wealth, and life-to the Supreme Lord. Such a devotee is better than such a brahmana because the devotee can purify his whole family, whereas the so-called brahmana in a position of false prestige cannot purify even himself."*

4 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"Lord Hari is satisfied by unalloyed devotional service. Nothing but devotional service satisfies Him. That is stated in this verse.

5 "Prahlada Maharaja had previously mentioned the twelve brahmanical qualities, beginning with aristocratic wealth, in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.9.9.):

"One may possess wealth, an aristocratic family, beauty, austerity, education, sensory expertise, lustre, influence, physical strength, diligence, intelligence and mystic yoga power, but I think that even all these qualifications one cannot satisfy the Supreme Personality of Godhead. However, one can satisfy the Lord simply by devotional service. Gajendra did this, and thus the Lord was satisfied with him."*

"Here he says: 'I think (manye) that a dog eater (svapacam) who is a devotee is better (varistham) than a brahmana (viprat) who has these twelve (dvi-sat) qualities."

6 The Sanat-sujata gives this list, which begins with piety, of the twelve brahmanical qualities:

"Piety, truthfulness, sense control, austerity, non-jealousness, humility, tolerance, aversion to fault finding, performance of sacrifice, giving in charity, patience, scholarship, and observance of vows are the twelve qualities of a brahmana."

7 "What is the brahmana (viprat) mentioned here like? He is averse (vimukhat) to the lotus feet of the louts-naveled Lord (aravinda-nabha-padaravinda). What is the dog-eater (svapacam) like? He has dedicated (arpita) his mind (manah) and everything else to the lotus-naveled Lord. Here the word 'ihitam' means 'work'. For this reason this kind of dog-eater is better. Such a dog-eater purifies (punati) his entire family (kulam). However (tu), a proud (bhuri-manah) brahmana cannot purify himself, what to speak of his family. Therefore, for one who does not engage in devotional service these brahmanical qualities only lead to pride. They do not lead to faith in the Lord."

8 The Muktapala -tika explains:

"The twelve (dvi-sat) qualities of a brahmana are given in a list beginning with aristocratic wealth (dhana) and high birth (abhijana), or, an alternate list is also given in these words:

"Peacefulness, self-control, austerity, purity, tolerance, honesty, wisdom, knowledge, satisfaction, truthfulness, and religiousness are the twelve qualities of a brahmana."

9 In the Skanda Purana, Narada Muni explains:

"A person who, although not born in an aristocratic family and unaware of the niceties of refined conduct, controls his senses and engages in unwavering devotional service to the Supreme Lord, is famous and glorious among men. However, a peaceful, nobly born brahmana, religious and learned in the eighteen sciences, but who does not serve the Lord, is not glorious at all."

10 In the Kasi-khanda it is said:

"A brahmana, ksatriya, vaisya, or sudra engaged in devotional service to Lord Vishnu, is the greatest of persons."

11 In Brhan-naradiya Purana:

"They who do not devotedly serve Lord Vishnu are outcastes. Outcastes who serve Him with devotion are the best of men."

12 In the Brhan-naradiya Purana:

"O King, a dog-eater that is a devotee of Lord Vishnu is greater than a brahmana. A brahmana that has no devotion for Lord Vishnu is lower than a dog-eater."

13 In the verse quoted in this section it was said that a devotee purifies (punati) his family (kulam). This proves that he also greatly purifies himself. Shrimad Bhagavatam (2.4.18) explains:

14 "Kirata, Huna, Andhra, Pulinda, Pulkasa, Abhira, Sumbha, Yavana, members of the Khasa races and even others addicted to sinful acts can be purified by taking shelter of the devotees of the Lord, due to His being the supreme power. I beg to offer my respectful obeisance unto Him."*

15 This first quote was spoken by Prahlada Maharaja to Lord Nrsimha.

1 The brahmanas engaged in performing sacrifices said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.23.40):

"To hell with our threefold birth, our vow of celibacy, and our extensive learning! To hell with our aristocratic background, and our expertise in the rituals of sacrifice! These are all condemned because we were inimical to the transcendental Personality of Godhead."

2 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"The word 'trivrt' refers to three births: 1. initiation, 2. acceptance of the sacred thread, and 3. initiation in the performance of Vedic sacrifices. The word 'vratam' means 'the vow of celibacy', and the word 'kriya-daksyam' means 'expertise in performing rituals'."

3 Shrimad Bhagavatam (4.31.10) also explains:

"A civilised human being has three kinds of births. The first birth is by a pure father and mother and this birth is called birth by semen. The next birth takes place when one is initiated by the spiritual master, and this birth is called savitra. The third birth, called yajnika, takes place when one is given the opportunity to worship Lord Vishnu. Despite the opportunities for attaining such births, even if one gets the life-span of a demigod, if one does not actually engage in the service of the Lord, everything is useless. Similarly, one's activities may be mundane or spiritual, but they are useless if they are not meant for satisfying the Lord."*

The verse quoted in the beginning of this section was spoken by the brahmanas engaged in performing sacrifices.

Anuccheda 102

1 Even offering to the Lord the fruits of work is not treated with much respect in these words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.2.14):

"Therefore, with one-pointed attention, one should constantly hear about, glorify, remember and worship the Personality of Godhead, who is the protector of the devotees."*

2 If one is not able to engage in the direct devotional service of hearing and chanting the Lord's glories he should offer to the Lord the fruits of his work. The Lord explains this in Bhagavad-gita (12.8-11):

"Just fix your mind upon Me, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and engage all your intelligence in Me. Thus you will live in Me always without a doubt.*

3 "My dear Arjuna, O winner of wealth, if you cannot fix your mind upon Me without deviation, then follow the regulative principles of bhakti-yoga. In this way develop a desire to attain Me.*

4 "If you cannot practice the regulations of bhakti-yoga, then just try to work for Me, because by working for Me you will come to the perfect stage.*

5 "If, however, you are unable to work in this consciousness of Me, then try to act giving up all results of your work and try to be self-situated.*

6 In the Padma Purana, Karttika-mahatmya, it is said:

7 "A brahmana named Vishnu dasa competed with the king of Cola-desa. The brahmana purely worshipped and served the Supreme Lord, and he then attained the Lord. The king offered many Vedic sacrifices to the Lord, but he did not attain the Lord. Seeing that the brahmana had attained the Lord, the king renounced his sacrificial activities and said:

8 "I competed with him by performing many sacrifices and giving wealth in charity, and yet it was he, the brahmana that attained a spiritual form like Lord Vishnu and went to the abode of Vaikuntha.

9 "Therefore Lord Vishnu is not pleased by many sacrifices and much giving in charity. He is pleased by devotional service."

10 "Then he said to Mudgala Muni:

"Standing before the sacrificial arena, the king loudly called three times: 'Give me eternal engagement, with my mind, words, body and deeds, in devotional service to Lord Vishnu!'"

11 "After saying this, the king humbly and steadily accepted the path of pure devotional service. Giving up his body at the sacrificial arena, he then attained the Lord."

12 Holding the practice of yoga in low esteem Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.51.60) explains:

"The minds of non-devotees who engage in such practices as pranayama are not fully cleansed of material desires. Thus, O king, the material desires are again seen to arise in their minds."

13 Here the word "utthitam" means "inclined to sense gratification". The verse quoted in the beginning of this section was spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead to King Mucukunda.

Anuccheda 103

1 Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.6.35) again explains :

"It is true that by practicing restraint of the senses by the yoga system one can get relief from the disturbances of desire and lust, but this is not sufficient to give satisfaction to the soul, for this (satisfaction) is derived from devotional service to the Personality of Godhead."*

2 The Lord very eloquently says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.20):

"My dear Uddhava, neither through astanga-yoga (the mystic yoga system to control the senses), nor through impersonal monism or an analytical study of the Absolute Truth, nor through study of the Vedas, nor through practice of austerities, nor through charity, nor through acceptances of sannyasa can one satisfy Me as much as one can by developing unalloyed devotional service unto Me."*

The verse quoted in the beginning of this section was spoken by Shri Narada to Shri Vyasa.

1 Now the inferior position of the impersonalists speculative search for knowledge (jnana) will be described. Because such knowledge is attained only with great difficulty the path of impersonal knowledge is inferior. This is seen in the following two verses (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.5.45-46):

"O Lord, persons who, because of their serious attitude, attain the stage of enlightened devotional service achieve the complete meaning of renunciation and knowledge and attain the Vaikunthaloka in the spiritual sky simply by drinking the nectar of Your topics.*

"Others, who are pacified by means of transcendental self realisation and have conquered over the modes of nature by dint of strong power and knowledge, also enter into You. But for them there is much pain, whereas the devotee simply discharges devotional service and thus feels no such pain."*

2 In the teaching of the four Kumaras it is said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.22.40):

"The ocean of nescience is very difficult to cross because it is infested with many dangerous sharks. Although those who are non-devotees undergo severe austerities and penances to cross that ocean, we recommend that you simply take shelter of the lotus feet of the Lord, which are like boats for crossing the ocean. Although the ocean is difficult to cross, by taking shelter of His lotus feet you will overcome all dangers."*

3 Also, in Shri Bhagavad-gita (12.1-5):

"Arjuna inquired: Which are considered to be more perfect, those who are always properly engaged in Your devotional service or those who worship the impersonally Brahman, the unmanifested?*

4 "The Supreme Personality of Godhead said: Those who fix their minds on My personal form and are always engaged in worshipping Me with great and transcendental faith are considered by Me to be most perfect.*

5-6 "But those who fully worship the unmanifested, that which lies beyond the perception of the senses, the all-pervading, inconceivable, unchanging, fixed and immovable-the impersonal conception of the Absolute Truth-by controlling the various senses and being equally disposed to everyone, such persons, engaged in the welfare of all, at last achieve Me.*

7 "For those whose minds are attached to the unmanifested, impersonal feature of the Supreme, advancement is very troublesome. To make progress in that discipline is always difficult for those who are embodied."*

8 A person does not become fatigued by following the path of devotional service. Also, by engaging in devotional service one attains the unprecedented result of brining the Supreme Personality of Godhead under one's control. This is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.3):

9 "My dear Lord, those devotees who have thrown away the impersonal conception of the Absolute Truth and have therefore abandoned discussing empiric philosophical truths should hear from self-realised devotees about Your holy name, form, pastimes and qualities. They should completely follow the principles of devotional service and remain free from illicit sex, gambling, intoxication and animal slaughter. Surrendering themselves fully with body, words, and mind, they can live in any asrama or social status. Indeed, you are conquered by such persons, although You are always unconquerable."*

10 In this verse "udapasya" means "even doing only slightly", "sthane sthitah" means "staying with the devotees", "san-mukharitam bhavadiya-vartam" means "the news about You, which is repeatedly spoken by the devotees", "sruti-gatam" means "by associating with the devotees one hears the news of the Lord", "prayasah" means "almost always", and "tanu-van-manobhir namanto ye jivanti" means "worshipping You with their body, words, and mind, they live their lives." Although they do not do anything more than that, they conquer You, even though You are always unconquerable by others (trilokyam ajito pi jitah).

11 In Shri Nrsimha Purana it is said:

"By offering Him a fruit, a leaf, a flower, or some water, the devotees easily attain the ancient Supreme Person. Why would they want to struggle to attain impersonal liberation?"

Anuccheda 105

1 Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.14.4) explains:

"My dear Lord, devotional service unto You is the only auspicious path. If one gives it up simply for speculative knowledge or the understanding that these living beings are spirit souls and the material world is false, he undergoes a great deal of trouble. He only gains troublesome and inauspicious activities. His endeavours are like beating a husk that is already devoid of rice. One's labour becomes fruitless."*

2 Shridhara Svami comments:

"This verse means that without devotional service transcendental knowledge does not become perfect. The word "reyah" here means "material prosperity and liberation", "srtim" means "a path, like the path taken by a swiftly moving mountain stream", "te" means "of You", and "bhaktim udasya" means "having abandoned the best path, which is devotional service." For these people (tesam) there are indeed (eva) only troubles (klesalah). This verse means that if one rejects a small amount of rice and instead beat empty husks that have no rice within, he will not get any result. In the same way, persons who consider devotional service unimportant labour to attain transcendental knowledge (kevala-bodha-labdhye), but they do not gain any result."

3 Here the words "vibho" and "kevala", which means "O pure one", are in the vocative case. "Asau" means "the thing being looked at" and "klesalah" means "troublesome because of the need to accept sannyasa and do many other things".

4 These are described in Bhagavad-gita (13.8-11), where the Supreme Personality of Godhead said:

"Humility, pridelessness, non violence, tolerance, simplicity, approaching a bona fide spiritual master, cleanliness, steadiness, self-control, renunciation of the objects of sense gratification, absence of false ego, the perception of the evil of birth, death, old age and disease, detachment, freedom from entanglement with children, wife, home and the rest, even mindedness amid pleasant and unpleasant events, constant and unalloyed devotion to Me, aspiring to live in a solitary place, detachment from the general mass of people, accepting the importance of self-realisation, and philosophical search for the Absolute Truth-all these I declare to be knowledge, and besides this whatever there may be is ignorance."*

5 There is no real knowledge without devotional service. That is the meaning here. The Lord Himself says (Bhagavad-gita 13.19):

"Thus the field of activities (the body), knowledge and the knowable have been summarily described by Me. Only My devotees can understand this thoroughly and thus attain to My nature."*

6 The Lord also says (Bhagavad-gita 9.3):

"Those who are not faithful in this devotional service cannot attain Me, O conqueror of enemies. Therefore they return to the path of birth and death in this material world."*

7 In an earlier passage of Bhagavad-gita, the Lord had also described devotional service in these words (Bhagavad-gita 9.14):

"Always chanting My glories, endeavouring with great determination, bowing down before Me, these great souls perpetually worship Me with devotion."*

Even though Mudgala and others are not clearly described as having performed devotional service, it should be understood that they performed the beginning activities of devotional service (sadhana-bhakti) at least.

1 The attempt to be independent of the Lord or to take shelter of someone other than the Lord is treated with contempt in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.9.22):

"Free from all material conceptions of existence and never wonderstruck by anything, the Lord is always jubilant and fully satisfied by His own spiritual perfection. He has no material designations, and therefore He is steady and unattached. The Supreme Personality of Godhead is the only shelter of everyone. Anyone desiring to be protected by others is certainly a great fool who desires to cross the sea by holding the tail of a dog."*

2 The word "avismitam" means "because there is nothing that He does not already know, the Lord is never surprised by anything." "Avismitam" may also be interpreted to mean that the Lord is eternally smiling". "Svenaiva labhena paripurna-kamam" means "by His own activities His desires are fulfilled." The Lord does not need anyone else to fulfil His desires. That is the meaning. "Samam" means "He is equipoised in all circumstances", "prasantam" means "He is peaceful because His heart is free of all impurity", "balisah" means "a fool who is not dear to the Lord", and "atititarti" means "desires to cross".

3 These fools are described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.2.27):

"Those who are in the modes of passion and ignorance worship the forefathers, other living beings and the demigods who are in charge of cosmic activities, for they are urged by a desire to be materially benefited with women, wealth, power and progeny."*

4 In Skanda Purana in the conversation of Brahma and Narada, it is said:

"One who neglects Lord Vasudeva and worships someone else neglects his mother and bows down before a degraded woman."

5 In another place in the Skanda Purana it is also said:

"One who turns from Lord Vasudeva and worships someone else is a bewildered fool that turns from nectar and drinks the violent poison halahala."

6 In the Mahabharata it is said:

"One who turns from Lord Vishnu and worships someone else is a person that rejects a pile of gold and takes instead a pile of dust."

7 Shri Satyavrata Muni tells the Lord (Shrimad Bhagavatam 8.24.49):

"Neither all the demigods, nor the so-called gurus nor all other people, either independently or together, can offer mercy that equals even on ten-thousandth of Yours. Therefore I wish to take shelter of Your lotus feet."*

8 That both Brahma and Siva are devotees of Lord Vishnu and engage in His devotional service is described in Shrimad Bhagavatam. About Lord Brahma it is said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.9.5-9):

"Lord Brahma, the first spiritual master, supreme in the universe, could not trace out the source of his lotus seat, and while thinking of creating the material world, he could not understand the proper direction for such creative work, nor could he find out the process for such creation."*

"While thus engaged in thinking, in the water Brahmaji heard twice from nearby two syllables joined together. One of the syllables was taken from the sixteenth and the other from the twenty first of the sparsa alphabets and joined to become the wealth of the renounced order of life.*

"When he heard the sound, he tried to find the speaker, searching on all sides. But when he was unable to find anyone besides himself he thought it wise to sit down on his lotus seat firmly and give his attention to the execution of penance, as he was instructed.*

"Lord Brahma underwent penances for one thousand years by the calculations of the demigods. He heard this transcendental vibration from the sky, and he accepted it as divine. Thus he controlled his mind and senses, and the penances he executed were a great lesson for the living entities. Thus he is known as the greatest of ascetics.*

"The Personality of Godhead, being thus very much satisfied with the penance of Lord Brahma, was pleased to manifest His personal abode, Vaikuntha, the supreme planet above all others. This transcendental abode of the Lord is adored by all self-realised persons freed from all kinds of miseries and fear of illusory existence."*

Lord Siva is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.13.16):

"As the Ganges is the best of rivers, infallible Lord Krishna is the best of deities and Siva is the best of the worshippers of Lord Vishnu, so Shrimad Bhagavatam is the best of Puranas."

9 This is also described in the Twelfth Canto, where Markandeya Muni says to Lord Siva (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.10.34):

"But I do request one benediction from you, who are full of all perfection and able to shower down the fulfilment of all desires. I ask to have unflinching devotion for the Supreme Personality of Godhead and for His dedicated devotees, especially you."

10 The words "tatha tvayi" here show that Siva is a great devotee of Lord Vishnu. That is the meaning.

In the Eight Canto the Prajapatis pray to Siva (Shrimad Bhagavatam 8.7.33):

"Exalted, self-satisfied persons who preach to the entire world think of your lotus feet constantly within their hearts. However, when person who do not know your austerity see you moving with Uma, they misunderstand you to be lusty, or when they see you wandering in the crematorium they mistakenly think that you are ferocious and envious. Certainly they are shameless. They can not understand your activities."*

11 In the Fourth Canto the Pracetas say to eight-armed Lord Vishnu (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.30.38):

"Dear Lord, by virtue of a moment's association with Lord Siva, who is very dear to You and who is Your most intimate friend, we were fortunate to attain You. You are the most expert physician, capable of treating the incurable disease of material existence. On account of our great fortune, we have been able to take shelter at Your lotus feet."*

12 A person who thinks Lord Vishnu is equal to other deities cannot attain devotional service. That idea is a great impediment to devotional service. This is explained in the Vaishnava Tantra:

13 "Although he may meditate on the Lord with unbroken thoughts, the dull-witted person who thinks Lord Vishnu equal to other deities does not attain unalloyed devotional service to Lord Hari.

14 "One who thinks the demigods headed by Brahma and Siva are equal to Lord Narayana is a great offender to the Lord."

15 The impersonalists and the devotees in santa-rasa think other deities are equal to Lord Narayana. An example of this is given in the story of Markandeya Muni, where Siva says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.10.20-22):

16-17 "The inhabitants and ruling demigods of all planets, along with Lord Brahma, the Supreme Lord Hari, and I, glorify, worship and assist those brahmanas who are saintly, always peaceful, free of material attachment, compassionate to all living beings, purely devoted to us, devoid of hatred and endowed with equal vision."*

18 "These devotees do not differentiate between Lord Vishnu, Lord Brahma and me, nor do they differentiate between themselves and other living beings. Therefore, because you are this kind of saintly devotee, we worship you."*

19 The meaning may also be interpreted: "We worship (imahi) you (yusman), the pure devotees headed by Markandeya".

20 "You are all devotees of the Lord, and as such I appreciate that you are as respectable as the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself. I know in this way that the devotees also respect me and that I am dear to them. Thus no one can be as dear to the devotees as I am."*

21 In another passage it is said (by Lord Siva in Shrimad Bhagavatam 8.7.40):

"My dear gentle wife Bhavani, when one performs benevolent activities for others, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Hari, is very pleased. And when the Lord is pleased, I am also pleased, along with all other loving creatures. Therefore, let me drink this poison, for all living entities may thus become happy because of me."*

22 That Markandeya Muni is a pure devotee of the Lord had been previously described in these words (of Lord Siva in Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.10.6):

"Surely this saintly brahmana does not desire any benediction, not even liberation itself, for he has attained pure devotional service unto the inexhaustible Personality of Godhead."

23 This verse was spoken by Lord Siva to Markandeya Muni. By appearing before him, Lord Siva broke the meditative trance of Markandeya Muni. In this way he appeared before the sage.

24 This is described in Shrimad Bhagavatam (12.10.13):

"Shri Markandeya saw Lord Siva suddenly appear within his heart. Lord Siva's golden hair resembled lightning, and he had three eyes, ten arms and a tall body that shone like the rising sun. He wore a tiger skin, and he carried a trident, a bow, arrows, a sword and a shield, along with prayer beads, a damaru drum, a skull and an ax. Astonished, the sage came out of his trance and thought, 'Who is this, and where has he come from?'"

25 At first describing the idea of the equality of Brahma, Vishnu and Siva, and then affirming Lord Vishnu's superiority, Siva says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.10.20-21):

"The inhabitants and ruling demigods of all planets, along with Lord Brahma, Lord Hari, who is the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself, and I, glorify, worship and assist those brahmanas who are saintly, always peaceful, free of material attachment, compassionate to all living beings, purely devoted to us, devoid of hatred and endowed with equal vision."

26 That Lord Vishnu is the Supreme Personality of Godhead is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.2.24-26):

"Firewood is a transformation of earth, but smoke is better than the raw wood. And fire is still better, for by fire we can derive the benefits of superior knowledge (through Vedic sacrifices). Similarly, passion (rajas) is better than ignorance (tamas), but goodness (sattva) is best because by goodness one can come to realise the Absolute Truth.*

"Previously all the great sages rendered service to the Personality of Godhead due to His existence above the three modes of material nature. They worshipped Him to become free from material conditions and thus derive the ultimate benefit. Whoever follows such great authorities is also eligible for liberation from the material world.*

"Those who are serious about liberation are certainly non-envious and they respect all. Yet they reject the horrible and ghastly forms of the demigods and worship only the all-blissful forms of Lord Vishnu and His plenary portions."*

27 This is confirmed by Lord Siva in the Brahma Purana:

"A person who yearns to see me or to see grandfather Brahma should yearn to see all-powerful Lord Vasudeva."

28 This is so because by understanding Lord Vishnu everything is understood. This is also confirmed in these words of Sarvabhauma, who was initiated by Cintamani:

29 "I have given my heart to Krishna, who wears a garland of forest flowers. I have not given it in the same way to Lord Siva, who wears a garland of skulls. I am like a peacock that rejoices when a dark cloud comes but does not rejoice when the clouds are white.

30 The demigods are lakes, the demigoddesses rivers, and Lord Vishnu, the master of the universes, is an ocean. Still, only the dark cloud of Lord Krishna can remove the thirst of this cintamani cataka bird."

31 Therefore, because He is a Vaishnava, Lord Siva should be worshipped. Some Vaishnavas say that if the worship of Lord Siva is compulsory, still one can worship the Supreme Lord Vishnu instead of Lord Siva. That is described in the following story from the last part of the Vishnu-dharma Purana:

A pure devotee brahmana names Visvaksena used to live on the earth. One day he sat down at the edge of a forest. Then the son of a village leader approached him and said, "Who are you?" When the brahmana had told his story the leader's son said to him, "Today I have a headache and therefore it is not possible for me to worship Lord Siva. You please worship him in my place. At that point there is the following passage of one and a half verses:

32 "When this was said, he replied, 'We are pure devotees of Lord Hari. Only Lord Hari, who expands in four forms, or His devotee, should be worshipped. We will worship no one else. Go away.'

33 Then the leader's son took a sword and raised it to cut off the brahmana's head. Stunned and not wishing to die in that way, the brahmana thought for a moment and said, "Very well, I will go there." In his mind the brahmana thought, "Because he destroys the universe and expands the mode of ignorance, Lord Siva is the deity of ignorance. However, because Lord Nrsimhadeva kills the demons situated in the darkness of ignorance, and because He thus dispels the darkness of ignorance, Lord Nrsimhadeva is like a sun risen to dispel the darkness of ignorance. Therefore, instead of worshipping Lord Siva, I will worship Lord Nrsimhadeva to dispel ignorance."

Then, taking a handful of flowers, the brahmana said, "Obeisances to Lord Nrsimha!" Filled with anger, the village leader's son at once raised his sword. At that moment the Siva-linga opened and Lord Nrsimhadeva appeared and killed the village leader's son and his associates. This Siva-linga, famous by the name "Linga-sphota" (the linga that opened), is situated in the southern provinces.

34 The pure Vaishnavas give all honour to Lord Siva because he is a pure Vaishnava also. Sometimes some people become Vaishnavas by worshipping Lord Siva. This is explained in the Adi-varaha Purana:

35 By worshipping Lord Siva for many thousands of births a person become wise and free from all sins. Then he becomes a Vaishnava."

36 Between the devotees of Lord Nrsimha and Lord Siva there is a very close connection. This is described in Shri Nrsimha-tapani Upanisad (1.5.10):

"A hundred brahmacaris equal one grhastha. A hundred grhasthas equal one vanaprastha. A hundred vanaprasthas equal one sannyasi. A hundred sannyasis equal one chanter of Siva-mantras. A hundred chanters of Siva-mantras equal one teacher of the Atharva-angirasa part of the Vedas. A hundred teachers of the Atharva-angirasa part of the Vedas equal one chanter of the king of mantras."

37 Because the devotees of Lord Siva thought Lord Siva is independent of Lord Vishnu, Bhrgu Muni's curse could not be overcome. This is explained in these words of the Fourth Canto (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.2.27-28):

38-39 "When all the hereditary brahmanas were thus cursed by Nandisvara, the sage Bhrgu, as a reaction, condemned the followers of Lord Siva with this very strong brahmanical curse. One who takes a vow to satisfy Lord Siva or who follows such principles will certainly become an atheist and be diverted from transcendental scriptural injunctions."*

40 The methods of worshipping Lord Siva is described in the Vedas are proper, but the methods of Siva-worship described in other, non-Vedic, books are offensive and not proper. Shrimad Bhagavatam and other books that oppose these non-Vedic books are authorised Vedic scriptures. The Suta-samhita and similar books that support the non-Vedic scriptures are not authorised scriptures. Therefore the fault (of Lord Siva's followers in this verse) is that they thought Lord Siva is the Supreme Personality of Godhead independent of Lord Vishnu. It is Lord Vishnu who is the root from which the Vedic scriptures have grown. That is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.2.31):

41 "The Vedas give the eternal regulative principles for auspicious advancement in human civilisation which have been rigidly followed in the past. The strong evidence of this principle is the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is called Janardana, the well-wisher of all living entities."*

42 In this verse the word "yat-pramanan" means that Lord Vishnu is the root of the Vedas. Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.2.23-26 also confirms the importance of devotional service to Lord Vishnu.

43 This is also described in the Hari-vamsa, where Lord Siva says:

"O brahmanas learned in the transcendental scriptures, you should always meditate on Lord Hari. Always recite the mantras glorifying Lord Vishnu and always meditate on Lord Kesava."

44 Devotion to Lord Siva has that nature. The Vaishnava scriptures describe the methods of worshipping transcendental Deities beyond the material nature with a method of worship that is also beyond the coverings of the external material world. The Lord's associates, who manifest humanlike pastimes as the Lord also does, perform Vedic sacrifices and other kinds of worship only to please the Lord. In this way King Yudhisthira performed the rajasuya sacrifice and other devotees also performed other similar activities. It should be understood that the demigods worshipped in these rituals are worshipped as representatives of the Lord's great potencies. This is explained by Prahlada Maharaja in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam (7.10.32):

45 "Prahlada Maharaja then worshipped and offered prayers to all the demigods, such as Brahma, Siva and the Prajapatis, who are all parts of the Lord."*

46 Shri Yudhisthira said to the Lord (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.72.3):

"O Govinda, I wish to worship Your holy expansions by the Rajasuya sacrifice, the king of Vedic performances. Please grant that we may do this, my Lord."

47 The demigods are therefore manifested by the Lord's potencies. In the Padma Purana, Karttika-mahatmya, the Lord Himself explained this to Shri Satyabhama:

48 "The worshippers of Surya, Siva, Ganesa, Vishnu, and Sakti eventually attain Me as rivers attain the ocean.

49 "Although I am one I appear in five ways. As a person named Devadatta may be the son of someone and have other relationships with other people and this way manifest different features and names in different circumstances, so I appear with different names and pastimes."

50 In truth, the Vaishnavas are the best of all. This is explained in the following verse, which appears in the Skanda Purana in the conversation between Narada and Brahma, and also in the Prahlada-samhita in the description of keeping a vigil during ekadashi:

51 "Neither a devotee of Surya, a devotee of Siva, a devotee of Brahma, a devotee of Sakti, nor a devotee of any other demigod is equal to a devotee of Vishnu."

52 The devotees of Surya and the devotees of other demigods do not attain the Supreme Personality of Godhead by worshipping the demigods. Only when they perform pure devotional service, done only to please the Lord, or when they die in a place sacred to the Lord, do they attain Him. In narrating the story of Devasarma and Canmdrasarma, who both worshipped the demigod Surya, the Supreme Personality of Godhead described this when He said:

53 "Because of the spiritual power of living in My holy place, and because of their pious conduct, these two devotees of Mine were brought by My associates to Lord Vishnu's transcendental abode.

54 "As long as they lived they worshipped the demigod Surya and performed many pious deeds. I became very pleased with their actions."

55 The holy place here is Mayapuri. When the Lord descended to the world these two devotees became Satrajit and Akrura. In the same way the devotee named Pundarika also attained the Lord by worshipping the Pitas.

56 That only by devotional service, which is not dependent on any other spiritual practice, one attains the Lord, is proved in the Lord's own words in Bhagavad-gita (9.23-25):

57 "Those who are devotees of other gods and who worship them with faith actually worship only me, O son of Kunti, but they do so in a wrong way.*

58 "I am the only enjoyer and master of all sacrifices. Therefore, those who do not recognise My true transcendental nature fall down.*

59 "Those who worship the demigods will take birth among the demigods, those who worship the ancestors go to the ancestors, those who worship ghosts and spirits will take birth among such beings, and those who worship Me will live with Me.

60 By worshipping Lord Vishnu one attains all virtues and shuns faults, which begin with blasphemy. This is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.3.26):

"One should have firm faith that he will achieve success in life by following those scriptures that describe the glories of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Bhagavan. At the same time, one should avoid blaspheming other scriptures. One should rigidly control his mind, speech and bodily activities, always speak the truth and bring the mind and senses under full control."

61 This is also explained in the Padma Purana:

"All the great demigods should always worship Lord Hari. They should never disrespect Brahma, Siva or the other great souls."

62 In the Gautamiya Tantra also:

"A person who worships Lord Gopala but disrespects other deities kills the present and previous pious credits he has earned."

63 The proper atonement for that offense is recitation of the following prayer from the Narayana-kavaca (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.8.17):

"Hayasirsa mam pathi deva-helanat" (May Lord Hayagriva protect me from being an offender by neglecting to offer respectful obeisances to the Supreme Lord and the demigods).

64 In the Vishnu-dharma Purana the following story is recounted: In ancient times King Ambarisa worshipped the Lord by performing austerities for many days. At the conclusion of his austerities the Supreme Personality of Godhead, assuming the form of King Indra and riding on Garuda, who had been transformed into Airavata, appeared before him and offered him a benediction. Seeing the form of Indra, King Ambarisa bowed before Him and offered Him all respect. However, he did not wish any benediction from King Indra.

He said, "The Lord whom I worship will give me benedictions. I will not accept benedictions from any one else. Then Indra said, "Whatever benediction He can give I can give also". When King Ambarisa still did not wish any benediction, Indra raised his thunder-bolt weapon to strike him, but still King Ambarisa would not accept any benediction from Him. At that moment the Lord became pleased. No longer appearing as Indra, the Supreme Person now showed His real form and gave His mercy to King Ambarisa.

65 An insult to Lord Siva is a great sin. This is described in the Fourth Canto (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.2.24) where Nandisvara offers the following curse:

"Those who have become as dull as matter by cultivating materialistic education and intelligence are nesciently involved in fruitive activities. Such men have purposely insulted Lord Siva. May they continue in the cycle of repeated birth and death."*

66 Svayambhuva Manu said to Dhruva Maharaja (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.11.33):

"My dear Dhruva, you thought that the Yaksas killed your brother, and therefore you have killed great numbers of them. But by this action you have agitated the mind of Lord Siva's brother Kuvera, who is the treasurer of the demigods. Please note that your actions have been very disrespectful to Kuvera and Lord Siva."*

After this, considering that Kuvera was Lord Siva's friend, Dhruva asked from him the benediction of always and in all circumstances being a pure devotee of Lord Vishnu. The meaning here is that a devotee only asks for the benediction of serving the Lord.

67 In the Kurma Purana the Lord says:

"A person who always worships Me with unalloyed love but also insults Lord Siva goes to hell."

68 This is also seen in the story of King Citraketu.

69 Lord Kapiladeva criticised disrespect toward even ordinary living entities, what to speak of disrespect to great souls like Himself. He said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.29.21):

70 "I am present in every living entity as the Supersoul. If someone neglects or disregards that Supersoul everywhere and engages himself in the worship of the Deity in the temple, that is simply imitation."*

71 Here the word "bhutesu" means "the living entities, down even to the forms of life that do not even breathe, in whom the Supreme Lord appears as the Supersoul, and who will be described in the following verses", "bhutatma" means "the Supersoul in the heart", "tam mam avajnaya" means "by disrespecting the living entities one also disrespects Me, who am staying in their hearts", "kurute arca" means "worship of My form as the deity", and "vidambanam" means "a mocking imitation". That is the meaning. Lord Kapiladeva then says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.29.22):

72 "One who worships the Deity of Godhead in the temples but does not know the Supreme Lord as Paramatma, is situated in every living entity's heart, must be in ignorance and is compared to one who offers oblations into ashes."*

73 Here the word "maudhyat" means "out of the mistaken idea that the Deity is made of stone or wood", "sarva-bhutesu isvaram mama hitva" means "not understanding that I am the Supersoul in all beings", and "arcam kurute" means "worships My Deity form". Such a person offers Me water and other things thinking I am an ordinary person and My Deity form is made of matter.

In the Agni Purana, in his lament for his dead son, King Dasaratha says:

74-75 "Did I think Lord Hari's Deity form was made of stone? In My heart did I fail to offer respect when I saw on the road a Vaishnava decorated with the signs of the Lord? Is that why, as a result of my misdeeds, I now suffer for the loss of my son?"

76 This is also described in the Padma Purana:

"One who thinks the Deity form of Lord Vishnu is made of stone, the spiritual masters are ordinary men, a Vaishnava belongs to a particular caste by birth, the water that has washed the lotus feet of Lord Vishnu or the Vaishnavas and that destroys the sins of Kali-yuga is ordinary water, the mantra of Lord Vishnu's holy name, which destroys all sins, is an ordinary sound, and Lord Vishnu is another demigod like the others, already lives in hell."

77 The verse quoted in text 72 means that the Supreme Lord says: "A fool, not seeing My presence within, does not respect all living entities. Because of this defect his spiritual activities are like offering oblations into ashes. Such a faithless person does not get any good result for his efforts." That is the meaning.

78 In Bhagavad-gita (17.1-3) this is explained:

"Arjuna inquired: O Krishna, what is the situation of those who do not follow the principles of scripture but worship according to their own imagination? Are they in goodness, in passion or in ignorance?*

"The Supreme Lord said: According to the modes of nature acquired by the embodied soul, one's faith can be of three kinds - goodness, passion or ignorance. Now hear about these.*

"According to one's existence under the various modes of nature, one evolves a particular kind of faith. The living being is said to be of a particular faith according to the modes he has acquired."*

In this way one who has only the small faith possessed by ordinary people is considered a neophyte devotee. This kind of devotee is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.41):

79 "A devotee who faithfully engages in the worship of the Deity in the temple but does not behave properly toward other devotees or people in general is called a prakṛta-bhakta, a materialistic devotee, and is considered to be in the lowest position."

80 Such a neophyte devotee will eventually get the result of his devotional service, but he will not get it immediately. This will be explained in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.29.25):

"Performing his prescribed duties, one should worship the Deity of the Supreme Personality of Godhead until one realises My presence in his own heart and in the hearts of other living entities as well."*

81 In these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.29.23) the Lord describes the result obtained by they who offend others:

"One who offers Me respect but is envious of the bodies of others and is therefore a separatist never attains peace of mind, because of his inimical behaviour towards other living entities."*

82 Here the word "bhinna-darsinah" means "a person who sees the Supersoul present everywhere and in everyone's heart". The opposite of him is called "abhinna-darsi", which means a person who sees Shri Krishna, the supremely glorious son of Vraja's king, present everywhere. That is the meaning. The former kind of person is described by the words "maninah" (respectful to the Supreme Lord) and "baddha-vairasya" (inimical to other living entities).

83 Lord Krishna at once gives His mercy to a person who does not trouble others and who is kind to them as a father is to his son."

84 Lord Kapiladeva again explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.29.24):

"My dear Mother, even if he worships with proper rituals and paraphernalia, a person who is ignorant of My presence in all living entities never pleases Me by the worship of My Deities in the temple."*

85 In this verse the word "avamaniḥ" means "disrespectful". It is like the word "dviṣataḥ" (inimical) used (in Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.29.23, which was quoted in text 81).

86 It is also said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.23.3):

"Sharp arrows which pierce one's chest and reach the heart do not cause as much suffering as the arrows of harsh, insulting words that become lodged within the heart when spoken by uncivilised men."*

87 In this quote it is said that one thing is worse than the other. It is not the opposite. The violence here is not the same as the violence (dviṣataḥ) mentioned previously (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.29.23, quoted in text 81).

88 In these verses the fault of not having faith in the Supreme Personality of Godhead because of ignorance of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is described. In the following verse Lord Kapiladeva affirms that Deity worship performed according to one's own prescribed duties by a person who understands the nature of the Supreme Personality of Godhead and because of that knowledge has faith in Him does not go in vain. He says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.29.25):

89 "Performing his prescribed duties, one should worship the Deity of The Supreme Personality of Godhead until one realises My presence in his own heart and in the hearts of other living entities as well."*

90 This verse means: "Performing his prescribed duties (sva-karma-kṛt), one should worship (arcayet) the Deity (arcadau) of the Supreme Personality of Godhead as long as (tavat) one does not (na) realise (veda) My presence (mam) in the hearts of all living entities (sarva-bhūtesu)." This activity (of Deity worship) is helpful for a person who, because he has not attained pure devotional service, does not have full faith in the Lord.

91 This will also be confirmed in the following words spoken by the Lord Himself (Shrimad Bhagavatam

"Having awakened faith in the narrations of My glories, being disgusted with all material activities, knowing that all sense gratification leads to misery, but still being unable to renounce all sense enjoyment, My devotee should remain happy and worship me with great faith and conviction. Even though he is sometimes engaged in sense enjoyment, My devotee knows that all sense gratification leads to a miserable result, and he sincerely repents such activities.

"When an intelligent person engages constantly in worshipping Me through loving devotional service as described by Me, his heart becomes fully situated in Me. Thus all material desires within the heart are destroyed.

"The knot in the heart is pierced, all misgivings are cut to pieces and the chain of fruitive actions is terminated when I am seen as the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

92 Therefore full faith in the Lord is higher than mere knowledge of the Lord. A faithful person who performs his prescribed duties need not worship the Deity or perform similar activities. However, until one comes to that stage one should faithfully worship the Deity and perform similar activities.

93 This will also be proved in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.20.9):

"As long as one is not satiated by fruitive activity and has not awakened his taste for devotional service by sravanam kirtanam visno, one has to act according to the regulative principles of the Vedic injunctions.

The meaning here is that one should not abandon Deity worship.

94 This is so because the Hayasirsa-pancaratra forbids the abandonment of Deity worship:

"As long as one lives he should not abandon Deity worship, but should continue to worship the Deity. One should continue until he gives up his life or until his head is severed.

95 A person who, although performing his prescribed duties and worshipping the Deity, is not kind to other living entities, does not attain perfection. The Lord confirms this (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.29.26):

96 "As the blazing fire of death, I cause great fear to whoever makes the least discrimination between himself and other living entities because of a differential outlook."*

97 In this verse the Lord says: "A person who makes distinctions (antarodaram karoti) between himself and others does not see that I have made all living entities to be equals. Seeing hunger and other needs, he fills only his own belly. As death (mrtyuh) I cause the great (ulbanam) fear (bhayam) that is residence in the material world of birth and death to such a person, who sees a difference between himself and others (bhinnadrsah)".

98 The Lord then explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.29.27):

"Therefore, through charitable gifts and attention, as well as through friendly behaviour and by viewing all to be alike, one should propitiate Me, who abide in all creatures as their very Self."*

99 In this verse the word "atha" means "for this reason", "dana-manabhyam" means "by giving charity as far as one is able, or in the absence of giving charity by showing respect". The words "abhinna-caksusa" have already been explained.

The Lord of Vaikuntha tells the sages headed by Sanaka Kumara (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.16.10):

100 The brahmanas, the cows and the defenceless creatures are My own body. Those whose faculty of judgement has been impaired by their own sin look upon these as distinct from Me. They are just like furious serpents, and they are angrily torn apart by the bills of the vulturelike messengers of Yamaraja, the superintendent of sinful persons."*

101 The vision of seeing the living entities as different, where one sees some as superior and some as the best of all, is described in a general way in the following words, where Lord Kapiladeva says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.29.28-33):

102 "Living entities are superior to inanimate objects, O blessed mother, and among them, living entities who display life symptoms are better. Animals with developed consciousness are better than them, and better still are those who have developed sense perception.*

103 "Among the living entities who have developed sense perception, those who have developed the sense of taste are better than those who have developed only the sense of touch. Better than them are those who have developed the sense of smell, and better still are those who have developed the sense of hearing.*

104 "Better than those living entities who can perceive sound are those who can distinguish between one form and another. Better than them are those who have developed upper and lower sets of teeth, and better still are those who have many legs. Better than them are the quadrupeds, and better still are the human beings.

105 "Among the human beings, the society which is divided according to quality and work is best, and in that society, the intelligent men, who are designated as brahmanas, are best. Among the brahmanas, one who has studied the Vedas is the best, and among the brahmanas who have studied the Vedas, one who knows the actual purport of Veda is the best.*

106 "Better than the brahmana who knows the purpose of the Vedas is he who can dissipate all doubts, and better than him is one who strictly follows the brahmanical principles. Better than him is one who is liberated from all material contamination, and better than him is a pure devotee, who executes devotional service without expectation of reward.*

107 "Therefore I do not find a greater person than he who has no interest outside of Mine and who therefore engages and dedicates all his activities and all his life-everything-unto Me without cessation."*

108 These verses show the hierarchy of living entities, each group better than the previous one. Here the word "adogdha dharman" means "a person who acts without material desires", "nirantarah" means "devotional service that is not mixed with impersonal knowledge or any other thing", "akartuh" means "devotional service where one surrenders to the Lord and does not work for one's own maintenance." In that condition, because one is free of false pride, he understands that he is completely dependent on the Lord. "Sama-darsanat" means "he thinks of the welfare of others because he knows that the Lord has created all living entities to be equal." The verses quoted in this passage (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.29.33) describe the distinctions between different kinds of living entities. The conclusion is that the Lord says: "one must offer great respect to My devotees, and to others one must also offer respects as it is appropriate and as one is able". That is the meaning.

109 Then Lord Kapiladeva explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.29.34):

"Such a perfect devotee offers respects to every living entity because he is under the firm conviction that the Supreme Personality of Godhead has entered the body of every living entity as the Supersoul or controller."*

110 The word "jiva-kalaya" here means "the Supersoul, who is present in the hearts of all living entities". Here the following statement of the Lord in Bhagavad-gita (9.29) should be remembered:

"I envy no one, nor am I partial to anyone. I am equal to all. But whoever renders service unto Me in devotion is a friend, is in Me, and I am also a friend to him."*

In this way the neophyte devotees should respect all living entities, and the advanced devotees, who have full faith in the Lord, should see the Lord present everywhere.

111 This is also described in the Skanda Purana in these words:

"O hunter, good qualities like non violence, which have developed, are not very astonishing, for those who are engaged in the Lord's devotional service are never inclined to give pain to others because of envy."*

112 As will be explained later, the pure devotees, by following the example of the perfect residents of Gokula, attain the same virtues as the Lord. In this way they naturally become both renounced and non violent. This is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.18.22):

113 "Self-controlled persons who are attached to the Supreme Lord Shri Krishna can all of a sudden give up the world of material attachment, including the gross body and subtle mind, and go away to attain the highest perfection of the renounced order of life, by which non violence and renunciation are consequential."*

114 The perfect devotees are described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.45):

"The most advanced devotees sees within everything the soul of all souls, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Shri Krishna. Consequently he sees everything in relation to the Supreme Lord and understands that everything that exists is eternally situated within the Lord."

115 The devotees aspiring to become perfect are described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.31.14-15):

"As pouring water on the root of a tree energises the trunk, branches, twigs and everything else, and as supplying food to the stomach enlivens the senses and limbs of the body, simply worshipping the Supreme Personality of Godhead through devotional service automatically satisfies the demigods, who are parts of that Supreme Personality."*

In this way the worship of the various demigods and the worship of the independent Supreme Personality of Godhead are described.

116 In this way the worship of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the original creator, is described. In these words it is proved that the worship of the Lord is unavoidable and must be performed. In other places in the scriptures it is also explained that in order to become free from material attraction and aversion one should worship the Lord.

Out of pure compassion for a living entity Bharata Maharaja abandoned his devotional service to the Lord. In that way compassion became an obstacle to his devotional service. By that example the idea that compassion for the living entities, and not the worship and service of the Lord, is the most important thing, is refuted.

Therefore one should always engage in those activities that are favourable for pure devotional service, which is beyond the material modes. This is explained in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.29.15):

"A devotee must execute his prescribed duties, which are glorious, without material profit. Without excessive violence, one should regularly perform one's devotional activities."*

117 Here the word "ati" (without excessive violence) means that in performing kriya-yoga devotional service according to the regulations of the Pancaratras there may sometimes be some violence, as for example when one picks leaves or flowers.

One should not disrespect other deities, but rather one should honour them because of their relationship with the Supreme Lord. Worship of the demigods as if they were independent of the Supreme Lord is eloquently and vehemently rejected in these words:

"Free from all material conceptions of existence, and never wonderstruck by anything, the Lord is always jubilant and fully satisfied by His own spiritual perfection. He has no material designations and therefore He is steady and unattached. The Supreme Personality of Godhead is the only shelter of everyone. Anyone desiring to be protected by others is certainly a great fool who desires to cross the sea by holding the tail of a dog."*

118 The verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.9.22) quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by the demigods to the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

1 This is also confirmed by these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.48.26):

"What learned person would approach anyone but You for shelter, when You are the affectionate, grateful and truthful well wisher of Your devotees? To those who worship You in sincere friendship You reward everything they desire, even Your own self, yet You never increase or diminish."

2 Here the word "suhrdah" means "because You act for the welfare", "krtajnt" means "because You respond with great honour to even the slightest assistance", "bhajataj" means "engaged in devotional service", "sarvan kaman" means "all desires", and "abhi dadati" means "completely gives". To please Your friends (suhrdah) You give (dadati) even Yourself (atmanam) to them. Even though You thus give everything to many great devotees like this, still You never diminish. That is the meaning of the word "upacaya".

This verse was spoken by Akrura to the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

1 The non devotees are criticised in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.15.24):

"My dear demigods, the human form of life is of such importance that we also desire to have such life, for in the human form one can attain perfect religious truth and knowledge. If one in this human form of life does not understand the Supreme Personality of Godhead and His abode, it is to be understood that he is very much affected by the influence of external nature."*

2 Here the word "yatra" means "in that human form of life", "dharmah" means "religious principles that culminate in devotional service to the Lord", "tattvasya jnanam" means "knowledge that culminates in knowledge of the Lord", "ye naradhanam bhagavato vitaranti" means "they whom do not engage in the Lord's devotional service, which is the root from which all pious activities and transcendental knowledge have grown", and "te sammohitah" means "they are bewildered".

This is also described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.3.20):

"One who has not listened to the messages about the prowess and marvellous acts of the Personality of Godhead and has not sung or chanted loudly the worthy songs about the Lord is to be considered to possess earholes like the holes of snakes and a tongue like the tongue of a frog."*

3 This is also described in the Brahma-vaivarta Purana:

"They who attain the universally desired and very rare human birth, but do not take shelter of Lord Krishna, cheat themselves again and again.

4 "By wandering through 8 400 000 species of life one finally attains a human birth.

5 "They who do not take shelter of Lord Krishna's feet, even though they may be very proud themselves, are only unimportant fools who waste their human life."

6 The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Shri Brahma to the demigods.

1 Shrimad Bhagavatam (5.18.12) explains:

"All the demigods and their exalted qualities, such as religion, knowledge and renunciation, become manifest in the body of one who has developed unalloyed devotion for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Vasudeva. On the other hand, a person devoid of devotional service and engaged in material activities has no good qualities. Even if he is adept at the practice of mystic yoga or the honest endeavour of maintaining his family and relatives, he must be driven by his own mental speculations and must engage in the service of the Lord's external energy. How can there be any good qualities in such a man?"*

2 Here the word "akincanah" means "desireless", "guanih" means "with the virtues that begin with knowledge and renunciation", "surah" means "all the demigods led by Siva and Brahma", and "asate" means "are present".

This verse is spoken by Prahlada Maharaja to Lord Nrsimhadeva.

1 Sages who have attained perfection in following various non devotional paths are condemned in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.9.10):

2 "Such non devotees engage their senses in very troublesome and extensive work and they suffer insomnia at night because their intelligence constantly breaks their sleep with various mental speculations. They are frustrated in all their various plans by supernatural power. Even great sages, if they are against Your transcendental topics, must rotate in this material world."*

3 In this verse are described the living entities, averse to You (the Lord), who reside in the material world. What of them? Even sages (rsayo pi) perfect in various non devotional paths, who are averse to You (yusmat-prasanga-vimukhah) must live in the material world (iha samsaranti). Or the interpretation may be: if great sages are averse to You they must live in the material world. What is the nature of the saints and sages who are confined to the material world? They are described in this verse. The following verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.2.32) also describes them:

"O lotus-eyed Lord, although non devotees who accept severe austerities and penances to achieve the highest position may think themselves liberated, their intelligence is impure. They fall down from their position of imagined superiority because they have no regard for Your lotus feet."*

4 Shri Yamaraja explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.3.19-22):

"Real religious principles are enacted by the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Although fully situated in the mode of goodness, even the great rsis who occupy the topmost planets cannot ascertain the real religious principles, nor can the demigods or the leaders of Siddhaloka, to say nothing of the asuras, ordinary human beings, Vidyadharas and Caranas.*

5-6 "Lord Brahma, Bhagavan Narada, Lord Siva, the four Kumaras, Lord Kapila (the son of Devahuti), Svayambhuva Manu, Prahlada Maharaja, Janaka Maharaja, Grandfather Bhisma, Bali Maharaja, Sukadeva Gosvami, and I myself know the real religious principle. My dear servants, this transcendental religious principle, which is known as bhagavata-dharma, or surrender unto the Supreme Lord and love for Him, is uncontaminated by the material modes of nature. It is very confidential and difficult for ordinary human beings to understand, but if by chance one fortunately understands it, he is immediately liberated and thus he returns home, back to Godhead.*

7 "Devotional service, beginning with the chanting of the holy name of the Lord is the ultimate religious principle for the living entity in human society."*

8 Here Yamaraja explains: "We, the teachers of religion, understand (vijanimah) what is real religion in this way. We do not expound our own theories in scriptures we ourselves have written. Real religion is very confidential (guhyam) and not easily understood (durbodham) by non devotees. It is very confidential because when one understands (jnatva) it, he attains liberation (amrtam) as the final result.

9 It is also said (Shri Bhakti-rasamrta-sindhu 1.1.38):

"If brahmananda, the transcendental bliss derived from understanding impersonal Brahman, were multiplied a million times, such a quantity of brahmananda could not compare with even an atomic portion of the pleasure relished in pure devotional service."*

In this way the superiority of devotional service is described.

10 It is also said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.33.39):

"Anyone who faithfully hears or describes the Lord's playful affairs with the young gopis of Vrndavana will attain the Lord's pure devotional service. Thus he will quickly become sober and conquer lust, the disease of the heart."

11 The scriptures also explain :

"By tasting the nectar that comes from Lord Krishna's lips, they attain perfection."

In this way they became purified. The following explanation will also be given (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.3.25):

"Because they are bewildered by the illusory energy of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Yajnavalkya and Jaimini and other compilers of the religious scriptures cannot know the secret, confidential religious system of the twelve mahajanas. They cannot understand the transcendental value of performing devotional service or chanting the Hare Krishna mantra. Because their minds are attracted to the ritualistic ceremonies mentioned in the Vedas, especially the Yajur Veda, Sama Veda, and Rg Veda, their intelligence has become dull. Thus they have become busy collecting the ingredients for ritualistic ceremonies that yield only temporary benefits, such as elevation to Svargaloka for material happiness. They are not attracted to the sankirtanan movement. Instead they are interested in dharma, artha,, kama and moksa."*

12 The twelve mahajanas mentioned here are very virtuous. They are different from the non devotee sages mentioned in Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.9.10, the quote in the beginning of this anuccheda.

1 That devotional service to the Lord is the best of all spiritual paths is also confirmed by the Lord Himself in Bhagavad-gita (6.46-47):

"A yogi greater than the ascetic, greater than the empiricist and greater than the fruitive worker. O Arjuna, in all circumstances, be a yogi."*

2 "And of all yogis, the one with great faith who always abides in Me, thinks of Me within himself, and renders transcendental loving service to Me—he is the most intimately united with Me in yoga and is the highest of all. That is My opinion."*

3 Here, in Bhagavad-gita 6.47, the genitive case (of) is used in the sense of the ablative case (than). (In this way the phrase "best of all yogis" means "better than all yogis). In this way, Bhagavad-gita 6.46-47 explains that the devotees are the best of all yogis. The other yogis referred to in the phrase "all yogis" are described in these words (Bhagavad-gita 4.25):

"Some yogis perfectly worship the demigods by offering different sacrifices to them, and some of them offer sacrifices in the fire of the Supreme Brahman."*

These are the different methods of yoga that were previously described in Bhagavad-gita. Because the other kinds of yoga are criticised here, this verse proves that devotional service is eternally superior to all other kinds of yoga.

4 That devotional service is the best of all yogas and that it should be performed by all the varnas and asramas is also confirmed by Lord Krishna Himself. The Lord said to Uddhava (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.18-42-43):

"The main religious duties of a sannyasi are equanimity and non violence, whereas for the vanaprastha austerity and philosophical understanding of the difference between the body and soul are prominent. The main duties of a householder are to give shelter to all living entities and perform sacrifices, and the brahmacari is mainly engaged in serving the spiritual master.

"A householder may approach his wife for sex only at the time prescribed for begetting children. Otherwise, the householder should practice celibacy, austerity, cleanliness of mind and body, satisfaction in his natural position, and friendship toward all living entities. Worship of Me is to be practiced by all human beings, regardless of social or occupational divisions."

5 This is also confirmed by Shri Narada Muni who, in the course of describing the duties of the different varnas, says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.11.11):

"Everyone should be engaged in hearing about the activities and instructions given by the Supreme Personality of Godhead (who is the shelter of the saintly persons), chanting about those activities and instructions, trying to render service, performing worship, offering obeisances, becoming a servant, becoming a friend, and surrendering one's whole self."*

6 One is seriously at fault if he fails to engage in devotional service to the Lord. This is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.5.2-3):

"Each of the four social orders, headed by the brahmanas, was born through different combinations of the modes of nature, from the face, arms, thighs and feet of the Supreme Lord in His universal form. Thus the four spiritual orders were also generated.

"If any of the members of the four varnas and four asramas fail to worship or intentionally disrespect the Personality of Godhead, who is the source of their own creation, they will fall down from their position into a hellish state of life."

7 This is also confirmed in Mahabharata:

"A person who does not worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who creates and dissolves the universes and also protects them as if He were their mother, should be considered as sinful as a brahmana-killer."

8 The Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself affirms in Bhagavad-gita (7.15):

"Those miscreants who are grossly foolish, who are lowest among mankind, whose knowledge is stolen by illusion and who partake of the atheistic nature of demons do not surrender unto Me."*

9 Failure to worship the Lord is also criticised in this passage, which appears in both the Agni Purana and the Vishnu-dharma Purana:

"There are two classes of men in the created world. One consists of the demonic and the other of the godly. The devotees of Lord Vishnu are the godly, whereas those who are just the opposite of that are called demons."*

10 This is further explained in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.9.10):

"If a brahmana has all twelve of the brahmanical qualifications (as they are stated in the book called Sanat-sujata) but is not a devotee and is averse to the lotus feet of the Lord, he is certainly lower than a devotee who is a dog-eater but who has dedicated everything-mind, words, activities, wealth and life-to the Supreme Lord. Such a devotee is better than such a brahmana because the devotee can purify his whole family, whereas the so-called brahmana in a position of false prestige cannot purify even himself.

The Narada Purana also explains:

"O King, a dog eater who becomes a devotee of the Lord is far better than a non devotee brahmana."

11 "A person who, even if he knows the meanings of all the scriptures and had travelled to the end of all the Vedas, is not a devotee of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, should be considered the lowest of men."

12 This is also confirmed in the Brhan-naradiya Purana in these words:

"They who hate the Vedas, brahmanas, and cows, and who do not worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead, are considered demons."

13 This is also confirmed by the following prayer (Spoken by the demigods to the Supreme Personality of Godhead in Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.2.32):

"O lotus-eyed Lord, although non devotees who accept severe austerities and penances to achieve the highest position may think themselves liberated, their intelligence is impure. They fall down from their position of imagined superiority because they have no regard for Your lotus feet."*

14 This verse explains that the non devotees' intelligence is impure (avisuddha-buddhayah) because they do not engage in devotional service (tvayy asta-bhavat).

15 The Supreme Lord confirms the importance of devotional service in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.22):

"Neither religious activities endowed with honesty and mercy nor knowledge obtained with great penance can completely purify one's consciousness if they are bereft of loving service to Me."

16 Taking shelter of the path of impersonal speculation, the non devotees think themselves superior to all others. However, they are criticised by the Lord Himself in these words (Bhagavad-gita 12.5):

"For those whose minds are attached to the unmanifested impersonal feature of the Supreme, advancement is very troublesome. To make progress in that discipline is always difficult for those who are embodied."*

Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.2.32 explains that although with great difficulty (krcchrena) the impersonalists attain impersonal liberation (param padam) even in this life, they fall down (patanty adha) again and their spiritual advancement perishes.

17 Why do they fall down? The demigods say they fall down because they do not worship (anadṛta) the Lord's lotus feet. Because they not engage in devotional service, they become unintelligent, because they are unintelligent they do not worship the Lord, and because they do not worship the Lord they cannot become free from the material world. Even though they may have burned away all their previous sinful reactions, because they disrespect the lotus feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, they cannot become free from continued residence in the material world of birth and death.

18 The Bhagavat-parisista of the Vasana-bhasya explains:

"Even if they imagine that they have become liberated in this life, the impersonalist yogi remain filled with material desires. Only the devotees of the Lord are untouched by material activities."

19 This is also confirmed by the following description of the Rathayatra festival found in the Vishnu-bhakti-candrodaya portion of the Skanda Purana:

"Even though his past karma may have already been burned up by the fire of transcendental knowledge, a person who out of illusion fails to follow the Supreme Personality of Godhead as He travels in His Rathayatra festival becomes in his next life a brahma-raksasa demon."

20 This is also confirmed by the following prayer addressed to the Lord (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.9.4):

"This present form, or any transcendental form expanded by the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Shri Krishna, is equally auspicious for all the universes. Since You have manifested this eternal personal form upon whom Your devotees meditate, I therefore offer my respectful obeisances unto You. Those who are destined to be dispatched to the path of hell neglect Your personal form because of speculating on material topics."*

21 The Lord Himself also explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.19.5):

"Therefore, My dear Uddhava, through knowledge you should understand your actual self. Then, advancing by clear realisation of Vedic knowledge, you should worship Me in the mood of loving devotion."

22 From all this it may be understood that devotional service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead is eternal and it is the best of all spiritual paths. The Shrimad Bhagavatam verse (10.2.32) discussed here was spoken by the demigods to the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

1 Loving devotional service destroys all past karma. The Lord Himself describes this in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.25):

"Just as gold, when smelted in fire, gives up its impurities and returns to its pure brilliant state, similarly, the spirit soul, absorbed in the fire of bhakti-yoga, is purified of all contaminations caused by previous fruitive activities and returns to its original position of serving Me in the spiritual world."

2 This verse means: "With love shaking away (vidhuya) past karma, the devotee attains his original pure spiritual form and then engages in serving (bhajati) Me (mam)."

This is also described in Shridhara Svami's commentary on Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.87.21:

"The liberated souls have spiritual forms so they may assist the Lord in His pastimes. In the liberated state they serve the Lord."

Anuccheda 113

1 In the Skanda Purana, Reva-khanda, a devotee prays:

"O Krishna, if you are pleased with him, a dog eater can become Indra, Siva, Brahma or the greatest brahmana.

2 "O infallible Lord, if they become averse to You, the great demigods headed by Brahma and Siva will fall down and become lower than dogeaters."

3 That devotional service removes all past karma is confirmed in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.28.22):

"The blessed Lord Siva becomes all the more blessed by bearing on his head the holy waters of the Ganges, which has its source in the water that washed the Lord's lotus feet. The Lord's feet act like thunderbolts hurled to shatter the mountain of sin stored in the mind of the meditating devotee. One should therefore meditate on the lotus feet of the Lord for a long time."*

4 The meaning of this verse is clear. From this it should be understood that because it is eternal, devotional service is the spiritual path that should be accepted.

The condition of the liberated souls is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.87.20):

"The individual living entity, even though he lives within material bodies by his karma, is actually spiritual and beyond both gross and subtle matter. O Lord, O Master of all potencies, the Vedas say he is Your part and parcel. Aware that this is the nature of the living entities, the great sages faithfully worship Your feet, which are worshipped in Vedic yajnas, and which grant liberation."

1 It may also be said that devotional service has six different aspects. One of these aspects is meditation on the Lord, which is described in Shrimad Bhagavatam from beginning to end. For example, the first verse of Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.1.1) describes meditation on the Lord in these words:

"I meditate upon Lord Shri Krishna because He is the Absolute Truth and the primeval cause of all causes of the creation, sustenance and destruction of the manifested universes. He is directly and indirectly conscious of all manifestations, and He is independent because there is no other cause beyond Him. It is He only who first imparted the Vedic knowledge unto the heart of Brahmaji, the original living being. By Him even the great sages and demigods are placed into illusion, as one is bewildered by the illusory representations of water seen in fire, or land seen on water. Only because of Him do the material universes, temporarily manifested by the reactions of the three modes of nature, appear factual, although they are unreal. I therefore meditate upon Him, Lord Shri Krishna, who is eternally existent in the transcendental abode, which is forever free from the illusory representations of the material world. I meditate upon Him, for He is the Absolute Truth."*

2 Two different kinds of meditation are described in the following passage of Bhagavad-gita (12.1-2):

"Arjuna inquired: Which are considered to be more perfect, those who are always properly engaged in Your devotional service or those who worship the impersonal Brahma, the unmanifested?*

The Supreme Personality of Godhead said: He whose mind is fixed on My personal form, always engaged in worshipping Me with great and transcendental faith is considered by Me to be the most perfect."*

Meditation on the Supreme Personality of Godhead is more easily performed and is also the best kind of meditation.

The Supreme Personality of Godhead and not the impersonal Brahman is the proper object of meditation and worship. This is confirmed by the Lord Himself in these words (Bhagavad-gita 7.7. and 14.27):

"O conqueror of wealth, there is not truth superior to Me. Everything rests upon Me, as pearls are strung on a thread."*

"I am the basis of the impersonal Brahman, which is immortal, imperishable and eternal and is the constitutional position of ultimate happiness."*

The conclusion, then, is that the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the best object of meditation. Therefore, because He is all-knowing, because He is the master of all potencies, and because he is the creator, maintainer and destroyer of the material universes, the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the best object of meditation.

The verses quoted here (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.1.1 and 12.13.19) are also discussed in Shri Paramatma-sandarbha (anuccheda 105).

3 Meditation on the Supreme Personality of Godhead is also described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.13.19):

"I meditate upon that pure and spotless supreme Absolute Truth, who is free from suffering and death and who in the beginning personally revealed this incomparable torchlight of knowledge to Brahma. Brahma then spoke it to the sage Narada, who narrated it to Krishna-dvaipayana Vyasa. Shrila Vyasa revealed this Bhagavatam to the greatest of sages, Sukadeva Gosvami and Sukadeva mercifully spoke it to Maharaja Pariksit."

4 In this way it is clear that the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the best object of meditation. The Supreme Personality of Godhead is also the original speaker of Shrimad Bhagavatam. This is confirmed by the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.1.1):

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead first imparted the Vedic knowledge unto the heart of Brahmaji, the original living being."*

Many things that had been previously described again and again, and many other things that had never been described before, are revealed in Shrimad Bhagavatam.

5 An example of something previously unknown that was revealed in Shrimad Bhagavatam is found in the following verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.7.6), in relation to Shri Vyasadeva's vision in a meditative trance:

"The material miseries of the living entity, which are superfluous to him, can be directly mitigated by the linking process of devotional service. But the mass of people do not know this, and therefore the learned Vyasadeva compiled this Vedic literature which is in relation to the Supreme Truth."*

6 In this way the statement that devotional service should be performed is repeated again and again in many different places in the scriptures. The final conclusion is given in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.37):

"When the living entity is attracted by the material energy that is separate from Krishna, he is overpowered by fear. Because he is separated from the Supreme Personality of Godhead by the material energy, his conception of life is reversed. In other words, instead of being the eternal servant of Krishna, he becomes Krishna's competitor. This is called viparyayah asmr̥tiḥ. To nullify this mistake, one who is actually learned and advanced worships the Supreme Personality of Godhead as his spiritual master, worshipful Deity and source of life. He thus worships the Lord by the process of unalloyed devotional service."*

7 Everyone should engage in devotional service to the Lord. This is confirmed in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.5.22):

"Learned circles have positively concluded that the infallible purpose of the advancement of knowledge, namely austerity, study of the Vedas, sacrifice, chanting of hymns and charity, culminates in the transcendental descriptions of the Lord, who is defined in choice poetry."*

8 This is also confirmed in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.5.12):

"Your friend the great sage Krishna-dvaipayana Vyasa has already described the transcendental qualities of the Lord in his great work the Mahabharata. But the whole idea is to draw the attention of the mass of people to Krishna-katha (Bhagavad-gita) through their strong affinity for hearing mundane topics."*

The meaning of this verse is clear. The Shrimad Bhagavatam verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Shri Vidura.

1 Devotional service is also described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.1.2):

"Completely rejecting all religious activities which are materially motivated, this Bhagavata Purana propounds the highest truth, which is understandable by those devotees who are fully pure in heart. The highest truth is reality distinguished from illusion for the welfare of all. Such truth uproots the threefold miseries. This beautiful Bhagavatam, compiled by the great sage Vyasadeva (in his maturity) is sufficient in itself for God realisation. What is the need of any other scripture? As soon as one attentively and submissively hears the message of Bhagavatam, by this culture of knowledge the Supreme Lord is established within his heart."*

2 The ten topics of Shrimad Bhagavatam are listed in this verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.10.1):

"Shri Sukadeva Gosvami said: In the Shrimad Bhagavatam there are ten divisions of statements regarding the following: the creation of the universe, sub creation, planetary systems, protection by the Lord, the creative impetus, the change of Manus, the science of God, returning home, back to Godhead, liberation and the summum bonum."*

In this way the transcendental science of devotional service is listed as one of the topics of Shrimad Bhagavatam.

3 That devotional service should be performed is also stated in Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.9.36, one of the four seed verses (2.9.33-36) of Shrimad Bhagavatam. That verse (2.9.36) states:

4 "A person who is searching after the supreme Absolute Truth, the Personality of Godhead, must certainly search for it up to this, in all circumstances, in all space and time and both directly and indirectly."*

5 In the previous three verses transcendental knowledge, confidential transcendental knowledge, and the different aspects of that knowledge were explained. In this, the fourth verse, this statement is given. The first three of these four verses have already been explained in Shri Bhagavat-sandarbha (in anuccheda 95). In Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.9.31 the word "rahasya" refers to the advanced stage of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead (prema-bhakti), and the word "tad-anga" refers to devotional service in practice (sadhana-bhakti). Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"The word 'rahasya' means 'our devotional service' and the word 'tad-anga' means 'devotional service in practice (sadhana-bhakti).'"

6 The Vedic scriptures are manifested again and again. This is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.3):

"By the influence of time, the transcendental sound of Vedic knowledge was lost at the time of annihilation. Therefore, when the subsequent creation took place, I spoke the Vedic knowledge to Brahma because I Myself am the religious principles enunciated in the Vedas."*

7 Therefore, in this, the fourth (2.9.36) of the seed verses of Shrimad Bhagavatam, the Supreme Lord describes devotional service in practice (sadhana-bhakti).

8 The following explanations may be also given. In Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.9.36 the word "atmanah" means "of Me, the Supreme Personality of Godhead", "tattva-jijnasuna" means "by one who desires to understand the secret of pure love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead", "etavad eva" means "one should inquire from the feet of the spiritual master". What should one do? That is explained in the words "anvaya-vyatirekabhyam yat". "Anvaya" means "by performing prescribed activities", and "vyatireka" means "by avoiding forbidden activities."

9 The word "anvaya" is explained in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.7.55):

"In this material world, to render service to the lotus feet of Govinda, the cause of all causes, and to see Him everywhere, is the only goal of life. This much alone is the ultimate goal of human life, as explained by all the revealed scriptures."*

"Anvaya" is also explained in these words (Bhagavad-gita 9.34 and 18.65):

"Engage your mind always in thinking of Me, become My devotee, offer obeisances to Me and worship Me. Being completely absorbed in Me, surely you will come to Me."*

10 The word "vyatireka" is explained in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.5.2-3):

"From the mouth of brahma, the brahmanical order has come into existence. Similarly, from his arms the ksatriyas have come, from his waist the vaisyas have come, and from his legs the sudras have come. These four orders and their spiritual counterparts (brahmacarya, grhastha, vanaprastha and sannyasa) combine to make human society complete.*

11 "If one simply maintains an official position in the four varnas and asramas but does not worship the Supreme Lord Vishnu, he falls down from his puffed-up position into a hellish condition."*

12 "Vyatireka is also explained in these words (Bhagavad-gita 7.15):

"Those miscreants who are grossly foolish, who are lowest among mankind, whose knowledge is stolen by illusion, and who partake of the atheistic nature of demons do not surrender unto Me."*

13 "Vyatireka" is also explained in these words of the Padma Purana:

"If a person in this world does not drink the nectar descriptions of Lord Vishnu, which are the sweetest of all nectars, then many hundreds of times he must take birth in different material bodies and suffer the miseries of birth, old age, and death."

14 Where should one search for the Supreme Personality of Godhead? Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.9.36 says "sarvatra" (one should search for Him everywhere, in all time and space). "Everywhere" means "in all scriptures, performers of activities, places, senses, things, activities, duties and results."

That the Supreme Personality of Godhead should be sought in all scriptures is described in Skanda Purana, in a conversation between Brahma and Narada in these words:

15 "In the material world, which is full of darkness and dangers, combined with birth and death and full of different anxieties, the only way to get out of the great entanglement is to accept loving transcendental devotional service to Lord Vasudeva. This is accepted by all classes of philosophers."*

16 "Anvaya" (performance of prescribed duties) in relation to the Vedic scriptures is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.2.34):

"The great personality Brahma, with great attention and concentration of the mind, studied the Vedas three times, and after scrutinizingly examining them, he ascertained that attraction for the Supreme Personality of Godhead Shri Krishna is the highest perfection of religion."*

17 This is also explained in the following verse found in both Skanda and Padma Puranas:

"By scrutinizingly reviewing all the revealed scriptures and judging them again and again, it is now concluded that Lord Narayana is the Supreme Absolute Truth, and thus He alone should be worshipped."*

18 "Anvaya" (avoidance of forbidden activities) is described in the Garuda Purana in these words:

"Even though one may have gone to the other side of all the Vedas, and even though one is well versed in all the revealed scriptures, if one is not a devotee of the Supreme Lord, he must be considered the lowest of mankind."*

19 That devotional service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead should be sought among all kinds of performers of action is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.7.46):

"Surrendered souls, even from groups leading sinful lives, such as women, the labourer class, the mountaineers and the Siberians, or even the birds and beasts, can also know about the science of Godhead and become liberated from the clutches of the illusory energy by surrendering unto the pure devotees of the Lord and by following in their footsteps in devotional service."*

20 This is also explained in the Garuda Purana in these words:

"Even the worms, birds, and beasts are assured of elevation to the highest perfectional life if they are completely surrendered to the transcendental loving service of the Lord, so what to speak of the philosophers among the human beings?"*

21 All people, whether well-behaved, ill-behaved, learned, ignorant, renounced, attached, desiring liberation, already liberated, perfect in devotional service, or not yet perfect in devotional service, are eligible to become the Lord's personal associates. For this reason a devotee sees everyone, even though they many not yet have the Lord's personal association, equally, for they are all eligible to become the Lord's associates. This is described in the following words (Bhagavad-gita 9.30):

22 "Even if one commits the most abominable action, if he is engaged in devotional service, he is to be considered saintly because he is properly situated in his determination."*

The meaning of this verse is: "If this is the truth about the ill-behaved who are engaged in devotional service, then what can be said of the well-behaved who are engaged in devotional service?"

23 The Lord affirms that both the learned and unlearned are equally eligible to become His devotees (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.11.33):

"My devotees may or may not know exactly, but if they worship Me with unalloyed love, then I consider them to be the best of devotees."*

24 This is also explained in the Brhan-naradiya Purana in these words:

"As fire burns whatever it touches, so Lord Hari burns away the sins of even the fools."

25 The Supreme Personality of Godhead affirms that both the renounced and the materially attached are equally eligible to become His devotees. He says (11.14.18):

"My dear Uddhava, if My devotee has not fully conquered his senses, he may be harassed by material desires, but because of his unflinching devotion for Me, he will not be defeated by sense gratification."*

26 This verse means: "If this is so, then they who are not harassed by material desires will certainly never be defeated by sense gratification." IN this way this verse is like Bhagavad-gita 9.30.

27 That they who desire liberation and they who have already attain liberation are both eligible to become devotees is confirmed in the following two verses. The first verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.2.26) describes they who aspire to attain liberation:

"Those who are serious about liberation are certainly non envious, and they respect all. Yet they reject the horrible and ghastly forms of the demigods and worship only the all-blissful forms of Lord Vishnu and His plenary portions."*

28 The second verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.7.10) describes they who are already liberated:

"All different varieties of atmaramas (those who take pleasure in atma, or spirit self), especially those established on the path of self-realisation, though freed from all kinds of material bondage, desire to render unalloyed devotional service unto the Personality of Godhead. This means that the Lord possesses transcendental qualities and therefore can attract everyone, including liberated souls."*

29 That both they who have attained perfection in devotional service and they who have not yet attained perfection in devotional service are both eligible to serve the Lord is described in the following two verses. The first verse describes they who have already attained perfection in devotional service (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.1.15):

"Only a rare person who has adopted complete, unalloyed devotional service to Krishna can uproot the weeds of sinful actions with no possibility that they will revive. He can do this simply by discharging devotional service, just as the sun can immediately dissipate fog by its rays."*

30 The second verse describes they who have not yet attained perfection in devotional service (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.53):

"The lotus feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are sought even by the greatest of demigods, such as Brahma and Siva, who have all accepted the Supreme Personality of Godhead as their life and soul. A pure devotee of the Lord can never forget those lotus feet in any circumstance. He will not give up his shelter at the lotus feet of the Lord for a single-moment-indeed, not for half a moment-even in exchange for the benediction of ruling and enjoying the opulence of the entire universe. Such a devotee of the Lord is to be considered the best of the Vaishnavas."*

31 These devotees become the Lord's personal associates. This is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 9.4.67):

"My devotees who are always satisfied to be engaged in My loving service, are not interested even in the four principles of liberation (salokya, sarupya, samipya and sarsti), although these are automatically achieved by their service. What then is to be said of such perishable happiness as elevation to the higher planetary systems?"*

32 They become the Lord's eternal associates. This is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.15.22):

"The goddesses of fortune worship the Lord in their own gardens by offering tulasi leaves on the coral-paved banks of transcendental reservoirs of water. While offering worship to the Lord, they can see on the water the reflection of their beautiful faces with raised noses, and it appears that they have become more beautiful because of the Lord's kissing their faces."*

33 In Shrimad Bhagavatam and other Vedic literatures it is said that by engaging in devotional service in any continent, planet, or universe, one may attain perfection. In this way it should be understood that in any country one may attain perfection by engaging in devotional service.

34 That devotional service may be performed with all the senses is described in these words:

"Worshipping Lord Hari within their minds, the great souls attain Him, the Lord who is beyond words and the mind."

35 This verse proves that with the mind, words, or external senses, one may worship the Lord.

36 The Lord Himself explains that one may worship Him with anything. He says (Bhagavad-gita 9.26):

"If one offers Me with love and devotion a leaf, a flower, fruit or water, I will accept it."*

37 All kinds of activities may be employed in devotional service to the Lord, as is explained in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.12):

"Pure devotional service rendered to the supreme Lord is spiritually so potent that simply by hearing about such transcendental service, by chanting its glories in response, by meditating on it, by respectfully and faithfully accepting it, or by praising the devotional service of others, even persons who hate the demigods and all other living beings can be immediately purified."

38 This is also confirmed by the Lord Himself in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 9.27):

"Whatever you do, whatever you eat, whatever you offer or give away, and whatever austerities you perform-do that, O son of Kunti as an offering to Me."*

39 In this way, even by engaging in what is only a dim shadow of real devotional service, and even when committing many offenses while engaging in such a dim shadow of real devotional service, one can still attain the real result of devotional service. Ajamila, Musika and many others are examples of this.

40 All kinds of duties may also be employed in devotional service. This is described in the Skanda Purana: "I offer my obeisances unto Him, the infallible, because simply by either remembering Him or vibrating His holy name one can attain the perfection of all penances, sacrifices or fruitive activities, and this process can be universally followed."*

41 All desires to attain certain results can also be employed in devotional service. Shrimad Bhagavatam (2.3.10) explains:

"A person who has broader intelligence, whether he be full of all desires, without any material desire, or desiring liberation, must by all means worship the supreme whole, the Personality of Godhead."*

42 By serving the Supreme Personality of Godhead one automatically satisfies all the demigods. This is confirmed by the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.31.14):

"As pouring water on the root of a tree energises the trunk, branches, twigs and everything else and, as supplying food to the stomach enlivens the senses and limbs of the body, simply worshipping the Supreme Personality of Godhead through devotional service automatically satisfies the demigods, who are parts of that Supreme Personality."*

Also in the Skanda Purana, in a conversation between Brahma and Narada, it is said:

43 "When the Supreme Lord, the Personality of Godhead, who carries in His hands, a conchshell, wheel, club, and lotus flower, is worshipped, certainly all other demigods are worshipped automatically, because Hari, the Personality of Godhead, is all pervading."*

44 Therefore one who directly engages in devotional service, one who donates cows or various things so they may provide something to offer the Lord, one to whom something is given so that gift may be pleasing to the Lord, one who takes milk and other things from cows or other living entities to offer foods to the Lord, and one in whose country or family devotional service is performed, all attain the perfection of engagement in devotional service. This is seen in the statements of the Puranas. In this way an example has been given for each of the cases employed in Sanskrit grammar. In this way it is proved that devotional service should be performed everywhere and in all circumstances ("sarvatra" as explained in Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.9.36):

45 Devotional service is eternally manifest. This is confirmed in Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.9.36 in the word "sarvada" (always). Devotional service is manifested at the beginning of the universe's creation. That is confirmed in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.3), where the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself says:

"By the influence of time, the transcendental sound of Vedic knowledge was lost at the time of annihilation. Therefore, when the subsequent creation took place, I spoke the Vedic knowledge to Brahma because I Myself am the religious principles enunciated in the Vedas."*

That devotional service is manifested during the middle period, when the universes are manifested, is confirmed in many passages of the Vedic literatures.

46 Devotional service is present even during and after the four kinds of annihilations of the material universe. This is described in the following question spoken by Vidura, a question that affirms that the Lord is served even after the material universe is annihilated (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.7.37):

"Please describe how many dissolutions there are for the elements of material nature and who survives after the dissolutions to serve the Lord while He is asleep."*

47 That devotional service is present in all four yugas is confirmed in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.3..52):

"Whatever result was obtained in Satya-yuga by meditating on Vishnu, in Treta yuga by performing sacrifices, and in Dvapara yuga by serving the Lord's lotus feet can be obtained in Kali yuga simply by chanting the Hare Krishna maha-mantra."*

48 What more need be said? The Vishnu Purana explains:

"If even for a moment remembrance of Vasudeva, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, is missed, that is the greatest loss, that is the greatest illusion, and that is the greatest anomaly."*

49 Devotional service may be performed in any circumstance. Even while in the womb Shri Prahlada engaged in the devotional service of hearing the Lord's glories chanted by Shri Narada. In childhood Shri Dhruva and many other engaged in devotional service. In youth Ambarisa and many others engaged in devotional service. In old age Dhrtarastra and many others engaged in devotional service. At the moment of death Ajamila and many others engaged in devotional service. In both the heavenly and hellish material worlds Citraketu and many others engaged in devotional service.

50 The Nrsimha Purana explains:

"As they began chanting the holy name of Lord Hari, the residents of hell suddenly developed loving devotion for Him. At that moment they were transported to the spiritual world."

51 That chanting the holy name of the Lord delivers one from hell is also described in these words spoken by Durvasa Muni (Shrimad Bhagavatam 9.4.62):

"O my Lord, O supreme controller, without knowledge of Your unlimited prowess I have offended Your most dear devotee. Very kindly save me from the reaction of this offense. You can do everything, for even is a person is fit for hell, You can deliver him simply by awakening within his heart the holy name of Your Lordship."*

52 The glories of chanting the Lord's holy name are also described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.2.11):

"O King, constant chanting of the holy name of the Lord after the ways of the great authorities is the doubtless and fearless way of success for all, including those who are free from all material desires, those who are desirous of all material enjoyment, and also those who are self-satisfied by dint of transcendental knowledge."*

53 "Vyatireka (avoiding what is forbidden) is described in the following passage from both the Brhan-narada Purana and the Padma Purana:

"What is the use of studying the Vedas? What is the use of studying other scriptures? What is the use of going on pilgrimages? What is the use of practicing austerities? What is the use of performing sacrifices? What is the use of these things to they who have no devotion to Lord Vishnu?

"What is the use of studying many scriptures? What is the use of performing many sacrifices? What is the use of performing a thousand vajapeya-yajnas? What is the use of these things to a person filled with devotion to Lord Krishna, the saviour from miseries?"

54 That all kinds of spiritual activities are useless without devotional service is also described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.4.17):

"Let me offer my respectful obeisances unto the all-auspicious Lord Shri Krishna again and again because the great learned sages, the great performers of charity, the great workers of distinction, the great philosophers and mystics, the great chanters of the Vedic hymns and the great followers of Vedic principles cannot achieve any fruitful results without dedication of such great qualities to the service of the Lord."*

55 That is also confirmed by these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 5.19.23):

"An intelligent person does not take interest in a place, even in the topmost planetary system, if the pure Ganges of topics concerning the Supreme Lord's activities does not flow there, if there are not devotees engaged in service on the banks of such a river of piety, or if there are no festivals of sankirtana-yajna to satisfy the Lord (especially since sankirtana yajna is recommended in this age)."

56 That is again confirmed by these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.59.41):

"Even after Indra had bowed down to Lord Acyuta, touched His feet with the tips of his crown and begged the Lord to fulfil his desire, that exalted demigod having achieved his purpose, chose to fight with the Supreme Lord. What ignorance there is among the gods! To hell with their opulence!""

57 That the devotees are interested only in devotional service is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.7.52):

"A pure devotee does not accept any kind of liberation-salokya, sarsti, samipya, sarupya or ekatva-even though they are offered by the Supreme Personality of Godhead."*

58 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead is pleased only by devotional service is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.7.52):

"My dear friends, O sons of the demons, you cannot please the Supreme Personality of Godhead by becoming perfect brahmanas, demigods, or great saints or by becoming perfectly good in etiquette or vast learning. None of these qualifications can awaken the pleasure of the Lord. Nor by charity, austerity, sacrifice, cleanliness or vows can one satisfy the Lord. The Lord is pleased only if one has unflinching, unalloyed devotion to Him. Without sincere devotional service, everything is simply a show."*

59 That only devotional service has value is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.5.12):

"Knowledge of self-realisation, even though free from all material affinity, does not look well if devoid of a conception of the Infallible (God). What, then, is the use of fruitive activities, which are naturally painful from the very beginning and transient by nature, if they are not utilised for the devotional service of the Lord?"*

60 That the devotees are interested only in devotional service is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.15.48):

"Persons who are very expert and most intelligent in understanding things as they are engage in hearing narrations of the auspicious activities and pastimes of the Lord, which are worth chanting and worth hearing. Such persons do not care even for the highest material benediction, namely liberation, to say nothing of other less important benedictions like the material happiness of the heavenly kingdom."*

61 The statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.9.36, that one should always (sarvada) and everywhere (sarvatra) engage in devotional service, is confirmed by the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.2.36):

"O King, it is therefore essential that every human being hear about, glorify and remember the Supreme Lord, the Personality of Godhead, always and everywhere."*

62 The statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.9.36, that one should engage in devotional service by performing prescribed activities (anvaya) and avoiding forbidden activities (vyatireka), is further explained by these words from the Padma Purana:

"Krishna is the origin of Lord Vishnu. He should always be remembered and never forgotten at any time. All the rules and prohibitions mentioned in the sastras should be the servants of these two principles."*

63 The statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.9.36, that one should engage in devotional service always (sarvada) and everywhere (sarvatra) by performing prescribed activities (anvaya) and avoiding forbidden activities (vyatireka), is further explained by these words from Shrimad Bhagavatam (2.2.33 and 2.2.36):

"For those who are wandering in the material universe, there is no more auspicious means of deliverance than what is aimed at in the direct devotional service of Lord Krishna."*

64 "O King, it is therefore essential that every human being hear about, glorify and remember the Supreme Lord, the Personality of Godhead, always and everywhere."*

65 In this verse the word "nram" means "of the living entities". The living entities are described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.87.20):

"The individual living entity, even though he lives within material bodies created by his karma, is actually spiritual and beyond both gross and subtle matter. O Lord, O master of all potencies, the Vedas say he is Your part and parcel. Aware that this is the nature of the living entities, the great sages faithfully worship Your feet, which are worshipped in Vedic yajnas, and which grant liberation."

The living entity attains different destinations as a result of his activities. By engaging in fruitive activities (karma), he attains another material body. By engaging in yoga he attains mystic perfections. By engaging in the study of sankhya philosophy he attains knowledge of the spirit soul. By engaging in jnana-yoga he attains impersonal liberation. In this way, by performing different activities described in the scriptures, he attains different results.

By always (sarvada) and everywhere (sarvatra) engaging in devotional service by performing prescribed activities (anvaya) and avoiding forbidden activities (vyatireka), he attains a glorious secret (rahasya) that is hidden from the perception of they who are engaged in jnana-yoga.

66 That the living entities should engage in devotional service is confirmed by the following words. As Shri Narada was about to explain the science of Shrimad Bhagavatam, Shri Brahma gave him the following instruction (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.7.52):

"Please describe the science of Godhead with determination and in a manner by which it will be quite possible for the human being to develop transcendental devotional service unto the Personality of Godhead Hari, the Supersoul of every living being and the summum bonum source of all energies."*

67 Here the word "bhavisyati" means "will inevitably be", "iti" refers to the path of devotional service, and "sankalpya" means "by accepting certain restrictions". This verse was spoken by Shri Brahma to Shri Narada. Anuccheda 116

1 In order that the great Purana (Shrimad Bhagavatam) be revealed, Shri Narada gave the following instruction (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.5.13):

"O Vyasadeva, your vision is completely perfect. Your good fame is spotless. You are firm in vow and situated in truthfulness. And thus you can think of the pastimes of the Lord in trance for the liberation of the people in general from all material bondage."*

2 Here the word "atho" means "therefore". This verse immediately follows these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.5.12):

"Knowledge of self-realisation, event though free from all material affinity, does not look well if devoid of a conception of the Infallible (God). What, then, is the use of fruitive activities, which are naturally painful from the very beginning and transient by nature, if they are not utilised for the devotional service of the Lord?"*

In Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.5.13 the words "anusmara tad-vicestitam" (thinking of the pastimes of the Lord) describe pure and unbroken devotional service.

1 At the conclusion of this instruction to Vyasa, Shri Narada said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.5.40):

"Please, therefore, describe the Almighty Lord's activities which you have learned by your vast knowledge of the Vedas, for that will satisfy the hankerings of great learned men and at the same time mitigate the miseries of the masses of common people who are always suffering from material pangs. Indeed, there is no other way to get out of such miseries."*

2 Here the word "vidam" means "of great learned men". This verse was spoken by Shri Narada to Shri Vyasa.

1 In the beginning of Shrimad Bhagavatam, Shri Vyasa declared devotional service to be the highest good. In a vision he had during a mystic trance, a vision that has already been discussed in the Tattva-sandarbha, he also saw the truth of devotional service. What he saw is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.7.4):

"Thus he fixed his mind, perfectly engaging it by linking it in devotional service (bhakti-yoga) without any tinge of materialism, and thus he saw the Absolute Personality of Godhead along with His external energy, which was under full control."*

2 In Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.19.30 Uddhava asked the Lord, "What is the greatest attainment?" and the Lord replied, "Devotion to Me is the greatest attainment." The meaning of these verses is clear. The last verse was spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

1 (The importance of devotional service is also seen in the next verse. Unhappy even after compiling the Vedas), Vyasadeva reflects on (what may have been the cause of His unhappiness). He says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.4.31):

"This may be because I did not specifically point out the devotional service of the Lord, which is dear both to perfect beings and the infallible Lord."*

2 The meaning of this verse is clear. It was spoken by Shri Vyasa.

Anuccheda 120

1 By this instruction the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the teacher of all, says that devotional service is the most exalted of all spiritual paths. This is also confirmed by the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.16.40):

"O unconquerable one, when You spoke about bhagavata-dharma, which is the uncontaminated religious system for achieving the shelter of Your lotus feet, that was Your victory. Persons who have no material desires, like the Kumaras, who are self satisfied sages, worship You to be liberated from material contamination. In other words, they accept the process of bhagavata-dharma to achieve shelter at Your lotus feet."*

2 In this verse the word "jitam" means "conquered by You", and "aha" means "You spoke." This verse was spoken by Citraketu to Shri Sankarsana.

Anuccheda 121

1 In this way it is proved that one should engage in devotional service. In many places in the scriptures devotional service mixed with fruitive work or other activities is described. This is done so that they who have faith in these other spiritual paths may come into contact with devotional service and thus attain the real goal of life. When they thus taste the nectar happiness of serving the Lord they will become devotees and always engage in devotional service.

Previously we had explained the glories of devotional service and demonstrated that it should be performed in all situations. Now we will explain that devotional service should be performed by everyone, that the devotees should do devotional service only and not anything else, that devotional service is the highest religion, and that devotional service fulfils all desires.

2 That devotional service is the highest religion is confirmed by the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.3.22):

"Devotional service, beginning with the chanting of the holy name of the Lord, is the ultimate religious principle for the living entity in human society."*

3 That devotional service fulfils all desires is confirmed by these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.2.10):

"A person who has broader intelligence, whether he be full of all material desire, without any material desire, or desiring liberation, must by all means worship the supreme whole, the Personality of Godhead."*

4 The exalted nature of devotional service is also described in these words, where the Lord Himself says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.15.35):

"My dear Uddhava, I am the cause, the protector and the Lord of all mystic perfections, of the yoga system, of analytic knowledge, of the pure activities of devotional service, and of the community of learned Vedic teachers."

5 That devotional service is the highest religion is confirmed in the Skanda Purana, where in a conversation between Sanat-kumara and Markandeya Muni it is said:

"The religion of worshipping Lord Vishnu is the best of all religions. Worshipping Lord Vishnu brings a result many millions of times greater than one can attain by performing all yajnas, austerities and homas, and by bathing in all holy places. Therefore one should, with all his energy, worship Lord Narayana in this world."

6 Again in the Skanda Purana, in a conversation between Brahma and Narada, the following statement of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is given:

"A person who performs many thousands of thousands of asvamedha-yajnas does not attain the same result attained by My devotees."

7 That devotional service destroys all inauspiciousness is explained by these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.1.17):

"The path followed by pure devotees, who are well behaved and fully endowed with the best qualifications, is certainly the most auspicious path in this material world. It is free from fear, and it is authorised by the sastras."*

8 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments: "Devotional service is not like the path of impersonal speculation (jnana), which brings one fear by convincing one not to serve the Lord. Nor is devotional service like the path of fruitive work (karma) which brings fear because it carries with it envy and a host of other vices."

9 That devotional service destroys all inauspiciousness is also affirmed by the Lord Himself in these words from the Skanda Purana, Dvaraka-mahatmya:

"They who engage in My devotional service will never find inauspiciousness, either in this world or the next. Indeed, they personally carry many millions of their family members to the spiritual world."

10 That devotional service destroys all inauspiciousness is also described in these words of the Vishnu Purana:

"I always take shelter of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Lord Hari, who is the abode of all auspiciousness."

11 That devotional service destroys all obstacles to spiritual advancement is confirmed by the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.2.33):

"O Madhava, Supreme Personality of Godhead, Lord of the goddess of fortune, if devotees completely in love with You sometimes fall from the path of devotion, they do not fall like non devotees, for You still protect them. Thus they fearlessly traverse the heads of their opponents and continue to progress in devotional service."*

12 The verse immediately preceding this explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.2.32):

"O lotus-eyed Lord, although non devotees who accept severe austerities and penances to achieve the highest position may think themselves liberated, their intelligence is impure. They fall down from their position of imagined superiority because they have no regard for Your lotus feet."*

This means that even though they may attain impersonal liberation, because they do not worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead the impersonalists are frustrated in attaining the supreme goal of life. The devotees, however, are not frustrated in their attempt to attain the real goal of life. This verse says; "Even though the impersonalists may ascend to impersonal Brahman realisation, they however, again fall down. O Lord, Your devotees, however, do not fall down from their engagement in the activities of devotional service to You. How can they abandon You, the goal of their lives?" That is the meaning.

13 It may be observed that Vraja, Gajendra, Bharata, and many others fell down from an exalted life in devotional service. However, because their desire to engage in devotional service followed them to their next birth, they ultimately attained success.

The impersonalists, however, do not retain the desire for spiritual advancement when they fall down. Their desires become material. Their position is described in the following words from the Vasana-bhasya:

"After they attain Brahman liberation the impersonalists again fall down, for they are offenders to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is the mater of all inconceivable potencies."

14 In this way the impersonalists become filled with material desires and fall down from Brahman liberation. That is clearly described in this verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.2.32). This verse implies, "O Lord, Your devotees, however, do not fall down." That the impersonalists do fall down and the devotees do not fall down are both facts of equal certainty. They are true without doubt. This verse implies, "O Lord, because the devotees love You, and because they have faith in the activities of devotional service (sadhana-bhakti), they do not fall down."

15 That devotional service removes all obstacles to spiritual progress is also described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.4.10):

"The demigods place many obstacles on the path of those who worship You to transcend the temporary abodes of the demigods and reach Your supreme abode. Those who offer the demigods their assigned share in sacrificial performances encounter no such obstacles. But because You are the direct protector of Your devotee, he is able to step over the head of whatever obstacle the demigods place before him."

16 That devotional service removes all obstacles to spiritual progress is again described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.35):

"O King, one who accepts this process of devotional service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead will never blunder on his path in this world. Even while running with eyes closed, he will never trip or fall."

Anuccheda 122

1 That devotional service removes all obstacles to spiritual progress is confirmed by the Supreme Lord Himself in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.21.24):

"My dear rsi, O leader of the living entities, for those who serve Me in devotion by worshipping Me, especially persons like you who have given up everything unto Me, there is never any question of frustration."*

2 Here the words "mayi sangrbhitatmanam" mean "their hearts are fixed on Me".

That devotional service removes all obstacles to spiritual progress is again confirmed by the Lord Himself in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.18):

"My dear Uddhava, if My devotee has not fully conquered his sense, he may be harassed by material desires, but because of his unflinching devotion for Me, he will not be defeated by sense gratification."*

3 The word "badhayamanah" in Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.18 means that the neophyte devotee sometimes remembers the Lord and becomes attracted to Him. That is what should be understood here.

That the devotee is not defeated in his attempts at spiritual advancement is also, confirmed by the Lord Himself in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.20.27):

"Having awakened faith in the narrations of My glories, being disgusted with all material activities, knowing that all sense-gratification leads to misery, but still being unable to renounce all sense enjoyment, My devotee should remain happy and worship Me with great faith and conviction. Even though he is sometimes engaged in sense enjoyment, My devotee knows that all sense gratification leads to a miserable result, and he sincerely repents such activities."

In this way the devotee humbly prays to the Lord and perseveres in his activities of devotional service. The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Shri Sukadeva to Shri Kardama.

1 That devotional service removes all fears obtained from wicked living entities or other sources of fear is confirmed by these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.5.43-44):

"Hiranyakasipu could not kill his son by throwing him beneath the feet of big elephants, throwing him among huge, fearful snakes, employing destructive spells, hurling him from the top of a hill, conjuring up illusory tricks, administering poison, starving him, exposing him to severe colds, winds, fire and water, or throwing heavy stones to crush him. When Hiranyakasipu found that he could not in any way harm Prahlada, who was completely sinless, he was in great anxiety about what to do next."*

2 In the Vishnu Purana, Shri Prahlada himself said:

"Elephants with tusks hard as thunderbolts attacked me, but I remained unhurt."

Also in Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.6.3) it is said:

"My dear King, wherever people in any position perform their occupational duties of devotional service by chanting and hearing (sravanam kirtanam visnoh), there cannot be any danger from bad elements. Therefore there was no need for anxiety about Gokula while the Supreme Personality of Godhead was personally present."*

3 This is also confirmed by the following statement of Shri Brhan-narada Purana:

"No obstacles can stop one who worships Lord Vishnu. Neither kings, nor thieves, nor diseases can trouble him. Pretas, pisacas, kusmandas, grahas, balagrahas, dakinis, and raksasas cannot harm him."

The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Shri Narada to Shri Yudhisthira.

Anuccheda 124

1 That they who are engaged in devotional service are always free of fears is again confirmed by the following rhetorical question (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.22.37):

"Therefore, O Vidura, how can persons completely under the shelter of Lord Krishna in devotional service be put into miseries pertaining to the body, the mind, nature, and other men and living creatures?"*

2 This is also confirmed by the following statement of the Garuda Purana:

"Neither Durvasa's curse nor Indra's thunderbolt have the power to harm a devotee who keeps Lord Krishna in his heart."

3 The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Shri Maitreya to Shri Vidura.

Anuccheda 125

1 Devotional service destroys both the sufferings created by sins already committed and the desire to commit sins in the future. This is explained in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.19):

"My dear Uddhava, just as a blazing fire turns firewood into ashes, similarly, devotion unto Me completely burns to ashes sins committed by My devotees."*

2 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"This verse means, 'As (yatha) a great blazing fire (agnih) burns firewood to ashes, so devotional service to Me (mad-visaya bhaktih), which I have now described burns away all sins.' In this way the Supreme Personality of Godhead describes the glory and wonder of devotional service. He says, 'O Uddhava, please hear this great wonder.'"

3 Here the example of a great fire is given. In this example the fire is great. However, even if the fire of devotional service is not very great it will still burn away all sins.

4 In the Padma Purana, Patala-khanda, Vaisakha-mahatmya it is also said:

"As a blazing fire burns firewood to ashes, so in a single moment devotional service to the Lord burns away all sins."

5 This is again confirmed by these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.2.15):

"If one chants the holy name of Hari and then dies because of an accidental misfortune, such as falling from the top of a house, slipping and suffering broken bones while travelling on the road, being bitten by a serpent, being afflicted with pain and high fever, or being injured by a weapon, one is immediately absolved from having to enter hellish life, even though he is sinful."*

Here the potential mood (vidhi-lin) is understood although not expressed. The sentences beginning "pusa prapistha-bhagah", and "yad agneyo staka-palo bhavati" (from the Yajur Veda) are examples of the potential being understood although not expressed.

6 The value of hearing about the Supreme Personality of Godhead is also described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.1.5):

"O descendent of King Bharata, one who desires to be free from all miseries must hear about, glorify, and also remember the Personality of Godhead, who is the Supersoul, the controller, and the saviour from all miseries."*

7 The word "tasmāt" here indicates the reason for hearing the glories of the Lord. It would be wrong to say there is no reason to hear them. The benefit derived from hearing the Lord's glories is not dependent on following a host of rules and regulations. By its own nature, the hearing of the Lord's glories brings the great benefit described here, just as by its own nature, a fire burns firewood to ashes. This was described in the Shrimad Bhagavatam verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda.

8 That the performance of devotional service is not dependent on careful attention to a host of rules and regulations is also seen in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.35):

"O King, one who accepts this process of devotional service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead will never blunder on his path in this world. Even while running with eyes closed, he will never trip or fall."

9 The Shrimad Bhagavatam verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda also refutes the idea that a long delay stands between the beginning of devotional service and the attainment of its results. That there is no such delay is also confirmed in the quote from Padma Purana in text 4, which says "tat-ksanat" (devotional service destroys all sins in a single moment).

1 That devotional service brings immediate results is also confirmed in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 5.1.15):

"Only a rare person who has adopted complete, unalloyed devotional service to Krishna can uproot the weeds of sinful actions with no possibility that they will revive. He can do this simply by discharging devotional service, just as the sun can immediately dissipate fog by its rays."*

2 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"This verse describes a rare and exalted stage of devotional service. The word 'kevalata' means 'not mixed with the activities of the path of austerity or any other spiritual path'. 'Vasudeva-parayana' means 'not having faith in any other path.' That is the meaning here."

3 This verse explains that as the sun (bhaskarah) dissipates fog (niharam) with its rays, so a devotee (vasudeva-parayanah) uproots the weeds of sinful actions by performing devotional service (bhaktiya).

1 That one becomes purified by engaging in devotional service is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.1.16):

"My dear King, if a sinful person engages in the service of a bona fide devotee of the Lord and thus learns how to dedicate his life unto the lotus feet of Krishna, he can be completely purified. One cannot be purified merely by undergoing austerity, penance, brahmacharya and the other methods of atonement I have previously described."*

2 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"This verse affirms that devotional service to the Lord is better than the path of impersonal speculation. One is not purified by following the path of speculation (na tatha puyate). However a person who has dedicated his life to Lord Krishna is purified by serving the Supreme Lord (tat-purusa-nisevaya)."

3 Atonement attained by engaging in devotional service is better than atonement attained by impersonal speculation. This is described in the following verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.1.11):

"My dear King, since acts meant to neutralise impious actions are also fruitive, they will not release one from the tendency to act fruitively. Persons who subject themselves to the rules and regulations of atonement are not at all intelligent. Indeed, they are in the mode of darkness. Unless one is freed from the mode of ignorance, trying to counteract one action through another is useless because this will not uproot one's desires. Thus even though one may superficially seem pious, he will undoubtedly be prone to act impiously. Therefore real atonement is enlightenment in perfect knowledge, Vedanta, by which one understands the Supreme Absolute Truth."*

These words are elaborately explained in Shrila Shridhara Svami's commentary.

4 Shrimad Bhagavatam (6.13.17) explains:

"Indra's sins were diminished by the influence of Rudra, the demigod of all directions. Because Indra was protected by the goddess of fortune, Lord Vishnu's wife, who resides in the lotus clusters of Manasa-sarovara Lake, Indra's sins could not affect him. Indra was ultimately relieved of all the reactions of his sinful deeds by strictly worshipping Lord Vishnu. Then he was called back to the heavenly planets by the brahmanas and reinstated in his position."*

This means that by meditating on Lord Vishnu, Indra became freed from the impious result attained by killing the brahmana Vrtrasura.

Shrimad Bhagavatam (6.13.18) then explains:

"O king, when Lord Indra reached the heavenly planets, the saintly brahmanas approached him and properly initiated him into a horse sacrifice (asvamedha-yajna) meant to please the Supreme Lord."*

We may note that ordinary people think one must perform an asvamedha-yajna to become genuinely freed from the results of sins.

5 Here someone may ask: "Why is it by worshipping the Supreme Personality of Godhead Indra was able to become freed from the sin of killing the great devotee Vrtrasura, who was situated in the platform of pure love for the Lord? It is generally understood that one becomes freed from a great offense only by either experiencing the punishment that is its proper result, or by receiving the mercy of the Lord of His devotee."

This objection is answered in the following words: The Supreme Personality of Godhead ordered Indra to kill Vrtra, and therefore there is actually no fault on Indra's part. Worshipping the Lord was therefore sufficient atonement for Indra. The Supreme Personality of Godhead ordered Indra to kill Vrtra so Vrtra could become freed from having a demon's body. Therefore Indra is not at fault here.

The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami.

1 That devotional service removes the results of past sins is explained in the following two verses (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.33.6-7):

"To say nothing of the spiritual advancement of persons who see the Supreme Person face to face, even a person born in a family of dog-eaters immediately becomes eligible to perform Vedic sacrifices if he once utters the holy name of the Supreme Personality of Godhead or chants about Him, hears about His pastimes, offers Him obeisances or even remembers Him."*

2 "Oh, how glorious are they whose tongues are chanting Your holy name! Even if born in the families of dog-eaters, such persons are worshipping. Persons who chant the holy name of Your Lordship must have executed all kinds of austerities and fire sacrifices and achieved all the good manners of the Aryans. To be chanting the holy name of Your Lordship, they must have bathed at holy places of pilgrimage, studied the Vedas and fulfilled everything required."*

3 The word 'svadah' here means 'a member of the dogeater-caste'. The dictionary defines the word 'svadah' as 'a person who presently eats dog's flesh, as carnivorous animals eat the flesh of various creatures'. The word 'svadah' here, however, refers to a person who in the past ate dog's flesh, performed atonement for that sin, and does not eat dog's flesh in the present. This second meaning is the common usage of the word 'svadah'. The rule 'rudhir yogam apaharati' (customary usage takes precedence over dictionaries and etymology), here eclipses the dictionary definition. In this way the word 'svadah' is defined here.

4 Here the word 'savanaya' refers to the soma-yajna. Simply by once hearing the holy name of the Lord one becomes free from past sins and the low birth they have brought and becomes qualified to perform the soma-yajna. That is the meaning here.

5 If this is true even for dogeaters that become devotees, then how much more true is it for devotees that come from pious backgrounds? Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.14.21) explains:

"Only by practicing unalloyed devotional service with full faith in Me can one obtain Me, the Supreme Personality of Godhead. I am naturally dear to My devotees, who take Me as the only goal of their loving service. By engaging in such pure devotional service, even the dogeaters can purify themselves from the contamination of their low birth."*

6 By engaging in devotional service a dogeater becomes purified of the contamination brought by his past sins and he also attains the qualities needed to perform a yajna. In this way he is qualified to perform a yajna. A boy born in a brahmana family is not automatically qualified to perform yajnas. He is only qualified when he attains saintly qualities and when he is properly initiated. A person born in a brahmana family thus must undergo an elaborate procedure to become qualified to perform a yajna. A devotee, however, is automatically qualified. Therefore a devotee is more worthy of receiving worship than is a brahmana. This is confirmed by Shrila Shridhara Svami, who comments here, "This statement declares that a devotee of the Lord is supremely worthy of receiving worship." In this way it is clearly seen that the performance of devotional service removes all the disadvantages created by past sins.

7 This is confirmed in Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.33.7 (quoted in text 2). There the word "aho" indicates a sense of being struck with wonder. That verse states: "Even a dogeater is glorious if Your holy name stays on his tongue." How is that? The answer is given "He must have executed all kinds of austerities." The meaning here that a person who chants Your holy name, O Lord, is the most saintly of persons.

8 In this way engagement in devotional service to the Lord removes the diseases and sufferings caused by past sins. This is described in the Skanda Purana in these words:

"I offer my respectful obeisances to the limitless Supreme Personality of Godhead. When one remembers His holy name all one's sufferings and diseases perish."

9 Shri Nama-kaumudi also explains that because chanting of the Lord's holy name fulfils all the desires of the devotee, it also removes all his past sins.

The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Shri Devahuti.

1 That devotional service removes material desires is explained in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.2.17):

"Although one may neutralise the reactions of sinful life through austerity, charity, vows and other such methods, these pious activities cannot uproot the material desires in one's heart. However, if one serves the lotus feet of the Personality of Godhead, he is immediately freed from all such contaminations."*

2 Here the word "adharma-jam" means "born from irreligious activities". The heart is not purified of sins simply by samskaras. The heart is purified only by serving the feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. That is the meaning here.

3 That engagement in devotional service removes all past sins is explained in these words of Shri Padma Purana:

There are four kinds of effects due to sinful activities. They are listed as follows: 1. the effect which is not yet fructified, 2. the effect which is lying as seed, 3. the effect which is already mature, and 4. the effect which is almost mature. All these four effects become immediately vanquished for those who surrender unto the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Vishnu and become engaged in His devotional service in full Krishna consciousness."*

Note: These four effects of sins are described by Shrila Prabhupada in Nectar of Devotion, Chapter One, under the sub-heading "Relief from Material Distress."

4 These four kinds of sinful reactions, 1. the effect which is not yet fructified, 2. the effect which is lying as seed, 3. the effect which is already mature, and 4. the effect which is almost mature, will be described in detail later in this book.

The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by the Shri Vishnudutas to the Yamadutas.

1 That devotional service removes ignorance is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.11.30):
"Thus regaining your natural position and rendering service unto the Supreme Lord, who is the all-powerful reservoir of all pleasure and who lives in all living entities as the Supersoul, you will very soon forget the illusory understanding of 'I' and 'my'."*

2 That devotional service removes ignorance is also described in Padma Purana in these words:

"Pure devotional service in Krishna consciousness is the highest enlightenment, and when such enlightenment is there, it is just like a blazing forest fire, killing all the inauspicious snakes of desire."*

3 The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Shri Manu to Maharaja Dhruva.

Anuccheda 131

1 That by engaging in devotional service one satisfies everyone is explained in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.31.14):

"As pouring water on the root of a tree energises the trunk, branches, twigs and everything else, and as supplying food to the stomach enlivens the senses and limbs of the body, simply worshipping the Supreme Personality of Godhead through devotional service automatically satisfies the demigods, who are parts of that Supreme Personality."*

2 That everyone is pleased with a devotee is also described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.9.46-47):

"Suruci, the younger mother of Dhruva Maharaja, seeing that the innocent boy had fallen at her feet, immediately picked him up, embracing him with her hands, and with tears of feeling she blessed him with the words, 'My dear boy, long may you live!'"*

3 "Unto one who has transcendental qualities due to friendly behaviour with the Supreme Personality of Godhead, all living entities offer honour, just as water automatically flows down by nature."*

4 Suruci was of Dhruva's enemy and the co-wife of Dhruva's mother. Dhruva has just come from worshipping the Supreme Lord.

5 That everyone is pleased with a devotee is also described in these words of the Padma Purana:

"A person who worships Lord Hari pleases all the worlds. All moving and unmoving living entities love him."

6 The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Shri Maitreya Muni.

Anuccheda 132

1 That devotional service brings with it knowledge, renunciation, and all other spiritual virtues is explained in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 5.18.12):

"All the demigods and their exalted qualities, such as religion, knowledge and renunciation, become manifest in the body of one who has developed unalloyed devotion for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Vasudeva. On the other hand, a person devoid of devotional service and engaged in material activities has no good qualities. Even if he is adept at the practice of mystic yoga or the honest endeavour of maintaining his family and relatives, he must be driven by his own mental speculations and must engage in the service of the Lord's external energy. How can there be any good qualities in such a man?"*

2 That devotional service grants the happiness of Svargaloka, liberation, and residence in the Lord's transcendental abode is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.20. 32-33):

"Everything that can be achieved by fruitive activities, penance, knowledge, detachment, mystic yoga, charity, religious duties, and all other means of perfecting life, is easily achieved by My devotee through loving service to Me. If somehow or other My devotee desires promotion to heaven, liberation or residence in My abode, he easily achieves such benedictions."

3 Devotional service brings such great happiness that it inspires one to reject the methods and goals of karma (fruitive work) and jnana (impersonal speculation). This is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.14):

"One who has fixed his consciousness on Me desires neither the position or abode of Lord Brahma or Lord Indra, nor an empire on the earth, nor sovereignty in the lower planetary systems, nor the eightfold perfection of yoga, nor liberation from birth and death. Such a person desires Me alone."

4 Here the word "rasadhipatyam" means "sovereignty in the lower planetary systems", and "apuna-bhavam" means "impersonal liberation". What more? The word "anyat" means "anything else one may aspire to attain." The devotees does not desire (na icchati) any of this. The Lord says, "He desires only Me (mam), who am attained by devotional service and who is the greatest of all goals of life. In this way the devotee is completely surrendered unto Me (mayy arpitatma)."

Anuccheda 133

1 Pure devotional service offered to the Supreme Personality of Godhead is beyond the modes of nature. All other works are in the realm of the material modes. This is explained in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.25.23):

2 "Work performed as an offering to Me, without consideration of the fruit, is considered to be in the mode of transcendental goodness, beyond the material modes. Work performed with a desire to enjoy the result is in the mode of passion. And work impelled by violence and envy is in the mode of ignorance."

3 Here the word "mad-arpanam" means "offered to Me", "nisphalam" means "without desiring to enjoy the results", and "adi" means "pride, envy, and a host of other vices".

1 Non-devotional activities are situated in the realm of the three modes of material nature. Activities of direct devotional service, however, are transcendental and beyond the modes of nature. The Lord Himself explains this in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.25.24):

2 "Absolute knowledge is in the mode of goodness, knowledge based on duality is in the mode of passion, and foolish, materialistic knowledge is in the mode of ignorance. Knowledge based upon Me, however, is understood to be transcendental."

3 Here the word "prakrtam" means "material knowledge, which is like the small knowledge of a child or a deaf-mute", "vaikalpikam" means "the knowledge attained by using the material body and senses", "rajah" means "the mode of passion", and "jnana-kaivalyam" means "impersonal knowledge whereby one imagines that the individual living entity and the Supreme Brahman are not different." The word "tvam" (you) is therefore a word that has no meaning in impersonalism. Only the word "tat" (it) has meaning for the impersonalists. When the heart and mind are situated in material goodness then the pure and subtle impersonal feature of the Absolute can be understood. Therefore the impersonal Absolute that is manifested in the mode of material goodness.

4 The different effects of the different modes are explained in these words of Shri Bhagavad-gita (14.17):

"From the mode of goodness, real knowledge develops; from the mode of passion, greed develops; and from the mode of ignorance develop foolishness, madness and illusion."*

5 The rareness of knowledge of the Supreme Person is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.14.2 and 5):

"Demigods situated in the mode of goodness and great saints cleansed of the dirt of material enjoyment hardly ever render pure devotional service at the lotus feet of Mukunda."*

6 "O great sage, among many millions who are liberated and perfect in knowledge of liberation, one may be a devotee of Lord Narayana, or Krishna. Such devotees, who are fully peaceful, are extremely rare."*

7 Knowledge of the Supreme Person is not attained by they who are situated in the three modes of goodness, passion and ignorance. This is explained in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.14.1):

"O learned brahmana, demons are generally sinful, being obsessed with the modes of passion and ignorance. How, then, could Vrtrasura have attained such exalted love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Narayana?"*

8 Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami then explained that non devotees can become enlightened by association of great souls. In his reply he said that Vrtrasura, in his previous birth, associated with Narada Muni and other great devotees. That one attains knowledge of the Supreme Personality of Godhead by associating with His devotees is also explained in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.5.32):

"Unless they smear upon their bodies the dust of the lotus feet of a Vaishnava completely freed from material contamination, persons very much inclined toward materialistic life cannot be attached to the lotus feet of the Lord, who is glorified for his uncommon activities. Only by becoming Krishna consciousness and taking shelter at the lotus feet of the Lord in this way can on be freed from material contamination."*

9 That one becomes enlightened by associating with a great devotee, who is a pure carrier of the Lord's mercy, is explained in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.18.13):

10 "The value of a moment's association with the devotee of the Lord cannot even be compared to the attainment of heavenly planets or liberation from matter, and what to speak of worldly benedictions in the form of material prosperity, which are for those who are meant for death."*

11 To be freed from the influence of the three modes of material nature is best, so therefore association with a devotee who is free from the influence of the modes is the best kind of association with a devotee.

In Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.1.1., King Pariksit asks the following question:

"My dear brahmana, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Vishnu, being everyone's well-wisher is equal and extremely dear to everyone. How, then, did He become partial like a common man for the sake of Indra and thus kill Indra's enemies? How can a person equal to everyone be partial to some and inimical toward others?"*

12 The Supreme Personality of Godhead does not give His real mercy to the demigods and others still under the spell of the three modes of material nature. He gives His real mercy only to the great souls, such as Prahlada, who are free from the spell of the modes. By associating with such devotees one also becomes free from the spell of the three modes of nature. When one has thus shaken off the influence of the modes, he can engage in real devotional service. This is described by the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself in these words spoken to Uddhava (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.25.33):

13 "Therefore, having achieved this human form of life, which allows one to develop full knowledge, those who are intelligent should free themselves from all contamination of the modes of nature and engage exclusively in loving service to Me."

14 The assertion that knowledge of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is "nirguna" should be understood in the secondary sense of "free from the influence of the three modes of material nature" and not in the primary sense of "not having any qualities". The impersonal conception of God imagines that God has no qualities. This idea is "nirguna" in the primary sense. The personal and impersonal ideas of God are both nirguna, but it is the personal idea of God that is nirguna in the sense of being free from the three modes of material nature. Indeed, the impersonal idea of God is a product of the material mode of goodness and the personal idea of God is free from the spell of the modes as the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself explains in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.25.29):

15 Happiness derived from the impersonal idea of God is in the mode of goodness, happiness based on sense gratification is in the mode of passion, and happiness based on delusion and degradation is in the mode of ignorance. But that happiness found within Me is transcendental."

16 In this way Shrimad Bhagavatam explains that the happiness of serving the Supreme Personality of Godhead is transcendental and free from the influence of the three modes of material nature. Therefore devotional service, which has many activities, beginning with hearing about the Lord, is beyond the modes of material nature.

17 The devotional activity of hearing about the Lord's glories is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.2.16):

"O twice-born sages, by serving those devotees who are completely freed from all vice, great service is done. By such service, one gains affinity for hearing the messages of Vasudeva."*

18 It was previously explained that association with great souls frees one from the spell of the three modes of material nature. Here it is said that by serving these great souls one develops an affinity for hearing about the Supreme Personality of Godhead. From this it may be understood that the activity of hearing the Lord's glories is also beyond the spell of the three modes of material nature.

19 That hearing the glories of the Lord is a transcendental activity beyond the spell of the three modes of material nature is confirmed by the Lord Himself in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 8.24.38):

"You will be thoroughly advised and favoured by Me, and because of your inquiries, everything about My glories, which are known as param brahma, will be manifest within your heart. Thus you will know everything about Me."*

20 In these words Lord Matsyadeva explains that knowledge of Brahman (param brahma) is attained by the mercy of the Lord. Here someone may ask: "How can knowledge of Brahman describe various qualities, since Brahman has no qualities? The answer is given: There are two kinds of Brahman knowledge. One kind, the knowledge attained by the Lord's devotees, comes by the Lord's mercy, the other kind, the knowledge attained by the worshippers of impersonal Brahman, comes independently, without the Lord's direct mercy. Therefore the spiritual knowledge attained by the devotees in their practice of devotional service, which is manifested by the Lord's transcendental potency, is filled with spiritual variety.

21 That the spiritual knowledge of the devotees is superior to the knowledge of the impersonalists is confirmed by the Lord Himself in the following words of Shri Bhagavad-gita (18.54):

"One who is thus transcendently situated at once realises the Supreme Brahman and becomes fully joyful. He never laments or desires to have anything. He is equally disposed toward every living entity. In that state he attains pure devotional service unto Me."*

22 The superiority of devotional service to the Lord is also confirmed by these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.7.10):

"All different varieties of atmaramas (those who take pleasure in atma, or spirit self), especially those established on the path of self-realisation, though freed from all kinds of material bondage, desire to render unalloyed devotional service unto the Personality of Godhead. This means that the Lord possesses transcendental qualities and therefore can attract everyone, including liberated souls."*

23 The worshippers of Brahman attain a liberation that is without any variety. They who understand the real nature of the Absolute do not think very highly of this kind of liberation. They reject it. This is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.15.48):

"Persons who are very expert and most intelligent in understanding things as they are engage in hearing narrations of the auspicious activities and pastimes of the Lord, which are worth chanting and worth hearing. Such persons do not care even for the highest material benediction, namely liberation, to say nothing or other less important benedictions like the material happiness of the heavenly kingdom."*

24 Devotional service is the opposite of impersonal liberation. Indeed, for one who has attained even the dim reflection of the Lord's mercy impersonal liberation is like hell. This is confirmed by the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.17.28):

"Devotees solely engaged in the devotional service of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Narayana, never fear any condition of life. For them the heavenly planets, liberation and the hellish planets are all the same, for such devotees are interested only in the service of the Lord."*

25 Although an impersonalist may think it is the mercy of the Absolute, impersonal liberation is only a figment of the impersonalist's imagination. Because it comes from the imagination it is actually a product of the three modes of material nature, and because it is a product of the three modes of material nature it eventually leads to another birth in the material world.

26 Someone may ask: "The internal and external senses of the living entity are products of the three modes of material nature. How can the knowledge and activities that come from these two sets of senses ever be free from the grip of the three modes?"

The answer may be given: The power from which knowledge and action come is not material and not a product of the three modes. Because the individual spirit soul is not the most important, because he is in truth a potency subordinate to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and because he is like an empty vessel that cannot act unless filled with the potency of the Lord, it is the Supreme Lord alone that enables the senses to act.

27 This is confirmed by the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.26.24):

"As iron has the power to burn when made red-hot in the association of fire, so the body, senses, living force, mind and intelligence, although merely lumps of matter, can function in their activities when infused with a particle of consciousness by the Supreme Personality of Godhead. As iron cannot burn unless heated by fire, the bodily senses cannot act unless favoured by the Supreme Brahman."*

28 This is also confirmed by the Sruti-sastra (Brhad-aranyaka Upanisad 4.4.18) in these words:

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is the breathing power of the breath. He is the seeing power of the eyes. He is the hearing power of the ears. He is the thinking power of the mind."

29 The Rg Veda also explains:

"Nothing happens without the sanction of the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

30 When one performs activities to attain a goal that is within the realm of the three modes, then his activities are within the realm of the modes. However, when one performs activities to please the Supreme Personality of Godhead, then his activities are beyond the realm of the modes of material nature. This is confirmed by Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami in the following words from the Devamrta-pana chapter of Shrimad Bhagavatam (8.9.29):

31 "In human society there are various activities performed for the protection of one's wealth and life by one's words, one's mind and one's actions, but they are all performed for one's personal or extended sense gratification with reference to the body. All these activities are baffled because of being separate from devotional service. But when the same activities are performed for the satisfaction of the Lord, the beneficial results are distributed to everyone, just as water poured on the root of a tree is distributed throughout the entire tree."*

32 Here the word "prthaktvat" means "by taking shelter of someone other than the Supreme Personality of Godhead" and the word "aprthaktvat" means "by taking shelter of the Supreme Personality of Godhead." That is the meaning. When knowledge and activities are employed in the service of the Supreme Personality of Godhead they become spiritual and beyond the touch of the three modes of material nature, and by performing such activities one becomes free from having to take another birth in the material world of birth and death. The so-called knowledge of the impersonalists, however, because it is not employed in the service of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, inevitably leads one to another birth in the material world. The qualities of devotional service, which begin with its ability to please the Lord, will be described later in this book. In the third canto of Shrimad Bhagavatam, Lord Kapiladeva described devotional service as being either free from the modes of nature, or within the realm of the modes of nature, all according to whether the heart of the devotee is free from the modes or still under their spell.

1 In this way it is seen that knowledge in devotional service and the activities of devotional service, such as hearing and chanting the Lord's glories, are beyond the touch of the material modes of nature. In the same way residence in the Lord's temple is also beyond the modes. The Lord Himself confirms this in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.25.25):

2 "Residence in the forest is in the mode of goodness, residence in a town is in the mode of passion, residence in a gambling house displays the quality of ignorance, and residence in a place where I reside is transcendental, beyond the modes of nature."

3 In this verse the words "vanam vasah" mean "residence in the forest", "gramyah" means "residence among householders", and "tamasam" means "residence among sinful people". The word "dyuta-sadanam" (gambling house) is here given as an example of one among many kinds of sinful places. "Man-niketam" means "a place where they who are devoted to serving Me stay". The word "vasah" refers to all the different places here, beginning with the forest. This sentence is thus like the sentence "ayur ghrtam".

4 A forest, a place where there are many trees and almost no people, is primarily in the mode of goodness, although traces of passion and ignorance may be present. Because residence in a forest is originally manifested from the mode of goodness, and because by residing in a forest one becomes more strongly situated in the mode of goodness, it is right to say that the mode of goodness is prominent in the forest.

The word "gramyah" is formed by adding a taddhita affix to the word "grama". The word "dyuta-sadanam" means "residence in a gambling house". The word "man-niketam" refers to any place where the Supreme Lord is glorified. Such a place becomes free from the touch of the modes of material nature just as an ordinary object becomes gold by contact with a sparsamani jewel.

5 If one has eyes spiritualised with devotion for the Lord he can see that a place where the Lord is glorified is beyond the modes of material nature. The scriptures explain:

"When the demigods look at the devotees worshipping the Lord in the temple, they see a host of four-armed residents of Vaikuntha."

The commentator explains:

"This means that, because the Lord is personally present in His temple, the temple is beyond the touch of the three modes of material nature."

Anuccheda 136

1 As different residences are situated in the different modes, so different activities are also situated in the different modes. The Supreme Personality of Godhead explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.25.26):

2 "A worker free of attachment is in the mode of goodness, a worker blinded by personal desire is in the mode of passion, and a worker who has completely forgotten how to tell right from wrong is in the mode of ignorance. But a worker who has taken shelter of Me is understood to be transcendental to the modes of nature."

3 The meaning here is that a worker who does not take shelter of the Supreme Personality of Godhead remains under the spell of the three modes of material nature. His body and everything else are under the spell of the three modes.

1 As different activities are situated in the different modes, so different kinds of faith in various activities are also situated in the different modes. The Supreme Personality of Godhead explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.25.27):

2 "Faith directed toward spiritual life is in the mode of goodness, faith rooted in fruitive work is in the mode of passion, faith residing in irreligious activities is in the mode of ignorance, but faith in My devotional service is purely transcendental."

3 In this verse the word "adharma" means "irreligion". The remainder of this verse is like the previous verses. The verse quoted in this anuccheda was spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

1 That devotional service is above the three modes of material nature is also confirmed by the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.2.24):

"After hearing the discourses between the Yamadutas and the Vishnudutas, Ajamila could understand the religious principles that act under the three modes of material nature. These principles are mentioned in the three Vedas. He could also understand the transcendental religious principles, which are above the modes of material nature and which concern the relationship between the living being and the Supreme Personality of Godhead."*

2 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"In this verse the word 'suddham' means 'beyond the three modes of material nature' and 'traivedyam' means 'the religious principles described in the three Vedas'. These religious principles are described as being 'gunasrayam', or 'within the realm of the three modes of material nature.'"

3 The Vedas described here are the karma kanda portion of the Vedas. This portion of the Vedas is described by the following words of Shri Bhagavad-gita (9.21):

"When they have thus enjoyed vast heavenly sense pleasure and the results of their pious activities are exhausted, they return to this mortal planet again. Thus those who seek sense enjoyment by adhering to the principles of the three Vedas achieve only repeated birth and death."*

The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami.

1 That devotional service is the Lord's potency and that it is self-manifest is confirmed by the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 5.14.45):

2 "Even though in the body of a deer, Maharaja Bharata did not forget the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Therefore when he was giving up the body of a deer, he loudly uttered the following prayer: The Supreme Personality of Godhead is sacrifice personified. He gives the results of ritualistic activity. He is the protector of religious systems, the personification of mystic yoga, the source of all knowledge, the controller of the entire creation, and the Supersoul in every living entity. He is beautiful and attractive. I am quitting this body offering obeisances unto Him and hoping, that I may perpetually engage in His transcendental loving service." Uttering this, Maharaja Bharata left his body."*

3 The word "yah" here refers to Bharata, the son of Lord Rsabhadeva. Even though he was in the body of a deer, at the time of death he was able to speak this prayer. Although it is not ordinarily possible for a deer to speak in this way, because devotional service is self-manifest, the service of glorifying the Lord appeared to Bharata in this way. The same thing happened to the elephant Gajendra.

1 That devotional service brings great happiness to they who directly engage in it is explained in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.2.22):

"Certainly, therefore, since time immemorial, all transcendentalists have been rendering devotional service to Lord Krishna, the Personality of Godhead, with great delight, because such devotional service is enlivening to the self."*

2 That devotional service brings great happiness even to they who do not directly engage in it is explained in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.2.22):

"We have just begun the performance of this fruitive activity, a sacrificial fire, without certainty of its result due to the many imperfections in our action. Our bodies have become black from the smoke, but we are factually pleased by the nectar of the lotus feet of the Personality of Godhead, Govinda, which you are distributing."*

3 The Lord Himself describes the happiness of devotional service in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 9.4.67):

"My devotees who are always satisfied to be engaged in My loving service, are not interested even in the four principles of liberation (salokya, sarupya, samipyā and sarsti), although these are automatically achieved by their service. What then is to be said of such perishable happiness as elevation to the higher planetary systems?"*

4 This statement,, that the devotees are not interested in perishable material happinesses, proves that devotional service is above the modes of material nature. This verse says that the devotees are not interested even in the four kinds of liberation, which begin with salokya-mukti, so how can they be interested in perishable material happinesses, which will certainly be destroyed in the course of time?

This verse was spoken by Lord Vishnu to Durvasa Muni.

1 That devotional service makes one fall in love with the Supreme Personality of Godhead is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.7.33):

"By these activities (as mentioned above) one is able to cut down the influence of the enemies, namely, lust, anger, greed, illusion, madness, and jealousy, and when thus situated, one can render service to the Lord. In this way one surely attains the platform of loving service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead."*

2 The exalted nature of the devotees' love is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 5.6.18):

"My dear King, the Supreme Person, Mukunda, is actually the maintainer of all the members of the Pandava and Yadu dynasties. He is your spiritual master, worshipable Deity, friend, and the director of your activities. To say nothing of this, He sometimes serves your family as a messenger or servant. This means He worked just as ordinary servants do. Those engaged in getting the Lord's favour attain liberation from the Lord very easily, but He does not very easily give the opportunity to render direct service unto Him."*

3 Someone may worry, "No one will ever attain real love for the Lord." To answer this worry, this verse says, "The Supreme Personality of Godhead sometimes gives love for Him, love that is called bhakti-yoga". Here the word "karhicit" means "sometimes". The Amara-kosa dictionary explains, "The affixes cit and cana are employed to limit the scope of the preceding word."

4 Finally, after the devotee endeavours for a long time, the Lord gives pure love for Him. This is explained in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 5.19.27):

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead fulfils the material desires of a devotee who approaches Him with such motives, but He does not bestow benedictions upon the devotee that will cause him to demand more benedictions again. However, the Lord willingly gives the devotee shelter at His own lotus feet, even though such a person does not aspire for it, and that shelter satisfies all his desires. That is the Supreme Personality of Godhead's special mercy."*

5 That one can please the Supreme Personality of Godhead only by loving and serving Him is explained in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.7.51):

"My dear friends, O sons of the demons, you cannot please the Supreme Personality of Godhead by becoming perfect brahmanas, demigods or great saints or by becoming perfectly good in etiquette or vast learning. None of these qualifications can awaken the pleasure of the Lord. Nor by charity, austerity, sacrifice, cleanliness or vows can one satisfy the Lord. The Lord is pleased only if one has unflinching, unalloyed devotion to Him. Without sincere devotional service, everything is simply a show."*

6 That one can please the Supreme Personality of Godhead only by loving devotional service is again confirmed by the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.9.9.):

"Prahlada Maharaja continued: One may possess wealth, an aristocratic family, beauty, austerity, education, sensory expertise, lustre, influence physical strength, diligence, intelligence, and mystic power, but I think that even by all these qualifications one cannot satisfy the Supreme Personality of Godhead. However, one can satisfy the Lord simply by devotional service. Gajendra did this, and thus the Lord was satisfied with him."*

7 In this verse the word "abhijana" means "birth in an aristocratic family", "buddhi" means "intelligence", and "yoga" means "astanga-yoga". This verse is spoken by Prahlada Maharaja to Lord Nrsimhadeva.

1 Here someone may ask: "If the Supreme Personality of Godhead already possesses all happiness, then how is it possible for Him to find more happiness in the devotees' service? He already has all happiness. The idea that he can obtain more happiness contradicts the idea that He eternally has all happiness already."

Here the answer is given: The Vedic literatures certainly support the idea that He finds more happiness in the devotees' service. Here the explanation is given. The all-blissful Supreme Personality of Godhead has a potency, called hladini-sakti, that manifests His transcendental bliss. He places this potency among His devotees and when they service Him it is this potency that pleases Him. In this way the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who already has all pleasure, is pleased by devotional service. This is confirmed by the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 5.15.13):

2 "When the Supreme Lord is pleased by a person's actions, automatically all the demigods, human beings, animals, birds, bees, creepers, trees, grass and all other living entities, beginning with Lord Brahma are pleased. The Supreme Personality of Godhead is the Supersoul of everyone, and He is by nature fully pleased. Nonetheless, He came to the arena of Maharaja Gaya and said, 'I am full pleased'."*

3 In this verse the word "visva-jivah" means "He who gives life to all living beings." The compound word beginning with "deva" is in the singular because it is a dvandva-samasa. The word "priti" means "happiness". This verse was spoken by Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami.

1 Because the Supreme Personality of Godhead is thus always happy in Himself and because His desires are always fulfilled, He is pleased by even the smallest offering. The following example is given in Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.11.4-5):

2 "The citizens arrived before the Lord with their respective presentations, offering them to the fully satisfied and self-sufficient one, who, by, by His own potency, incessantly supplies others. These presentations were like the offering of a lamp to the sun. Yet the citizens began to speak in ecstatic language to receive the Lord, just as wards welcome their guardian and father."*

3 In this verse the word "tatra" means "in Dvaraka", and the phrase "raver dipam" means "the offering of a lamp to the sun." The people worshipped (adrtah) the Lord in that way. That is the meaning. The phrase beginning with the word "priti" explains how the people were able to please the Lord with their prayers and various offerings. Here is given the example of children (arbhakah) approaching their father (pitaram). The word "priti" here means "extraordinary happiness and love." The Lord is here described as "sarva-suhrdam" (the friend and well wisher of all). Because He is everyone's friend, He is also everyone's protector (avitaram).

4 Although He is always satisfied and happy in Himself, and although His desires are always fulfilled, the Supreme Personality of Godhead is nevertheless pleased by His devotees as a proud and loving father is pleased by His children. That is the meaning. He is merciful to His devotees and He fulfils their desires as if He were a kalpa-vrksa tree. He naturally loves His devotees, they naturally worship Him and offer prayers to Him, and He reciprocates by giving them appropriate gifts in return. In this way, even though He is naturally filled with all bliss, the Supreme Personality of Godhead still finds happiness in the devotional service offered by His devotees. This verse was spoken by Shrila Suta Gosvami.

1 The devotion that the devotees feel for the Lord is actually a potency of the Lord Himself. The Lord himself is the original cause of that devotion. The Lord Himself is thus present in the activities of devotional service performed by the devotee's limbs and senses. The devotee's activities of devotional service are thus a reflection of the Lord's potency of devotional service. In this way the power of the Lord's mercy is the actual cause of the devotee's love for the Lord.

That the Lord Himself is the cause of the activities of devotional service performed by the limbs and senses is confirmed by the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.8.40):

2 "O Almighty Lord, how can I possibly describe You? You awaken the vital air, which then impels the minds, senses and power of speech to act. This is true for all ordinary conditioned souls and even for great demigods like Brahma and Siva. So it is certainly true for me. Nevertheless, You become the intimate friend of those who worship You."

3 In this verse the words "O Almighty Lord, how can I possibly describe You?" mean "How can I possibly describe even a small portion of Your mercy?" This is so because You (tvaya) awaken (udiritah) the vital air (asuh) and when it is set in motion (samspandate), power of speech (vak) and the mind and senses follow (tam anu)." The word "vai" (certainly) indicates that the Lord is both the direct and indirect cause of the senses' actions. This is confirmed by the following words (Shri Brhad aranyaka Upanisad 4.4.18):

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is the breathing power of the breath. He is the seeing power of the eyes. He is the hearing power of the ears. He is the thinking power of the mind."

This is true not only for ordinary living entities, but even for the great demigods Brahma and Siva (aja-sarvayoh). Therefore the speaker of this verse (Markandeya Muni) says, "It is certainly also true for me (svasya)."

Although no one is ever really independent, the devotees voluntarily allow the Lord to control their speech and other limbs and senses, and thus they become like puppets in His hands. The verse there says, "O Lord, because they love (bhava) You with a love that is Your own gift to them, You become (asi) the devotees' intimate friend (bandhuh)."

This verse was spoken by Markandeya Muni to Shri Nara-Narayana Rsis.

Anuccheda 145

1 That devotional service, and nothing else, enables one to directly see the Supreme Personality of Godhead is explained in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.8.36):

2 "O Krishna, those who continuously hear, chant and repeat Your transcendental activities, or take pleasure in others' doing so, certainly see Your lotus feet, which alone can stop the repetition of birth and death."*

3 The meaning of this verse is clear. It was spoken by Shri Kunti-devi to the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Anuccheda 146

1 That by engaging in devotional service one attains the Lord's association is explained in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.18.45):

"My dear Uddhava, I am the Supreme Lord of all worlds, and I create and destroy this universe, being its ultimate cause. I am thus the Absolute Truth, and one who worships Me with unfailing devotional service comes to Me."

2 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"That Shri Krishna is the Supreme Personality of Godhead is confirmed by the words 'sarvotpatty-apyayam', which means 'the creator and destroyer of all the material worlds'. 'Ma' means 'Me, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is the cause of everything, who has a spiritual form and who resides in Vaikuntha', 'brahma-karanam' means 'the author of the Vedas', and 'upayati' means 'comes near'."

3 That by engaging in devotional service one attains the Lord's association is also explained in these words (Shri Bhagavad-gita 8.22):

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is greater than all, is attainable by unalloyed devotion. Although He is present in His abode, He is all-pervading, and everything is situated within Him."*

Anuccheda 147

1 Devotional service is rewarded with a gift far beyond the power of the devotee's mind to understand. Dhruva Maharaja, was given his own spiritual planet Dhruvaloka as a reward for his service, is the proof of this.

By engaging in devotional service, the devotee turns the Lord into a submissive servant. The Lord Himself explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.20):

"My dear Uddhava, neither through astanga-yoga (the mystic yoga system to control the senses), nor through impersonal monism or an analytical study of the Absolute Truth, nor through study of the Vedas, nor through practice of austerities, nor through charity, nor through acceptance of sannyasa can one satisfy Me as much as one can by developing unalloyed devotional service unto Me."*

2 After speaking that verse, the Lord explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.21):

"Being very dear to the devotees and sadhus, I am attained through unflinching faith and devotional service. This bhakti-yoga system, which gradually increases attachment for Me, purifies even a human being born among dogeaters. That is to say, everyone can be elevated to the spiritual platform by the process of bhakti-yoga."*

3 Although these verses from Shrimad Bhagavatam Canto Eleven Chapter Fourteen do not clearly single out either sadhana-bhakti (the beginning stage of devotional service) or sadhya-bhakti (the advanced stage of devotional service), it is clear that the beginning stage is not the best or final feature of devotional service. Still, because the beginning stage of devotional service gradually leads one to the advanced stage, it is also glorified in these verses. This is explained in the following question and an answer (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.1):

"My dear Krishna, the learned sages who explain Vedic literature recommend various processes for protecting one's life. Considering these varieties of viewpoint, my Lord, please tell me whether all these processes are equally important. or whether one of them is supreme."*

The Lord answers (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.26):

"When a diseased eye is treated with medicinal ointment it gradually recovers its power to see. Similarly, as a conscious living entity cleanses himself of material contamination by hearing and chanting the pious narrations of My glories, he regains his ability to see Me, the Absolute Truth, in My subtle spiritual form."*

4 The beginning stage of devotional service is clearly glorified in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.18-22):

"My dear Uddhava, If My devotee has not fully conquered his sense, he may be harassed by material desires, but because of his unflinching devotion for Me, he will not be defeated by sense gratification."

"My dear Uddhava, just as a blazing fire turns firewood into ashes, similarly, devotion unto Me completely burns to ashes sins committed by My devotees."

"My dear Uddhava, neither through astanga-yoga (the mystic yoga system to control the senses), nor through impersonal monism or an analytical study of the Absolute Truth, nor through study of the Vedas, nor through practice of austerities, nor through charity, nor through acceptance of sannyasa can one satisfy Me as much as one can by developing unalloyed devotional service unto Me."*

"Being very dear to the devotees and sadhus, I am attained through unflinching faith and devotional service. This Bhakti-yoga system, which gradually increases attachment to Me, purifies even a human being born among dogeaters. That is to say, everyone can be elevated to the spiritual platform by the process of bhakti-yoga."*

"Neither religious activities endowed with honesty and mercy nor knowledge obtained with great penance can completely purify one's consciousness if they are bereft of loving service to Me."

Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.18 especially describes the beginning stage of devotional service because in the advanced stage a devotee is not agitated by material desires. The advanced stage is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.87.35):

"Sages free from false pride live on this earth by resorting to sacred places of pilgrimage and those districts in which the Supreme Lord has manifested His pastimes. Because such devotees keep You lotus feet within their hearts, the water that washes their feet destroys all sins. Everyone who even once turns his mind toward You, the eternally blissful Soul of all existence, ceases from worshipping family life at home, in which a man is simply robbed of his good qualities."

4 In these words the Vishnu Purana glorifies the advanced stage of devotional service:

"When Lord Vishnu, the Supreme Personality of Godhead enters the heart, everything else becomes insignificant. What will one attain by running east and west to get this and that?"

6 The advanced stage of devotional service is again described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.23):

"If one's hairs do not stand on end, how can the heart melt? And if the heart does not melt, how can tears of love flow from the eyes? If one does not cry in spiritual happiness, how can one render loving service to the Lord? And without such service, how can the consciousness be purified?"

7 The advanced stage of devotional service is again described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.24):

"A devotee whose speech is sometimes choked up, whose heart melts, who cries continually and sometimes laughs, who feels ashamed and cries out loudly and then dances - a devotee thus fixed in loving service to M purifies the entire universe."

Even the beginning stage of devotional service is purifying. How much more purifying is the advanced stage described here? The stage of devotional service described here is far beyond the stage described in Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.18 (quoted in Text 4).

8 That the activities of devotional service, which begin with the dim reflection of the Lord's holy name, destroy all sins is proved by the following words spoken by the Supreme Lord Himself (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.19):

"As all fuel is burned to ashes by a full-fledged fire, all sinful activities are totally erased when one engages in devotional service to Me."*

9 Devotional service and astanga-yoga are very different spiritual paths. They are opposites and bring opposite results, as the Lord explains in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.20):

"My dear Uddhava, neither through astanga-yoga (the mystic yoga system to control the senses), nor through impersonal monism or an analytical study of the Absolute Truth, nor through study of the Vedas, nor through practice of austerities, nor through charity, nor through acceptance of sannyasa can one satisfy Me as much as one can by developing unalloyed devotional service unto Me."*

"Being very dear to the devotees and sadhus, I am attained through unflinching faith and devotional service."*

This statement also affirms that it is faith in devotional service that enables one to attain the Supreme Lord.

10 The result of acting in the beginning stage of devotional service is that the devotee attains certain spiritual advantages. The result of advanced devotional service is that one turns the Supreme Personality of Godhead into one's submissive servant.

11 Shrimad Bhagavatam (5.6.18) explains:

"My dear King, the Supreme Person, Mukunda, is actually the maintainer of all the members of the Pandava and Yadu dynasties. He is your spiritual master, worshipable Deity, friend, and the director of your activities. To say nothing of this, He sometimes serves your family as a messenger or servant. This means He worked just as ordinary servants do. Those engaged in getting the Lord's favour attain liberation from the Lord very easily, but He does not very easily give the opportunity to render direct service unto Him."*

This verse means that unless the Supreme Personality of Godhead has become like a submissive servant, completely under the devotee's dominion, He will not give the gift of pure love for Him.

12 Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.14.22) explains:

"Neither religious activities endowed with honesty and mercy nor knowledge obtained with great penance can completely purify one's consciousness if they are bereft of loving service to Me."

This verse explains that devotional service is very different from ordinary religious activities. Indeed, devotional service brings a much better result than ordinary religious activities do. By engaging in devotional service one becomes very pure and attains the advanced stage of devotional service, as described in Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.23:

"If one's hairs do not stand on end, how can the heart melt? And if the heart does not melt, how can tears of love flow from the eyes? If one does not cry in spiritual happiness, how can one render loving service to the Lord? And without such service, how can the consciousness be purified?"

In this way the passage beginning with Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.18 and ending with 11.14.24 is explained.

The verse quote in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Anuccheda 148

1 Direct devotional service, where one gives gifts to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, is better than ordinary work in this world. Devotional service is thus the actual process of religion. The Lord explains this in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.19.21):

"O Uddhava, greatest of saints, in a dangerous situation an ordinary person cries, becomes fearful and laments, although such useless emotions do not change the situation. But activities offered to Me without personal motivation, even if they are externally useless, amount to the actual process of religion."

2 Simply by hearing about devotional service one can become purified of all past sins. This is explained in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.12):

"Pure devotional service rendered to the Supreme Lord is spiritually so potent that simply by hearing about such transcendental service, by chanting its glories in response, by meditating on it, by respectfully and faithfully accepting it, or by praising the devotional service of others, even person who hate the demigods and all other living beings can be immediately purified."*

3 In the Padma Purana, Magha-mahatmya, the Yamadutas say:

"Then Yamaraja said to us: Be respectful to the devotees of Lord Vishnu. Do not approach anyone that worships Lord Vishnu.

4 "Do not approach a person in whose home a devotee of Lord Vishnu eats. Do not approach a person who associates with devotees of Lord Vishnu. Such a person is already free from all sins."

5 In the Brhan-naradiya Purana, at the end of the story of Yajnamali, it is said:

"Even great sinners that associate with the devotees of Lord Hari are automatically freed from all their sins."

6 Yamaraja confirms this in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.3.29):

"My dear servants, please bring to me only those sinful persons who do not use their tongues to chant the holy name and qualities of Krishna, whose hearts do not remember the lotus feet of Krishna even once, and whose heads do not bow down even once before Lord Krishna. Send me those who do not perform their duties toward Vishnu, which are the only duties in human life. Please bring me all such fools and rascals."*

7 In the previous verse Yamaraja said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.3.28):

"Paramahamsas are exalted persons who have no taste for material enjoyment and who drink the honey of the Lord's lotus feet. My dear servants, bring to me for punishment only persons who are averse to the taste of that honey, who do not associate with paramahamsas and who are attached to family life and worldly enjoyment, which form the path to hell."*

In this verse Yamaraja says, "Bring to me for punishment only persons who are averse to the taste of the honey of Lord Krishna's lotus feet."

8 In the verse before that (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.3.27) Yamaraja explains:

"My dear servants, please do not approach such devotees, for they have fully surrendered to the lotus feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. They are equal to everyone, and their narrations are sung by the demigods and the inhabitants of Siddhaloka. Please do not even go near them. They are always protected by the club of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and therefore Lord Brahma and I and even the time factor are not competent to chastise them."*

In this verse Yamaraja forbids his messengers to approach the Lord's devotees, who see everyone with equal vision and whose pure glories are sung by the demigods and the inhabitants of Siddhaloka.

9 Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.3.29 (quoted in text 6), says, "Please bring to me only those persons who do not use their tongues (jihva) to chant the holy name (namadheya) and qualities (guna) of Krishna (bhagavat), whose hearts (cetah) do not remember (smarati) the lotus feet of Krishna (tac-caranaravindam) even once (ekada) and whose heads (sirah) do not bow down (namati) even once before Lord Krishna (krishnaya)."

- 10 The Skanda Purana describes the glories of bowing down before the Lord in these words:
"A person who even only pretends to bow down before Lord Krishna is at once freed from the sins accumulated in a hundred births."
- Because bowing down before the Lord is so glorious, Yamaraja says (in Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.3.29 quoted in text 6), "Do not bring to me anyone who bows down before Lord Krishna. Please bring me only fools and rascals (asatah)." The reason they are fools and rascals is given in these words: "They do not perform their duties toward Vishnu (akṛta-visnu-kṛtyan)."
- 11 The relationship between religious duties and devotional service to Lord Vishnu is explained in the Skanda Purana, Reva-khanda, where Lord Brahma says:
"O Lord Kesava, a person who performs all his religious duties must be Your devotee. O Lord Kesava, a person who performs only sins cannot be Your devotee."
- 12 O Lord Hari, when someone who is not Your devotee performs pious deeds, all his pious deeds become sins. O Lord Hari, even if he has performed all pious deeds, a person who is not Your devotee stays always in hell. On the other hand, if Your devotee commits sins, even up to killing a brahmana, he is at once freed from the offense."
- 13 In the Padma Purana the Supreme Personality of Godhead says:
"If someone commits a sin for My sake, his sin counts as a pious deed. If someone performs pious deeds without worshipping Me, then by My power, his pious deeds count as sins."
- 14 Shrimad Bhagavatam (7.11.11) lists some of the activities of devotional service in these word:
"These are the general instructions to be followed by all human beings: hearing about the activities and instructions given by the Supreme Personality of Godhead (who is the shelter of the saintly persons), chanting about those activities and instructions, always remembering these activities and instructions, trying to render service, performing worship, offering obeisances, becoming a servant, becoming a friend, and surrendering one's whole self."*
- 15 They who do not worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead will fall down from their puffed up positions. This is explained in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.5.2-3):
"From the mouth of Brahma the brahmanical order has come into existence. Similarly, from his arms the ksatriyas have come, from his waist the vaisyas have come, and from his legs the sudras have come. These four orders and their spiritual counterparts (brahmacarya, grhastha, vanaprastha and sannyasa) combine to make human society complete.*
"If one simply maintains an official position in the four varnas and asramas but does not worship the Supreme Lord Vishnu, he falls down from his puffed up position into a hellish condition."*
- 16 That everyone should engage in devotional service is confirmed by the Lord Himself in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.18.43):
"Everyone should engage in devotional service to Me."
- 17 That one should always engage in devotional service is explained in the following words of the Padma Purana:
"Krishna is the origin of Lord Vishnu. He should always be remembered and never forgotten at any time. All the rules and prohibitions mentioned in the sastras should be the servants of these two principles."*
- 18 In Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.3.29, quoted in text 6, the word "akṛta-visnu-kṛtyan means "they who do not glorify, remember, or bow down before the Lord, or serve Him in other ways." Although these persons have tongues with which to glorify the Lord and other senses with which they may serve Him in many ways, they do not wish to glorify or serve Him.
- 19 Here Yamaraja, the teacher of the science of devotional service, mentions "remembering the lotus feet of the Lord". The remembrance here, is not limited to the Lord's lotus feet, however, but includes all the features of the Lord. Here Yamaraja says, "Bring to me only the non devotees. Do not bring the devotees." The Sruti-sastra explains: "Yamaraja punishes the conditioned souls."
- 20 That Yamaraja does not punish the devotees is also described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.1.190:)
"Although not having fully realise Krishna, persons who have even once surrendered completely unto His lotus feet and who have become attracted to His name, form, qualities and pastimes are completely freed of all sinful reactions, for they have thus accepted the true method of atonement. Even in dreams, such surrendered souls do not see Yamaraja or his order carriers, who are equipped with ropes to bind the sinful."*

21 This verse explains that they who remember Lord Krishna's lotus feet do not even see Yamaraja's carriers, who are equipped with ropes to bind the sinful.

22 This is also explained in the Nrsimha Purana where Yamaraja says:

"I am Yamaraja. The creator Brahma has deputed me to punish and reward the conditioned souls. I punish they who turn from their spiritual master and from Lord Hari. I bow down to offer my respects to they who bow down before Lord Hari's feet.

23 In the Amṛta-sarodhara portion of the Skanda Purana, Yamaraja says:

"Neither Brahma, Siva, Agni, Indra, nor the other demigods, nor I myself have the power to punish the great souls that have become servants of Lord Vishnu."

24 The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Shri Yamaraja to his messengers. Anuccheda 149

1 Even a single moment of devotional service will make one's life a great success. This is explained by Shri Saunaka Rsi in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.3.17):

"Both by rising and by setting the sun decreases the duration of life of everyone, except one who utilises the time by discussing topics of the all-good Personality of Godhead."*

2 In the description of the stories of Ajamila and many other devotees it is seen that sins are destroyed by even the dim reflection of devotional service. That even the slightest effort expended in devotional service destroys all past karmic reactions and brings one to the supreme goal of life is also described in the following statement of Shri Laghu-Bhagavata:

3 "All sins committed in the past, present and future are at once burned to ashes by the fire of glorifying Lord Krishna."

4 That devotional service always has this effect, no matter the circumstances of how one comes to perform it, is seen in the following statement of Shri Brahma-vaivarta Purana:

"O brahmanas, as fire always burns whatever it touches and never stops to consider whether one wishes to be burned or not, so the Supreme Personality of Godhead grants liberation to every person that engages in His devotional service."

5 That devotional service grants liberation is also confirmed in the following conversation between Lord Siva and Goddess Uma in the Skanda Purana:

"They who are only initiated into the worship of Lord Krishna attain liberation. What can be said, then, of they who with devotion always worship the infallible Supreme Personality of Godhead?"

6 That devotional service grants liberation is again confirmed in the following words of the Narada Purana:

"They who even once selflessly worship Lord Vishnu do not stay in the world of birth and death."

7 That devotional service grants liberation is again confirmed in the following words of Devadyuti's prayers in the Padma Purana:

"A person who once attentively speaks the word Narayana becomes pure in heart and attains liberation."

8 That devotional service grants liberation is again confirmed in the following words of the Padma Purana:

"A person who, by associating with devotees, or even by accident, comes to worship Lord Krishna, becomes free of all sins and enters the supreme transcendental abode."

9 That devotional service grants liberation is again confirmed in the following words of the Itihasa-samuccaya:

"They who in spite of being cruel, wicked, and addicted to sinful acts, take shelter of Lord Narayana's feet, attain the supreme and transcendental abode."

10 "The devotees of Lord Vishnu are always pure. They are never touched by sin. Splendid as the rising sun, they purify all the worlds.

11 "After thousands of births one understands, 'I am a servant of Lord Vasudeva.' One who understands this delivers all the worlds."

12 "Such a person goes to the realm of Lord Vishnu. Of this there is no doubt. What, then, can be said of a person who controls his senses and dedicates his life to the Lord's service?"

13 In the Ramayana Lord Ramacandra explains:

"It is My vow that if one only once seriously surrenders unto Me, saying, 'My dear Lord, from this day I am Yours', and prays to Me for courage, I shall immediately award courage to that person and he will always remain safe from that time on."*

14 The Garuda Purana also explains:

"It is Lord Hari's vow that if one only once seriously surrenders unto Him, saying, 'My dear Lord, from this day I am Yours', and prays to Him for courage, the Lord will immediately award courage to that person, and he will always remain safe from that time on."

15 Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.1.14) also explains:

"Living beings who are entangled in the complicated meshes of death can be freed immediately by even unconsciously chanting the holy name of Krishna, which is feared by fear personified."*

16 The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by Shri Saunaka Rsi.

Anuccheda 150

1 That one becomes liberated by hearing the Lord's holy name is explained in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.16.44):

"My Lord, it is not impossible for one to be immediately freed from all material contamination by seeing You. Not to speak of seeing You personally, merely by hearing the holy name of Your Lordship only once, even candalas, men of the lowest class, are freed from all material contamination. Under the circumstances, who will not be freed from material contamination simply by seeing You?"*

2 The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by King Citraketu to Lord Sankarsana.

Anuccheda 151

1 The Vishnu-dharma Purana, Uttara-khanda explains:

"I prefer to live as a devotee of Lord Vishnu, even if I live for only five days. That is better living for a thousand kalpas as a non devotee."

2 In Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.31.12-21 the unborn child in the womb offers prayers to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. There the living entity's life in the material world is described. Only in one birth does the fortunate living entity offer prayers in this way to the Lord, for soon he becomes liberated from the world of birth and death. Such a living entity is rare. Almost all other living entities are not aware of the nature of the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

3 The Nirukti-sastra (13.19) explains: "In the ninth month the body of the embryo is completely formed. Then the living entity there thinks, 'I died and now I am born again. I am born, but soon I will die again...'

4 ...Unable to speak a word of complaint, the conditioned soul in the womb is tormented by the worms about him. First he studies the sankhya-yoga explanation of the 24 material elements, and then, in the tenth month, he is born.

5 In the phrase "purusam va" the word "va (or)" indicates that this description applies only to certain rare living entities that have knowledge of the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

6 This shows that devotional service can be practiced in any kind of situation. Although living entities of many different kinds experience life in the womb, this explanation describes one kind of living entity and generalises, calling him "the living entity in the womb". This kind of generalisation is also seen in other places in the scriptures.

7 An example of two different events described as if they were one is given in the commentary on Shrimad Bhagavatam's description of the birth of the four Kumaras during the creation of the Padma-kalpa. There, in his commentary on Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.11.35, Shrila Shridhara Svami explains that in this circumstance two different events are described as if they were a single event. This is like the appearance of Lord Varaha. Lord Varaha appeared in the first manvantara, when the earth was plunged in the water. At that time Lord Varaha, born from the demigod Brahma's nostril, rescued the earth and fought with Hiranyaksa. That is one description. Then also Lord Varaha appeared in the sixth manvantara. At that time He was born from Diti, the daughter of Pracetasas Daksa. Because in both appearances Lord Varaha rescued the earth plunged in the water, the two appearances were described in a single narration. The same is true for this description of the unborn living entity. The unborn living entity that offers prayers to the Supreme Lord is one kind of living entity. There are others, however, who are attached to the world of birth and death and do not offer such prayers.

8 That devotional service brings one's relatives to the Lord's supreme abode is seen in the following words of Shri Narada Purana, Dvajaropana-mahatmya:

"Even if they are sinners, the relatives of the renounced devotees of Lord Vishnu go to the Lord's supreme abode."

9 This is also explained in the Vishnu-dharma Purana in these words:

"They who worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead carry with them a hundred of their relatives to the Lord's transcendental abode.

10 "They who install a Deity of Lord Hari bring to the Lord's abode all their relatives yet to be born and all their relatives born in the past, going back to the beginning of the kalpa."

11 In Vaishnava literature Yamaraja orders his messengers:

"Do not punish the 90 000 relatives of one who devotedly worships Lord Vasudeva."

12 The Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.10.18):

"My dear Prahlada, O most pure, O great saintly person, your father has been purified, along with twenty-one forefathers in your family. Because you were born in this family, the entire dynasty has been purified."*

13 Here the word "tri-saptabhih" (twenty one) refers to twenty one forefathers in each birth going back to the beginning of the kalpa. In this birth some of the forefathers liberated in this way are Hiranyakasipu, Kasyapa Muni, Marici, and Brahma. This verse was spoken by Lord Nrsimhadeva to Prahlada Maharaja.

Anuccheda 152

1 Even the dim reflection of devotional service destroys all sins and brings one to the abode of Lord Vishnu. The Narada Purana explains that two intoxicated drunkards proud as cuckoos once waved a stick tied to a rag as they danced in an old abandoned temple of the Lord. These drunkards attained the result of raising a flag in the Lord's temple and in this way they returned to the Lord's transcendental abode.

In the same way a bird that had been killed by a hunter and then taken up shelter in the mouth of a dog, when the dog ran around a temple the bird attained the result of circumambulating the Lord's temple and in this way it returned to the Lord's transcendental abode.

In the same way one becomes a great devotee of the Lord. In the Nrsimha Purana it is said that in his previous birth Prahlada Maharaja had an argument with a prostitute on the holy day of Nrsimha-caturdasi. Arguing with her all day and night, he neither ate nor slept, and because in this way he fasted and kept an all-night vigil on that holy day he became a great devotee of the Lord.

2 That devotional service brings one to the Lord's transcendental abode is again explained in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.9.15):

"Let me take shelter of the lotus feet of Him whose incarnations, qualities and activities are mysterious imitations of worlds affairs. One who invokes His transcendental names, even unconsciously, at the time he quits this life, is certainly washed immediately of the sins of many, many births and attains Him without fail."*

3 In this verse the word "asu-vigame" means "even though at the time of death one may not be able to speak the Lord's holy name very clearly or distinctly", and the word "vivasah" means "even without desiring it". In this way, impelled by some cause other than one's own desire, one chants the Lord holy name. The word "vi" means "without" and the word "vasa" means "desire". The Amara-kosa dictionary explains, "The word 'vasa' means 'desire'."

4 The reason the Lord's holy name has such great power is explained in this verse. The Lord's name is one of His incarnations. That is the reason. The word "avatara-vidambanani" here refers to Lord Nrsimhadeva and the many other incarnations of the Lord, the word "guna-vidambanani" refers to the Lord's transcendental qualities, such as His love for the devotees, and the word karma-vidambanani" refers to His pastimes, such as His lifting of Govardhana Hill.

This verse was spoken by the demigod Brahma to Lord Garbhodakasayi Vishnu.

1 This is the description of pure devotional service. Even if mixed with offenses, devotional service is still very powerful. This is seen in the following verses of the Vishnu-dharma Purana, spoken by a raksasa to a brahmana who protected himself by chanting a mantra invoking the Supreme Personality of Godhead:

2 "I ran to eat you, but somehow you protected yourself with a mantra. O brahmana, by touching this mantra I have suddenly become pure in heart.

3 "What mantra did you chant to protect yourself? I do not understand it. I do not understand its power. By touching it I have become free of all material desires.

4 The following story is found in the Vishnu-dharma Purana. As it was drinking the ghee in a lamp in the Lord's temple, a certain mouse, by its own destiny, was burned by the flaming wick and died. In its next life the mouse became a queen that had great faith in devotional service and gave lamps and other gifts to the Deity of the Lord. In this way she became liberated and attained the Lord's supreme abode.

Another story is told in the Janmastami-mahatmya of the Brahmanda Purana. A certain prostitute did not meet any of her customers on Janmastami day. By thus observing Janmastami, she became liberated.

Another story is told in the Narada Purana. So that he could use it as a suitable place for his sinful deeds, a sinner once cleaned a temple of the Lord. For this service he became liberated and attained the supreme abode of the Lord.

On the other hand, knowledge of impersonal Brahman has nothing to do with real liberation. This is explained in the following statement of the Brahma-vaivarta Purana:

5 "A sinner attached to sense-pleasures who declares, 'I am Brahman', is tortured by having to be born again and again in thousands of wombs.'

6 That even the slightest and briefest effort to serve Him makes the Lord one's submissive servant is seen in the following statement of Lord Siva in the Brahma Purana:

7 "O best of brahmanas, the Supreme Personality of Godhead places His eyes on one who looks at Him day after day. The Supreme Personality of Godhead takes shelter of one who takes shelter of Him. The Supreme Personality of Godhead worships one who always worships Him."

8 This is also described in the Vishnu-dharma Purana in these words:

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead, who dearly loves His devotees, sells Himself to them for the price of a tulasi leaf and a handful of water."

9 That the glories of devotional service and chanting the Lord's holy name are not merely empty flattery but are the real truth is proved by the story of Ajamila and many other stories also. This is also seen in the Shri Bhagavan-nama-kaumudi and many other scriptures. To consider the glories of chanting Hare Krishna to be imagination and to give some imaginary interpretation on the holy names of the Lord are counted among the offenses to the holy name as described in the Padma Purana.

10 This is also described in the Katyayana-samhita in these words:

"One who makes up an imaginary interpretation of the meaning of Lord Hari's holy name is the most sinful of persons. He falls into a terrible hell."

11 In the Brahma-samhita the Supreme Personality of Godhead explains to Baudhayana:

"A person who, after hearing the many spiritual benefits obtained by chanting My holy names, does not believe them, but thinks them only the creations of someone's imagination, is tortured with a host of horrible sufferings in this world of birth and death. I personally throw him into that world of sufferings."

11 To think the glories of chanting the Lord's holy names are imaginary is a great offense. A person who commits this offense will not be able to experience the real benefits of devotional service. This is described in many ancient scriptures. To create imaginary interpretations on the meaning of the holy name are also great offenses to the Lord. These offenses create obstacles to one's advancement in devotional service.

12 The obstacles created by these offenses are described by Shri Saunaka Rsi in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.3.24):

"Certainly that heart is steel framed which, in spite of one's chanting the holy name of the Lord with concentration, does not change when ecstasy takes place, tears fill the eyes and the hairs stand on end."*

14 The benefits of having performed devotional service in the past are also seen in the present. This is explained in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.64.25):

"O Kesava, as Your servant I was devoted to the brahmanas and generous to them, and I always hankered for Your audience. Therefore even till now I have never forgotten (my past life)."

15 These words of King Nrga, explaining how he engaged in devotional service, did not commit the offense of thinking the glories of the holy name to be imaginary, and still had to go to Yamaloka, seem to contradict the following words of Yamaraja (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.3.29):

"My dear servants, please bring to me only those sinful person who do not use their tongues to chant the holy name and qualities of Krishna, whose hearts do not remember the lotus feet of Krishna even once, and whose heads do not bow down even once before Lord Krishna. Send me those who do not perform their duties toward Vishnu, which are the only duties in human life. Please bring me all such fools and rascals."*

The answer is that King Nrga had rejected the activities of direct devotional service, which are glorified in the scriptures and which are performed by great devotees like King Ambarisa. Instead of performing direct devotional service, King Nrga performed ordinary pious activities of giving charity. It was this that created the impediment to his advancement in devotional service and brought him to ruin.

16 This is also described in the following words of the Padma Purana, Namaparadha-bhanjana-stotra:

"O brahmana, when, pronounced properly or not, it appears on the voice, walks on the path of the memory, or enters the ears, if it is not stopped by offenses a single utterance of the holy name of the Lord carries one beyond the world of birth and death. However, if the chanter commits offenses, or if he chants to attain wealth, followers, or the happiness of this material body, he will be thrown into the world of birth and death, and his chanting will not quickly bring the desired result."

17 In order to attain material things such as the happiness of the material body, these persons commit the ten offenses that begin with disrespecting the spiritual master.

18 In the Skanda Purana, Prahlada-samhita, Dvaraka-mahatmya, it is said:

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead Vishnu is not pleased with a person, even if he has performed devotional service in hundreds of births, if he offends a devotee."

19 In another passage of the Skanda Purana, in the conversation of Markandeya and Bhagiratha it is said:

"Lord Hari does not accept twelve years of devotional service performed by one who, seeing a devotee from afar, does not go to greet him."

20 "Lord Hari will not forgive the sins of one who, seeing a devotee, does not offer obeisances and worship."

21 Many other offenses are also seen. In Shri Vishnu Purana is the description of a king named Satadhanu, who was very devoted to the Supreme Lord, but who also blasphemed the Vedas and the devotees. For this he was reborn many times as a dog and many other lowly creatures.

22 The importance of serving the devotees is stressed in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.2.16):

"O twice-born sages, by serving those devotees who are completely freed from all vice, great service is done. By such service, one gains affinity for hearing the messages of Vasudeva."*

23 The Vedanta-sutra (4.1.1.) explains:

"The scriptures teach that spiritual activities should be performed again and again."

24 Because most people are inclined to commit offenses, they should perform spiritual activities again and again. That they who offend the Lord's holy name should chant the holy name again and again is explained in the following words of the Namaparadha-bhanjana-stotra of the Padma Purana:

24 "The chanting of Hare Krishna is recommended for persons who commit offenses, because if they continue chanting they will gradually chant offenselessly. Even if in the beginning one chants with offenses, one will become free from such offenses by chanting again and again."*

25 In the Trailokya-sammohana Tantra and other scriptures it is said that one should again and again chant the eighteen syllable mantra and other similar mantras. There it is said:

26 "O goddess, please hear what Manu has taught. One should chant this mantra ten times. In this way one will become freed from a host of calamities."

27 "One who chants this mantra a thousand times becomes freed from the greatest sins. Even if one chants with offenses, the greatest sins are destroyed."

28 In the Brahma-vaivarta Purana the following is said about the holy name:

"Even a person who has killed an exalted brahmana, or who has voluntarily drunk liquor, will become purified if day and night he chants 'Krishna! Krishna!'."

29 Offenses create the desire to sin. However, by chanting the holy name, offenses and sinful desires are both destroyed. That is the meaning here.

30 However, offenses and sins are definitely impediments to advancement in devotional service. This is explained by the following words of Shri Vishnu dharma-Purana:

'As a swan does not like to stay in muddy water, so Lord Krishna does not like to stay in a heart dirty with sinful desires.

31 "As a crescent moon covered by clouds cannot destroy the darkness, so a voice polluted with lies and other sins cannot properly offer prayers to Lord Krishna."

32 They who have attained perfection in devotional service experience at every moment the highest happiness. They who have not yet attained perfection in devotional service should follow the rules of sadhana-bhakti until they attain the stage of perfection.

From offenses the following obstacles to pure devotional service arise: 1. crookedness, 2. faithlessness, 3. attachment to things that destroy faith in the Lord, 4. slackness in devotional service, and 5. pride in being advanced in devotional service. If by associating with great souls one is not able to overcome these obstacles then, although originally manifested in the past, these faults will remain in the present. The Supreme Personality of Godhead does not accept the devotional service offered by they who are crooked, as, when he appeared as a messenger, He did not accept the service offered by Duryodhana. Crookedness here means to engage in devotional service while committing offenses to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the Vedas, the spiritual master, or the devotees.

They who are foolish but not crooked will attain success by performing even the dim reflection of devotional service. However, they who are crooked do not attain that success in devotional service. This is seen in the following statement of Parasara Muni in the Skanda Purana:

33 "Foolish and crooked hearted sinners do not attain success in devotional service to Lord Krishna. They cannot properly glorify and remember the Lord."

34 This is also explained in the Vishnu-dharma Purana:

"Their attempt to be truthful is stopped by a hundred impediments. Their attempt to perform austerities is stopped by a thousand impediments. Their attempt to love and serve Lord Krishna is stopped by ten thousand impediments."

35 Shrimad Bhagavatam (3.19.36) also explains:

"What grateful soul is there who would not render his loving service to such a great master as the Personality of Godhead? The Lord can be easily pleased by spotless devotees who resort exclusively to Him for protection, though the unrighteous man finds it difficult to propitiate Him."*

36 The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by Shri Suta Gosvami.

1 The devotees of the Lord are not crooked-hearted and are always kind to the foolish. The crooked-hearted non devotees, however, are not kind even to the wise. The kindness of the devotees is seen in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.5.4-5):

2 "There are many persons who have little opportunity to take part in discussions about the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Hari, and thus it is difficult for them to chant His infallible glories. Persons such as women, sudras and other fallen classes always deserve the mercy of great personalities like yourself."

3 "On the other hand, brahmanas, members of the royal order and vaisyas, even after being allowed to approach the lotus feet of the Supreme Lord, Hari, by receiving the second birth of Vedic initiation, can become bewildered and adopt various materialistic philosophies."

4 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"The first verse says, 'Persons like yourself should be merciful to these foolish people'. The second verse says, 'These people are incurably foolish'."

This verse was spoken by Camasa Muni to King Nimi.

1 Faithlessness means when one hears of or directly sees the glories of the Lord, one does not believe that they are true. Duryodhana's response on seeing the Lord's universal form is one of many examples of this kind of faithlessness.

The actual nature of the Lord's glories is described by Shri Saunaka Rsi in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.1.14):

'Living beings who are entangled in the complicated meshes of birth and death can be freed immediately by even unconsciously chanting the holy name of Krishna, which is feared by fear personified.'*

2 The Lord's glories are also seen in the personal experience of Prahlada Maharaja, who says (Vishnu Purana 1.17.44):

"Then the elephants' tusks, which were hard as thunderbolts, suddenly splintered into pieces. It was not I who broke them. It was my remembrance of Lord Krishna, who delivers His devotees from distress, that saved me from that calamity."

Devotees like Prahlada receive special protection from the Lord, but persons who have no faith in the Lord do not.

3 Being always protected by the Lord is the natural result of becoming a devotee of the Lord. However, the pure devotees desire only to glorify the Lord. They do not desire either to protect themselves or to show off their own glories.

4 That the devotees are protected by the Lord is seen in the following statement of Prahlada Maharaja (Vishnu Purana 1.17.44):

"Then the elephants' tusks, which were hard as thunderbolts, suddenly splintered into pieces. It was not I who broke them. It was my remembrance of Lord Krishna, who delivers His devotees from distress, that saved me from that calamity."

5 That the great devotees, such as King Pariksit, do not desire their own protection is seen in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.19.15):

6 "O brahmanas, just accept me as a completely surrendered soul, and let mother Ganges, the representative of the Lord, also accept me in that way, for I have already taken the lotus feet of the Lord into my heart. Let the snake-bird or whatever magical thing the brahmana created - bite me at once. I only desire that you all continue singing the deeds of Lord Vishnu."*

7 The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by King Pariksit.

Anuccheda 156

1 Even today, the devotees are protected in this way by the Lord. This should not be doubted. When the Lord is worshipped, this result is obtained.

2 That the devotees become very powerful by the Lord's mercy is seen in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.8.19):

"As Dhruva Maharaja, the King's son, kept himself steadily standing on one leg, the pressure of his big toe pushed down half the earth, just as an elephant being carried on a boat rocks the boat left and right with his every step."*

3 This result was obtained by meditating on all-pervading Lord Vishnu. By worshipping the Lord in this way, Dhruva was able to move the earth and the other planets by pushing them with his foot. This verse was spoken by Shri Maitreya Muni.

1 An example of the obstacles that make one fall away from faith in the Lord is given in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 5.8.26):

2 "My dear King, in this way Bharata Maharaja was overwhelmed by an uncontrollable desire which was manifest in the form of the deer. Due to the fruitive results of his past deeds, he fell down from mystic yoga, austerity and worship of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. If it were not due to his past fruitive activity, how could he have been attracted to the deer after giving up the association of his own son and family, considering them stumbling blocks on the path of spiritual life? How could he show uncontrollable affection for a deer? This was definitely due to his past karma. The King was so engrossed in petting and maintaining the deer that he fell down from his spiritual activities. In due course of time, insurmountable death, which is compared to a venomous snake that enters the hole created by a mouse, situated itself before him."*

3 The word "sah" (he) refers to King Bharata. Ordinary fruitive activities are not strong enough to create such an impediment in the path of devotional service. Therefore the fruitive activities mentioned here must have been offenses performed in a previous birth. In this way King Bharata is like King Indradyumna and other devotees that committed offenses. This verse was spoken by Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami

1 Some think that the Lord Himself arranges for this kind of previous fruitive activity so the devotee will be separated from Him, long to attain Him, and in this way come to love Him more than before. The previous birth of Narada Muni, where even though he had begun to love the Lord, he still had material desires, is an example of this. The Lord explains this in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.6.21):

2 "O Narada (the Lord spoke), I regret that during this lifetime you will not be able to see Me anymore. Those who are incomplete in service and who are not completely free from all material taints can hardly see Me."*

3 The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

1 Gajendra and others fell into a materialistic way of life because of offenses they committed. Because of slackness in performing devotional service one experiences material happinesses and sufferings caused by oneself and others. This is caused by slackness in devotional service, for they who properly engage in devotional service do not experience any sufferings, as is explained in the following words of the Vishnu-sahasra-nama-stotra:

2 "No actually inauspicious condition is ever imposed on the devotees of Lord Vasudeva and therefore they do not fear having taken birth in this world again to suffer the miserable conditions of old-age, disease and death."

3 An aspiring devotee tries to maintain and protect his human body. He does this not merely for the body's sake, but because he desires to make advancement in devotional service. This is not against the principles of devotional service.

A learned scholar that does not avoid slackness in loving service to the Lord commits an offense to the Lord. On the other hand, an incompetent fool that avoids offenses easily attains perfection. The Supreme Lord, who is kind to the distressed, is very merciful to that person. When an intelligent person is an offender he is so out of malice.

4 When a fool is an offender he is not so out of malice. For this reason an intelligent person, who does commit offenses out of malice, finds obstacles like a hundred archers stopping his progress in devotional service.

5 Foolish creatures like mice and other animals that somehow engage in devotional service may attain perfection even if they commit offenses, for their offenses are without malice. The power of devotional service defeats all their offenses. However, they who are proud of their advancement in devotional service commit offenses because they disrespect the other devotees. This is seen in the activities of Daksa, who offended Lord Siva, for that reason he had to take birth as one of the Pracetas, and then, because he offended Narada Muni, had to take birth again.

6 If in the past, or present one has never committed any offenses, by once engaging in devotional service he will immediately attain perfection. In the same way if at the moment of death one somehow or other engages in devotional service he also attains perfection. If at the time of death one chants the Lord's holy name or renders some kind of service to the Lord, then the devotional service that person performed in that life and in previous lives becomes perfect, pure, offenseless devotional service, and by the power of that pure devotional service, the Supreme Personality of Godhead is caused to appear before that person at the moment of his death.

7 The Lord Himself describes this in the following words of Shri Bhagavad-gita (8.6):

"Whatever state of being one remembers when he quits his body, O son of Kunti, that state he will attain without fail."*

8 Because he did not commit any offenses, Ajamila did not have to again and again chant the Lord's holy name to attain the result of chanting. Because he once engaged in the devotional activities of hearing and chanting the Lord's holy name, he was not taken away by the Yamadutas.

9 Ajamila said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.2.32):

"I am certainly most abominable and unfortunate to have merged in an ocean of sinful activities, but nevertheless, because of my previous spiritual activities, I could see those four exalted personalities who came to rescue me. Now I feel exceedingly happy because of their visit."*

10 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"The word 'mangalena' (auspicious) here refers to the very pious activities he had performed previously.

Anuccheda 160

1 Describing his indirect performance of devotional service, Ajamila says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.2.33):

"Were it not for my past devotional service, how could I, a most unclean keeper of a prostitute, have gotten an opportunity to chant the holy name of Vaikunthapati when I was just ready to die? Certainly it could not have been possible."*

2 The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by Shri Ajamila.

1 As Shri Bharata was leaving his deer-body he chanted the Lord's holy names and therefore in his next body he was able to attain the association of the Lord, who was always manifested in his heart. The previous birth of Ajamila should be understood in the same way. At the moment of death Ajamila worshipped the Lord and because of this he attained all success and became free of all sins.

2 This is also described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.1.6):

"The highest perfection of human life, achieved either by complete knowledge of matter and spirit, by practice of mystic powers, or by perfect discharge of occupational duty, is to remember the Personality of Godhead at the end of life."*

3 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"In this verse the word 'etavan' means 'the highest goal of life'. That highest goal is given in the words 'narayana-smrtih' (to remember the Personality of Godhead at the end of life). Neither sankhya, nor yoga, nor any other spiritual path but devotional service can bring this highest goal of life. To remember the Supreme Personality of Godhead at the end of life is therefore the highest attainment. No one has the power sufficiently to glorify this attainment. That is the meaning."

4 The author of Nama-kaumudi has also said: "At the moment of death one should worship the Supreme Lord."

1 Even though he was only calling out to his son, who happened to be named 'Narayana', Ajamila attained the result of calling out to the Lord.

2 The glories of chanting the Lord's holy name are described in the Padma Purana in the following prayer of Devadyuti:

"I offer my respectful obeisances to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. They who remember His name at the time of their death, or at any other time, become free from a host of sins."

3 This is also explained in the following prose prayer of Shrimad Bhagavatam (5.3.12):

"Dear Lord, we may not be able to remember Your name, form and qualities due to stumbling, hunger, falling down, yawning or being in a miserable diseased condition at the time of death when there is a high fever. We therefore pray unto You, O Lord, for You are very affectionate to Your devotees. Please help us remember You and utter Your holy names, attributes and activities, which can dispel all the reactions of our sinful lives."*

The conclusion is that by chanting the Lord's holy name at the moment of death one becomes free from all sins. In this way the holy name is glorified.

4 Chanting the Lord's holy name is again glorified in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.2.13):

"At the time of death, this Ajamila helplessly and very loudly chanted the holy name of the Lord, Narayana. That chanting alone has already freed him from the reactions of all sinful life. Therefore, O servants of Yamaraja, do not try to take him to your master for punishment in hellish conditions."*

5 In this verse the word "asesa" means "all material desires", and "agha" means "offenses". In this statement is seen the Supreme Lord's great mercy to all who humbly approach Him at the moment of death. This verse was spoken by the Yamadutas to the Vishnudutas.

1 The real benefit of devotional service, which is given to the proper recipient, is attraction to the Lord, which is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.6.44):

2 "O my dear Krishna, Your pastimes are supremely auspicious for mankind and are an intoxicating beverage for the ears. Tasting such pastimes, people forget their desires for other things."

3 That the devotees are free from all vices is described in the following statement of Vaishnava literature:

"The saintly devotees of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are never angry, envious, greedy, or filled with impure thoughts."

4 The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Shrimad Uddhava.

Anuccheda 164

1 That by attaining love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead one becomes free from material desires is explained in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.1.13):

"Because of my vow on the verge of death, I have given up drinking water, yet because I am drinking the nectar of topics about Krishna, which is flowing from the lotus mouth of Your Lordship, my hunger and thirst, which are extremely difficult to bear, cannot hinder me."*

2 The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by King Pariksit.

Anuccheda 165

1 Performance of devotional service is explained in the following way. Because by performing devotional service and making offerings to the Lord, even very small offerings, and even with only a dim reflection of devotion, one attains the supreme goal of life, all people in all varnas should always directly engage in devotional service. They should do this and nothing else.

2 That everyone should engage in devotional service and do nothing else is explained in the following words, where the Lord Himself says (Bhagavad-gita 9.22.-23):

"But those who always worship Me with exclusive devotion, meditating on My transcendental form - to them I carry what they lack and I preserve what they have.*

3 "Those who are devotees of other gods and who worship them with faith actually worship only Me, O son of Kunti, but they do so in a wrong way."*

4 These two verses confirm the statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (2.9.36) that one should serve the Lord both directly and indirectly. One should worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead and no one else. That is the definition of devotional service.

5 That the Lord is generous in accepting the devotees is confirmed by the Lord Himself in these words (Bhagavad-gita 9.30):

"Even if one commits the most abominable action, if he is engaged in devotional service he is to be considered saintly because he is properly situated in his determination."*

6 That devotional service is difficult to understand and difficult to attain is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.3.19 and 3.1.5.24):

"Real religious principles are enacted by the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Although fully situated in the mode of goodness, even the great rsis who occupy the topmost planets cannot ascertain the real religious principles, nor can the demigods or the leaders of Siddhaloka, to say nothing of the asuras, ordinary human beings, Vidyadharas and Caranas."*

7 "My dear demigods, the human form of life is of such importance that we also desire to have such life, for in the human form one can attain perfect religious truth and knowledge. If one in this human form of life does not understand the Supreme Personality of Godhead and His abode, it is to be understood that he is very much affected by the influence of external nature."*

8 That direct devotional service, where one has no other desire, all obstacles are overcome, and one has attained pure love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, is very rare and difficult to attain. This is confirmed by the following statement of the Fourth Canto (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.24.55):

9 "My dear Lord, pure devotional service is even difficult for liberated persons to discharge, but devotional service alone can satisfy You. Who will take to other processes of self-realisation if he is actually serious about the perfection of life?"*

10 That in pure devotional service one has no material desires is described by the Lord Himself in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 5.5.25):

11 "I am fully opulent, almighty and superior to Lord Brahma and Indra, the king of the heavenly planets. I am also the bestower of all happiness obtained in the heavenly kingdom and by liberation. Nonetheless, the brahmanas do not seek material comforts from Me. They are very pure and do not want to possess anything. They simply engage in My devotional service. What is the need of their asking for material benefits from anyone else?"*

12 This verse was spoken by Lord Rsabhadeva.

13 That even if one has material desires, one should still engage in devotional service is explained in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.3.10):

"A person who has broader intelligence, whether he be full of all material desire, without any material desire, or desiring liberation, must by all means worship the supreme whole, the Personality of Godhead."*

14 That in pure devotional service the devotee wants the Lord alone and does not want anything else is confirmed by Gajendra in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 8.3.20):

"Unalloyed devotees who have no desire other than to serve the Lord, worship Him in full surrender and always hear and chant about His activities, which are most wonderful and auspicious. Thus they always merge in an ocean of transcendental bliss. Such devotees never ask the Lord for any benediction."*

15 That the pure devotees do not want anything material is also confirmed by Narada Muni in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.5.55):

"Prahlada Maharaja was the best person in the family of asuras, who always aspire for material happiness. Nonetheless, although allured by the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who offered him all benedictions for material happiness, because of his unalloyed Krishna consciousness he did not want to take any material benefit for sense gratification."*

16 That the devotees want only the Lord is described in these words of the Garuda Purana:

"Because they are completely devoted to Him alone and have Him only (eka) as their goal (anta) in life, they who have given their hearts to the Lord are called (ekanti) devotees of the Lord."

17 In Bhagavad-gita (11.54-55) the Lord Himself describes this pure devotion.

"My dear Arjuna, only by undivided devotional service can I be understood as I am, standing before you, and thus be seen directly. Only in this way can you enter into the mysteries of My understanding.*

18 "My dear Arjuna, he who engages in My pure devotional service, free from the contaminations of fruitive activities, and mental speculation, he who works for Me, who makes Me the supreme goal of his life, and who is friendly to every living being - he certainly comes to Me."*

19 The word "mat-karma" (work for Me) here means the devotional activities that begin with hearing and chanting the glories of the Lord. The words "aham" (I) and "paramah" (considering Me the Supreme) indicate the goal (the Supreme Personality of Godhead) and method to attain the goal (devotional service). There is no goal or method other than these. Devotional service is further described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.7.48):

20 "The four principles of advancement in spiritual life - dharma, artha, kama and moksa - all depend on the disposition of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Therefore, my dear friends, follow in the footsteps of devotees. Without desire, fully depend upon the disposition of the Supreme Lord, worship Him, the Supersoul, in devotional service."*

21 Here the word "yad-apasrayah" means "dependent on Lord Hari", "anihaya" means "abandoning material desires", and "anidam" means "without material desires. The Amara-kosa dictionary -Thesaurus gives the following synonyms:

"Iccha, akanksa, sprha, iha and trt are synonyms for desire.

This verse was spoken by Prahlada Maharaja to the sons of the demons.

Anuccheda 166

1 Prahlada Maharaja explains that the Supreme Personality of Godhead and the pure devotee are both free from material desires. He says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.10.5-6):

2 "A servant who desires material profits from his master is certainly not a qualified servant or pure devotee. Similarly, a master who bestows benedictions upon his servant because of a desire to maintain a prestigious position as master is also not a pure master.

3 "O my Lord, I am Your unmotivated servant, and You are my eternal master. There is no need of our being anything other than master and servant. You are naturally my master, and I am naturally Your servant. We have no other relationship."*

4 The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by Prahlada Maharaja to Lord Nrsimhadeva. Anuccheda 167

1 In the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.9.11) Prahlada Maharaja explains the relationship between the Lord and the devotee:

"The Supreme Lord, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, is always fully satisfied in Himself. Therefore when something is offered to Him, the offering, by the Lord's mercy, is for the benefit of the devotee, for the Lord does not need service from anyone. To give an example, if one's face is decorated, the reflection of one's face in a mirror is also seen to be decorated."*

2 This verse explains that the Supreme Personality of (ayam prabhuh) Godhead does not wish (na vrnite), for His own personal benefit (atmanah), that His devotees (janan) worship (manam) Him. The reason He accepts their worship is that He is very pleased (purnah) to associate (labha) with His devotees (nija). Another reason is that He is kind (karunah) to His devotees. Elaborate arrangements to worship Him do not of themselves please Him at all.

3 What is the devotee like? The answer is given in the word "avidusah" (unaware). As a child is foolish and unaware in the presence of the father, so the devotee is in the presence of the Supreme Lord. This statement shows the humbleness of the devotees. If it were not for the Lord empowering them to understand, the devotees would not understand anything. That is the meaning. In this way on both sides, for both the Lord and the devotee, there are feelings of love and kindness.

4 Fearing that some materialists might think, 'Why should the people worship the Lord? There is no reason to worship Him?' Prahlada gives a reason for worshipping the Lord. He says that everyone is interested in his own personal welfare, and by serving the Lord one automatically benefits himself. In this way, thinking of one's own happiness, one should worship the Lord. Here he gives the following example: 'If one's face is decorated, the reflection of one's face in a mirror is also seen to be decorated.' It is not otherwise.

This verse was spoken by Shri Prahlada to Lord Nrsimhadeva.

1 Prahlada continues to describe devotional service (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.7.51-52):

"My dear friends, O sons of the demons, you cannot please the Supreme Personality of Godhead by becoming perfect brahmanas, demigods or great saints or by becoming perfectly good in etiquette or vast learning. None of these qualifications can awaken the pleasure of the Lord. Nor by charity, austerity, sacrifice, cleanliness or vows can one satisfy the Lord. The Lord is pleased only if one has unflinching, unalloyed devotion to Him. Without sincere devotional service, everything is simply a show."*

2 Here the word "amalaya" means without material desires, "vidambanam" means "simply acting out a show". A devotee that has material desires is simply making an outward show of devotional service because his real interest is in his own benefit. As actors pretend in various ways, these devotees pretend to engage in devotional service.

There are two kinds of material desire. One is the desire for benefits in the earthly realm and the other for benefits in the planets of the demigods. Both of these desires are condemned in the following statement of the Nagapatnis (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.16.37):

3 "Those who have attained the dust of Your lotus feet never hanker for the kingship of heaven, limitless sovereignty, the position of Brahma or rulership over the earth. They are not interested even in the perfections of yoga or in liberation itself."*

4 In the same way Vaivasvata Manu's son Prsadhra, who yearned to attain liberation, asked for pure (ekanta) devotional service.

5 Prahlada Maharaja also wished to renounce all material desires in order to attain liberation. He appealed to Lord Nrsimhadeva (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.10.2):

"Prahlada Maharaja said: My dear Lord, O Supreme Personality of Godhead, because I was born in an atheistic family I am naturally attached to material enjoyment. Therefore, kindly do not tempt me with these illusions. I am very much afraid of material conditions, and I desire to be liberated from materialistic life. It is for this reason that I have taken shelter of Your lotus feet."*

6 After that, Prahlada Maharaja prayed to Lord Nrsimhadeva (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.10.7):

"O my Lord, best of the givers of benediction, if You at all want to bestow a desirable benediction upon me, then I pray from Your Lordship that within the core of my heart there be no material desires."*

7 Before recounting these prayers, Narada Muni explained (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.10.1):

"Although Prahlada Maharaja was only a boy, when he heard the benedictions offered by Lord Nrsimhadeva, he considered them impediments on the path of devotional service. Thus he smiled very mildly and spoke as follows."*

8 Shriman Ambarisa, who performed yajnas for the protection of his subjects, was a pure devotee of the Lord. He did not desire anything in this material world and he completely depended on the Lord. The pure devotees are described in the Garuda Purana in these words:

"A pure devotee depends on the Lord for his maintenance and protection."

9 In the following words Prahlada Maharaja criticises those that do not accept the devotional path (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.9.46):

"O Supreme Personality of Godhead, there are ten prescribed methods on the path to liberation: to remain silent, not to speak to anyone, to observe vows, to amass all kinds of Vedic knowledge to undergo austerities, to study the Vedas and other Vedic literatures, to execute the duties of varnasrama-dhama, to explain the sastras, to stay in a solitary place, to chant mantras silently and to be absorbed in trance. These different methods for liberation are generally only a professional practice and means of livelihood for those who have not conquered their senses. Because such persons are false proud, these procedures may not be successful."*

10 The different practices, beginning with silence (mauna), described here are used as a means of livelihood (varta bhavanti) by hypocrites who do not control their senses (ajitendriyanam). Such hypocrites do not attain the result that comes from controlling the senses. That is the meaning here.

11 That the pure devotees have no material desires is also explained in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.18.14):

"Although those who are interested only in worshipping the Supreme Personality of Godhead do not desire anything material from the Lord and do not even want liberation, Lord Krishna fulfils all their desires."*

12 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"The word 'param' here means 'liberation'."

13 Prahlada Maharaja again describes the importance of devotional service (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.7.51):

"My dear friends, O sons of the demons, you cannot please the Supreme Personality of Godhead by becoming perfect brahmanas, demigods or great saints or by becoming perfectly good in etiquette or vast learning. None of these qualifications can awaken the pleasure of the Lord. Nor by charity, austerity, sacrifice, cleanliness or vows can one satisfy the Lord. The Lord is pleased only if one has unflinching, unalloyed devotion to Him. Without sincere devotional service, everything is simply a show."*

14 This verse was spoken by Prahlada Maharaja to the sons of the demons.

1 That devotional service is the essential teaching of all scriptures is explained in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.5.23-24):

2 "Prahlada Maharaja said: Hearing and chanting about the transcendental holy name, form, qualities, paraphernalia and pastimes of Lord Vishnu, remembering them, serving the lotus feet of the Lord, offering the Lord respectful worship with sixteen types of paraphernalia, offering prayers to the Lord, becoming His servant, considering the Lord one's best friend, and surrendering everything unto Him (in other words, serving Him with the body, mind and words) - these nine processes are accepted as pure devotional service. One who has dedicated his life to the service of Krishna through these nine methods should be understood to be the most learned person, for he has acquired complete knowledge."*

3 In this verse the words "sravanam kirtanam" mean "hearing and chanting about the Lord's holy names and transcendental qualities", "arcanam" means "worshipping the Lord according to regulative principles", "vandanam" means "offering respectful obeisances", "dasyam" means thinking "I am the Lord's servant", "sakhyaam" means "thinking of the Lord as one's friend", and "atma nivedanam" means "offering for the Lord's service the cows, horses, and all other things one may have in one's possession", and it also means "depending on the Lord for maintenance and protection and being aware that it is not by one's own power one is maintained and protected."

4 Ancient sages have given the following description of great devotees adopting different methods of devotional service:

"Maharaja Pariksit attained the highest perfection, shelter to Lord Krishna's lotus feet, simply by hearing about Lord Vishnu. Sukadeva Gosvami attained perfection simply by reciting Shrimad Bhagavatam. Prahlada Maharaja attained perfection by remembering the Lord. The goddess of fortune attained perfection by massaging the transcendental legs of Maha-Vishnu. Maharaja Prthu attained perfection by worshipping the Deity and Akrura attained perfection by offering prayers unto the Lord. Vajrangaji (Hanumanji) attained perfection by rendering service to Lord Ramacandra, and Arjuna attained perfection simply by being Lord Krishna's friend. Bali Maharaja attained perfection by dedicating everything to the lotus feet of Krishna."*

5 In the verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda the nine kinds of activity described (navalaksana) are all direct (addha) devotional service to the Supreme Lord (bhagavati). They are not merely the offering to the Lord of the fruits of one's work, but they are direct service to the Lord (bhaktih). These activities of devotional service are offered (arпита) to Lord Vishnu (visnau) to please Him. Here Prahlada Maharaja says, "If (cet) someone performs (kriyate) these activities of devotional service, then I think (manye) he is the most learned person (yad-adhitam uttamam)."

6 Pure devotional service is described in the following statement of Shri Gopala-tapani Upanisad (1.18):

"Bhakti means devotional service to the Lord which is free from desire for material profit, either in this life or in the next. Devoid of such inclinations, one should fully absorb the mind in the Supreme. That is the purpose of naiskarmya."*

7 It is not necessary to perform all nine kinds of devotional service. By performing any one of them, any combination of them, or all of them with faith and love one will attain the desired result. These nine processes of devotional service are only a general outline of devotional service. Within that outline there are many activities of devotional service. This verse was spoken by Prahlada Maharaja to his father.

1 Now we will show that pure devotional service is the best spiritual path. By performing pure devotional service one becomes free of his aversion to the Supreme Lord and instead comes to love Him.

2 The Absolute Truth has three features: 1. the varietyless impersonal Brahman, which approached by the path of jnana (knowledge), 2. the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who has a great variety of transcendental qualities, and who is approached by devotional service, and 3. these two features taken together, that feature being approached by offering to the Lord the fruits of one's work. Thus there are three ways to approach the Lord: 1. the pursuit of transcendental knowledge, 2. devotional service, and 3. offering to the Lord the fruits of one's work. These three are the only ways. There are no others.

3 This is explained by the Lord Himself in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.20.6):

"My dear Uddhava, because I desire that human beings may achieve perfection, I have presented three paths of advancement - the path of knowledge, the path of work and the path of devotion. Besides these three there is absolutely no other means of elevation."

4 In this verse "yogah" means "the spiritual paths", "maya" means "by Me", the author of the Vedas", and "sreyamsi" means "the attainment of: 1. impersonal liberation, 2. the three goals of economic development, piety and sense gratification, and 3. love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead." Here fruitive work (karma) is clearly different from devotional service (bhakti).

1 These three paths are discussed in the following two verses (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.20.7-8):

2. "Among these three paths, jnana-yoga, the path of philosophical speculation, is recommended for those who are disgusted with material life and are thus detached from ordinary, fruitive activities. Those who are not disgusted with material life, having many desires yet to fulfil, should seek perfection through the path of karma-yoga.*

3 "If somehow or other by good fortune one develops faith in hearing and chanting My glories, such a person, being neither very disgusted with nor attached to material life, should achieve perfection through the path of loving devotion to Me."*

4 The word (nirvinnanam) means "they who are disgusted with the so-called pleasures available in the middle or higher material realms, and who have in the hearts definitely renounced them." These two verses describe they who yearn to attain liberation. Of them, they who have renounced material life should practice jnana-yoga, and they who are still attached to material happinesses and not yet able to renounce them, should practice karma-yoga, which will grant the perfections they desire.

5 Devotional service, however, may be practiced by anyone who has faith in it. He need not be very qualified or renounced. This is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.7.46):

"Surrendered souls, even from groups leading sinful lives, such as women, the labourer class, the mountaineers and the Siberians, or even the birds and beasts, can also know about the science of Godhead and become liberated from the clutches of the illusory energy by surrendering unto the pure devotees of the Lord and by following in their footsteps in devotional service."*

If, somehow or other (yadrcchaya), someone associates with the devotees, he will attain the Lord's mercy and in this way his life will become auspicious.

6 This process of becoming advanced in devotional service by associating with the Lord's devotees is also described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.2.16):

"O twice-born sages, by serving those devotees who are completely freed from all vice, great service is done. By such service, one gains affinity for hearing the messages of Vasudeva."*

7 The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

1 This verse is further explained in the following two verses (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.20.27-28):

2 "Having awakened faith in the narrations of My glories, being disgusted with all material activities, knowing that all sense gratification leads to misery, but still being unable to renounce all sense enjoyment, My devotee should remain happy and worship Me with great faith and conviction. Even though he is sometimes engaged in sense enjoyment, My devotee knows that all sense gratification leads to a miserable result, and he sincerely repents such activities."

3 The word "mat-katha" (narrations of My glories) here means "in many devotional activities, such as hearing about My glories." By having faith in these devotional activities one attains the greatest benefit. Even though he may sometimes feel impelled to perform material activities, the devotee knows (veda) that the happiness he experiences at present due to past pious deeds.

4 This is further explained in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.20.8):

"If somehow or other by good fortune one develops faith in hearing and chanting My glories, such a person, being neither very disgusted with nor attached to material life, should achieve perfection through the path of loving devotion to Me."

5 In this verse the Lord says, "One should worship Me, and not be renounced as the impersonalists are." It is the devotees that are genuinely renounced. That is the meaning.

6 Then the Lord says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.20.31):

"Therefore, for a devotee engaged in My loving service, with mind fixed on Me, the cultivation of knowledge and renunciation is generally not the means of achieving the highest perfection within this world."

7 The Lord continues (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.20.32):

"Everything that can be achieved by fruitive activities, penance, knowledge, detachment, mystic yoga, charity, religious duties and all other means of perfecting life is easily achieved by My devotee through loving service unto Me. If somehow or other My devotee desires promotion to heaven, liberation, or residence in My abode, he easily achieves such benedictions."

8 Devotional service is not dependent on either karma-yoga or renunciation. The devotees have faith that devotional service is the best spiritual path. The statement that devotional service has something to do with renunciation is merely a figure of speech. If one simply has faith in karma or jnana and does nothing more, then his efforts are all wasted. However, if one simply has faith in devotional service and does nothing more, that faith is accepted and the devotee attains a great benefit. Without faith it is not possible to attain pure devotional service. If one has no faith at all he cannot attain devotional service.

Here it is said that the devotee is neither attracted to nor repelled by the objects of the senses. The actions of the devotee are described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.20.9):

"As long as one is not satiated by fruitive activity and has not awakened his taste for devotional service by sravanam kirtanam visnoh, one has to act according to the regulative principles of the Vedic injunctions."

When he attains sincere faith in the Lord, the devotee is able to abandon fruitive work. The conclusion is that without engagement in devotional service one cannot attain perfection in spiritual life.

9 The devotional activity of chanting the Lord's holy name is described in the following words of the Skanda Purana, Prabhasa-khanda:

"O best of the Bhrgus to anyone who once, either with faith, or with contempt, chants the holy name, the holy name of Lord Krishna brings liberation."

10 Chanting the glories of the Lord is again described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.25.25):

"In the association of pure devotees, discussion of the pastimes and activities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is very pleasing and satisfying to the ear and the heart. By cultivating such knowledge one gradually becomes advanced on the path of liberation, and thereafter he is freed, and his attraction becomes fixed. Then real devotion and devotional service begin."*

11 In these verses it is explained that hearing about the Lord gives the spiritual result of devotional service.

12 The chanting of the Lord's holy name is again described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.2.49):

"While suffering at the time of death, Ajamila chanted the holy name of the Lord and although the chanting was directed toward his son, he nevertheless returned home, back to Godhead. Therefore if one faithfully and inoffensively chants the holy name of the Lord, where is the doubt that he will return to Godhead?"*

13 Faith in hearing and remembering the holy name of the Lord brings the best spiritual results to the devotee. It is not simply another part of spiritual life. It is pre-eminently important. There are no hard and fast rules for chanting the holy name, as there are for performing agni-hotra-yajnas and the other duties of karma-yoga. This is because hearing and chanting the holy name of the Lord has great spiritual power.

14 What happens if one is a fool and does not have faith in the holy name? The answer is given in these words of the Padma Purana:

"O best of the Bhrgus, to anyone who once, either with faith, or with contempt, chants the holy name, the holy name of Lord Krishna brings liberation."

If out of ignorance one commits the offense of chanting the holy name with contempt and one does not actually bear deep-seated malice towards the holy name, his advancement in devotional service will be swift and without impediments. However, if one actually knows, even a little, of the true nature of the holy name, and bears malice to the name, then when he chants the holy name his advancement in devotional service will meet with obstacles. It will be like a fire fed with only half the needed fuel.

15 The importance of faith is described by the Lord Himself in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.21.17-18):

"In worshipping the temple Deity, my dear Uddhava, bathing and decoration are the most pleasing offerings. For the Deity traced on sacred ground, the process of tattva-vinyasa is most dear. Oblations of sesame and barley soaked in ghee are the preferred offering to the sacrificial fire, whereas worship consisting of upasthana and arghya is preferred for the sun. One should worship Me in the form of water by offering water itself. Actually, whatever is offered to Me with faith by My devotee- even if only a little water - is most dear to Me."

16 "Even very opulent presentations do not satisfy Me if they are offered by non devotees. But I am pleased by any insignificant offering made by My loving devotees, and I am certainly most pleased when nice presentations of fragrant oil, incense, flowers and palatable foods are offered with love."

17 The words "sraddha" (faith) and "bhakti" (devotion) in these verses explain the nature of devotional service to the Lord, devotional service that pleases the Lord and removes offenses and malice to the Lord. Faith in devotional service is not merely a minor aspect of devotional service. It is essential. A person who knows the real nature of devotional service is able to engage in pure devotional service. The Lord Himself describes such a person in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.20.8):

18 "If somehow or other by good fortune one develops faith in hearing and chanting My glories, such a person, being neither very disgusted with nor attached to material life, should achieve perfection through the path of loving devotion to Me."

19 In the following words the Lord describes the devotees that have not yet come to the level of pure devotional service (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.20.27):

"Having awakened faith in the narrations of My glories, being disgusted with all material activities, knowing that all sense gratification leads to misery, but still being unable to renounce all sense enjoyment, My devotee should remain happy and worship Me with great faith and conviction. Even though he is sometimes engaged in sense enjoyment, My devotee knows that all sense gratification leads to a miserable result, and he sincerely repents such activities."

20 In this verse the word "tatah" has the sense of the ablative ("from that") and describes the steps by which one attains the stage of atmarama (finding satisfaction in the Supreme Self alone). In this way it is explained that devotional service is the king of all methods of spiritual realisation.

21 This will be further explained in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.20.34):

"Because My devotees possess saintly behaviour and deep intelligence, they completely dedicate themselves to Me and do not desire anything besides Me. Indeed, even if I offer them liberation from birth and death, they do not accept it."

22 To confirm that devotional service is the king of all methods of spiritual realisation,, it is also explained in these passages that karma (fruitive work) and jnana (the search for knowledge) cannot reach their final goals without the performance of devotional service.

23 The qualification for attaining pure devotional service is faith alone. Therefore the Lord teaches (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.20.28), "My devotee should remain happy and worship Me with great faith, love, and conviction." Here the word "sraddhaluh" means "faithful", "prитай" means "attracted to the Lord" and "drdha-niscayah" means "without abandoning the activities of devotional service." Because it may not be possible to renounce material desires all of a sudden, the Lord says, "one may sometimes be engaged in sense gratification." Still, the Lord criticises the activities of sense gratification because "sense gratification leads to a miserable result". The sense gratification described here does not include sinful activities. In the Vishnu Purana sinful activities are forbidden in the following words:

24 "O king, Lord Krishna is pleased with a person who does not even think of performing adultery, theft or violence."

25 In the Vishnu Purana and other scriptures it is said that one should offer the fruits of one's work to the Lord. Here it is explained that one cannot offer the fruits of sinful work to the Lord. That is forbidden. Later in this book we will quote the prohibition, "One should act without material desires. One should not act in any other way." Here not performing material activities means not performing sinful activities.

26 In the Vishnu-dharma Purana it is said:

"A person who breaks the rules created by Lord Vishnu and acts sinfully is not a devotee of Lord Vishnu. Only they who act in a saintly way can worship Lord Vishnu."

In these words the devotees are forbidden to perform sinful activities.

27 Then again, by engaging in devotional service one loses the desire to act sinfully. Shrimad Bhagavatam *4.21.31) explains:

"By the inclination to serve the lotus feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, suffering humanity can immediately cleanse the dirt which has accumulated in their minds during innumerable births. Like the Ganges water, which emanates from the toes of the lotus feet of the Lord, such a process immediately cleanses the mind, and thus spiritual or Krishna consciousness gradually increases."*

28 Here the word "sadyah" (immediately) means "simply by becoming attracted to the Lord."

29 Vishnu-dharma Purana again explains:

"When one no longer desires to act sinfully, but instead desires to act in a saintly way, Lord Vishnu stays in his heart."

30 The Lord protects the devotees from accidental sins, this is explained in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.5.42):

"One who has given up everything and taken full shelter at the lotus feet of Hari, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, is very dear to Krishna. If he is involved in some sinful activity by accident, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is seated in everyone's heart, removes his sins without difficulty."*

31 In this verse the word "kathancit" (by accident) means that the devotees do not perform sinful activities deliberately. deliberately performing sinful activities is one of the offenses to the holy name, as the Padma Purana, Namaparadha-bhanjana-stotra, explains:

"To think that since the Hare Krishna mantra can counteract all sinful reactions one may therefore go on with his sinful activities and then at the same time chant the Hare Krishna mantra to neutralise them is the greatest offense at the lotus feet of Hari-nama. One who thinks in this way cannot be purified by any means, such as by austerities, or by the various punishments of Yamaraja."*

32 Shri Bhagavad-gita (9.30) explains:

"Even if one commits the most abominable action, if he is engaged in devotional service he is to be considered saintly because he is properly situated in his determination."*

Here the word "su-duracarah" (committing the most abominable action) means committing offenses and being disrespectful. It does not refer to gross sinful activities.

33 The Lord then explains (Bhagavad-gita 9.31):

"He quickly becomes righteous and attains lasting peace. O son of Kunti, declare it boldly that My devotee never perishes."*

This verse confirms that it is best not to act badly. The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Anuccheda 173

1 Here someone may protest: "So far you have described only karma (fruitive work), jnana (the search for knowledge), and bhakti (devotional service). However, one must also perform his prescribed daily duties and whatever occasional duties are thrust upon him. Therefore jnana (the search for knowledge) and bhakti (devotional service) must always be performed along with these ordinary duties. How can one perform jnana and bhakti without also performing these prescribed duties?"

Fearing that someone would say this, the Lord refutes the idea that the devotees must perform a host of material duties prescribed by the Vedas. He says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.20.9):

2 "As long as one is not satiated by fruitive activity and has not awakened his taste for devotional service by sravanam kirtanam visnoh, one has to act according to the regulative principle of the Veda injunctions."

3 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"The word 'karmani' here means 'regular and occasional prescribed duties'."

4 However, the Lord also orders everyone to obey the orders of the Vedic literatures. He says:

"The Sruti and Smṛti scriptures are My commands. A person who disobeys these scriptures is My enemy. He is not My devotee."

5 There is no fault in this statement and it does not contradict what was said before. In order to perform devotional activities that increase one's renunciation and faith one should reject some of the Lord's orders.

6 This is explained by the Lord Himself in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.11.32):

"Having taken complete shelter at My lotus feet, however, a saintly person ultimately renounces such ordinary religious duties and worships Me alone. He is thus considered to be the best among all living entities."

7 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"This verse means that by engaging in devotional service one attains the platform of renunciation. When one is renounced he abandons the religious duties meant for those who are not renounced."

The platform of renunciation is described by Karabhajana Muni in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.5.41):

8 "One who has given up all material duties and taken full shelter of the lotus feet of Mukunda, who gives shelter to all, is not indebted to the demigods, great sages, ordinary living entities, relatives, friends, mankind, or even one's forefathers who have passed away."*

9 This verse means that the devotee described here is not a servant of the demigods, great sages, and others. He is a servant of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Therefore he need not serve the demigods and others. The word "kartam" here means "material duties." This means that the devotees are beyond the control of the demigods and others.

10 This is also described in the Garuda Purana in the following words:

"A person who does not worship Lord Hari will say, 'I must worship the demigods and sages, Brahma and Brhaspati'."

11 A devotee who accidentally performs a sinful activity does not need to perform an activity of penance to atone for it. Simply by remembering the Lord, he atones for his accidental sin. This is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.5.42):

12 "One who has given up everything and taken full shelter at the lotus feet of Hari, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, is very dear to Krishna. If he is involved in some sinful activity by accident, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is seated in everyone's heart, removes his sins without difficulty."*

13 In this verse the word "tyaktanya-bhava" means "one who has rejected the worship of the demigods and placed all his love and devotion in the Supreme Personality of Godhead." Such a person rejects fruitive work. He has faith and he takes shelter of the Lord. These two things, having faith and taking shelter are the same thing. Faith here means "faith in the scriptures." They who do not take shelter of the scriptures find themselves in a fearful position. The symptom of faith is that one takes shelter of the scriptures. For these reasons one should not worship the various demigods.

14 That the devotees take shelter of the Lord alone and do not worship the demigods is also explained in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.31.14):

"As pouring water on the root of a tree energises the trunk, branches, twigs and everything else, and as supplying food to the stomach enlivens the senses and limbs of the body, simply by worshipping the Supreme Personality of Godhead through devotional service automatically satisfies the demigods, who are parts of that Supreme Personality."*

15 Even if his advancement in devotional service is temporarily blocked by obstacle, a devotee who abandons fruitive work and takes shelter of the Lord is not placed in distress because he has abandoned fruitive work. This is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.5.17):

"One who has forsaken his material occupations to engage in devotional service of the Lord may sometimes fall down while in an immature stage, yet there is no danger of his being unsuccessful. On the other hand, a non devotee, though fully engaged in occupational duties, does not gain anything."*

16 In the following words Lord Krishna orders the devotees to abandon fruitive work (Bhagavad-gita 18.66):

"Abandon all varieties of religion and just surrender unto Me. I shall deliver you from all sinful reactions. Do not fear."*

17 From the beginning of devotional service one should renounce fruitive work. That is the meaning of the prefix "pari" used here with the very "tyaj".

This verse is also confirmed by the following verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.5.41) which has the same meaning:

"One who has given up all material duties and taken full shelter of the lotus feet of Mukunda, who gives shelter to all, is not indebted to the demigods, great sages, ordinary living entities, relatives, friends, mankind or even one's forefathers who have passed away."*

18 In the following words Lord Krishna describes devotional service (Bhagavad-gita 18.65):

"Always think of Me, become My devotee, worship Me and offer your homage unto Me. Thus you will come to Me without fail. I promise you this because you are My very dear friend."*

19 In the Gautamiya Tantra it is said:

"They who have fallen in love with Lord Krishna's lotus feet do not divert their attention to chanting about, meditating on, worshipping, or following the orders of anyone else."

20 The activities of the pure devotee King Bharata are described in the following words of Shri Vishnu Purana (2.13.9-10):

"Again and again King Bharata would chant, 'O Krishna, O Govinda, O Kesava, O Madhava, O Vishnu, O limitless one, O infallible Lord, O master of all yajna, O master of the senses!' Even in his dreams, the king would think only of Lord Krishna.

21 King Bharata did not talk of topics other than Krishna. He renounced talking of other topics and doing other activities. He understood that Lord Krishna is not different from His holy name. In this way King Bharata was a pure devotee of the Lord.

22 In the Padma Purana Lord Krishna explains:

"A person who neglects his material duties and only once says My name comes to Me in the spiritual world, but they who carefully perform their duties but never say My name do not."

23 Therefore a faithful devotee should engage in devotional service alone. He should not perform material pious duties or any other non devotional activities. How is spiritual faith known? The signs of faith were already previously described in the description of the symptoms of surrender. The symptoms of surrender will also be described in the discussion of the verse beginning "anukulyasya sankalpah". The absence of materialism, miserliness and other faults is known as another symptom of faith. In this way the scriptures describe faith.

24 In Bhagavad-gita (9.22), Lord Krishna describes faith in these words:

"But those who always worship Me with exclusive devotion, meditating on My transcendental form, to them I carry what they lack and I preserve what they have."*

25 A faithful person does not lose faith even in seemingly ordinary things, relatives, qualities and activities that nevertheless have a relationship with the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Only they who have ordinary vision see things as faulty or material. A person who is actually making spiritual advancement will not renounce these things.

26 The power of devotional service is described in the following words of the Narada Purana:

"The auspicious water that has washed Lord Krishna's feet stops all sufferings, all diseases, and even untimely death."

27 Some faithful devotees commit offences and therefore they do not at once attain the desired result. The result remains hidden from them. The faithful devotees naturally become washed of all impurities. This is described in the statement of scripture:

"One who remembers the lotus-eyed Supreme Personality of Godhead becomes pure both within and without."

By properly honouring the great sages and devotees in the disciplic succession, which begins with Shri Narada and Shri Vyasa, one becomes purified in this way. However, if one does not honour the great devotees, he commits an offense.

28 The rules of etiquette that govern civilised society are meant to prevent these kinds of offenses to the great souls. In this way it should be understood. When a person has faith and understand the difference between spiritual perfection and what falls short of that perfection, he becomes like a goldsmith who, desiring to attain pure gold, works very strenuously (to refine the impure gold he has). Thus a sincere devotee takes great trouble to become free of material vices, and when all material faults are destroyed, then Lord Krishna personally appears before him. In this way it should be understood.

29 When the Supreme Personality of Godhead appears before him, the devotee becomes free from even the slightest trace of desire for an exalted position in the material world. When the devotee is enlightened in this way he will never insult the great devotees or commit any kind of offense. All offenses are then stopped.

30 Here may be seen the example of King Citraketu. Unaware of Lord Siva's true identity as a great devotee of the Lord because Lord Siva's true nature was covered by activities that seemed to be beyond the realm of devotional service, King Citraketu committed an offense to him.

Even a faithful devotee may, because of past karma, still be engaged in material activities. However, by humbly engaging in devotional service, the devotee will certainly shake away all attraction to matter.

31 This is seen in the following words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.20.28), where Lord Krishna explains:

"Having awakened faith in the narrations of My glories, being disgusted with all material activities, knowing that all sense gratification leads to misery, but still being unable to renounce all sense enjoyment, My devotee should remain happy and worship Me with great faith and conviction. Even though he is sometimes engaged in sense enjoyment. My devotee knows that all sense gratification leads to a miserable result, and he sincerely repents such activities."

32 In Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.14.18) Lord Krishna explains:

"My dear Uddhava, if My devotee has not fully conquered his senses, he may be harassed by material desires, but because of his unflinching devotion for Me, he will not be defeated by sense gratification."

33 In the following words (Bhagavad-gita 9.30) Lord Krishna describes the nature of unalloyed faith:

"Even if one commits the most abominable action, if he is engaged in devotional service he is to be considered saintly because he is properly situated in his determination."*

34 In Bhagavad-gita (17.1) Arjuna asks the following question:

"O Krishna, what is the situation of those who do not follow the principles of scripture but worship according to their own imagination? Are they in goodness, in passion or in ignorance?"*

35 This kind of faith is understood through the disciplic succession. It is not necessarily the conclusion of all the scriptures. Many scriptural passages affirm that materialistic behaviour is always inappropriate. For example, in the Vishnu Purana it is said:

"Lord Krishna is never pleased by a person who is a thief or an adulterer, or who does harm to others."

These words contradict the previous statement that Lord Vishnu may sometimes be pleased with His devotee even if the devotee is engaged in abominable actions. In the Vishnu-dharma Purana it is said:

"One who does not follow the rules of proper conduct cannot be considered a devotee of Lord Vishnu. The Lord is worshipped only by they who act in a saintly way."

These words contradict the previous statement that a person engaged in abominable actions may still be considered a devotee. The truth is that it is certainly not to a devotee's credit that he perform abominable actions. That sinful actions should be avoided by the devotees is confirmed by the use of the words "api cet" (even though) in this quote from Bhagavad-gita. It is also confirmed by the verse that immediately follows.

36 Immediately after saying that the devotee is rightly situated even though he may be engaged in abominable actions, Lord Krishna explains (Bhagavad-gita 9.31):

"He quickly becomes righteous and attains lasting peace. O son of Kunti declare it boldly that My devotee never perishes."*

However, it should also be noted that the following is explained the description of offenses to the holy name:

"It is an offense to commit sin on the strength of chanting the holy name."

37 The faith of a devotee who follows the scriptures is better than other kinds of faith. That faith should be followed. Other kinds of faith are mentioned only to show the glory and power of devotional service. This kind of faith situates the devotee in the mode of goodness. However, faith should not be directed to worship of the demigods. That is confirmed in Bhagavad-gita 17.1. The perfection of faith is described in the following passage of Brahma-vaivarta Purana.

38 "One should consider: What is reality? What is illusion? O King, when one thinks in this way he comes to renounce the illusion of material life. Then he can attain perfection. Then he attains the perfection of faith, a perfection that brings a great result."

39 The manifestation of faith among the devotees is described by the Supreme Lord Himself in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.20.8-9):

"If somehow or other by good fortune one develops faith in hearing and chanting My glories, such a person, being neither very disgusted with nor attached to material life, should achieve perfection through the path of loving devotion to Me."

40 "As long as one is not satiated by fruitive activity and has not awakened his taste for devotional service by sravanam kirtanam visnoh, one has to act according to the regulative principle of the Vedic injunctions."

41 In this way the conversation of the Supreme Personality of Godhead and Narada Muni explains who is qualified and who is not qualified to engage in devotional service.

42 Lord Krishna further explains (Bhagavad-gita 3.26):

"So as not to disrupt the minds of ignorant men attached to the fruitive results of prescribed duties, a learned person should not induce them to stop work. Rather, by working in the spirit of devotion, he should engage them in all sorts of activities (for the gradual development of Krishna consciousness)."

43 It is also said in (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.5.15):

"The people in general are naturally inclined to enjoy, and you have encouraged them in that way in the name of religion. This is verily condemned and is quite unreasonable. because they are guided under your instructions, they will accept such activities in the name of religion and will hardly care for prohibitions."*

44 The infallible Supreme Personality of Godhead further explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.9.50):

"A pure devotee who is fully accomplished in the science of devotional service will never instruct a foolish person to engage in fruitive activities for material enjoyment, not to speak of helping him in such activities. Such a person is like an experienced physician, who never encourages a patient to eat food injurious to his health, even if the patient desires it."*

45 Although faith makes a person qualified to engage in devotional service, and faith does not manifest in a person who does not know the truth, nevertheless, there is no fault in considering the previous purifying activities of a potential recipient of transcendental knowledge, and there is a fault on the part of a preacher of transcendental knowledge if he does not consider these previous activities. Therefore it is said:

"One should not teach transcendental knowledge to a faithless person averse to the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

Later in this book, in the discussion of offenses, we will explain how teaching faithless persons is an offense to the Lord. Now we will return to the discussion at hand.

Anuccheda 174

1 After describing (in anuccheda 173, texts 39 and 40) the way one is qualified to engage in the three kinds of yoga (karma-yoga, jnana-yoga and bhakti-yoga), the Supreme Lord next explains how they who are devotees and try to please the Supreme Lord engage in karma-yoga. The Lord says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.20.10-11):

2 "My dear Uddhava, a person who is situated in his prescribed duty, properly worshipping by Vedic sacrifices but not desiring the fruitive result of such worship, will not go to the heavenly planets. Similarly, by not performing forbidden activities he will not go to hell."

3 "One who is situated in his prescribed duty, free from sinful activities and cleansed of material contamination, in this very life obtains transcendental knowledge or, by fortune, devotional service unto Me."

4 Shрила Shridhara Svami comments:

"In these verses 'anasih-kamah' means 'not desiring the fruits of action and 'anyat' means 'forbidden actions'. One may go to the hellish planets in two ways. One way is to neglect ones prescribed duties, and the other way is to perform actions that are forbidden. Because he performs his prescribed duties and also shuns forbidden actions, the devotee does not go to the hellish planets, and because he does not desire the fruits of action he does not go to Svargaloka either. That is the meaning. The phrase 'asmil loke' means 'in this body'. 'Anaghah' means 'he who shuns all forbidden actions', and 'sucih' means 'free from the contamination of material passions'. The word 'yadrcchaya' (by good fortune) shows that devotional service is more rare and difficult to attain than the realisation of impersonal Brahman."

5 The meaning here is that the sincere souls do not desire to enjoy the fruits of material actions and thus they perform Vedic rituals and duties only because the Lord has ordered that they be performed. When association with jnanis, is attained by them, these sincere souls present the results of these prescribed fruitive activities as an offering to the Supreme Lord. When the association of devotees of the Lord is attained by them, these sincere souls engage in devotional activities that please the Supreme Lord directly. That is why the word "yadrcchaya" (by good fortune) is used here. By the association of the devotees and by attaining their mercy, the sincere souls attain good fortune. That is explained here.

6 This is explained in the following words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (2.3.11):

"All the different kinds of worshippers of multi demigods can attain the highest perfectional benediction, which is spontaneous attraction unflinchingly fixed upon the Supreme Personality of Godhead, only by the association of the pure devotee of the Lord."*

7 The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Anuccheda 175

1 In this way there are different qualifications for: 1. offering the results of one's work to the Lord, 2. spiritual knowledge, and 3. spiritual devotional service to the Lord. The Lord discusses these qualifications in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.21.2):

2 "Steadiness in one's own position is declared to be actual piety, whereas deviation from one's position is considered impiety. In this way the two are definitely ascertained."

3 The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead.
Anuccheda 176

1 When he has no knowledge of the Supreme Lord's transcendental form and no devotion to Him, the soul is in an unfortunate position. In that position the idea that God is impersonal and has no qualities becomes prominent. The most important feature of God is His feature as a person who has transcendental qualities. This feature is manifested in two ways: 1. as the Supreme Personality of Godhead and 2. as the Supersoul. In this way the soul may have faith in the Supreme Personality of Godhead or faith in the Supersoul.

2 These three features of the Supreme (Brahma, Paramatma and Bhagavan) are described in the Bhagavad-gita. There the Supreme Personality of Godhead said (8.3):

"The indestructible, transcendental living entity is called Brahman, and his eternal nature is called adhyatma, the self. Action pertaining to the development of the material bodies of the living entities is called karma, or fruitive activities."*

3 The word "aksara" here refers to the impersonal Brahman, which has already been described. That Brahman is worshipped by the path of transcendental knowledge. This is described by the Lord in the following words (Bhagavad-gita 8.11):

4 "Person who are learned in the Vedas, who utter omkara and who are great sages in the renounced order enter into Brahman. Desiring such perfection, one practices celibacy. I shall now briefly explain to you this process by which one may attain salvation."*

5 Lord Krishna then describes His Supersoul feature in these words (Bhagavad-gita 8.4):

"O best of the embodied beings, the physical nature, which is constantly changing, is called adhibhuta (the material manifestation). The universal form of the Lord, which includes all the demigods, like those of the sun and moon, is called adhidaiva. And I, the Supreme Lord, represented as the Supersoul in the heart of every embodied being, am called adhiyajna (the Lord of sacrifice)."

6 In this way the Supreme Lord appears in two forms, as 1. the universal form, and 2. the all-pervading Supersoul. Now will be shown the two kinds of devotional service employed to worship these two forms of the Lord.

7 Lord Krishna Himself explains this in the following words (Bhagavad-gita 8.8):

"He who meditates on Me as the Supreme Personality of Godhead, his mind constantly engaged in remembering Me, undeviated from the path, he, O Partha, is sure to reach Me."*

8 In Bhagavad-gita (8.9) the Lord continues:

"One should meditate upon the Supreme Person as the one who knows everything, as He who is the oldest, who is the controller, who is smaller than the smallest, who is the maintainer of everything, who is beyond all material conception, who is inconceivable and who is always a person. He is luminous like the sun, and He is transcendental, beyond this material nature."*

9 Using the word "Me", Lord Krishna confirms that He is the real object of devotional service in these words (Bhagavad-gita 8.14):

10 "For one who always remembers Me without deviation, I am easy to obtain, O son of Prtha, because of his constant engagement in devotional service."*

11 Lord Kapiladeva describes these three features of the Supreme Lord in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.32.26):

12 "The Supreme Personality of Godhead alone is complete transcendental knowledge, but according to the different processes of understanding He appears differently, either as impersonal Brahman, as Paramatma, as the Supreme Personality of Godhead or as the purusa-avatara."*

13 "Drsih" here means "philosophical knowledge", and "prthak bhavaih" means "according to different processes of understanding". In this way the Lord is known as the Supreme Brahman, the Supersoul, and the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

14 The impersonal Brahman is understood by cultivation of philosophical knowledge, the Supersoul is understood by a specific kind of devotional service, and the Supreme Personality of Godhead is understood by full devotional service. In this verse "jnana-matram" means "knowledge of the nature of the Supreme Brahman", "isvarah" means "the Supersoul", and "puman" means "the Supreme Personality of Godhead". These three features of the Lord have already been described in the Bhagavat-sandarbha and Paramatma-sandarbha.

15 The way of understanding the impersonal Brahman is given in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.6):

"Non devotees, however, cannot realise You in Your full personal feature. Nevertheless, it may be possible for them to realise Your expansion as the impersonal Supreme by cultivating direct perception of the Self within the heart. But they can do this only by purifying the mind and senses of all conceptions of material distinctions and all attachment to material sense objects. Only in this way will Your impersonal feature manifest itself to them."

16 The way of understanding the Supersoul is given in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.2.8):

"Others conceive of the Personality of Godhead residing within the body in the region of the heart and measuring only eight inches, with four hands carrying a lotus, a wheel of a chariot, a conchshell and a club respectively."*

17 The way of understanding the Supreme Personality of Godhead is given in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.7.4):

"Thus he fixed his mind, perfectly engaging it by linking it in devotional service (bhakti-yoga) without any tinge of materialism, and thus he saw the Absolute Personality of Godhead along with His external energy, which was under full control."*

18 Although these three methods (karma, jnana, and bhakti) all act to counteract the conditioned soul's aversion to the Supreme, nevertheless the following explanation is given about them (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.4):

19 "My dear Lord, devotional service unto You is the only auspicious path. If one gives it up simply for speculative knowledge or the understanding that these living beings are spirit soul and the material world is false, he undergoes a great deal of trouble. He only gains troublesome and inauspicious activities. His actions are like beating a husk that is already devoid of rice. One's labour becomes fruitless."*

In this way it is seen that spiritual knowledge without reference to devotional service is useless. It has no power to bring real spiritual advancement.

20 In Shrimad-Bhagavatam (11.20.31) Lord Krishna explains:

"Therefore, for a devotee engaged in My loving service, with mind fixed on Me, the cultivation of knowledge and renunciation is generally not the means of achieving the highest perfection within this world."

In this way it is seen that devotional service is independent of knowledge and renunciation.

21 Lord Krishna also explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.20.32):

"Everything that can be achieved by fruitive activities, penance, knowledge, detachment, mystic yoga, charity, religious duties and all other means of perfecting life is easily achieved by My devotee through loving service unto Me. If somehow or other My devotee desires promotion to heaven, liberation or residence in My abode, he easily achieves such benedictions."

Here the Lord explains that because all good results are obtained by devotional service, the cultivation of impersonal knowledge is not a very commendable activity.

22 Some, not giving any importance to the transcendental form of Lord Vishnu who is worshipped in devotional service, the path of spiritual variety, instead worship the impersonal Supreme. In the following quote from scripture their method of worship is shown to be inferior.

23 Hiranyakasipu gives the following explanation (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.2.22):

"The spirit soul, the living entity, has no death, for he is eternal and inexhaustible. Being free from material contamination, he can go anywhere in the material or spiritual worlds. He is fully aware and completely different from the material body, but because of being misled by misuse of his slight independence, he is obliged to accept subtle and gross bodies created by the material energy and thus be subjected to so-called material happiness and distress. Therefore, no one should lament for the passing of the spirit soul from the body."*

24 In Shrimad Bhagavatam (7.2.39) the Lord says:

"O weak women! Only by the will of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is never diminished, is the entire world created, maintained and again annihilated. This is the verdict of the Vedic knowledge. This material creation, consisting of the moving and non moving, is exactly like His plaything. Being the Supreme Lord, He is completely competent to destroy and protect."*

Thus in these words of Shrimad Bhagavatam, and also in Brahma's prayers, the conception of the Supreme as formless and having a form are compared. The idea that Lord Vishnu is an ordinary demigod is also criticised there. In these verses the idea that the individual spirit soul is the worshipable Supreme is forcefully refuted. Such an idea is laughed at by the pure devotees, just as the Yadavas laughed at the demon Paundraka who pretended that he was Lord Vasudeva.

25 In Shrimad Bhagavatam (3.29.13) the Lord explains:

"A pure devotee does not accept any kind of liberation: salokya, sarsti, samipya, sarupya or ekatva, even though they are offered by the Supreme Personality of Godhead."*

Because the result attained by they who think the Supreme is impersonal is thus rejected, the conclusion of impersonalism is thus shown to be untrue.

26 Shri Hanuman explains:

"Only a fool will give up service to the Lord and try instead to become the Lord Himself."

In the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.20.34) the Supreme Lord explains that pure devotional service is the best of all attainments:

27 "Because My devotees possess saintly behaviour and deep intelligence, they completely dedicate themselves to Me and do not desire anything besides Me. Indeed, even if I offer them liberation from birth and death, they do not accept it."*

28 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"Here the word 'dhirah' means 'intelligent' and 'mamaikantinah' means 'filled with love for Me'. The Lord says, 'Even though I offer liberation to them, they will not accept it'. What more can be said? They have no material desires. That is the meaning. The word 'apunar-bhavam' here means 'great liberation'."

29 The great glory of pure devotees like these is described in these words of the Garuda Purana:

30 "A performer of yajnas is better than many thousands of brahmanas. A scholar who has crossed to the farther shore of the Vedanta is better than many thousands of performers of yajnas.

31 "A devotee of Lord Vishnu is better than many millions of scholars learned in Vedanta. A pure devotee of Lord Vishnu is better than many thousands of devotees who have not yet come to the stage of pure devotion."

Anuccheda 177

1 Because it brings the greatest of all blisses, devotional service is naturally filled with bliss. For they who, because of some defect on their part, are not able to taste the sweetness of devotional service, orders to perform certain activities, prohibitions forbidding other activities, and the state of mind that distinguishes a host of virtues and vices, are given. However, to be situated in the state where one sees virtues and vices, is itself a fault on one's part.

2 This is described in the previous chapter (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.19.36-45) where Lord Krishna describes virtues and faults in direct devotional service:

"Absorbing the intelligence in Me constitutes mental equilibrium and complete discipline of the senses is self control. Tolerance means patiently enduring unhappiness, and steadfastness occurs when one conquers the tongue and genitals. The greatest charity is to give up all aggression toward others, and renunciation of lust is understood to be real austerity. Real heroism is to conquer one's natural tendency to enjoy material life, and reality is seeing the Supreme Personality of Godhead everywhere. Truthfulness means to speak the truth in a pleasing way, as declared by great sages. Cleanliness is detachment in fruitive activities, whereas renunciation is the sannyasa order of life. The true desirable wealth for human beings is religiousness, and I, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, am sacrifice. Religious remuneration is devotion to the acarya with the purpose of acquiring spiritual instruction, and the greatest strength is the pranayama system of breath control."

"Actual opulence is My own nature as the Supreme Personality of Godhead, through which I exhibit the six unlimited opulences. The supreme gain in life is devotional service to Me, and actual education is nullifying the false perception of duality within the soul. Real modesty is to be disgusted improper activities, and beauty is to possess good qualities, such as detachment. Real happiness is to transcend material happiness and unhappiness, and real misery is to be implicated in searching for sex pleasure. A wise man is one who knows the process of freedom from bondage, and a fool is one who identifies with his material body and mind. The real path in life is that which leads to Me, and the wrong path is sense gratification, by which consciousness is bewildered. Actual heaven is the predominance of the mode of goodness, whereas hell is the predominance of ignorance. I am everyone's true friend, acting as the spiritual master of the entire universe, and one's home is the human body. My dear friend Uddhava, one who is enriched with good qualities is actually said to be rich, and one who is unsatisfied in life is actually poor. A wretched person is one who cannot control his senses, whereas one who is not attached to sense gratification is a real controller. One who attaches himself to sense gratification is the opposite, a slave. Thus, Uddhava, I have elucidated all the matters about which you have inquired. There is no need of a more elaborate description of these good and bad qualities, since to constantly see good and bad is itself a bad quality. The best quality is to transcend material good and evil."

3 They who taste the sweetness of devotional service are beyond rules, prohibitions, virtues and vices. This is explained by Lord Krishna Himself in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.20.36):

4 "Material piety and sin, which arise from the good and evil of this world, cannot exist within my unalloyed devotees, who, being free from material hankering, maintain steady spiritual consciousness in all circumstances. Indeed, such devotees have achieved Me, the Supreme Lord, who am beyond anything that can be conceived by material intelligence."

5 Shрила Shridhara Svami comments:

"The word 'gunah' here means 'the piety and sin that is created by virtues and faults and by following rules or transgressing prohibitions'."

Anuccheda 178

1 Engagement in pure devotional service is the natural position of all living entities. This is described in Svetasvatara Upanisad (6.9) in these words:

"No one is the master of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. No one controls Him. He does not have a material body. He is the cause of all causes. He is the master of all masters of the senses. No one is His father. No one is His king."

Thus the individual spirit souls are part and parcel of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. They are His potencies. They naturally take shelter of Him. He is like the sun and they are like the rays of light emanating from the sun.

2 In the Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda, in the description of the sacred syllable Om, it is said:

"The letters a, u and m combine to make the sacred syllable Om, which is the heart of the three Vedas.

3 The letter a is said to be Lord Vishnu. The letter u is said to be the goddess of fortune. The letter m is said to be Their servant, the individual spirit soul who is the twenty-fifth element in the material world."

4 At the end of that passage it is also said:

"The letter m is said to be all-knowing Lord Sesa."

5 It is also said:

"Some say that the letter u is the goddess of fortune, for she always stays by her husband's side, and her husband here is the letter a. He is like the sun and she is like the sunlight. She is His constant companion."

6 For this reason the Vaishnavas declared that the sacred syllable Om is the maha-vakya, the most important statement in the Vedas.

7 The eight-syllable mantra (Om namo narayanaya) is described in the following words:

"In all times, places, and situations I render every kind of service to the goddess of fortune's husband, glorious Lord Vishnu.

8 "In this way it is affirmed that the individual spirit soul's original nature is to be a servant of the Supreme Lord. One who thus understands the true meaning of this mantra should then engage in the Lord's service.

9 "Thus every moving and unmoving living entity in the universe is the servant of the Supreme Lord. Lord Narayana is the supreme controller of all the universes. He is the master. He is the Lord."

10 This is also described in the following prayer spoken by the Personified Vedas to the Supreme Personality of Godhead (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.87.20):

"The individual living entity, while living within these material bodies he has created for himself by his karma, remains actually uncovered by both gross and subtle matter. He is described by the Vedas to be the expanded part and parcel of You, the proprietor of all potencies. Ascertaining the status of the living entity in this manner, learned sages become imbued with faith and take to the worship of Your feet, which are the field into which all the sacrifices of the Vedas are sown and are also the source of liberation."

11 Here "svena" means "by You", "krtesu puresu" means "residing in different bodies", and "tava purusam vadanti" means "they say the individual spirit soul's eternal nature is to be Your part and parcel." "Akhila-sakti-dhrtas tava" means "You are the master of all potencies. Your marginal potency, known as the individual souls (jivas) as Your part and parcel. However Your internal potency is not Your part and parcel, for it is fully identical with You. You are the root and shelter of all Your potencies. You are like the sun and they are like the individual rays of sunlight." That is the meaning here.

12 Now the reason the spirit souls are part and parcel of the Supreme Lord will be considered. Here the verse says, "abahir-antara-samvaranam", which means "There is no covering either within or without". However there is covering by various designations. That is the meaning. "Nr" here means "of the individual spirit soul", and "gatim" means "that the individual soul takes shelter of the Supreme Lord and depends on Him for maintaining his life. "Vivicya" means "understanding this truth", "kavayah" means "the learned sages", and "visvasitah" means "faithful". These faithful sages "worship Your feet" (bhavata anghrim upasate).

13 Now faith will be considered, the word "nigamavapanam" means "the seed from which all the Vedas have sprouted". This means that the Supreme Lord is the birthplace of the Vedas. When the spirit souls, who are by nature always dependent on the Supreme Lord for their maintenance, become averse to the Lord, they find themselves suffering the miseries of life in the material world or repeated birth and death. They who become favourable to the Lord and love the Lord, however, are able to escape the world of birth and death. This is described in the word "abhavam", which means, "where there is no material world of birth and death". Or, this word can also be interpreted to establish the truth that devotional service and the Supreme Lord worshipped by devotional service are both eternal. Together the words "abhavam anghrim" means "the feet that are free from birth and death". In this way it is established that pure devotional service is the best of all spiritual paths. The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by the Personified Vedas to the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

1 Now in another section another aspect of devotional service will be considered. How does one attain pure devotional service, which is very rare and difficult to attain and which brings a result that is also rare and difficult to attain and which brings a result that is also rare and difficult to attain? Now we will consider the cause that brings devotional service into existence.

2 In Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.51.53) it is said:

"O my Lord! O infallible Supreme Person! When a person wandering throughout the universes becomes eligible for liberation from material existence, he gets an opportunity to associate with devotees. When he associates with devotees, his attraction for You is awakened. You are the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the highest goal of the supreme devotees and the Lord of the universe."*

3 This verse means. "When a person wandering throughout the universes becomes eligible for liberation from material existence, that is to say when his time for attaining liberation has come, he gets an opportunity to associate with devotees. When he associates with devotees, he attains liberation from material existence." This means that association with devotees is the swift and unstoppable way to attain liberation. This statement is an example of the fourth variety of the namalankara (literary ornament) called atisayokti (hyperbole), a variety that is described in the following words:

4 "When something is said to very quickly bring a certain result, that is the fourth kind of hyperbole, which is called purvokti."

5 An example of this kind of purvokti hyperbole is seen in the following words spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead to Nalakuvara and Manigriva (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.10.41):

6 "When one is face to face with the sun, there is no longer darkness for one's eyes. Similarly, when one is face to face with a sadhu, a devotee, who is fully determined and surrendered to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, one will no longer be subject to material bondage."*

7 The reason for this is given in Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.51.53, (which was quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda):

"O Lord, when a person associates with devotees, his attraction for You is awakened."*

When there is no longer any reason for the continued existence of the misconceptions that make one averse to the Lord, these misconceptions come to an end, and then the actual truth, which makes one fall in love with the Lord, is manifested. This is described by Shri Vidura in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.5.3):

8 "O my Lord, great philanthropic souls travel on the earth on behalf of the Supreme Personality of Godhead to show compassion to the fallen souls who are averse to the sense of subordination to the Lord."*

9 Here the word "daivat" means "because of the destiny created by previous karma", and the word "adharma-silasya" means "of one who is averse to the sense of subordination to the Lord". In Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.51.53 (quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda) the use of the words "yarhi" (when) and "tada eva" (then) indicate that in this sequence of events there is not a long interval of time. The words "ca eva" (also certainly), also indicate that this event does not happen far in the future. That is the meaning. The word "sad-gatau" means "any place where the devotees (sat) assemble together (gatau). O Lord, to that place You personally come." This is described in the following words of the Itihasa-samuccaya:

10 "O king, Lord Krishna personally comes to the places where His devotees, who are free material passion and other vices, congregate. Of this there is no doubt."

11 The word "sad-gatau" thus refers to association with devotees. As has already been explained, in this way ordinary people can attain devotion to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Pingala glorifies association with devotees in these words (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 11.8.34):

12 "Certainly in this city of Videha I alone am completely foolish. I neglected the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who awards us everything, even our original spiritual form, and instead I desired to enjoy sense gratification with many men."

13 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"Here Pingala says: Even though I had the association of the saintly devotees of Videha, still I remained a complete fool!

14 If a person is seen to be eager to serve the Lord, but it is not seen that he had association with devotees, it should be understood that at some time in this life or a previous life he did have association with a saintly devotee in the disciplic succession. It may be said that just as Nalakuvara and others had the opportunity to see Narada Muni, so the great demigods also had the opportunity to see him, but still they did not attain the same result that Nalakuvara attained. This happens because of offenses to a great devotee. When one thinks a great devotee is merely an ordinary pious person, one commits an offense. To become free from that offense, one should understand the exalted status of that devotee and then one should sincerely honour and serve him. The demigods explain all this in the following words (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 3.5.45):

15 "O great Supreme Lord, offensive persons whose internal vision has been affected by external materialistic activities cannot see Your lotus feet, but they are seen by Your pure devotees, whose one and only aim is to transcendently enjoy Your activities."*

16 Here the word "te" means "Your". The word "padanyasa-vilasa-laksmyah" refers to the devotees that have a relationship with the Lord. The verse then explains that many persons do not see the Lord's lotus feet. Who are these persons? The verse says they are "offensive persons whose internal vision has been too affected by external materialistic activities". In this way the verse is explained.

17 The word "asad-vrtti" here does not refer to ordinary materialistic activities, for the great devotees are merciful to ordinary materialists, as was described in Shrimad-Bhagavatam 3.5.3 (quoted in text 8 of this anuccheda). The great souls give their mercy to they who do not commit offenses. simply by the association of these great souls, these materialistic persons also become saintly devotees. The great souls, because they are independent in their activities, may also give their mercy to offenders and transform them also into devotees, but this does not occur without the great soul's mercy. Nalakuvara and the ordinary demigods are examples of all this.

18 Examples of this are seen in the mercy of Shri Bharata to King Rahugana and in the activities of Uparicara Vasu as described in the Vishnu-dharma Purana. After killing many demons to help the demigods, Uparicara vasu renounced the world and went to Patalaloka in order to meditate on the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Then the demons approached the renounced Vasu and tried to kill him with their weapons, but their weapons all suddenly became completely useless and ineffective. By the instructions of Sukracarya the demons could understand that they has committed a great offense. Then, by Uparicara Vasu's mercy, they all became great devotees of the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

19 In the Vishnu-dharma Purana it is said:

"After many birth in the material world they could not destroy the great multitude of their sins. However, the moment they attained love for Lord Govinda, their sins at once ceased to exist."

20 In Shrimad Bhagavatam (7.9.44), Shri Prahlada tells Lord Nrsimhadeva:

"I do not wish to be liberated alone, leaving aside all these poor fools and rascals. I know that without Krishna consciousness, without taking shelter of Your lotus feet, one cannot be happy. There I wish to bring them back to shelter at Your lotus feet."*

In this way it is seen that Shri Prahlada has given his mercy to every single conditioned soul. How is it, then, that they have not all attained liberation?

21 To this question I reply: Because the individual spirit souls are unlimited in number, they cannot all be understood by the mind and heart. As many as were seen or heard by Prahlada, or as many as could be understood within his mind, all attained liberation by his mercy. That is the meaning of this verse. Other persons may hear and remember the glories of Shri Prahlada. In this way Lord Nrsimhadeva Himself will be merciful to them.

22 Lord Nrsimhadeva Himself affirms this in these words spoken to Prahlada (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.10.14):

"One who always remembers your activities and My activities also, and who chants the prayers you have offered, becomes free, in due course of time, from the reactions of material activities."*

23 Here Lord Nrsimhadeva means "They who chant your glories will become liberated. Certainly, then, will they whom you remember and feel compassion for, will also become liberated." This is the sentiment of the devotees, a sentiment described in Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.51.53 (quoted in text 2 of this anuccheda).

Anuccheda 180

1 In this way it is proved that association with devotees is the cause of liberation. The living entities' aversion to the Lord is based on beginningless ignorance of Him. Otherwise their aversion is not possible.

2 The importance of association with great devotees is explained in the following words (Shri Mahabharata, Vana Parva, 313.117):

"Dry arguments are inconclusive. A great personality whose opinion does not differ from others is not considered a great sage. Simply by studying the Vedas, which are variegated, one cannot come to the right path, by which religious principles are understood. The solid truth of religious principles is hidden in the heart of an unadulterated self-realised person. Consequently, as the sastras confirm, one should accept whatever progressive path the mahajanas advocate."*

3 This is also confirmed by Prahlada Maharaja in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.5.30-32):

"Because of their uncontrolled senses, persons too addicted to materialistic life make progress toward hellish conditions and repeatedly chew that which has already been chewed. Their inclinations toward Krishna are never aroused, either by the instructions of others, by their own efforts, or by a combination of both.*

"Persons who are strongly entrapped by the consciousness of enjoying material life, and who have therefore accepted as their leader or guru a similar blind man attached to external sense objects, cannot understand that the goal of life is to return home, back to Godhead, and engage in the service of Lord Vishnu. As blind men guided by another blind man miss the right path and fall into a ditch, materially attached men led by another materially attached man are bound by the ropes of fruitive labour, which are made of very strong cords, and they continue again and again in materialistic life, suffering the threefold miseries.*

4 "Unless they smear upon their bodies the dust of the lotus feet of a Vaishnava completely freed from material contamination, persons very much inclined toward materialistic life cannot be attached to the lotus feet of the Lord, who is glorified for His uncommon activities. Only by becoming Krishna conscious and taking shelter at the lotus feet of the Lord in this way can one be freed from material contamination."*

5 It is not possible to attain love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead by engaging in material activities that turn one away from Him. This is described in the Katha Upanisad (1.2.14):

"The Supreme is beyond piety and impiety, beyond cause and effect, beyond what was and what will be."

6 In the Brhad-aranyaka Upanisad (4.4.22) it is said:

"The brahmanas try to understand the Supreme Personality of Godhead by studying the Vedas, performing yajnas, giving charity, fasting and performing austerities."

In this way some of the activities pleasing to the Supreme Lord are described.

7 How does one attain love and devotion for the Supreme Lord? The primary cause of that devotion is the Lord's mercy. That mercy is the secondary cause as well.

8 The Lord gives His mercy to whomever He wishes. He does not give His mercy to they who are averse to Him and are therefore suffering the unbearable and endless torments of life in the material world. That He does not do. The touch of His mercy changes the heart of the suffering soul. His mercy brings eternal transcendental bliss and destroys sins. The Sruti-sastra declares that the Supreme Personality of Godhead and individual spirit soul are different. The Lord cannot be touched by the darkness of material illusion. Therefore the recipient of His mercy cannot be touched by material darkness. Such a person does not take birth again. The Lord has all powers. He can do what is impossible. He change anything into anything else. However, He does not give to they who are averse to Him freedom from the sufferings of material life. For such persons the mercy of the Lord's devotees is the only recourse.

9 The devotees of the Lord are not touched by the many sufferings of material life. They remain awake during the nightmare that is the material world. In this condition they feel compassion for the souls suffering in the material world. An example of this is Narada Muni's compassion on Nalakuvara and Manigriva. In this way the conditioned souls suffering in the material world attain the mercy of the Supreme Lord, then the conditioned souls become humble devotees of the Lord and in their hearts they think, "The Supreme Lord is my only shelter". An example of such a humble devotee is the elephant Gajendra. Examples of conditioned souls who have not become devotees can be found in the hellish worlds of Narakaloka.

10 Devotional service empowers millions of devotees with the Lord's mercy. In that way the Lord will manifest His mercy. This mercy is either the devotees' mercy or the mercy of association with the devotees. This mercy is not independent. It is actually the Lord's mercy. This is explained in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.2.31):

11 "O Lord, who resemble the shining sun, You are always ready to fulfil the desire of Your devotee, and therefore You are known as a desire tree (vanchar-kalpataru). When acaryas completely take shelter under Your lotus feet in order to cross the fierce ocean of nescience, they leave behind on earth the method by which they cross, and because You are very merciful to Your other devotees, You accept this method to help them."*

12 This verse means, "O self-manifested Lord (dyuman), the boat (nauh) that is Your lotus feet (bhavat-padambhuruha), and which is the way to cross the ocean of nescience, is placed (nidhaya) on the shore of the ocean of nescience for the sake of the people."

Here the Lord may ask, "Why do I not personally arrange for this boat? Why is the arrangement made by My devotees instead of by Me?"

Here the demigods reply, "You are merciful to Your devotees (sad-anugraha bhavan) and that is why You arrange that Your devotees distribute Your mercy to the others." Or, these words may also be interpreted to mean, "Your devotees are themselves Your mercy. They are the way You manifest Your mercy in the material world. They are the personifications of Your mercy. It is not otherwise."

This is also described in the following words of the song sung by Lord Siva (Shrimad Bhagavatam

13 "My dear Lord, Your lotus feet are the cause of all auspicious things and the destroyer of all the contamination of sin. I therefore beg Your Lordship to bless me by the association of Your devotees, who are completely purified by worshipping Your lotus feet and who are so merciful upon the conditioned souls. I think that Your real benediction will be to allow me to associate with such devotees."*

14 This verse means, "O Lord, Your mercy is manifested through Your devotees. You do not directly give Your mercy to the impious conditioned souls who are averse to You. You arrange that Your devotees give Your mercy to them."

15 This is described in the following words of the Moksa-dharma:

"When Lord Krishna glances at someone at the moment of his birth, that person should be understood to be very exalted. That person is meant for liberation."

16 This verse means that by associating with the Lord's devotees one becomes free from taking another birth in this material world. The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by the demigods to the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Anuccheda 181

1 Now will be discussed the cause of attaining association with devotees. The great devotees are independent and act as they like. It is not otherwise. In Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.2.24) it is said:

"Once in Ajanabha (the former name of the earth), they came upon the sacrificial performance of the great soul Maharaja Nimi, which was being carried out under the direction of elevated sages."*

2 In this verse "te" means "the Nava-yogendras", and "yadrcchaya" means "independently". "Independently" means "for no reason other than one's own wish". This is confirmed by the Amara-kosa Dictionary, which explains, "The word yadrccha means independence." The Supreme Lord acts to fulfil His devotees' desires. This is confirmed by the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.2):

"My dear Lord, neither I nor anyone else can estimate the potency of this transcendental body of Yours, which has shown such mercy to me and which appears just to fulfil the desires of Your pure devotees. Although my mind is completely withdrawn from material affairs, I cannot understand Your personal form. How, then, could I possibly understand the happiness You experience within Yourself?"*

The Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself declares (Shrimad Bhagavatam 9.4.63):

"I am completely under the control of My devotees. Indeed, I am not at all independent. Because My devotees are completely devoid of material desires, I sit only within the cores of their hearts. What to speak of My devotee, even those who are devotees of My devotee are very dear to Me."*

The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Shri Narada.

Anuccheda 182

1 The independence of the great devotees is also seen in the following verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.14.14):

"Once upon a time, when the powerful sage named Angira was travelling all over the universe without engagement, by his sweet will he came to the palace of King Citraketu."*

2 Here the word "tasya" (of him) refers to King Citraketu. In this way he developed devotional sentiments toward the Lord. At a later time the Lord directly appeared before him. When Citraketu was lamenting Angira Muni told him (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.15.19):

"My dear king, you are an advanced devotee of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. To be absorbed in lamentation for the loss of something material is unsuitable for a person like you. Therefore we have both come to relieve you from this false lamentation."*

The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami.

1 The devotees become compassionate when they see the unfortunate situation of the conditioned souls. This compassion has nothing to-do with whether the conditioned souls honour that devotee or not. An example of this is Narada Muni's compassion to Nalakuvara and Manigriva. The mercy of the devotees is also described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.6):

2 "Those who worship the demigods receive reciprocation from the demigods in a way just corresponding to the offering. The demigods are attendants of karma, like a person's shadow, but sadhus are actually merciful to the fallen."*

3 The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by Shrimad Vasudeva Maharaja.

Anuccheda 184

1 Association with a great devotee is the best method of purification. Other methods of purification do not compare with it. This is explained in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.84.11):

2 "Mere bodies of water are not real sacred places of pilgrimage, nor are mere images of earth and stone the true worshipable Deities. These purify one only after a long time, but saintly sages purify one immediately upon being seen."

3 Why are the holy places and the Deities not honoured here? Because they are secondary sources of purification. Therefore the Lord says, "They purify only after a long time." This verse is spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead to the assembled sages.

1 Association with the devotees is the cause of attaining devotion for the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is described indirectly (vyatireka) in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 5.12.11-12):

2 "What, then, is the ultimate truth? The answer is that non dual knowledge is the ultimate truth. It is devoid of the contamination of material qualities. It gives us liberation. It is the one without a second, all-pervading and beyond imagination. The first realisation of that knowledge is Brahman. Then Paramatma, the Supersoul is realised by the yogis who try to see Him without grievance. This is the second stage of realisation. Finally, full realisation of the same supreme knowledge in the Supreme Person. All learned scholars describe the Supreme Person as Vasudeva, the cause of Brahman, Paramatma and others.*

3 "My dear King Rahugana, unless one has the opportunity to smear his entire body with the dust of the lotus feet of great devotees, one cannot realise the Absolute Truth. One cannot realise the Absolute Truth simply by observing celibacy (brahmacarya), strictly following the rules and regulations of householder life, leaving home as a vanaprastha, accepting sannyasa, or undergoing severe penances in winter by keeping oneself submerged in water or surrounding oneself in summer by fire and the scorching heat of the sun. There are many other processes to understand the Absolute Truth, but the Absolute Truth is only revealed to one who has attained the mercy of a great devotee."*

4 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"What is the truth? The answer is that non dual knowledge (jnanam) is the ultimate truth (satyam). Here ordinary material activities are rejected and the ultimate goal of life (paramartham) is described. Here six words are used to describe the Supreme Truth. He is: 1. devoid of the contamination of material qualities (visuddham), 2. one without a second (ekam), 3. all-pervading, or He who has neither inside nor outside (anantaram abahih), 4. the perfect and complete Supreme Brahman (brahma), 5. within everything, or the form of what is perceived (pratyak), and 6. peaceful because He is free from material transformation (prasantam). In these words the ultimate truth (jnanam satyam) is described.

"What is the nature of the ultimate truth? Because He has six opulences, beginning with all wealth, He is called Bhagavan (Bhagavan-chabdah samjna). All learned sages describe (vadanti) the (yac ca) ultimate truth as Vasudeva (vasudevam).

"It is not possible to attain this ultimate truth without first serving the great devotees. This is described in the next verse, which begins with the words, "My dear King Rahugana". One cannot attain (na yati) this ultimate truth (jnanam) by austerities (tapasa), by Vedic karmas (ijyaya), by becoming a sannyasi who begs for food (nirvapanat), by studying the Vedic literature (chandasa), by becoming a householder who helps others (grhad va), or by performing austerities in the water or the fire (jalagni)."

5 In these words the idea that the individual spirit soul is identical with the Supreme is clearly refuted. These verses were spoken by a brahmana to King Rahugana.

1 By honouring the Lord one is able to associate with His devotees. The devotees are interested in serving the Supreme Lord. They are not interested in performing Vedic rituals and duties. That would not be appropriate for them. By associating with devotees who are like this one attains devotion to the Supreme Lord. The transcendentalists may be divided into two groups, as described in the following one and a half verses (Shrimad Bhagavatam 5.5.2-3):

2 "One can attain the path of liberation from material bondage only by rendering service to highly advanced spiritual personalities. These personalities are impersonalists and devotees. Whether one wants to merge into the Lord's existence or wants to associate with the Personality of Godhead, one should render service to the mahatmas. For those who are not interested in such activities, who associate with people fond of women and sex, the path to hell is wide open. The mahatmas are equipoised. They do not see any difference between one living entity and another. They are very peaceful and are fully engaged in devotional service. They are devoid of anger, and they work for the benefit of everyone. They do not behave in any abominable way. Such people are known as mahatmas."*

3 "Those who are interested in reviving Krishna consciousness and increasing their love of Godhead do not like to do anything that is not related to Krishna. They are not interested in mingling with people who are busy maintaining their bodies, eating, sleeping, mating and defending. They are not attached to their homes, although they may be householders. Nor are they attached to wives, children, friends or wealth. At the same time, they are not indifferent to the execution of their duties. Such people are interested in collecting only enough money to keep the body and soul together."*

4 Here the phrase "mahantas te sama-cittah" refers to the impersonalists, who have faith in the qualityless Brahman. Their various qualities are described in the passage beginning with the word "prasanta". A different group of transcendentalists is described in the passage beginning with the words "ye va". The word "va" (or) introduces the second group. This second group to the first group, the Lord says the transcendentalists in this second group, "have love (krtam sauhrdam) for Me (mayi). That love is the great goal (artha) of their lives. Therefore they are great souls (mahantah). Because they have made love for Me the great goal of their lives (mayi sauhrdarthah) they are not (na) interested (priti-yuktah) in mingling with people (janesu) who are busy maintaining their bodies (deha-bhara-vartikesu). They are not attached (na priti-yuktah) to their homes (gehesu), although they may be householders. Nor are they attached to wives and children, (jayatmaja). They are interested in these only so far (yavad-arthah) and they are necessary or favourable for devotional service to the Supreme Lord. In the same way they collect money only as much as is useful for the Lord's service. In this way there are two kinds of transcendentalists: the impersonalists and the devotees. They are not at all the same. The devotees are described in the following words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (6.14.5):

"O great sage, among many millions who are liberated and perfect in knowledge of liberation, one may be a devotee of Lord Narayana, or Krishna. Such devotees, who are fully peaceful are extremely rare."*

By following the path of impersonalism one realises the impersonal Brahman, and by following the path of devotional service one attains love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead. However, because the impersonalists and devotees do share some qualities, they are both referred to by the word "mahatma" in this verse. These verses were spoken by Shri Rsabhadeva to His sons.

1 Now we will consider the natures of the two classes of transcendentalists described before. The impersonalists are described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.13.36):

"Just as a drunken man does not notice if he is wearing his coat or shirt, similarly, one who is perfect in self-realisation and who has thus achieved his eternal identity does not notice whether the temporary body is sitting or standing. Indeed, if by God's will the body is finished or if by God's will he obtains a new body, the self-realised souls does not take notice, just as a drunken man does not notice the situation of his outward dress."

2 The devotees of the Lord are of three kinds: 1. They who have attained the forms of eternal associates of the Lord, 2. they who have shaken away all material attachments, and 3. they who are still bewildered by material attachments. Shri Narada and others are examples of the first kind of devotee, Shri Sukadeva and others are examples of the second kind of devotees, and Shri Narada in his previous birth, as well as other devotees are examples of third kind of devotee.

3 The first kind of devotee is described in Shrimad-Bhagavatam (1.6.28) where Shri Narada explains:

"Having been awarded a transcendental body befitting an associate of the Personality of Godhead, I quit the body made of five material elements, and thus all acquired fruitive results of work (karma) stopped."*

4 The second kind of devotee is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.12.68):

"I offer my respectful obeisances unto Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami, the son of Vyasadeva. He is the destroyer of all sinful reactions and is full in self realisation and bliss. Because of this, he has no other desire. Still, he was attracted by the transcendental pastimes of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and out of compassion for the people he described the transcendental historical literature called Shrimad Bhagavatam. This is compared to the light of the Absolute Truth."*

5 The third kind of devotee is described in these words of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (1.6.21), where the Supreme Personality of Godhead tells Shri Narada in his previous birth:

"O Narada, I regret that during this lifetime you will not be able to see Me anymore. Those who are incomplete in service and who are not completely free from all material taints can hardly see Me."*

6 Even in his previous birth when he was still bewildered by material attachments, Shri Narada still felt love for the Lord. Narada personally described this in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.6.17):

7 "O Vyasadeva, at that time being exceedingly overpowered by feelings of happiness, every part of my body became separately enlivened. Being absorbed in an ocean of ecstasy, I could not see both myself and the Lord."*

8 King Bharata may also be mentioned as an example here. Although he wished to renounce the world, because of his past karmic reactions material desires remained concealed in his heart.

Now love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead will be described. Love for the Lord is divided into three kinds, according to the three kinds of devotees already described, each kind of love more intense than the previous kind. The Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is the object of worship and the master of His parts and parcels, is different from the individual spirit soul, who is the worshipper and who is part and parcel of the Lord. The budding sprout of love the individual souls feel for the Supreme Lord may also be considered according to the different rasa, beginning with servitorship and friendship. We will describe this in the Priti-sandarbha.

To directly see the Lord is the great goal of life. However, if it is not possible to see the Lord unless one attains love for Him. The more one loves the Lord the more one became advanced in spiritual life. Without pure love for the Lord, one will not directly see Him. Without love for the Lord, one becomes like a person stricken with jaundice, a person whose tongue cannot taste the sweetness of sugar-candy.

9 This is described by Shri Rsabhadeva in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 5.5.6):

"When the living entity is covered by the mode of ignorance, he does not understand the individual living being and the supreme living being, and his mind is subjugated to fruitive activity. Therefore, until one has love for Lord Vasudeva, who is none other than Myself, he is certainly not delivered from having to accept a material body again and again."*

10 From this it is seen that the different grades of devotees are determined by the different levels of love they feel for the Supreme Lord. This is described in Shrimad Bhagavatam 5.5.3.. When one has great love for the Lord, one becomes free from material desires and the Lord directly appears before him. When one has only a small amount of love for the Lord, these benefits are obtained in a lesser degree. This is also described in Shrimad Bhagavatam 5.5.3. In the condition of lesser love one does not attain the body of a personal associate of the Lord. In the same way also one does not attain renunciation or become pure at heart. This will be further discussed in another passage.

11 King Nimi asked the following question (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.44):

"Now please tell me in greater detail about the devotees of the Supreme Lord. What are the natural symptoms by which I can distinguish between the most advanced devotees, those on the middle level and those who are neophytes? What are the typical religious activities of a Vaishnava, and how does he speak? Specifically, please describe those symptoms and characteristics by which Vaishnavas become dear to the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

12 This verse begins, "Now (atha) please tell (bruta) about the devotees of the Lord (bhagavatam)." This question is asked in order to attain knowledge of the devotees of the Lord. He says, "Please tell about the nature (yad-dharmah) of the devotees among human beings (nrnam). Please tell (bruta) how (yatha) a devotee behaves (acarati). Please tell (bruta) how a devotee speaks (yad brute). In this way he asks questions about the signs manifested from a devotee's body, mind and words.

Here someone may ask: Were not these symptoms already described by Shri Kavi in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.39)?:

"An intelligent person who has controlled his mind and conquered fear should give up all attachment to material objects such as wife, family and nation and should wander freely without embarrassment, hearing and chanting the holy names of the Lord, the bearer of the chariot wheel. The holy names of Krishna are all-auspicious because they describe His transcendental birth and activities, which He performs within this world for the salvation of the conditioned souls. Thus the holy names of the Lord are sung throughout the world."

To this question the following reply is given: That is true. Still, those symptoms of the devotees who are dear to the Lord are described again in this verse also (yair lingair bhagavat-priyah). In this verse the actual question asked is: "Please tell (bruta) the symptoms of the devotees according to their levels of advancement, that is according to the devotees' status as uttama (advanced), madhyama (intermediate) or kanistha (neophyte) devotees." That is the meaning here.

1 Shri Havi gave the following reply to that question (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.45):

"A person advanced in devotional service sees within everything the soul of all souls, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Shri Krishna. Consequently he always sees the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead as the causes of all causes and understands that all things are situated in Him."*

2 By describing the symptoms of the devotees' heart and mind, how the devotees sees others, this verse describes the nature of a great devotee of the Lord.

3 The symptoms of a great devotee of the Lord are also described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.40):

"When a person is actually advanced and takes pleasure in chanting the holy name of the Lord, who is very dear to him, he is agitated and loudly chants the holy name. He also laughs, cries, becomes agitated, and chants just like a madman, not caring for outsiders."*

In these words of Shri Kavi Muni explains that an advanced devotee becomes overwhelmed with love for the Lord. In that condition the devotee's heart melts with love and he manifests various ecstatic symptoms such as laughing and crying.

4 The nature of an advanced devotee is also described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.41):

"A devotee should not see anything as being separate from the Supreme Lord, Krishna. Ether, fire, air, water, earth, the sun and other luminaries, all living beings, the directions, trees and other plants, the rivers and oceans, whatever a devotee experiences he should consider to be an expansion of Krishna. Thus seeing everything that exists within creation as the body of the Supreme Lord, Hari, the devotee should offer his sincere respects to the entire expansion of the Lord's body."*

5 This kind of devotee sees that all conscious and unconscious living entities (sarva-bhutesu) are expansions of the Supreme Personality of Godhead (atmano bhagavad-bhavam). This devotee sees (pasyati) all living entities (bhutani) as present in the Supreme Lord's heart (atmani). In the sameway the Lord is also present in the living entities. A person who sees in this way is the best of devotees (bhagavatottamah).

6 The nature of the advanced devotees of the Lord is also described by the goddess of Vraja in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.35.9):

"Krishna moves about the forest in the company of His friends, who vividly chant the glories of His magnificent deeds. He thus appears just like the Supreme Personality of Godhead exhibiting His inexhaustible opulences. When the cows wander onto the mountains sides and Krishna calls out to them with the sound of His flute, the trees and creepers in the forest respond by becoming so luxuriant with fruits and flowers that they seem to be manifesting Lord Vishnu within their hearts. As their branches bend low with the weight, the filaments on their trunks and vines stand erect out of the ecstasy of love of God, and both the trees and the creepers pour down a rain of sweet sap. Maddened by the divine, honeylike aroma of the tulasi flowers on the garland Krishna wears, swarms of bees sing loudly for Him and the most beautiful of all persons thankfully acknowledges and acclaims their song by taking His flute to His lips and playing it. The charming flute soon then steals away the minds of the cranes, swans and other lake-dwelling birds. Indeed, they approach Krishna, close their eyes and, maintaining strict silence, worship Him by fixing their consciousness upon Him in deep meditation."

7 This verse means that this kind of devotees sees love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead (bhagavati) as being present in the hearts of all conscious and unconscious living entities. The remainder of this verse is like the previous quote. Thus aware that all living entities are devotees of the Lord, such an advanced devotee bows down to offer respect to them all. This was also described Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.41. That is the meaning here.

8 The goddess of Vraja also say (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.21.15):

"When the rivers hear the flute-song of Krishna, their minds begin to desire Him and thus the flow of their currents is broken and their waters are agitated, moving around in whirlpools. Then with the arms of their waves the rivers embrace Murari's lotus feet and, holding on to them, present offerings of lotus flowers."

9 The Lord's queens speak the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.90.15):

"Kurari, you are lamenting. The inscrutable Supreme Lord is now asleep in the world's night but you are wide awake, finding it impossible to fall asleep. Is it that, like us, you have had your heart pierced to the core by the lotus eye lord's munificent, smiling pastime glances?"

10 What is described here is not the world-view of the impersonalist. Because it ultimately denies the existence of both the Lord and the devotees, the devotees of the Lord consider the impersonalists; idea that the individual spirit souls are identical with the Supreme Personality of Godhead a grave error and a great offense.

11 In Shrimad Bhagavatam (3.29.12) it is said:

"The manifestation of unadulterated devotional service is exhibited when one's mind is at once attracted to hearing the transcendental name and qualities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is residing in everyone's heart. Just as the water of the Ganges flows naturally down towards the ocean, such devotional ecstasy, uninterrupted by any material condition, flows toward the Supreme Lord."*

These words describe the advanced devotees of the Lord. They do not describe the impersonalists, who think the Supreme has no form.

12 In Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.2.55) it is said:

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is so kind to the conditioned souls that if they call upon Him by speaking His holy name, even unintentionally or unwillingly, the Lord is inclined to destroy innumerable sinful reactions in their hearts. Therefore, when a devotee who has taken shelter of the Lord's lotus feet chants the holy name of Krishna with genuine love, the Supreme Personality of Godhead can never give up the heart of such a devotee. One who has thus captured the Supreme Lord within his heart is to be known as bhagavata-pradhana, the most exalted devotee of the Lord."

This verse must describe the advanced devotees of the Lord for any other interpretation would contradict the description here of their most exalted qualities.

1 The intermediate devotee is described by the symptoms of his mind and heart. He is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.46):

"An intermediate, second class devotee shows love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, is friendly to all devotees, and is very merciful to neophytes and ignorant people. The intermediate devotee neglects those who are envious of devotional service."*

2 This verse means that the intermediate devotee gives his love (prema) to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, makes friendship (maitrim) with the other devotees (tad-adhinesu), and shows mercy (krpam) to the people who are innocent and ignorant (balisesu) of devotional service.

3 The intermediate stage of devotional service is shown in the following statement of Shri Prahlada (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.9.43):

"O best of the great personalities, I am not at all afraid of material existence, for wherever I stay I am fully absorbed in thoughts of Your glories and activities. My concern is only for the fools and rascals who are making elaborate plans for material happiness and maintaining their families, societies and countries. I am simply concerned with love for them."*

4 The meaning here is that the intermediate devotee is not agitated at heart for the condition of they who hate the Lord and His devotees. This means that the devotee is neutral and aloof from such persons.

However, the devotee does feel compassion for the people in general, who are childlike and foolish.

However, Prahlada did feel compassion for Hiranyakasipu. This means that the devotee may feel compassion in his heart even for they who hate the Lord and His devotees. Therefore of course he also feels compassion for the innocent and childish people in general. Because he feels pure love for the Lord, the devotee also loves every other being. This is not like the intermediate devotee described in the previous quote (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.46):

5 By seeing a great devotee of the Lord one attains the same bliss as if he had seen the Lord Himself. Therefore, making friendship with the Lord's devotees is very important. It is not to be abandoned, even for the most advanced devotee. However, it is inevitable that the most advanced devotee does feel love for every living being.

6 The most advanced devotees are described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.24.57):

"If one by chance associates with a devotee, even for a fraction of a moment, he no longer is subject to attraction by the results of karma or jnana. What interest then can he have in the benedictions of the demigods, who are subject to the laws of birth and death?"*

7 The most advanced devotees are also described in the song sung by Lord Siva (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.24.30) where Lord Siva tells the Pracetas:

"You are all devotees of the Lord, and as such I appreciate that you are as respectable as the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself. I know in this way that the devotees also respect me and that I am dear to them. Thus no one can be as dear to the devotees as I am."*

8 Shrila Suta Gosvami also describes the most advanced devotees in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.7.11):

"Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami, son of Shrila Vyasadeva, was not only transcendently powerful. He was also very dear to the devotees of the Lord. Thus he underwent the study of this great narration (Shrimad Bhagavatam)."

9 An example of the demons, who hate Vyasadeva and the other devotees is seen in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.1.35):

"Kamsa was a condemned personality in the Bhoja dynasty because he is envious and sinful. Therefore, upon hearing this omen from the sky, he caught hold of his sister's hair with his left hand and took up his sword with his right hand to sever her head from her body."*

10 Even the intermediate devotees love the demons. However the advanced devotees do not decline to preach to the demons the glories of the Supreme Lord. That is the specific quality of the advanced devotees. It is with this aim in view that Uddhava and other devotees offered obeisances to Duryodhana and other demons.

11 Lord Siva further describes the advanced devotees in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.3.23):

"I am always engaged in offering obeisances to Lord Vasudeva in pure Krishna consciousness. Krishna consciousness is always pure consciousness, in which the Supreme Personality of Godhead, known as Vasudeva is revealed without any covering."*

12 Another example of this is found in the description of Laksmana's kidnapping (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.68.17) where Uddhava's showing respect to Duryodhana is mentioned in these words:

"After he had offered proper respects to the son of Ambika (Dhrtarastra) and to Bhisma, Drona, Bahlika, and Duryodhana, Uddhava informed them that Lord Balarama had arrived."

13 This may be also considered in a different way. An advanced devotee considers all living entities to be pure devotees. He even considers pure devotees the demons who hate the Lord and His devotees. There is nothing improper in this. The great devotees who with millions of their life-breaths worship even a single particle of dust from the Lord's lotus feet become very unhappy with the idea that anyone could act badly. They consider that the demons are devotees, just as they are devotees. They think: "Ah! How is it possible to have a heart that does not love the Lord and His devotees? How it is possible that someone could not love the Supreme Lord and His devotees, who are the causes of all bliss, the abodes of limitless love, the purifiers of all the worlds, decorated with the jewels of the six great virtues, and always working for the welfare of all living beings?" How one could hate the Lord and His devotees is beyond the power of their intelligence to understand. Therefore they see all living beings from Brahma down to the unmoving plants, as pure devotees, filled with love for the Lord.

14 That the advanced devotees cannot imagine any living beings not being a pure devotee of the Lord is seen in the following words of Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.1-2):

"Eager to engage in the worship of Lord Krishna, O best of the Kurus, Narada Muni stayed for some time in Dvaraka, which was always protected by the arms of Govinda."

15 "My dear King, in the material world the conditioned souls are confronted by death at every step of life. Therefore, who among the conditioned souls would not render service to the lotus feet of Lord Mukunda, who is worshipable even for the greatest of liberated souls?"

1 The physical and mental symptoms of the neophyte devotee are described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.41):

2 "A prakṛta, or materialistic devotee does not purposefully study the saṣtra and try to understand the actual standard of pure devotional service. Consequently he does not show proper respect to advanced devotees. He may, however, follow the regulative principles learned from his spiritual master or from his family who worships the Deity. He is to be considered on the material platform, although he is trying to advance in devotional service. Such a person is a bhakṛta-praya (neophyte devotee), or bhakṛtabhasa, for he is a little enlightened by Vaiṣṇava philosophy."*

3 Here the word "arcayam" means :in relation to the Deity of the Lord." Here it is not in relation to the other devotees (na bhaktesu anyesu). This is so because of the absence of pure love for the Lord, ignorance of the glories of the Lord's devotees, and ignorance of the glories of the Lord's devotees, and a lack of respect for the virtues of the sincere devotees. Such a devotee is called materialistic (prakṛta). He is in the beginning stage of devotional service. That is the meaning. Such a devotee has neither strong faith nor great learning in the teachings of the scriptures.

4 That the neophyte devotee is not learned in the teachings of the scriptures is seen in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.84.13):

"A human being who identifies this body made of three elements with his self, who considers the by-products of the body his kinsmen, who considers the land of birth as worshipable, and who goes to the place of pilgrimage simply to take a bath rather than meet men of transcendental knowledge there, is to be considered as an ass or a cow."*

5 This is the way of ordinary people think. Thus a devotee who has not yet attained strong faith, knowledge of scripture, or love for the Lord, is known as a neophyte (kanistha) devotee.

Anuccheda 191

1 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"The most exalted devotee is described in the following eight verses (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.48-55):

2 The first of these verses (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.48) states:

"Even while engaging his senses in contact with their objects, one who sees this whole world as the energy of Lord Vishnu is neither repelled nor elated. He is indeed the greatest among devotees."

3 The word "api" (even though) here means "even though his senses are engaged with the sense objects, his thoughts are fixed on the Supreme Lord." Such a devotee sees the material world as the external potency (maya) of the Supreme Lord. In this verse the body and mind are described together.

1 In the next verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.49) it is said:

"Within the material world, one's material body is always subject to birth and decay. Similarly the life air (prana) is harassed by hunger and thirst, the mind is always anxious, the intelligence hankers for that which cannot be obtained, and all of the senses are ultimately exhausted by constant struggle in the material nature. A person who is not bewildered by the inevitable miseries of material existence and who remains aloof from them simply by remembering the lotus feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, is to be considered bhagavata-pradhana, the foremost devotee of the Lord."

2 This verse states that a person who is not bewildered by the miseries of the material body and other material things, miseries that begin with birth and death, and who always remembers Lord Hari, is the best of devotees (sa bhagavata-pradhanah).

3 Lord Krishna Himself describes the great devotees in these words of Shri Bhagavad-gita (7.28):

"Persons who have acted piously in previous lives and in this life and whose sinful actions are completely eradicated are freed from the dualities of delusion, and they engage themselves in My service with determination."*

Anuccheda 193

1 In the next verse of this sequence (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.50) it is said:

"One who has taken exclusive shelter of the Supreme Lord, Vasudeva, becomes free from fruitive activities, which are based on material lust. In fact, one who has taken shelter of the lotus feet of the Lord is freed from even the desire to enjoy material sense gratification. Plans for enjoying sex life, social prestige, and money cannot develop within his mind. Thus he is considered bhagavatottama, a pure devotee of the Lord on the highest platform."

2 Here "bija" means "material desires", and "vasudevaika-nilayah" means "taking shelter of Lord Vasudeva alone".

1 In the next verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.51) it is said:

"Birth in an aristocratic family and the execution of austere and pious activities certainly cause one to take pride in himself. Similarly, if one enjoys a prestigious position within society because his parents are highly respected member of the varnasrama social system, one becomes even more infatuated with himself. But if despite these excellent material qualifications one does not feel even a tinge of pride within himself, he is to be considered the dearest servitor of the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

2 Here "janma" means "his family", "karma" means "austerities and other auspicious deeds", and "jatayah" means "noble birth where one is a leader of society". Even when these are present, pride (aham-bhava) is not manifested (na sajjate) in his body (asmin dehe). Instead the activities of devotional service to the Lord are manifested. That is the meaning. Such a person is very dear to Lord Hari (sa hareh priyah). This means that he is a great devotee of the Lord.

1 The next verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.52) explains:

"When a devotee gives up the selfish conception by which one thinks 'This is my property and that is his', and when he is no longer concerned with the pleasures of his own material body or indifferent to the discomforts of others, he becomes fully peaceful and satisfied. He considers himself simply one among all the living beings who are equally part and parcel of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Such a satisfied Vaishnava is considered to be at the highest standard of devotional service."

2 In this verse is discussed whether material wealth (vittesu) is owned by oneself (atmani svah) or by others (parah). Here it is refuted the idea that one personally owns material wealth. One should not think oneself different from others.

1 "The lotus feet of the Lord are sought by the demigods and other great souls who have given their hearts to the invincible Lord. A person who does not move from the lotus feet of the Lord, even to attain the opulences of the three worlds, even for a moment or a second, is to be considered the greatest of all Vaishnavas."

2 The reason such a devotee does not move from the lotus feet of the Lord is given in this verse. The reason is that such a devotee has given his heart (atma) to Lord Hari (ajita). Another reason is that even the demigods headed by Brahma (suradibhih) find it difficult to attain the Lord's feet.

1 In material sense-gratification one finds only suffering, and in the service of the Lord one finds great happiness. This is another reason the devotee never abandons the lotus feet of the Lord. This is explained in the next verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.54):

2 "How can the fire of material suffering continue to burn the hearts of those who worship the Supreme Lord? The Lord's lotus feet have performed innumerable heroic deeds, and the beautiful nails on His toes resemble valuable jewels. The effulgence emanating from those nails resembles cooling moonshine, for it instantly relieves the suffering within the heart of the pure devotee, just as the appearance of the moon's cooling light relieves the burning heat of the sun."

3 Here it is said the Lord's feet (anghri) have performed heroic deeds (uru-vikramau). The word "sakha" (branches) here refers to the Lord's toes. The Lord's feet are here compared to splendid moonlight that cools the burning sufferings that begin when one has material desires.

1 The next verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.55) explains:

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is so kind to the conditioned souls that if they call upon Him by speaking His holy name, even unintentionally or unwillingly, the Lord is inclined to destroy innumerable sinful reaction in their hearts. Therefore, when a devotee who has taken shelter of the Lord's lotus feet chants the holy name of Krishna with genuine love, the Supreme Personality of Godhead can never give up the heart of such a devotee. One who has thus captured the Supreme Lord within his heart is to be known as bhagavata-pradhana, the most exalted devotee of the Lord."

2 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"In this verse, which begins with the word 'visrjati', the speaker describes what is the best of all the devotee's virtues. That virtue is the fact that Lord Hari (harih) personally (saksat) stays in the devotee's (yasya) heart (hrdayam) and never (na) leaves (visrjati). Staying thus in the devotee's heart, the Lord destroys (nasah) a great flood (ogha) of sins (agha) there. Why does the Lord not leave? He does not leave because His lotus feet are tied up by the ropes of love (pranaya-rasanaya). Such a devotee is said to be the best of all devotees."

3 Lord Hari personally (svayam) stays in the devotee's heart. That is why lust and other vices cannot enter there. This happens from the moment the Lord personally enters the heart. The words "harir avasabhihito 'pi'" describe the devotee who loves the Lord in this pure way. When such a devotee calls Him, even accidentally, the Lord at once comes. Thus it is said that the Lord destroys (nasah) a flood (ogha) of sins (agha) for such a devotee.

4 This is also described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.1.11):

"O King, constant chanting of the holy name of the Lord after the ways of the great authorities is the doubtless and fearless way of success for all, including those who are free from all material desires, those who are desirous of all material enjoyment, and also those who are self-satisfied by dint of transcendental knowledge."*

5 In these two ways (by saying the Lord's holy name and by the entrance of the Lord in the devotee's heart), it is not possible for sins to remain (in the devotee's heart). This is described in the answer to the question posed in Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.44. In the midst of this answer, in the passage beginning with Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.48, many verses describe the symptoms, both in general and in detail, of an advanced devotee.

6 In this way an advanced devotee conquers the Lord and brings the Lord under his control. Sometimes only two or three of these qualities of an advanced devotee are manifested. In due course of time, one by one, all these qualities, which are described in the passage beginning with Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.45 will be manifested in the devotee.

7 The best of all the virtues of the advanced devotee is described in Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.55. The virtue of remembering the Lord is described in Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.49. Remembering the Lord is also described in the Last verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.55) of this passage.

8 Other passages may also be quoted to describe the qualities of an advanced devotee. Many different descriptions of the advanced devotee may be brought together. In some descriptions the direct manifestation of the Lord is not mentioned. The Lord's feet may be mentioned or the description of the Lord's glories may also be mentioned.

9 Here many verses, such as Shrimad-Bhagavatam 11.2.49 may be quoted to describe the advanced devotee. Different stages of advancement in devotional service, beginning with the lowest and proceeding higher and higher are described in Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.47, 51, 52, 48 and 49.

10 When he attains perfection in devotional service, the devotee is no longer bewildered. When his devotional service is still only a new sprout, the devotee has not yet attained perfection in devotional service.

This is described in Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.50 and 53.

11 In the perfect stage of devotional service the stage of meditation known as dhruvanusmṛti is manifested. In that stage pure love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead begins to sprout. In that stage one remembers the Lord at every moment. Then one shakes away all material desires and his love for the Lord begins to sprout. Then the sprout of love grows taller and taller.

In Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.46 was explained the devotee's three relationships with others, beginning with his friendship with other devotees. Such a devotee becomes free from material desires. That the devotee is free from material desires and filled with love for the Supreme Lord is described in Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.45 and 55.

12 In the Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda, the greatness of a person who follows the path of worshipping the Lord is described in the following words:

"A brahmana who follows the five saṁskaras, beginning with performing austerities, who actively worships the Lord, and who is learned in the five branches of knowledge is known as a great devotee."

13 This description is so because it describes one who has not yet reached the stage of perfect love for the Lord. The five saṁskaras referred to in the word "tapadi-panca-saṁskari" are listed in the verse beginning with the words "tapah pundram tatha nama" (which is quoted in full in anuccheda 200, text 10).

14 The word "navejyakarma-karakah" is explained in the following passage:

15-16 "O beautiful one, a devotee of the Lord engages in nine kinds of devotional service. 1. worship of the Lord, 2. chanting mantras glorifying the Lord, 3. engaging in yoga to attain the Lord, 4. offering yajnas to please the Lord, 5. offering obeisances to the Lord, 6. chanting the Lord's holy names, 7. serving the Lord, 8. wearing the signs of the Lord, and 9. worshipping the devotees of the Lord. A brahmana should always worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead in these nine ways."

17 The five branches of knowledge mentioned in text 12 refer to knowledge of: 1. the worshipable Supreme Personality of Godhead, 2. His supreme abode, 3. His paraphernalia, 4. His mantras and 5. the individual spirit souls.

18 These five objects of knowledge are briefly described in the following words of Shri Hayasirsa-pancaratra:

"Lord Krishna is the only Supreme Personality of Godhead, the supreme controller. His form is eternal and full of knowledge and bliss. His large eyes are lotus flowers, and the graceful hair on His head is black.

19 "He is the monarch of the spiritual world, where He is tightly embraced by the playful goddess of fortune, Her form spiritual and splendid like gold, and Her large eyes very beautiful.

20 "He is eternal, present everywhere, perfect, complete, all-pervading, the cause of all, the secret hidden in the Vedas, propound, and the master of many potencies."

21 In Shri Hayasirsa-pancaratra it is also said:

"Now I will describe His transcendental abode, which is eternal, unchanging, made of pure goodness, situated beyond the boundaries of the material world, and effulgent like many millions of suns and moons.

22 "It is made of cintamani jewels. It is eternal and full of knowledge and bliss. It is the resting place of everything. It will never be destroyed."

23 "O Brahma, now I will briefly describe the Lord's paraphernalia. In the Lord's abode are many kalpa-vṛkṣa trees, who are the sources of all pleasures.

24 "In that abode are also many vines just like those kalpa-vṛkṣa trees. There are also many flowers and other things, possessing sweet fragrances and sweet tastes, and all like those kalpa-vṛkṣa trees.

25 "The fruits there have no faults, and therefore they are filled with nectar. They are never hard and they have neither skin nor seed.

26 "O Brahma, please know that nothing there is made of matter. It is all spirit. It is all sweet like nectar.

27 "O Brahma, in that realm nectar is everywhere. Everything is sweet like nectar. Everything is nectar."

28 The mantras glorifying the Lord are described in the following verse of Shri Hayasirsa-pancaratra:

"O Brahma, they who know the truth declare that the Supreme Personality of Godhead is not different from the mantras glorifying Him."

29-30 The individual spirit souls are described in the following words of Shri Hayasirsa-pancaratra:

"O Brahma, as many drops of spray are created when the wind touches the ocean's waves, so many thousands of individual spirit souls are manifested from the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Some of those souls have material bodies and some do not.

31 The scriptures that describe devotional service affirm that the individual spirit souls are different from the many forms of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is described in the following prayer spoken by the Personified Vedas to the Supreme personality of Godhead (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.87.31):

"Neither material nature nor the soul who is her enjoyer were ever born. The living bodies of this world rather come into being by the combination of both of them, just like a bubble which forms where water meets the air. All these conditioned living beings merge back into You, the Supreme, with their various names and qualities, similarly to the merging of rivers into the ocean or of the flavours of all kinds of flowers into honey."

32 That the individual spirit souls are the Supreme Lord's potency is described in the following words of Shri Vishnu Purana (6.7.61):

"Originally, Krishna's energy is spiritual, and the energy known as the living entity is also spiritual. However, there is another energy, called illusion, which consists of fruitive activity. That is the Lord's third potency."*

33 This is also described in Bhagavad-gita (7.5) where Lord Krishna affirms:

"Besides these, O mighty-armed Arjuna, there is another, superior energy of Mine, which comprises the living entities who are exploiting the resources of this material, inferior nature.*

34 In Bhagavad-gita (15.7) Lord Krishna again affirms:

"The living entities in this conditioned world are My eternal fragmental parts. Due to conditioned life, they are struggling very hard with the six senses, which include the mind."*

35 In Shri Narada-pancaratra it is said:

"Although spiritual in nature, the individual spirit soul lives on the boundary of the spiritual and material worlds. If he chooses he can enter the material world and try to enjoy the modes of material nature."

36 The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Yogesvara Havi to King Nimi.

1 The devotees of the Lord are situated on different levels of advancement, with those who are free from all material desires situated in the highest level. These different levels described in the passage that begins with Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.2.47. These levels, considered according to the qualities manifested by the devotee, are described in five verses of Shrimad Bhagavatam. In the following three verses the lowest level, mixed devotional service, is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.11.29-31):

2 "O Uddhava, a saintly person is merciful and never injures others. Even if others are aggressive he is tolerant and forgiving toward all living entities. His strength and meaning in life come from the truth itself, he is free from all envy and jealousy, and his mind is equal in material happiness and distress. Thus, he dedicates his time to work for the welfare of all others. His intelligence is never bewildered by material desires, and he has controlled his senses. His behaviour is always pleasing, never harsh and always exemplary, and he is free from possessiveness. He never endeavours in ordinary, worldly activities, and he strictly controls his eating. He therefore always remains peaceful and steady. A saintly person is very cautious in the execution of his duties and is never subject to superficial transformations, because he is steady and noble, even in a distressing situation. He has conquered thirst, lamentation, illusion, old age, and death. He is free from all desire for prestige and offers honour to others. He is expert in reviving the Krishna consciousness of others and therefore never cheats anyone. Rather he is a well wishing friend to all, being most merciful. Such a saintly person must be considered the most learned of men."

3 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"Here the word "krpaluh" means "unable to tolerate the sufferings of theirs", "sarva-dehinam akṛta-drohaḥ" means "not harming anyone", "tītikṣuḥ" means "tolerant", "satyaṁ sarāḥ" means "strong in the truth", "anavadyamta" means "free of envy and other vices", "samāḥ" means "equal in happiness and distress", "upayakāḥ" means "helping others as far as one is able", "kamair ahata-dhīḥ" means "with a heart unagitated by material desires", "dantāḥ" means "controlling the external senses", "mrduḥ" means "not hard hearted", "suciḥ" means "acting like a saint", "akīcanaḥ" means "without possessiveness", "anīhāḥ" means "free from materialistic activities", "mīta-bhuk" means "eating little", "santāḥ" means "controlling the mind", "sthīrah" means "steady in one's duty", "mac-charanah" means "taking shelter of Me alone", "munih" means "thoughtful", "apramattah" means "attentive", "gabhiratma" means "unchanging", "dhratiman" means "steady, even when faced with calamities", "jita-sad-gunah" means "conquering the six waves, namely, hunger, thirst, lamentation, illusion, old age, and death", "amani" "without desiring honour for oneself", "manadah" means "honouring others", "kalyah" means "expert in enlightening others", "maitrah" means "not cheating others", "karunikah" means "acting out of compassion and not personal ambition", and "kavah" means "wise".

4 Here the quality "mac-charanah" (taking shelter of me should be singled out). Later it will be said, "sa ca sattamah" (he is the best of all living entities). The word "ca" (and) here emphasises that one who takes shelter of the Lord is the best of living entities.

1 The intermediate devotee, who is engaged in mixed devotional service is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.11.32):

"He perfectly understands that the ordinary religious duties prescribed by Me in various Vedic scriptures possess favourable qualities that purify the performer, and he knows that neglect of such duties constitutes a discrepancy in one's life. Having taken complete shelter of My lotus feet, however, a saintly person ultimately renounces such ordinary religious duties and worships Me alone. He is thus considered to be the best among all living entities."

2 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"Here the word 'maya' means 'by Me in the form of the Vedas'. Thus 'one should renounce the ordinary duties taught by Me in this way and worship Me alone'. A person who does this is the best of all living entities (sattamah). Should one do this out of ignorance or because one is an atheist? No. 'Fully aware of the virtues of activities in the mode of pure goodness and the faults of other activities, and with firm faith that by engaging in My devotional service he will attain all that is good, a person should renounce all ordinary duties and earnestly engage in My devotional service.' That is the way these words should be interpreted."

3 This is also described in the following words of the Shri Narayana-vyuhu-stava Prayers in the Shri Hayasirsa-pancaratra:

"I offer my respectful obeisances to they who renounce all material duties, earnestly engage in devotional service to Lord Vishnu,, and always meditate on Him, the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

4 Now in the Shrimad Bhagavatam verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda will be explained. This verse means: If one does not have various good qualities but merely understands that the previously described good qualities (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.11.29-31), such as being merciful, should be accepted and the various faults that are the opposites of the good qualities should be avoided, and if one then renounces one's regular and occasional duties of varnasrama, which were taught by Me, and instead engages in unalloyed devotional service to Me, then one becomes the best of all living entities. The word "ca" (also) here means, "he is also the best, just as the previously described devotee was the best". In this way even a person who has not yet developed all good qualities can become equal to the previously described best of all living entities. Thus the Lord says, "One who attains these good qualities, renounces ordinary knowledge and ordinary duties, and worships Me alone, is the best of all living entities". In this way it is shown that the unalloyed devotee of the Lord is the best of all living entities.

5 In Bhagavad-gita (12.13-14) it is said:

"One who is not envious, but is a kind friend to all living entities, who does not think himself the proprietor and is free from false ego, who is equal in both happiness and distress, who is tolerant, always satisfied, self controlled, and engaged in devotional service with determination, his mind and intelligence fixed on Me, such a devotee of Mine is very dear to Me."*

In this way the neophyte, intermediate and advanced devotees are described. A devotee acts in a saintly manner. He does not worship any Deity but the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Still, even if a devotee acts badly, he is still to be considered saintly.

6 This is explained in Bhagavad-gita (9.30) in these words:

"Even if one commits the most abominable action, if he is engaged in devotional service he is to be considered saintly because he is properly situated in his determination.

7 Attaining good qualities is not necessary when one associates with the devotees of the Lord. Because by that association one becomes eager to engage in devotional service, the separate endeavour to attain good qualities become irrelevant in that situation.

8 This is described by Shri Prahlada in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.7.30):

"In the association of saintly persons and devotees one should worship the Lord."*

9 The word "sadhu" here means "one whose activities are those of a saint". Thus there are two levels of devotees who follow the path of devotional service according to rules and regulations (vidhi-bhakti). Of these the devotee whose service is unalloyed is the best. In the Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda it is said that three kinds of devotees follow the path of worshipping the Supreme Lord. They are described in the passage beginning with the words "tapadi-panca-samskari" (quoted in anuccheda 198, text 12).

10 The intermediate devotee is described in these words of Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda:

"Performing austerities, wearing tilaka, chanting the holy name, chanting mantras and following the path of yoga are the five samskaras of the intermediate devotee."

11 The neophyte devotee is described in these words:

"One who wears tilaka markings and the marks of the conchshell, disc, and other signs of the Lord, and who bows down to offer respects to the Lord, is said to be a Vaishnava."

Anuccheda 201

1 One who purely loves the Lord in one of the rasas, such as servitorship or friendship, is the best of devotees. The Supreme Personality of Godhead describes him in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.11.33):

2 "My devotees may or may not know exactly what I am, who I am, and how I exist, but if they worship Me with unalloyed love, then I consider them to be the best of devotees."

3 Here the word yavan means "without considering time, place, or any other limiting condition", "yas ca" means "the soul of all", and "yadrsah" means "whose form is eternal and full of knowledge and bliss". Such devotees "may or may not know exactly what I am, who I am, and how I exist, but still they worship Me with unalloyed love." This means that, situated in one of the rasas, which begin with servitorship, the devotee loves the Lord as the son of the king of Vraja, or as one of His other forms. In this condition the devotee loves the Lord alone and does not give his love to any other subject. Here the Lord says, "I consider them to be the best of devotees." These devotees are also described in the following prayer spoken by the Yogesvaras in the Fourth Canto (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.7.38):

4 "Dear Lord, persons who see You as non-different from themselves, knowing that You are the Supersoul of all living entities, are certainly very, very dear to You. You are very favourable toward those who engage in devotional service, accepting You as the Lord and themselves as the servants by Your mercy, You are always inclined in their favour."*

5 The Lord Himself gives the following explanation in Shri Bhagavad-gita (7.2 and 7.4-7):

"I shall now declare unto you in full this knowledge, both phenomenal and numinous. This being known, nothing further shall remain for you to know."*

6 "Earth, water, fire, air, ether, mind, intelligence and false ego: all together these eight constitute My separated material energies.*

7 "Besides these, O mighty-armed Arjuna, there is another superior energy of Mine, which comprises the living entities who are exploiting the resources of this material, inferior energy.*

8 "All created beings have their source in these two natures. Of all that is material and all that is spiritual in this world, know for certain that I am both the origin and the dissolution.*

9 "O conqueror of wealth, there is no truth superior to Me. Everything rests upon Me as pearls are strung on a thread."*

10 In these verses the Supreme Personality of Godhead describes His potencies named pradhana (matter) and jiva (the individual spirit souls), how the world is created of these two potencies, how the material universe, because it is His potency, is in one sense not different from Him, and how He is the Supreme and the shelter of all. Then He teaches the truth about Himself and the true nature of the individual spirit souls. One who understands these truths become wise. Then the Lord says that one who desires His glories is very dear to Him, more dear than the philosophers, the other devotees, or any other persons. The Lord's description of this is given in the following words (Shri Bhagavad-gita 7.16-18):

11 "O best among the Bharatas, four kinds of pious men begin to render devotional service unto Me; the distressed, the desirer for wealth, the inquisitive, and he who is searching for knowledge of the Absolute.*

12 "Of these, the one who is in full knowledge and who is always engaged in pure devotional service is the best. For I am very dear to him, and he is dear to Me.*

13 "All these devotees are undoubtedly magnanimous souls, but he who is situated in knowledge of Me I consider to just like My own self. Being engaged in My transcendental service, he is sure to attain Me, the highest and most perfect goal."*

14 Now Shrimad Bhagavatam 4-7-38 (quoted in Text 4) will be explained. Here the phrase "tvayi visvatmani atamno ikset" means "They see all living entities as not different from You for they are Your potencies". "Na prthak" means "they do not see the living entities as independent of You". "Amutas te preyan nasti" means "No one is more dear to You than such a person". "Vatsala" means, "O Lord who loves Your servants". Then they say, "You are very favourable (anugrhana) toward those who engage in undeviating (ananya) devotional service (vrtti), accepting You as the Lord and themselves as the servants (bhrtyesa)". In this way the wise devotees are glorified.

15 Now the verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.11.33) quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda will be explained. Here the acceptance and rejection of knowledge and ignorance is explained. Here also the previous description of saintly person is superseded and the devotees are described as superior. In this way the superiority of devotional service is established.

16 The words 'te me matah' mean "that is My final opinion". That is the meaning, even though it is not expressed in exactly that way. In the pronouns "ye" and "te" the singular number is intended. The plural number used to show respect. How much more then should respect be shown to the devotees filled with ecstatic love for the Lord? That is the meaning. Devotional service in ecstatic love (prema) will be described later in the description of spontaneous (raganuga) devotional service.

1 In the previous portion of this book the different kinds of devotees were described. In this present portion the different levels of devotional service will be described. First the devotees and the fruitive workers will be contrasted.

2 In the Skanda Purana, Markandeya Muni tells King Bhagiratha:

"They who live only for religion, who indulge in sex only to beget children, and who cook only to give happiness to the brahmanas, are known as Vaishnavas."

3 The word "Vaishnava" is thus defined as one who acts in this way and that only to carry out the orders of Lord Vishnu. The word "Vaishnava" is also defined in the following words of Shri Vishnu Purana:

4 "Please know that a Vaishnava is a person who does not abandon the duties of his varna, who is equal to all, who is a friend even to his enemies, who never steals anything or harms anyone, and who is peaceful at heart."

5 In the Padma Purana, Patala-khanda, Vaisakha-mahatmya, the word "Vaishnava" is defined in the following way:

"Please know that a Vaishnava is one who lives only for the sake of religion, who performs religious duties only to please Lord Hari, and whose days and nights are used only to perform pious deeds."

6 The relationship between the Vaishnavas and the devotees of Lord Siva is expressed in the following words of Shri Narada Purana:

"They who are equally respectful to both the great controller Lord Siva and the all-pervading Supersoul Lord Vishnu are the best of devotees."

7 In this way it is seen that great devotees of the Lord are present even among the devotees of Lord Siva. However, it is an offense to consider Lord Siva to be equal to Lord Vishnu, as confirmed by the following words of the Vaishnava Tantra:

"A person who considers demigods like Brahma and Siva to be on an equal level with Narayana is to be considered an offender and an atheist."*

8 Thus the devotees are situated on many different levels of advancement. Among them there are different levels of power, different levels of mercy, different levels of the desire to engage in devotional service, and, as they associate with devotees, different speeds, quickly or slowly, at which they attain pure devotional service. In the same way, as one associates with jnanis, one attains jnana.

9 Devotional service free from all material attachments is the goal of life, and it is attained by the Lord's mercy in the association of His devotees. Now we will examine the different features of devotional service.

10 First one associates with devotees. From that association faith develops. From faith one becomes attracted to hear the Vaishnava philosophy passed down through the guru-parampara. Then one develops the beginnings of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Then one becomes attracted to the path of devotional service.

11 Then one desires to make spiritual advancement. Taking shelter of one (diksa) or many (siksa) spiritual masters one hears the philosophy of devotional service. In this way one understands the truth from beginning to end.

12 Free from all false conceptions of the Lord, the devotee then proceeds to meditate on the Lord. He meditates on the Lord as present everywhere. In this way the Lord is manifest to him everywhere. Then the devotee develops firm faith.

13 Then one becomes attracted to a particular form of the Lord and one fixes one's meditation on this form alone. Then one's faith is very splendidly manifested.

14 Then one comes to the conclusion that one of the Supreme Lord's forms is greater than the others. They are not all equally great. Still, because of ignorance of that best form, one may place his faith in another of the Lord's forms. The path of devotional service is described in that way.

15 When one meditates on the Lord to understand Him that is a specific part of the path of devotional service, a part characterised by meditation on the Lord. That is the path of they who consider knowledge most important. The path of they who consider love for the Lord most important is a different part. In that path one associates with the Lord's devotees, hears about the Lord's pastimes and in this way develops attraction, love and faith in the Lord. Thus this path begins with hearing about the Lord.

16 This path is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.2.16):

"O twice-born sages, by serving those devotees who are completely freed from vice, great service is done. By such service one gains affinity for hearing the messages of Vasudeva."*

17 It is also described in these words (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 3.25.25):

"In the association of pure devotees, discussion of the pastimes and activities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is very pleasing and satisfying to the ear and the heart. By cultivating such knowledge one gradually becomes advanced on the path of liberation, and thereafter he is freed, and his attraction becomes fixed. Then real devotion and devotional service begin."*

18 The path of they who consider love for the Lord most important, and who yearn to serve the Lord with love, is the best path. The path of they who consider knowledge most important is not the best path. Shri Prahlada explains this in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.8.49-50):

19 "Neither the three modes of material nature (sattva-guna, rajo-guna and tamo-guna), nor the predominating deities controlling these three modes, nor the five gross elements, nor the mind, nor the demigods nor the human beings can understand Your Lordship, for they are all subjected to birth and annihilation. Considering this, the spiritual advanced have taken to devotional service. Such wise men hardly bother with Vedic study. Instead,, they engage themselves in practical devotional service.*

20 "Therefore, O Supreme Personality of Godhead, the best of all persons to whom prayers are offered, I offer my respectful obeisances unto You because without rendering six kinds of devotional service unto You, offering prayers, dedicating all the results of activities, worshipping You, working on Your behalf, always remembering Your lotus feet and hearing about Your glories, who can achieve that which is meant for the paramahamsas?"*

21 Here the word "karma" means :devotional service", and "karma-smrtih" means "meditation on the Lord's pastimes". In the way devotional service to the Lord's feet (caranayoh) is manifested in all circumstances. The siksa-guru (teacher-guru), who teaches about these two things (devotional service and meditation on the Lord's pastimes) may later also become one's sravana-guru (initiating spiritual master). One may accept as many siksa-gurus as one likes, but one may accept only one mantra-guru (initiating guru). This will be proved later in this book.

22 That one should become attracted to a particular form of the Lord is confirmed by the following evidence (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.3.48):

"Having obtained the mercy of his spiritual master, who reveals to the disciple the injunctions of Vedic scriptures, the devotee should worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead in the particular personal form of the Lord the devotee finds most attractive."

23 This is also confirmed by the statements of Shri Avirhotra and other authorities. That one may be attracted to a particular aspect of the path of devotional service is confirmed by the following statement of the Supreme Lord Himself (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.27.7):

"One should carefully worship Me by selecting one of the three methods by which I receive sacrifice: Vedic, tantric or mixed."

24 The sravana-guru (initiating spiritual master) is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.3.21):

"Therefore any person who seriously desires real happiness must seek a bona fide spiritual master and take shelter of him by initiation. The qualification of the bona-fide guru is that he has realised the conclusion of the scriptures by deliberation and is able to convince others of these conclusions. Such great personalities, who have taken shelter of the Supreme Godhead, leaving aside all material considerations, should be understood to be bona fide spiritual masters."

25 Here the word "sabde brahmani" means "in the Vedas", "pare brahmani" means in the manifestation of the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead", and "nisnatam" means "by directly seeing the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is invisible to the material senses, he has attained faith".

26 Shri Narada also explains at the end of King Puranjana's story (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.29.51):

"One who is engaged in devotional service has not the least fear in material existence. This is because the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the Supersoul and friend of everyone. One who knows this secret is actually educated, and one thus educated can become the spiritual master of the world. One who is an actually bona fide spiritual master, representative of Krishna, is not different from Krishna."*

The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Shri Prabhuddha to King Nimi.

Anuccheda 203

1 In the Brahma-vaivarta Purana it is said:

"It is said that there are two kinds of speakers: 1. passionate and 2. dispassionate. Passionate speakers are lusty and greedy. Their words do not touch the heart.

2 "Without careful study to determine the truth, a passionate person gives instruction. Teaching without careful study brings the destruction of the people."

3 The dispassionate speaker is described in the following words:

"One who desires to hear the truth should approach a bona fide spiritual master, whose words are like nectar and who is like an ocean of truth. He should not take into consideration the spiritual master's family, disposition, or performance of Vedic rituals."

4 The spiritual master's eloquences and other virtues are described in these words from the Brahma-vaivarta Purana:

"When hearing the spiritual master's teachings even a person filled with lust, greed, and a host of vices, even a miser, and even a person filled with despair, will enter the eternal spiritual world. A person who can eloquently speak so this is done is the best of spiritual masters."

5 When such a highly qualified spiritual master is not to be found, some people, desiring to hear different views, take shelter of many teachers. This is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.9.31);

6 "Although the Absolute Truth is one without a second, the sages have described Him in many different ways. Therefore one may not be able to acquire very firm or complete knowledge from one spiritual master."

The meaning of this verse is clear. The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Shri Dattatreya to King Yadu.

Anuccheda 204

1 The path of they who consider love for the Lord most important, a path that begins with hearing, is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.5.26):

"O Vyasadeva, in the association and by the mercy of those great Vedantists, I could hear them describe the attractive activities of Lord Krishna. And thus listening attentively, my taste for hearing of the Personality of Godhead increased at every step."*

2 The activity of hearing performed by they who think knowledge of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is most important is described in the four famous verses of Shrimad-Bhagavatam. These persons' activity of thinking is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.2.34):

"The great personality Brahma, with great attention and concentration of the mind, studied the Vedas three times, and after scrutinizingly examining them, he ascertained that attraction for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Shri Krishna, is the highest perfection of religion."*

3 Faith in the Supreme Personality of Godhead, which is created by such study and thinking, is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.21.27-30):

"My dear respectable ladies and gentlemen, according to the authoritative statements of sastra, there must be a supreme authority who is able to award the respective benefits of our present activities. Otherwise, why should there be persons who are unusually beautiful and powerful both in this life and in the life after death?*

4-5 "This is confirmed not only by the evidence of the Vedas but also by the personal behaviour of great personalities like Mahu, Uttanapada, Dhruva, Priyavrata and my grandfather Anga, as well as by many other great personalities and ordinary living entities, exemplified by Maharaja Prahlada and Bali, all of whom are theists, believing in the existence of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who carries a club.*

6 "Although abominable persons like my father, Vena, the grandson of death personified, are bewildered on the path of religion, all the great personalities like those mentioned agree that in this world the only bestower of the benedictions of religion, economic development, sense gratification, liberation, or elevation to the heavenly planets is the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

7 This verse says, "My dear respectable ladies and gentlemen (arha-sattamah), according to the authoritative statements of sastra there must be a supreme authority who is able to award the respective benefits of our present activities (yajna-patih). That is the opinion of the scriptures (kesancit)."

Still fearing that some might foolishly try to dispute this truth and present another, inevitably illogical opinion, the Bhagavatam gives the fact that the living entities are placed by destiny in a variety of situations in this world as evidence of the Supreme Lord's existence. The Bhagavatam explains, "otherwise, why should there be persons who have unusually beautiful or powerful (jyotsnavatyah) bodies (bhuvah) both in this life (iha) and in the life after death (amutra)?" In other words, if there were no Supreme Lord then this would not be so.

8 This is the meaning. The inert and unconscious material nature has no power, by itself, to give to the living entities the results of their actions. This is confirmed in the following words of Vedanta-sutra (3.2.39):

"Because it is logical to assume that there must be a person who awards the results of actions."

9 The many demigods are not independent. That is confirmed by the Antaryami-sruti. They are not as powerful as the Supreme Lord and they are not independent in awarding the various results of actions. Therefore it is the independent Supreme Personality of Godhead alone who gives the results of actions. In the next three verses (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.21.28-30) the opinions of great self-realised souls is given as evidence to confirm the truth of this.

10 Here the words "asmat-pituh pituh" mean "of my grandfather Anga". Because they were learned in the Vedic scriptures, Maharaja Prahlada and Maharaja Bali are also counted here. These great persons all affirm (krtyam asti) that the Supreme Personality of Godhead (gadabhrta) is always present in everyone's heart and outside the heart also. That is the meaning here.

11 Or, the words "krtyam asti" may mean "it is the Supreme Personality of Godhead alone, and not anyone else, who is the supreme controller". Then the atheists are criticised in the words "dauhitradin mrtyor dharma-vimohitan" (abominable persons like my father, Vena, the grandson of death, are bewildered on the path of religion). In this way scripture, logic, and the opinions of the great enlightened souls combine to affirm that Lord Vishnu, who is here called by the name Gadabhrta, is the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Lord Gadabhrta is described in the passage beginning with the word "varga". Here "varga" means "the three goals of life", "svarga" (residence in the heavenly planets) is the result of pious deeds, "apavarga" means "liberation", "Aikatmya-hetuna" means "because He is the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is situated in everyone's heart", and "prayena" means "almost always."

12 This is also confirmed by the following statement of Skanda Purana:

"Lord Vishnu, the eternal Supreme Personality of Godhead, is the giver of liberation. He binds the conditioned souls with the ropes of repeated birth and death and He also frees them from those ropes."

Anuccheda 205

1 Faith in devotional service is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.21.31-32):

"By the inclination to serve the lotus feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, suffering humanity can immediately cleanse the dirt which has accumulated in their minds during innumerable births. Like the Ganges water, which emanates from the toes of the lotus feet of the Lord, such a process immediately cleanses the mind, and thus spiritual or Krishna consciousness gradually increases.*

2 "When a devotee takes shelter at the lotus feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, he is completely cleansed of all misunderstanding or mental speculation and he manifests renunciation. This is possible only when one is strengthened by practicing bhakti-yoga. Once having taken shelter at the root of the lotus feet of the Lord, a devotee never comes back to this material existence, which is full of the threefold miseries."*

3 Here the word "tapasvinam" means "of they who suffer in the world of birth and death". In the passage beginning with the word "yatha" an example is given to show the glories of the Lord's lotus feet. "Asangah" means "without being attached to anything else", "vijnana-visesah" means "direct perception of the Supreme Personality of Godhead", and "viryan" means "strong for that reason". These words describe a person who has taken shelter of the feet (anghri-mule) of the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

1 That in most cases the same person is both initiating spiritual master (sravana-guru) and instructing spiritual master (bhajan-siksa-guru) is confirmed by the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.3.22):

2 "Accepting the bona fide spiritual master as one's life and soul and worshipable deity, the disciple should learn from him the process of pure devotional service. The Supreme Personality of Godhead, Hari, the soul of all souls, is inclined to give Himself to His pure devotees. Therefore, the disciple should learn from the spiritual master to serve the Lord without duplicity and in such a faithful and favourable way that the Supreme Lord, being satisfied, will offer Himself to the faithful disciple."

3 The initiating spiritual master is described in the previous verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.3.21) in these words:

"Any person who seriously desires to achieve real happiness must seek out a bona fide spiritual master and take shelter of him by initiation. The qualification of his spiritual master is that he must have realised the conclusion of the scriptures by deliberation and be able to convince others of these conclusions. Such great personalities, who have taken shelter of the Supreme Godhead, leaving aside all material considerations, are to be understood as bona fide spiritual masters."*

4 Here it is said that the spiritual master (guru) is like one's life and soul (atma) and one's worshipable deity (daivata). Without deceit (amayaya) one should follow him (anuvrttya) and learn from him (sikset). In this way (yaih) the Supreme Personality of Godhead (atma), who gave Himself to Bali Maharaja and other devotees, will give Himself.

One may accept many instructing spiritual masters (siksha-gurus). This has already been explained. The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Shri Prabhuddha to King Nimi.

Anuccheda 207

1 One may accept only one initiating spiritual master (mantra guru). This is explained in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.3.48):

"Having obtained the mercy of his spiritual master, who reveals to the disciple the injunctions of Vedic scriptures, the devotee should worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead in the particular personal form of the Lord the devotee finds most attractive."

2 Here "anugraha" means "the mercy of the initiating spiritual master", and "agamah" means "the scriptures, where the rules for chanting mantras are described". Because the word spiritual master is here in the singular number, it is understood that one should accept only one initiating spiritual master.

3 The disciple is not allowed to reject his initiating spiritual master. This is confirmed by the following words of Brahma-vaivarta Purana:

"Lord Hari rejects anyone who rejects his spiritual master. A person who rejects his spiritual master becomes wicked. His knowledge becomes covered with dirt."

4 However, if one's spiritual master is not satisfactory, one should accept another spiritual master. In this way one may reject many unsatisfactory spiritual masters. When a spiritual master preaches against the truth, he should be rejected. This is explained in the following words of Shri Narada-pancaratra:

5 "One who has accepted mantra-initiation from a spiritual master who is not a devotee of Lord Vishnu goes to hell. The disciple should again become initiated, properly initiated by a spiritual master who is a devotee of Lord Vishnu."

6 The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Shri Avirhotra to King Nimi.

1 The initiating spiritual master enlightens his disciple in the knowledge of the scriptures. This is explained in the following words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.10.12):

2 "The spiritual master can be compared to the lower kindling stick, the disciple to the upper kindling stick and the instruction given by the guru to the third stick placed in between. The transcendental knowledge communicated from guru to disciple is compared to the fire arising from the contact of these, which burns the darkness of ignorance to ashes, bringing great happiness to both guru and disciple."

3 Here the word "adyah" means "the stick below", "tat-sandhanam" means "the stick in the middle, which is the object of friction", "pravacanam" means "instruction", and "vidya" means "the knowledge of scripture". The knowledge created by this contact is compared to fire.

4 This is also confirmed by the following statement of Sruti-sastra (Taittiriya Upanisad 1.3.3):

"The spiritual master comes first. The disciple comes after. When they meet knowledge is manifested."

5 In the Mundaka Upanisad (1.2.12) it is said:

"To learn the transcendental subject matter one must approach a spiritual master."*

6 In the Chandogya Upanisad (6.14.2) it is said:

"One who approaches a bona fide spiritual master can understand everything about spiritual realisation."*

7 In the Katha Upanisad (1.2.9) it is said:

"O dear one, the truth cannot be understood by logic. It is understood only by hearing the words of the spiritual master."

8 The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Anuccheda 209

1 One must also accept an instructing spiritual master (siksha guru). This is explained in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.87.33):

2 "Those who endeavour with their conquered senses and vital air to bring the impetuous and most unsteady mind under control but have abandoned the shelter of their spiritual masters' feet experience only distress in their cultivation of various practices. They encounter hundreds of disturbances, O unborn Lord, like merchants riding a boat on the ocean who have failed to engage a pilot."*

2 This verse means, "Those who (ye) endeavour with their conquered senses and vital air to bring the impetuous and most unsteady (adanta) mind (manas turagam) under control (yantum) but have abandoned (samavahaya) the shelter of their spiritual masters' (guroh) feet (caranam) experience only distress in their cultivation of various practices (upaya-khidah). They encounter hundreds of disturbances (vyasana-satanvitah)."* These persons remain in the world of repeated birth and death.

3 The last part of the verse means, "O unborn Lord (aja), they are like merchants riding a boat on the ocean (jaladhau) who have failed to engage a pilot (akrta-karna-dharah)."*

The spiritual master reveals the truth of devotional service to the Lord. By the spiritual master's mercy one remains undefeated by even hundreds of obstacles and one quickly bring his mind under control. That is the meaning here.

4 In the Brahma-vaivarta Purana it is said:

"One who devotedly serves his spiritual master and remembers the Lord personally meets the Supreme Personality of Godhead. They who are proud and will not serve a spiritual master do not meet the Lord."

5 In the Svetasvatara Upanisad (6.38) it is said:

"Only unto those great souls who have implicit faith in both the Lord and the spiritual master are all the imports of Vedic knowledge automatically revealed."*

6 The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by the Personified Vedas.

Anuccheda 210

1 Now will be discussed the truth that one must accept an initiating spiritual master. One should accept a spiritual master in order to attain the highest goal of life. One should not accept a spiritual master to attain ordinary, material goals. This is explained in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 5.5.18):

2 "One who cannot deliver his dependents from the path of repeated birth and death should never become a spiritual master, a father, a husband, a mother, or a worshipable demigod."*

3 Here the word "samupeta-mrtyum" means "one who is on the path of repeated birth and death."

4 Shri Narada Muni also explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.5.15):

"The people in general are naturally inclined to enjoy, and you have encouraged them in that way in the name of religion. This is verily condemned and is quite unreasonable. Because they are guided under your instructions, they will accept such activities in the name of religion, and will hardly care for prohibitions."*

5 A person who seeks a spiritual master in order to attain material goals will naturally not take shelter of the feet of a spiritual master who can deliver his disciple from death. That is the meaning. The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Shri Rsabhadeva to His sons.

Anuccheda 211

1 One should not see his spiritual master as an ordinary fruitive worker. Rather one should see his spiritual master in the same way one sees the Supreme Lord Himself. Lord Krishna confirms this in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.17.27):

2 "One should know the acarya as Myself and never disrespect him in any way. One should not envy him, thinking him an ordinary man, for he is the representative of all the demigods."*

3 This verse is part of the description of a brahmachari's duties. This verse was spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Anuccheda 212

1 The spiritual master who is approached by persons seeking the highest goal of life is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.15.26-27):

2 "The spiritual master should be considered to be directly the Supreme Lord because he gives transcendental knowledge for enlightenment. Consequently, for one who maintains the material conception that the spiritual master is an ordinary human being, everything is frustrated. His enlightenment and his Vedic studies and knowledge are like the bathing of an elephant."*

3 "The Supreme Personality of Godhead, Lord Krishna, is the master of all other living entities and of the material nature. His lotus feet are sought and worshipped by great saintly persons like Vyasa. Nonetheless, there are fools who consider Lord Krishna an ordinary human being."*

4 The spiritual master (esah) has the same virtues as the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself. The spiritual master has the same nature as the Lord. That is the meaning here. These verses were spoken by Shri Narada to King Yudhisthira.

1 Some pure devotees say that the spiritual master and Lord Siva are both non-different from the Supreme Personality of Godhead. They are seen in this way because they are both very dear to the Lord. This is explained in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.30.38):

2 "Dear Lord, by virtue of a moment's association with Lord Siva, who is very dear to You and who is Your most intimate friend, we were fortunate to attain You. You are the most expert physician, capable of treating the incurable disease of material existence. On account of our great fortune, we have been able to take shelter at Your lotus feet."*

3 This verse states, Lord Siva (bhavasya) is Your dear friend. We have attained You (tvam gatim), who are the most expert physician (bhisaktamam), capable of treating the incurable disease of material existence, of birth (bhavasya) and death (mrtyoh)". Lord Siva is the spiritual master of the speakers of this verses. This verse was spoken by the Pracetas to the eight-armed Purusa-avatara.

Anuccheda 214

1 By taking shelter of the spiritual master, one thus attains love for the Supreme Lord. Now different varieties of worship will be shown. The Lord may be approach as impersonal and without variety or as personal and possessing variety. The first way is the path of impersonal knowledge. The second way is of two kinds. In one kind one accepts the ahangrahopasana method of the impersonalists, and in the other kind one accepts the path of devotional service to the Lord. The knowledge of the impersonalists is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.19.27) where Lord Krishna explains:

"Real knowledge is the awareness that reveals My all-pervading presence."

2 The knowledge (jnanam) here is knowledge that sees no difference.

Anuccheda 215

1 Many different methods of spiritual advancement are described. Impersonal knowledge has already been described. The method may be seen in the conversation of King Prthu and Shri Sanatkumara and in other places also in Shrimad-Bhagavatam. From that hearing contemplation follows. First the hearers develop a sense of understanding. Then they can understand the nature of spirit, which is different from dull matter. In the realm of spirit there are many forms of the Supreme Lord and many forms of the Lord's spiritual potencies. This the impersonalists are not able to understand. The Lord and His potencies are like the moon disc and the many individual rays of moonlight that emanate from the moon disc, rays of light that are distinct from each other and from the moon disc also. These different spiritual forms cannot be seen with material eyes. Only if, by the mercy of a great soul, one has spiritual eyes, can one see the variety that is the true nature of spirit. If one does not have such spiritual eyes one sees a spiritual nature that has no variety and one aspires to merge into that varietyless spirit. That varietyless spirit is the object of the impersonalists continual meditation. This meditation and merging is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.2.15-16):

2 "O King, whenever the yogi desires to leave this planet of human beings, he should not be perplexed about the proper time or place, but should comfortably sit without being disturbed and, regulating the life air, should control the senses by the mind.*

3 Thereafter, the yogi should merge his mind, by his unalloyed intelligence, into the living entity, and then merge the living entity into the Superself. And by doing this, the fully satisfied living entity becomes situated in the supreme stage of satisfaction, so that he ceased from all other activities."*

4 Here "etam" means "the intelligence", "ksetra-jne" means "the seer of the intelligence and other things", and "nilayet" means "he merges". By his intelligence (buddhya) he merges the knower of the field of activities into the pure soul (atmani), who is free of being the seer and other things. Then he merges the pure soul (atmanam) into the Supreme (atmani). Being locked up (avarudhya) in the Supreme, he thinks he has attained oneness with the Supreme. In this way he attains satisfaction (labdhopasantih). Then he ceases (viramet) from all other activities (krtyat). In this way, by seeming to end his own existence, he attains the Supreme."

Anuccheda 216

1 This impersonal knowledge is described in the following words of Bhagavad-gita (8.3):

"The indestructible, transcendental living entity is called Brahman, and his eternal nature is called adhyatma, the self."*

2 In this verse the word "sva" means "of the pure spirit soul", "bhavah" means "meditation", and "adhyatma" means "in relation to the soul". That is the meaning. Described here is ahangrahopasana meditation, where the individual soul thinks, "I am the supreme controller, the master of all potencies". The result of this meditation is that the Lord's power becomes manifested in the meditator. An example of this is seen in the Vishnu Purana, where Prahlada Maharaja meditating on himself in this way, thwarts the snake-noose and other weapons used against him. In this way, as an insect, meditating on another insect, actually does become that insect, so the meditating transcendentalist attains sarupya, sarsti or another kind of liberation.

3 Now devotional service will be described. Devotional service has two natures, a borderline nature and an original nature. The Garuda Purana explains:

4 "Now I will describe devotional service to Lord Vishnu. By engaging in one attains everything. Lord Hari is pleased by devotional service. Nothing else pleases Him."

5 After that it is also said there:

"The verbal root 'bhaj' means 'to serve'. Therefore the learned say that the noun 'bhakti', which refers to the best of all spiritual paths, means 'devotional service'."

6 In this verse the borderline nature of devotional service is described in the phrase "yaya sarvam avapyate" (by devotional service everything is attained). This is also described in the following words of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (2.3.10):

"A person who has broader intelligence, whether he be full of all material desires, without any material desire, or desiring liberation, must by all means worship the supreme whole, the Personality of Godhead."*

The word "budhah" (by the wise) here affirms that the "bhakti" (devotional service) here cannot be the same as the ahangrahopasana of the impersonalists. The word "seva" (service) here describes the original nature of devotional service. Devotional service is performed in three ways: with body, words and mind. Ahangrahopasana, however, is performed out of fear, hatred and other faulty motives. The word "sadhana-bhuyasi" means that devotional service is best of all spiritual paths. The two natures of devotional service are also described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.34):

7 "Even ignorant living entities can very easily come to know the Supreme Lord if they adopt those means prescribed by the Supreme Lord Himself. The process recommended by the Lord is to be known as bhagavata-dharma, or devotional service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

8 Here the phrase "avidusam pumsam" means "by they who engage in devotional service but do not understand the true glories of devotional service", "atmanah" means "of the Supreme, who is manifested as Brahman, Paramatma and Bhagavan", "anah" means "without effort", "labdhaye" means "to attain", and "upayah" means "methods". The word "bhagavata" means "spoken by the Supreme Lord Himself". This word is explained by the Lord Himself in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.3):

9 "By the influence of time, the transcendental sound of Vedic knowledge was lost at the time of annihilation. Therefore, when the subsequent creation took place, I spoke the Vedic knowledge to Brahma because I Myself am the religious principles enunciated in the Vedas."

10 In this way devotional service is described (proktah) by the Lord Himself. Then the verse declares, "Please understand (vidhi) the spiritual process (tan) known as bhagavata-dharma (bhagavatan)". The word "hi" (certainly) is used to emphasise that this is the way to attain success. Direct devotional service is called bhagavata-dharma in this verse. It is revealed to be the highest dharma in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.3.22):

"Devotional service, beginning with the chanting of the holy name of the Lord, is the ultimate religious principle for the living entity in human society."*

The words "atma-labdhaye proktah" here refer to the borderline nature of devotional service. This means that one cannot attain the Supreme in any other way. The words "atma-labdhaye upayah" here refer to the original nature of devotional service. The methods here refer to the methods described by the Lord Himself. The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Shri Kavi to King Nimi.

1 Devotional service is of three kinds: 1 aropa siddha, 2. sanga-siddha, and 3. svarupa-siddha. Aropa-siddha devotional service is performed when, even though one personally has no devotion, the Lord somehow engages one in the activities of devotional service. Sanga-siddha devotional service is performed when, even though one has no devotion, by associating with devotees one becomes engaged in the activities of devotional service. This is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.3.22):

"Accepting the bona fide spiritual master as one's life and soul and worshipable deity, the disciple should learn from him the process of pure devotional service. The Supreme Personality of Godhead, Hari, the soul of all souls, is inclined to give Himself to His pure devotees. Therefore, the disciple should learn from the spiritual master to serve the Lord without duplicity and in such a faithful and favourable way that the Supreme Lord, being satisfied, will offer Himself to the faithful disciple."*

2 Sanga-siddha devotional service is also described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.3.23):

"A sincere disciple should learn to dissociate the mind from everything material and positively cultivate association with his spiritual master and other saintly devotees."

In this way one attains devotional service, which is sometimes attained by the help of jnana and karma.

3 Svarupa-siddha devotional service is manifested when devotional service is no longer mixed with jnana or karma, when the Lord directly appears before the devotee, and when the devotee has pure and unwavering devotion for the Lord. This kind of devotional service is characterised by the various devotional activities that begin with hearing and chanting the glories of the Lord. These activities are described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.5.23):

"Hearing and chanting about the transcendental holy name, form, qualities, paraphernalia and pastimes of Lord Vishnu, remembering them, serving the lotus feet of the Lord, offering the Lord respectful worship with sixteen types of paraphernalia, offering prayers to the Lord, becoming His servant, considering the Lord one's best friend, and surrendering everything unto Him (in other words, serving Him with the body, mind and words), these nine processes are accepted as pure devotional service. One who had dedicated his life to the service of Krishna through these nine methods should be understood to be the most learned person, for he has acquired complete knowledge."*

4 This means hearing about Lord Vishnu and chanting the glories of Lord Vishnu. These activities are different from the activities of aropa-siddha devotional service. Even if one is bewildered, foolish or has a host of shortcomings, and even if one merely imitates the activities of devotional service, by performing these activities he comes into contact with svarupa-siddha devotional service and he attains the result of that service.

5 Examples of this are Shri Prahlada, whom in his previous birth fasting on Shri Nrsimha-caturdasi, the hawk that circumambulated the temple of the Lord following a dog, and many fools who even though they cannot see the truth, still may sometimes bow down before the Supreme Lord. In this way there are three kinds of devotional service. Devotional service may also be divided in two ways: 1. akaitava (sincere), and 2. sakaitava (insincere).

6 Thus aropa-siddha devotional service and sanga-siddha devotional service are both called by the name bhakti (devotional service). However, if one has even a single ulterior motive, to benefit either oneself or someone else, then his devotional service is called sakaitava (insincere).

7 The glory of svarupa-siddha devotional service is that it has a direct relationship with the Supreme Personality of Godhead. If one engages in this kind of devotional service alone, then the devotional service is akaitava (sincere). However, if the devotional service is mixed with karma or jnana, then the devotional service is sakaitava (insincere). Akaitava devotional service has already been described here in a quote that referred to it by the word "akincana". Akaitava devotional service is also described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.1.2):

"Completely rejecting all religious activities which are materially motivated, this Bhagavata Purana propounds the highest truth, which is understandable by those devotees who are fully pure in heart. The highest truth is reality distinguished from illusion for the welfare of all. Such truth uproots the threefold miseries. This beautiful Bhagavatam, compiled by the great sage Vyasadeva (in his maturity), is sufficient in itself for God realisation. What is the need of any other scripture? As soon as one attentively and submissively hears the message of Bhagavatam, by this culture of knowledge the Supreme Lord is established within his heart."*

In this way the two kinds (akaitava and sakaitava) of devotional service have been described.

8 Akaitava devotional service is also described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.5.52):

"My dear friends, O sons of the demons, you cannot please the Supreme Personality of Godhead by becoming perfect brahmanas, demigods or great saints or by becoming perfectly good in etiquette or vast learning. None of these qualifications can awaken the pleasure of the Lord. Nor by charity, austerity, sacrifice, cleanliness or vows can one satisfy the Lord. The Lord is pleased only if one has unflinching, unalloyed devotion to Him. Without sincere devotional service, everything is simply a show."*

9 Aropa-siddha devotional service is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.5.12 and

"Knowledge of self-realisation, even though free of all material affinity, does not look well if devoid of a conception of the infallible (God). What then is the use of fruitive activities, which are naturally painful from the very beginning and transient by nature, if they are not utilised for the devotional service of the Lord?"*

In these words fruitive activities, whether performed with material desire or without material desire, are criticised, for these activities have no relationship with the Supreme Lord. However, if somehow or other these activities are offered to the Supreme Lord, they then become activities of devotional service. Vedic duties are described in this way in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.36):

10 "In accordance with the particular nature one has acquired in conditioned life, whatever one does with body, words, mind, senses, intelligence or purified consciousness one should offer to the Supreme, thinking, "This is for the pleasure of Lord Narayana."

11 In Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.2.31) the following question is asked:

"Please speak about how one engages in the devotional service of the Supreme Lord, if you consider me capable of properly hearing these topics. When a living entity offers loving service to the Supreme Lord, the Lord is immediately satisfied, and in return He will give even His own self to the surrendered soul."

This question is answered in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.34):

"Even ignorant living entities can very easily come to know the Supreme Lord if they adopt those means prescribed by the Supreme Lord Himself. The process recommended by the Lord is to be known as bhagavata-dharma, or devotional service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

Devotional service, which is the direct means to attain the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and which consists of a host of activities that begin with hearing and chanting the Lord's glories, is referred to here by the word "bhagavata-dharma".

12 Some of the activities of devotional service are revealed in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.39):

"An intelligent person who has controlled his mind and conquered fear should give up all attachment to material objects such as wife, family and nation and should wander freely without embarrassment, hearing and chanting the holy names of the Lord, the bearer of the chariot wheel. The holy names of Krishna are all-auspicious because they describe His transcendental birth and activities, which He performs within this world for the salvation of the conditioned souls. Thus the holy names of the Lord are sung throughout the world."

13 In the next chapter it is said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.3.22-23):

"Accepting the bona fide spiritual master as one's life and soul and worshipable deity, the disciple should learn from him the process of pure devotional service. The Supreme Personality of Godhead, Hari, the soul of all souls, is inclined to give Himself to His pure devotees. Therefore, the disciple should learn from the spiritual master to serve the Lord without duplicity and in such a faithful and favourable way that the Supreme Lord, being satisfied, will offer Himself to the faithful disciple."

"A sincere disciple should learn to dissociate the mind from everything material and positively cultivate association with the spiritual master and other saintly devotees. He should be merciful to those in an inferior position to him, cultivate friendship with those on an equal level, and meekly serve those in a higher spiritual position. Thus he should learn to deal properly with all living beings."

"To serve the spiritual master the disciple should learn cleanliness, austerity, tolerance, silence, study of Vedic knowledge, simplicity, celibacy, non-violence, and equanimity in the face of material dualities such as heat and cold, happiness and distress."

"One should practice meditation by constantly seeing oneself to be an eternal cognisant spirit soul and seeing the Lord to be the absolute controller of everything. To increase one's meditation one should live in a secluded place and give up all false attachment to one's home and household paraphernalia. Giving up the decorations of the temporary material body, one should dress himself with scraps of cloth found in rejected places, or with the bark of trees. In this way one should learn to be satisfied in any material situation."

"One should have firm faith that he will achieve all success in life by following those scriptures that describe the glories of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Bhagavan. At the same time, one should avoid blaspheming other scriptures. One should rigidly control his mind, speech, and bodily activities, always speak the truth, and bring the mind and senses under full control.

"One should hear, glorify, and meditate upon the wonderful transcendental activities of the Lord. One should specifically become absorbed in the appearance, activities, qualities, and holy names of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Thus inspired, one should perform all of one's daily activities as an offering to the Lord. One should perform sacrifice, charity and penance exclusively for the Lord's satisfaction. Similarly one should chant only those mantras that glorify the Supreme Personality of Godhead. And all one's religious activities should be performed as an offering to the Lord. Whatever one finds pleasing or enjoyable he should immediately offer to the Supreme Lord, and even his wife, children, home, and very life air he should offer at the lotus feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

"One who desires his ultimate self-interest should cultivate friendship with those persons who have accepted Krishna as the Lord of their life. One should further develop an attitude of service to all living beings. One should especially try to help those in the human form of life and among them, especially those who accept the principles of religious behaviour. Among the religious persons, one should especially render service to the pure devotees of the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

"One should learn how to associate with the devotees of the Lord by gathering with them to chant the glories of the Lord. This process is most purifying. As devotees thus develop their loving friendship, they feel mutual happiness and satisfaction. And by thus encouraging one another they are able to give up material sense gratification, which is the cause of all suffering.

"The devotees of the Lord constantly discuss the glories of the Supreme Personality of Godhead among themselves. Thus they constantly remember the Lord and remind one another of His qualities and pastimes. In this way, by their devotion to the principles of bhakti-yoga, the devotees please the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who takes away from them everything inauspicious. Being purified of all impediments, the devotees awaken to pure love of Godhead, and thus, even within this world, their spiritualised bodies exhibit symptoms of transcendental ecstasy, such as standing of the bodily hairs on end.

"Having achieved love of Godhead, the devotees sometimes cry out loud, absorbed in thought of the infallible Lord. Sometimes they laugh, feel great pleasure, speak out loud to the Lord, dance, or sing. Such devotees, having transcendental material, conditioned life, sometimes imitate the unborn Supreme by acting out His pastimes. And sometimes, achieving His personal audience, they remain peaceful and silent.

"Thus learning the science of devotional service and practically engaging in devotional service of the Lord, the devotee come to the stage of love of Godhead. And by complete devotion to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Narayana, the devotee easily crosses over the illusory energy, maya, which is extremely difficult to cross.

14 As was said in the previous description of devotional service, the devotee should avoid association with non-devotees. This is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.3.23):

"A sincere disciple should learn to dissociate the mind from everything material and positively cultivate association with his spiritual master and other saintly devotees. He should be merciful to those in an inferior position on him, cultivate friendship with those on an equal level and meekly serve those in a higher spiritual position. Thus he should learn to deal positively with all living beings.

15 In this way even the fruits of ordinary work may be offered to the Lord in order to eventually attain the perfection of devotional service.

Shrila Shridhara Svami comments on Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.36:

"In the phrase 'atmana vanusrta-svabhavata' the word 'atmana' may mean either 'with the mind' or 'with the false ego'. The meaning is this. It is not only the performance of Vedic duties that may be offered to the Lord. Even ordinary work, performed according to one's own nature, may be offered to Him. This is explained by the Lord Himself in the following words of Shri Bhagavad-gita (9.27):

16 "Whatever you do, whatever you eat, whatever you offer or give away, and whatever austerities you perform, do that, O son of Kunti, as an offering to Me."*

17 In the previous verses this advice was given, "One should act according to the nature of one's life-breath, intelligence, and body." When one, according to his own nature, offers his work to the Lord, he may attain two different results for any misdeeds he performs. They who yearn to attain impersonal knowledge do not consider misdeeds different from good deeds. They who yearn to attain devotional service to the Lord see that their present sufferings are due to the material desires still remaining in their hearts. They pray to the merciful Lord, asking that He show mercy to them.

18 In the Vishnu Purana it is said:

"Fools are attracted to the world of the senses. O Lord, I am not like them. I always remember You and I pray that You will never leave my heart."

19 In the Padma Purana it is said:

"Just as the minds of young girls take pleasure in young boys, and young boys take pleasure in young girls, kindly allow my mind to take pleasure in You alone."*

20 This means, "May my good deeds and my misdeeds both lead me to complete love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

21 Even materialists may offer their materialistic activities to the Lord. This is explained in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.3.46):

"By executing without attachment the regulated activities prescribed in the Vedas, offering the results of such work to the Supreme Lord, one attains the perfection of freedom from the bondage of material work. The material fruitive results offered in the revealed scriptures are not the actual goal of Vedic knowledge, but are meant for stimulating the interest of the performer."

Thus one offers the results of Vedic duties to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Shri Kavi to Maharaja Nimi.

Anuccheda 218

1 They who offer to the Lord the results of Vedic duties are glorified in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 8.5.47):

2 "Karmis are always anxious to accumulate wealth for their sense gratification, but for that purpose they must work very hard. Yet even though they work hard, the results are not satisfying. Indeed, sometimes their work results only in frustration. But devotees who have dedicated their lives to the service of the Lord can achieve substantial results without working very hard. These results exceed the devotee's expectations."

3 This verse means, "Karmis are always anxious to accumulate wealth for their sense gratification, but for that purpose they must work very hard. Yet even though they work hard, plowing and doing other work, the results are not satisfying. But devotees who have dedicated their lives to the service of the Lord can achieve substantial results without working very hard. These results exceed the devotee's expectations. This is because the final result they attain is release from the material world of birth and death."

4 This is also described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.35):

"O King, one who accepts this process of devotional service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead will never blunder on his path in this world. Even while running with eyes closed, he will never trip or fall."

5 This is again described in Shrimad Bhagavatam (5.19.27):

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead fulfils the material desires of a devotee who approaches Him with such motives, but He does not bestow benedictions upon the devotee that will cause him to demand more benedictions again. However, the Lord willingly gives the devotee shelter at His own lotus feet, even though such a person does not aspire for it, and that shelter satisfies all his desires. That is the Supreme Personality's special mercy."*

6 That is how Maharaja Nabhi attained as his son Lord Rsabhadeva, who is the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is also explained in these words of Shri Bhagavad-gita (2.40):

7 "In this endeavour there is no loss or diminution, and a little advancement on this path can protect one from the most dangerous type of fear."*

8 The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by the demigods to the infallible Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Anucchedas 219-221

1 The process of offering the fruits of one's work to the Supreme Personality of Godhead is described in the following three verse. In Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.5.32) it is said:

2 "O Brahmana Vyasadeva, it is decided by the learned that the best remedial measure for removing all troubles and miseries is to dedicate one's activities to the service of the Supreme Lord Personality of Godhead

(Shri Krishna)."*

3 Here the word "brahman" means "O Veda-vyasa". "Etat tapa-traya-cikitsitam samsucitam" means "the remedy for the threefold miseries, a remedy spoken by the swanlike enlightened souls who were staying at that place during the four months of Caturmasya". What is that remedy? The remedy is "bhagavati karma yat", which means "dedicating one's activities to the service of the Supreme Personality of Godhead". What is the Supreme Personality of Godhead like? He is described here by the word "bhagavati", which means "full of all opulences and glories" and "the whole of which everything that exists is a part and parcel". The word "isvare" is also used to describe Him because he is the controller of the individual souls, who are all His parts and parcels. In this situation He is also given the name "Paramatma" (the all-pervading Supersoul).

4 Here someone may object: How can the same material activities that were once the cause of bondage in the world of birth and death at another time bring one liberation from the threefold miseries of material existence?

To this objection the following reply is given: The same thing may bring different results under different circumstances. This is explained in the following statement (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.5.33):

5 "O goo soul, does not a thing, applied therapeutically, cure a disease that was caused by that very same thing?"*

6 Here "ya amayah" means "the disease", and "yena jayate" means "created by butter or other things". That thing (tad eva dravyam) that first caused the disease does not (na) by itself cure the same disease. However, when mixed with other substances and it can be part of a medicine (cikitsitam) that does cure the disease.

7 This is further explained in the next verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.5.340):

"Thus when all a man's activities are dedicated to the service of the Lord, those very activities which caused his perpetual bondage become the destroyer of the tree of work."*

8 Here "pare" means "to the Supreme Personality of Godhead" and "kalpitah" means "even when offered with materialistic motives". Because these activities destroy the bondage of continued material existence, they give one the ability (kalpante) to renounce materialistic activities (atma-vinasaya).

Anuccheda 222

1 The results of action are all granted by the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself. Fools think that they themselves bring the results of their own actions. Such persons remain in the material world and enjoy only the most meagre benefits from their labours. Intelligent persons who understand that all results come from the Lord and who offer what they do to Him attain results that are the opposite of meagre. This is explained in two prose passages of Shrimad Bhagavatam. The first of these passages (Shrimad Bhagavatam 5.7.6.) gives the following explanation:

2 "After performing the preliminaries of various sacrifices, Maharaja Bharata offered the results in the name of religion to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Vasudeva. In other words, he performed all the yajnas for the satisfaction of Lord Vasudeva, Krishna. Maharaja Bharata thought that since the demigods were different parts of Vasudeva's body, He controls those who are explained in the Vedic mantras. By thinking in this way, Maharaja Bharata was freed from all material contamination, such as attachment, lust and greed. When the priests were about to offer the sacrificial ingredients into the fire, Maharaja Bharata expertly understood how the offering made to different demigods was simply an offering to the different limbs of the Lord. For instance, Indra is the arm of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and Surya (the sun) is His eye. Thus Maharaja Bharata considered that the oblations offered to different demigods were actually offered unto the different limbs of Lord Vasudeva."*

3 Shрила Shridhara Svami comments:

"This verse means 'After performing (sampracaratsu) the preliminaries of various sacrifices (nana-yagesu anga-kriya), Maharaja Bharata offered the results in the name of religion to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Vasudeva. In other words, he performed all the yajnas for the satisfaction of Lord Vasudeva, Krishna (apurvam tad vasudeva eva bhavayamanah). Maharaja Bharata thought that since Surya and the other demigods were different parts of Vasudeva's body (avayavesu) and were therefore not separate from He, He controls those who are explained in the Vedic mantras. By thinking in this way, Maharaja Bharata was freed from all material contamination, such as attachment, lust and greed. When the priests were about to offer the sacrificial ingredients into the fire (sa yajamano yajna-bhaga-bhajah). Maharaja Bharata expertly understood (abhyadhyayat) how the offering made to different demigods (devah) was simply an offering to the different limbs (avyayavesu), beginning with the eyes, of the Lord Vasudeva (purusasya). For instance, Indra is the arm of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and Surya (the sun) is His eye. Thus Maharaja Bharata considered that the oblations offered to different demigods were actually offered unto the different limbs of Lord Vasudeva.*

"The karma-mimamsakas explain the word 'apurva' in two ways. The first interpretation is that the results of action are given in a subtle way during the present time. In the second interpretation the results are given at a later time by the karma-sakti potency.

4 "This is explained in the following words:

"Two potencies bring the results of yajnas. The results are brought by a subtle potency."

5 "In this way the fruits of rituals (kriya) are called 'dharma'."

"Here someone may ask the following question: If the demigods are limbs of the Supreme Personality of Godhead and if the Vedic yajnas are therefore most important, then by performing yajnas worships the Supreme Personality of Godhead indirectly (apurvam). Is this not so?

"To this question the scriptures give the following reply:

6 "The suitability of the person and the Vedic ritual is determined by scripture. The word 'apurva' is used because the result of the yajna is not attained immediately."

7 "The yajnas offered to the demigods are meant for worshipping the demigods. By the mercy of the demigods one attains the shelter of the demigods. Here animal sacrifices are not appropriate. One should offer rice and other things instead.

8 "How does one take shelter of Lord Vasudeva in this remote way? If it is said that the yajna-performer's worship is this remote, then that means that Lord Vasudeva is the Supersoul who is the original instigator of the yajna, and for this reason He is the original performer of the yajna and the ultimate shelter of the yajna also. The performer of the yajna is not the shelter of the yajna. In the Nyaya-sastra it is said, 'The result described in the scriptures rests in the person who originally set the yajna in motion'. If this were not so then the rtvik priest would be the shelter of the yajna. This is described in this passage in the words 'saksat kartari'. In this way, by taking shelter of the demigods one also takes shelter of Lord Vasudeva. That is described in this passage by the word 'para-devatayam'.

9 How is Lord Vasudeva the Supreme Personality of Godhead? This passage of Shrimad Bhagavatam explains, 'sarva-devata-linganam mantranam artha-niyamakataya', which means 'because He is the controller of King Indra and the other demigods, who are explained in the Vedic mantras'. Thus, because He is the person who should be pleased in the yajnas and also because He gives the results of the yajnas, Lord Vasudeva is the remote shelter in whom the Vedic yajnas rest. That is the meaning here.

10 "Here the word 'naipunya' means 'expert in meditation', 'mrditah' means 'destroyed', and 'kasayah' means 'lust and other material defects'. The word 'adhvaryubhih' is used in the plural because the Advaryu priest has many different duties to perform."

Note: The quotation from Shrila Shridhara Svami's commentary ends here.

11 The yajnas are a limb of Lord Vishnu. If one worships Lord Vishnu with the idea that Lord Vishnu is but one component of the Vedic yajnas, then one commits an offense.

12 This is described in the following words of the Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda:

"One who offers yajnas to the demigods and gives them gifts, or one who acts independently and does as he likes, is known as an offender."

The word "offender" here means "one who has strayed from the path of worshipping Lord Vishnu".

13 The Supreme Personality of Godhead, Lord Krishna, Himself declares (Shri Bhagavad-gita 9.23-24):

"Those who are devotees of other gods and who worship them with faith actually worship only Me, O son of Kunti, but they do so in a wrong way.*

14 "I am the only enjoyer and master of all sacrifices. Therefore, those who do not recognise My true transcendental nature fall down."*

15 The truth is that all the paths of the Vedas lead to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is confirmed by Shriman Akrura in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.40.9-10):

16 "But all these people, my Lord, even those who have turned their attention away from You and are worshipping other deities, are actually worshipping You alone, O embodiment of all the demigods.

17 "As rivers born from the mountains and filled by the rain flow from all sides into the sea, so do all these paths in the end reach You, O master."

18 Here the word "gatayah" means "paths" and "antatah" means "in the conclusion of philosophical inquiry".

1 The second prose passage (Shrimad Bhagavatam 5.7.7.) gives the following explanation:

"In this way, being purified by ritualistic sacrifices, the heart of Maharaja Bharata was completely uncontaminated. His devotional service unto Vasudeva, Lord Krishna, increased day after day. Lord Krishna, the son of Vasudeva, is the original Personality of Godhead manifest as the Supersoul (Paramatma) as well as the impersonal Brahman. Yogis meditate upon the localised Paramatma situated in the heart, jnanis worship the impersonal Brahman as the Supreme Absolute Truth, and devotees worship Vasudeva, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, whose transcendental body is described in the sastras. His body is decorated with the Shrivatsa, the Kaustubha jewel and a flower garland and His hands hold a conchshell, disc, club and lotus flower. Devotees like Narada always think of Him within their hearts."*

2 Here the word "evam" (thus) means "after the preceding statement". Then the passages explains, "the devotional service (bhaktih), which was characterised by faithful hearing, chanting and other devotional activities, of he whose heart was pure (visuddha-sattvasya) was manifested (ajayata) with pure activities (karma-visuddhya). That devotional service was offered to Lord Vasudeva (vasudeve), the Supreme Personality of Godhead (bhagavati), who is famous and glorious because His form and opulences are perfect and complete, because He resides everywhere, and because of the glories of His holy name, who in His form known as the Paramatma (Supersoul) resides in the heart (antar-hrdaye akasah sariram), who is called Brahman (brahmani) because that aspect of His nature has no variety, whose feature as Bhagavan is thus proved not to be varietyless as Brahman is, whose form as the Supreme Person is described in the Vedic scriptures, who is thus seen in the scriptures, and who is marked with the Shrivatsa and other signs. Here the word "edhamanaraya" means "increasing day after day".

1 Offering work to the Lord is of two kinds: 1. working to please the Lord, and 2. offering the results of work to the Lord. This is described in the following words of the Kurma Purana:

2 "May the Supreme Personality of Godhead always be pleased with this work. One who always thinks in this way offers his work to the Supreme."

3 "Or, one may also offer the results of one's works to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The sages say that this is also a peerless offering to the Supreme."

4 Devotional service is caused in three ways: 1. kamana (with material desire), 2. naiskarmya (free from material activities), and 3. bhakti-matra (devotional service alone).

5 It is not possible for any living being to attain a state where he does not have any desires at all. This is described in the following words:

"Whenever a person acts his actions are impelled by some kind of desire."

6 In kamana and naiskarmya devotional service there is mostly offering the results of one's work to the Lord. In addition there is a reflection of working to please the Lord. This is so because of the devotee's tendency to consider his own self-interest most important. In bhakti-matra devotional service, however, pleasing the Lord is the centre of action. This is so because in this stage the devotee considers the Lord his life and soul.

7 The results attained by engaging in kamana devotional service are described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 8.5.47):

"Karmis are always anxious to accumulate wealth for their sense gratification, but for that purpose they must work very hard. Yet even though they work hard, the results are not satisfying. Indeed, sometimes their work results only in frustration. But devotees who have dedicated their lives to the service of the Lord can achieve substantial results without working very hard. These results exceed the devotee's expectations."*

8 An example of naiskarmya devotional service is the yajna King Anga offered to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The results of naiskarmya devotional service are described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.3.46):

"By executing without attachment the regulated activities prescribed in the Vedas, offering the results of such work to the Supreme Lord, one attains the perfection of freedom from the bondage of material work. The material fruitive results offered in the revealed scriptures are not the actual goal of Vedic knowledge, but are meant for stimulating the interest of the performer."

9 The result attained by engaging in bhakti-matra devotional service is described in the prose of Shrimad Bhagavatam 5.7.7., which was quoted in text 1 of this anuccheda.

10 Bhakti-matra devotional service is also described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.5.35):

"Whatever work is done here in this life for the satisfaction of the mission of the Lord is called bhakti-yoga, or transcendental loving service to the Lord, and what is called knowledge becomes a concomitant factor."*

11 Because it is helpful in performing devotional service, the knowledge (jnanam) mentioned here is knowledge of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The great devotees desire to please the Lord (bhagavat-paritosanam).

12-13 Bhakti-matra devotional service is also described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.30.39-40):

"Dear Lord, we have studied the Vedas, accepted a spiritual master and offered respect to brahmanas, advanced devotees and aged personalities who are spiritually very advanced. We have offered our respects to them, and we have not been envious of any brother, friends or anyone else. We have also undergone severe austerities within the water and have not taken food for a long time. All these spiritual assets of our are simply offered for Your satisfaction. We pray for this benediction only, and nothing more."*

14 Here the word "adabhram" means "for a long time". The speakers here say, "We desire that these may be for Your pleasure". This verse was spoken by the Pracetas to the eight-armed Purusa-avatara.

1 In this way aropa-siddha devotional service is described. Then the kind of mixed devotional service is called sanga-siddha is shown. Svarupa-siddha devotional service is described in these words of the sage Prabuddha (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.3.22):

"Accepting the bona fide spiritual master as one's life and soul and worshipable deity, the disciple should learn from him the process of pure devotional service. The Supreme Personality of Godhead, Hari, the soul of all souls, is inclined to give Himself to His pure devotees. Therefore, the disciple should learn from the spiritual master to serve the Lord without duplicity and in such a faithful and favourable way that the Supreme Lord, being satisfied, will offer Himself to the faithful disciple."

In this way there is neutrality, mercy and friendship in what is called bhagavata-dharma. Karma-misra (devotional service mixed with fruitive activities) is of three kinds. 1. sakama (with material desires), 2. kaivalya-kama (desiring liberation), and 3. bhakti-matra-kama (desiring only devotional service). Kaivalya-kama is described in these words:

2 "The activities of devotional service bring attainment of the four goals of life (sense gratification, economic development, religion and liberation). However, a person who sincerely takes shelter of Lord Narayana attains these four goals automatically, without have to struggle in any way."

3 In this way pure devotional service is described. However, one may have various kinds of desires and as these desires are manifested devotional service becomes mixed in various ways. In this way it is understood. Sakama devotional service is mixed mostly with fruitive actions (karma). Fruitive actions here means pious actions that follow various prescribed duties. The nature of this kind of devotional service is broadly described by the Yamadutas in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.1.40):

4 "That which is prescribed in the Vedas constitutes dharma, the religious principles and the opposite of that is irreligion. The Vedas are directly the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Narayana, and are self-born. This we have heard from Yamaraja."*

5 The Vedas deal mainly with the three modes of material nature. This is described in the following statement of Shri Bhagavad-gita (3.45):

"The Vedas deal mainly with the subject of the three modes of material nature. O Arjuna, become transcendental to these three modes. Be free from all dualities and from all anxieties for gain and safety, and be established in the self."*

6 Simply by engaging in devotional service one becomes perfect. To act out of ignorance is not the same as to act in devotional service. Ignorant action, or "karma", is defined in these words of Shri Bhagavad-gita (8.3):

7 "The indestructible, transcendental living entity is called Brahman, and his eternal nature is called adhyatma, the self. Action pertaining to the development of the material bodies of the living entities is called karma, or fruitive activities."*

8 Here the word "visargah" means "making offerings to the demigods". All religious duties performed in that way are called "karma". "Bhutanam" means "of the living entities", "bhavah" means "desires", and "udbhava-karah" means "creators". In this way it is explained that karma is different from devotional service. That devotional service is far better than ordinary pious deeds is described in the Eleventh Canto of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (11.19.27), where the Supreme Personality of Godhead explains:

9 "Actual religious principles are stated to be those that lead one to My devotional service."

10 Because they are also offerings to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, pious deeds are here called "bhakti-krt", or the companions of devotional service. Sakama devotional service that is also mixed with these pious deeds (karmas) are described in the following words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (3.21.6-9):

11 "Commanded by Lord Brahma to beget children in the worlds, the worshipful Kardama Muni practiced penance on the bank of the River Sarasvati for a period of ten thousand years.*

12 "During that period of penance, the sage Kardama, by worship through devotional service in trance, propitiated the Personality of Godhead, who is the quick bestower of all blessings upon those who flee to Him for protection."*

13 When he saw the sage, tears fell from the eyes of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. That is a sign that Kardama Muni was actually a niskama devotee, free of all material desires. Only to honour the order of the demigod Brahma did he act like a person pushed by material desire. In this way it should be understood. This verse was spoken by Shri Maitreya to Vidura.

1 Kaivalya-kama (desiring liberation) devotional service is sometimes mixed with karma and jnana, and sometimes mixed with jnana alone. Kaivalya-kama devotional service mixed with jnana alone is described in these words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.19.27):

"Real knowledge is the awareness that reveals My all-pervading presence."

2 Hearing, renunciation, yoga, sankhya, and other activities are parts of jnana, and that is why jnana may also be part of devotional service. Devotional service mixed with both karma and jnana is described by the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.27.21-23):

3 "One can get liberation by seriously discharging devotional service unto Me and thereby hearing for a long time about Me or from Me. By thus executing one's prescribed duties, there will be no reaction, and one will be freed from the contamination of matter.*

4 "This devotional service has to be performed strongly in perfect knowledge and with transcendental vision. One must be strongly renounced and must engage in austerity and perform mystic yoga in order to be firmly fixed in self-absorption.*

5 "The influence of material nature has covered the living entity, and thus it is as if the living entity were always in a blazing fire."*

6 Here the word "nimittam" means "result". In this case the cause of this result has no material desires. The word "amalatmana" means "by he who has a pure heart", "jnanena" means "with knowledge revealed by the scriptures", and "yogah" means "meditation on the individual spirit soul and the Supersoul".

7 The word "yoga" has many meanings, as the Amara-kosa dictionary explains:

"The word yoga means preparation, method, meditation, meeting and logic."

8 When there is no longer any distinction between the meditator and the object of his meditation, the meditation is called "samadhi". The following explanation is found in Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.81.19):

"The worship of His feet is the root cause of any person's attainment of heaven or of liberation, of all sorts of prosperity in the subterranean regions or on the earth, or of mystic perfections."

9 In this way it is explained that they (karma and jnana) are parts of devotional service, and devotional service is the whole that contains them. That is the vision of exalted souls. That is the meaning here. They who engage in devotional service mixed with karma and jnana attain only liberation as a result of their efforts. The verses quoted in texts 3-5 were spoken by Lord Kapiladeva.

Anuccheda 227

1 Devotional service mixed with jnana is described by the Lord Himself in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.18.21):

2 "Dwelling in safe and solitary place, his mind purified by constant thought of Me, the sage should concentrate on the soul alone, realising it to be non-different from Me."

3 Here the word "bhavah" means "meditation". This verse was spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Anuccheda 228

1 Devotional service that is mixed with jnana (jnana-misra) when there is a desire for liberation (kaivalya-kama) has thus been described. Now will be described devotional service mixed with karma (karma-misra) when there is a desire for devotional service alone (bhakti-matra-kama). This is described in the following words of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (11..19.20-24):

2-4 "Firm faith in the blissful narrations of My pastimes, constant chanting of my glories, unwavering attachment to ceremonial worship of Me, praising Me through beautiful hymns, great respect for My devotional service, offering obeisances with the entire body, performing first-class worship of My devotees, consciousness of Me in all living entities, offering of ordinary, bodily activities in My devotional service, use of words to describe My qualities, offering the mind to Me, rejecting of all material desires, giving up wealth for My devotional service, renouncing material sense gratification and happiness, and performing all desirable activities such as charity, sacrifice, chanting, vows and austerities with the purpose of achieving Me, these constitute actual religious principles, by which those human beings who have actually surrendered themselves to Me automatically develop love for Me. What other purpose or goal could remain for My devotee?"

5 Here the word "mad-arthe" means "for the purpose of serving Me", "arthasya parityagah" means "avoiding what is opposed to devotional service", "bhogasya" means "offering sandal paste and other gifts", "sukhasya" "being affectionate like to one's son", "ista" means "the cause of devotional service", "dharmaih" means "with devotional service, which is called bhagavata-dharma", and "evam dharmair atma-nivedanam" means "with one's body, mind and words one should engage in devotional service and completely surrender unto Me".

6 This is also described in Shrimad-Bhagavatam (5.18.12):

"All the demigods and their exalted qualities, such as religion, knowledge and renunciation, become manifest in the body of one who has developed unalloyed devotion for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Vasudeva. On the other hand, a person devoid of devotional service and engaged in material activities has no good qualities. Even if he is adept at the practice of mystic yoga or the honest endeavour of maintaining his family and relatives, he must be driven by his own mental speculations and must engage in the service of the Lord's external energy. How can there be any good qualities in such a man?"*

7 At the end of Shrimad-Bhagavatam 11.19.24 the Lord declares "ko 'nyo 'rtho 'syavasisyate", which means what goal remains to be attained, or what method of attaining a goal needs to be performed by one whose only desire is to engage in My devotional service?" This means that because such a devotee has completely surrendered to the Lord and taken shelter of Him, nothing else remains to be done by him.

1 Devotional service mixed with both karma and jnana is described in the following words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (3.29.15-19):

2 "A devotee must execute his prescribed duties, which are glorious, without material profit. Without excessive violence, one should regularly perform one's devotional activities.*

3 "The devotee should regularly see My statues in the temple, touch My lotus feet and offer worshipable paraphernalia and prayer. He should see in the spirit of renunciation, from the mode of goodness, and see every living entity as spiritual.*

4 "The pure devotee should execute devotional service by giving the greatest respect to the spiritual master and the acaryas. He should be compassionate to the poor and make friendship with persons who are his equals, but all his activities should be executed under regulation and with control of the senses.*

5 "A devotee should always try to hear about spiritual matters and should always utilise his time in chanting the holy name of the Lord. His behaviour should always be straightforward and simple, and although he is not envious but friendly to everyone, he should avoid the company of person who are not spiritually advanced.*

6 "When one is fully qualified with all these transcendental attributes and his consciousness is thus completely purified, he is immediately attracted simply by hearing My name or hearing of My transcendental quality.*

7 Here the word "nisevitenā" means "properly executed", "animittena" means "without desire", "svadharma" means "by performing one's regular and occasional duties", "mahiyasā" means "with faith and other virtues", "kriya-yogena" means "with devotional activities described in the Pancaratras and other scriptures", "sastena" means "in auspicious times, places and circumstances" and it also means "without desire", "nati-himsrenā" means "without excessive violence", "ati" means "because one knows that all living beings are like limbs of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, one avoids harming or killing anyone", "mad-dhīśnyam" means "My worshipable Deity form", "mad-bhavanāyā" means "meditating one Me as the Supersoul in all living beings", "sattvena" means "with patience and tolerance", "asangamena" means "with renunciation", "yamaiḥ" means "with celibacy, a vow of poverty, honesty, and non-violence", "niyamah" means "purity, satisfaction, austerity, scripture study, and meditation on the Supreme Personality of Godhead", "adhyātmikā" means "the scriptures that explain the difference between the individual spirit soul and the Supreme Personality of Godhead", "nirahankriyāyā" means "without pride", "mad-dharmāṇaḥ" means "of the person who follows My dharma", and "asayāḥ" means "consciousness". The Lord then declares, "sruta-matraguṇam mamañjasabhyeti" (the devotee is immediately attracted simply by hearing My name or hearing of My transcendental quality).

8 In Shrimad Bhagavatam (3.29.11) it is said:

"The manifestation of unadulterated devotional service is exhibited when one's mind is at once attracted to hearing the transcendental name and qualities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is residing in everyone's heart. Just as the water of the Ganges flows naturally down towards the ocean, such devotional ecstasy, uninterrupted by any material condition, flows towards the Supreme Lord.*

9 This verse describes uninterrupted meditation on the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Because here one hears about the Lord, the devotional service here is mixed with transcendental knowledge. The verses quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda were spoken by Lord Kapiladeva.

1 Now devotional service mixed with jñāna will be explained. In Shrimad Bhagavatam (6.16.62) it is said:

2 "One should further understand that the spirit soul, although very difficult for the materialist to perceive, is above all these conditions, and by the strength of one's discrimination one should give up the desire for fruitive results in the present life and in the next. Thus becoming experienced in transcendental knowledge, one should become My devotee.*

3 The word "dr̥ṣṭa" here means "was is seen in this life and the next", and "svena tejasa" means "with one's power of discrimination". This verse was spoken by Lord Sankarsana to King Citraketu.

1 Now svarūpa-siddha devotional service will be discussed. Svarūpa-siddha devotional service is divided into sakama (with material desires) and kaivalya-kama (with the desire for liberation). Each of these has different qualities. Sakama svarūpa-siddha devotional service is divided into two types: 1. in the mode of ignorance, and 2. in the mode of passion. The first of these is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.29.8):

2 "Devotional service executed by a person who is envious, proud, violent and angry, and who is a separatist is considered to be in the mode of darkness.*

3 Here the word "abhisandhaya" means "having in view", "samrambhi" means "angry", and "bhinnadrk" means "concerned only with his own happiness and distress, and therefore merciless to others". That is the meaning.

Anuccheda 232

The second kind of sakama svarupa-siddha devotional service is described by the Supreme Lord in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.29.9):

2 "The worship of Deities in the temple by a separatist, with a motive for material enjoyment, fame, and opulence, is devotion in the mode of passion."*

3 Here the word "prthak" means "separate from Me", and "bhavah" means "desire". Thus it is shown that such a person, pushed by the mode of passion, does not desire to attain Me (the Lord).

Anuccheda 233

1 Svarupa-siddha kaivalya-kama (desiring liberation) devotional service is in the mode of goodness. This is described by the Supreme Lord Himself in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.29.10):

2 "A worker free of attachment is in the mode of goodness, a worker blinded by personal desire is in the mode of passion, and a worker who has completely forgotten how to tell right from wrong is in the mode of ignorance. But a worker who has taken shelter of Me is understood to be transcendental to the modes of nature."*

3 This verse means, "to attain liberation (karma-niharam uddisya) he offers the results of his activities to the Supreme Personality of Godhead (parasmin)." Following the rules of devotional service he must worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is meant to be worshipped by everyone (yastavyam). The person described here does not worship (yajet) the Lord according to the philosophy of devotional service. He sees liberation as a goal separate (prthag-bhavah) from devotional service. Such a person is said to be in the mode of goodness (sattvikah). The meaning is that this last kind of devotional service is performed so one may become free from past karmic reactions.

4 That such a person is in the mode of goodness is confirmed by the following statement of Lord Krishna (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.25.26):

"A worker free of attachment is in the mode of goodness blinded by personal desire is in the mode of passion, and a worker who has completely forgotten how to tell right from wrong is in the mode of ignorance. But a worker who has taken shelter of Me is understood to be transcendental to the modes of nature."*

5 The Lord also explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.25.24):

"Absolute knowledge is in the mode of goodness, knowledge based on duality is in the mode of passion, and foolish, materialistic knowledge is in the mode of ignorance. Knowledge based upon Me, however, is understood to be transcendental."*

6 The Lord again explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.25.29):

"Happiness derived from the self is in the mode of goodness, happiness based on sense gratification is in the mode of passion, and happiness based on delusion and degradation is in the mode of ignorance. But that happiness found within Me is transcendental."*

In this way the goals and the means to attain the goals are different according to the different modes of material nature. This is explained in the second half of Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.29.10, which was quoted in text 2.

1 In order to understand the best kind of devotional service, these different varieties of devotional service have been described. That best kind is svarupa-siddha devotional service. Because in it one desires only to engage in devotional service, svarupa-siddha devotional service is transcendental and free of both material desires and the influence of the modes of nature. Because it is free of all sense of material possessiveness, it is better than the previously described varieties of devotional service. Svarupa-siddha devotional service is described in the following words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (3.29.11-14):

2-3 "The manifestation of unadulterated devotional service is exhibited when one's mind is at once attracted to hearing the transcendental name and qualities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is residing in everyone's heart. Just as the water of the Ganges flows naturally down towards the ocean, such devotional ecstasy, uninterrupted by any material condition, flows towards the Supreme Lord.*

4 "A pure devotee does not accept any kind of liberation: salokya, sarsti, samipya, sarupya or ekatva, even though they are offered by the Supreme Personality of Godhead."*

5 "By attaining the highest platform of devotional service, as I have explained, one can overcome the influence of the three modes of material nature and be situated in the transcendental stage, as is the Lord."*

6 The word "mad-guna-sruti-matrena" does not describe the attainment of any goal other than devotional service. The word "sarva-guhasayah" means "invisible to the material senses, He manifests His eternal form in the hearts of the conditioned souls". "Mayi avicchinna mano-gatih" means "the activities of the mind go to Me without being interrupted or diverted to anything else." This uninterrupted activity of the mind is explained with an example in the phrase beginning with "yatha". In this example the word "gatih" is understood in the second part. That is because this passage is written in the Vedic style. The word "laksanam" means "nature".

7 Here someone may object: How is it possible to hear the glories of the Lord? The Lord is completely different from the world of matter, and the material mind has no power to understand Him. For these two reasons it is not possible for anyone to describe His glories.

To this objection the following reply is given: In this verse the word "ahaituki" means "without seeking any other result", "avyavahita" means "pure devotional service (svarupa-siddha bhakti) not aropa bhakti or any other kind of imperfect devotional service, which is naturally filled with obstacles and defects. The words "ya bhaktih" refer to devotional service like this, pure devotional service (svarupa-siddha). In this kind of devotional service one is able to serve the Lord with one's ears and other senses. The words "matra", "avicchinna", "ahaituki" and other words here show that in this condition the mind is perfectly able to worship the Lord in this way.

8 Pure devotional service is described by the Lord Himself in these words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.25.26):

"A worker free of attachment is in the mode of goodness, a worker blinded by personal desire is in the mode of passion, and a worker who has completely forgotten how to tell right from wrong is in the mode of ignorance. But a worker who has taken shelter of Me is understood to be transcendental to the modes of nature."

By thus taking shelter of the Lord and performing other devotional activities one becomes free from the grip of the material modes. In this way one becomes able to hear and understand the Lord's glories.

9 The Lord describes His glories in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.13.40):

"All superior transcendental qualities, such as being beyond the modes of nature, detached, the well-wisher, the most dear, the Supersoul, equally situated everywhere, and free from material entanglement - all such qualities, free from the transformations of material qualities, find their shelter and worshipable object in Me."

10 In this way it is said that the Lord's qualities are spiritual, not material. In Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.29.13 (quoted in text 4) the word "ahaituki" (without material motive) is explained. In this verse the Lord declares, "A pure devotee (janah) does not accept (na grhnanti) salokya or any other kind of liberation, even though they are offered (diyamanam) by the Supreme Personality of Godhead, if by accepting that liberation the devotee is not able to serve the Lord (mat-sevanam vina)." For the sake of serving the Lord the devotee will accept liberation, but for his own sake the devotee will not accept liberation. That is the meaning here.

Here the word "sarsti" means "possessing opulences like the Lord's opulences". "Ekatva" means either merging into Bhagavan or merging into Brahman. In either situation because one has merged into the Lord one has no opportunity to serve Him, and for this reason the devotees never accept these impersonal liberations. That is the meaning. In the next verse it is said that pure devotional service (bhakti-yogakhyah) is beyond the touch of the modes of material nature. It is the highest platform of spiritual attainment (atyantikah).

11 In Shrimad Bhagavatam (3.15.48) it is said:

"Persons who are very expert and most intelligent in understanding things as they are engage in hearing narrations of the auspicious activities and pastimes of the Lord, which are worth chanting and worth hearing. Such persons do not care even for the highest material benediction, namely liberation, to say nothing of other less important benedictions like the material happiness of the heavenly kingdom."*

The liberation described here is impersonal liberation, where one merges into the existence of the Lord.

12 Here someone may object: If it is so that one must become free from the three modes of material nature before the Lord will appear before him and grant him liberation, then how is it possible that devotional service has the qualities you have described? How can it be self-perfect?

This objection is answered by the passage beginning with the word "yena". Here the Lord says, "One should not become discouraged and abandon his activities of devotional service, for by engaging in devotional service one will eventually attain a spiritual nature like Mine (mad-bhavaya). Then I will directly appear before you. In this way one becomes qualified (upapadyate) for spiritual life."

13 In Shrimad Bhagavatam (5.19.19-20) it is said:

"If one's position is ascertained by a bona fide spiritual master and one is properly trained to engage in the service of Lord Vishnu according to the four social divisions (brahmana, ksatriya, vaisya and sudra) and the four spiritual divisions (brahmacari, grhastha, vanaprastha and sannyasa), one's life becomes perfect.*

"After many, many births, when the results of one's pious activities mature, one gets an opportunity to associate with pure devotees. Then one is able to cut the knot of bondage to ignorance, which bound him because of the varied fruitive activities. As a result of associating with devotees, one gradually renders service to Lord Vasudeva, who is transcendental, free from attachment and to the material world, beyond the mind and words, and independent of everything else. That bhakti-yoga, devotional service to Lord Vasudeva, is the real path of liberation."*

14 There are many different paths of devotional service, which is free from the touch of the modes of material nature. This is explained in the beginning of the passage under discussion here (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.29,7):

15 "O noble lady, there are multifarious paths of devotional service in terms of the different qualities of the executor."*

16 Here the word "margaih" means "with different kinds", "margena" means "with different kinds of activities, such as hearing, with different kinds of consciousness, with different rasas, which begin with servitorship, with different modes of nature, which begin with the mode of ignorance, and with different activities of the modes of nature, which begin with ignorant violence." In this way the people have different kinds of consciousness (pumsam bhavo vibhidyate).

17 In the Mukta-phala-tika, Shrila Bopadeva comments on Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.29.14 (which was quoted in text 5):

"Here the word 'atyantikah' means 'nothing is greater than it'. The 'it' referred to here is 'bhakti-yoga', which is mentioned in the word 'bhakti-yogakhyah'. This is so because that is the primary meaning. Other paths make one attracted to things other than Lord Vishnu. They do not bring the same result as bhakti-yoga."

18 Devotional service is defined in the following words of Shri Gopala-tapani Upanisad (1.14):

"Devotional service to Lord Krishna is performed when the heart no longer desires any material benefit to be obtained in this life or the next. This is freedom from the bonds of karma."

19 In the Satapatha-brahmana it is said:

"Yajnavalkya said: Wishing to please Him, one should lovingly worship Lord Hari."

20 Here the word "premna" means "with pleasing Him as one's only desire", and "atma-hitaya" means "for His benefit".

Anuccheda 235

1 Thus there are many kinds of devotional service. Many adjectives, such as "akincana" and "ahaituki" have been used to describe devotional service. Devotional service is of two main kinds: 1. vaidhi, and 2. raganuga. In vaidhi-bhakti one performs devotional service by following the rules spoken in the scriptures.

Vaidhi-bhakti is itself divided into two kinds. In the first kind one is concerned with actions and one is made aware of what should be done and what should not be done. This first kind of vaidhi-bhakti is described in the following words of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (1.2.14):

2 "Therefore, with one-pointed attention, one should constantly hear about, glorify, remember and worship the Personality of Godhead, who is the protector of the devotees."*

3 In the second kind of vaidhi-bhakti one is concerned with worship, vows, and similar activities. This second kind of vaidhi-bhakti is described by the Lord Himself in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.27.53):

4 "But one who simply engages in devotional service with no consideration of fruitive results attains Me. Thus whoever worships Me according to the process I have described will ultimately attain pure devotional service unto Me."

5 Here the word "nairapeksyena" means "without material motives". What is unmotivated (ahaituka) devotional service like? It is described in this verse in the statement beginning with the word "bhakti-yogam". It is also described in the following words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.27.8-9), where Lord Krishna Himself explains:

6 "Now please listen faithfully as I explain exactly how a person who has achieved twice-born status through the relevant Vedic prescriptions should worship Me with devotion."

7 "A twice-born person should worship Me, his worshipable Lord, without duplicity, offering appropriate paraphernalia in loving devotion to My Deity form or to a form of Me appearing upon the ground, in fire, in the sun, in water or within the worshipper's own heart."*

8 This verse was spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

1 Thus the observance of ekadashi, janmastami and other holy days, are understood to be activities in vaidhi bhakti. Surrendering to and taking shelter of the Lord, service to the spiritual master and the Vaishnavas, and hearing and chanting the Lord's glories, are also included among the activities of vaidhi-bhakti. All of these activities together, or only one of them, or two or three of them, lead the devotee to advanced devotional service. That is confirmed by the scriptures.

The first of these, namely surrendering to and taking shelter of the Lord, puts an end to the fearful condition of repeated birth and death where one is troubled by the six enemies that are the vices of this world. Thus one should take shelter of the Lord and no one else. By desiring only to engage in devotional service one destroys the aversion to the Lord that is caused by those vices.

Taking shelter of the Lord alone is of two kinds: 1. not taking shelter of anyone else but the Lord. 2. intelligently rejecting any shelter but the shelter of the Lord. The first of these is described in the following words addressed to the Lord (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.3.21):

2 "No one in this material world has become free from the four principles birth, death old age, and disease, even by fleeing to various planets. But now that You have appeared, My Lord, death is fleeing in fear of You, and the living entities, having obtained shelter at Your lotus feet by Your mercy, are sleeping in full mental peace."*

3 The second is described by Lord Krishna Himself in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.12.14-15):

"Therefore, My dear Uddhava, abandon the Vedic mantras as well as the procedures of supplementary Vedic literatures and their positive and negative injunctions. Disregard that which has been heard and that which is to be heard. Simply take shelter of Me alone, situated within the heart of all conditioned souls. Take shelter of Me wholeheartedly, and by My grace be free from fear in all circumstances."

4 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"Here the word "codanam" means "the Sruti-sastra", and the word "praticodanam" means "the Smrti-sastra".

5 In Bhagavad-gita (18.66), Lord Krishna declares:

"Abandon all varieties of religion, and just surrender unto Me. I shall deliver you from all sinful reaction. Do not fear."*

6 The nature of surrendering to the Lord is described in the Vaishnava-tantra:

"The six divisions of surrender are the acceptance of those things favourable to devotional service, the rejection of unfavourable things, the conviction that Krishna will give protection, the acceptance of the Lord as one's guardian or master, full self-surrender, and humility."*

7 These six items of surrender may be divided into a whole and parts. Acceptance of the Lord as one's guardian or master is the whole, for in truth its definition is not different from the definition of the word "surrender". The other items of surrender are all the assistants of this one item. The words "anukulya" and "pratikulya" refer either to the devotees or to the surrendered soul.

8 The conviction that Krishna will give protection is explained in the following words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (3.16.37):

"My dear sons, the Lord is the controller of the three modes of nature and is responsible for the creation, preservation and dissolution of the universe. His wonderful creative power, yoga-maya, cannot be easily understood even by the masters of yoga. That most ancient person, the Personality of Godhead, will alone come to our rescue. What purpose can we serve on His behalf by deliberating on the subject?"*

9 Full self-surrender is explained in the following statement of the Gautamiya Tantra:

"A certain effulgent being resides in my heart. Whatever he orders, I do."

10 In the Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda, in the explanation of the word "namah" in the eight-syllable mantra, it is said:

11 "The syllable 'ma' means 'false-ego' and the syllable 'ma' means 'that which forbids'. Thus the word 'namah' thus means that the individual spirit soul, the knower of the field of activities, is not permitted to act independently.

12 "The individual spirit soul is completely dependent on the Supreme Personality of Godhead. His life and livelihood is completely dependent on the Lord. Therefore he should completely abandon all ideas that he is independent.

13 "Because the Supreme Personality of Godhead is completely independent, nothing is unattainable for Him. He has no troubles. He can do whatever He wishes."

14 In the Brahma-vaivarta Purana it is said:

"Lord Krishna is never far from they who are humble. Many tall mountains stand between Lord Krishna and they who are proud."

15 One who proudly thinks he is independent must stay in the material world of repeated birth and death. This is described in the Brahma's prayers in the Third Canto (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.9.9):

16 "O my Lord, the material miseries are without factual existence for the soul. Yet as long as the conditioned soul sees the body as meant for sense enjoyment, he cannot get out of the entanglement of material miseries, being influenced by Your external energy."*

17 Humility is described in the following verse (Shrila Rupa Gosvami's Shri Padyavali 66):

"O Lord, no one is more merciful than You and no one is more pathetic than I. I am very lowly and fallen. O Lord Yadunatha, please reflect on my case and do whatever is appropriate."

18 Acceptance of the Lord as one's guardian or master is described in the Nrsimha Purana, where Lord Nrsimhadeva says:

"Anyone who prays unto Me and takes shelter of Me becomes My ward, and I protect him always from all sorts of calamities."*

19 One may surrender to the Lord in three ways: with the body, mind and words. This is explained in the following words of Shri Brahma Purana:

"They become liberated who with their thoughts, words, and deeds surrender to the infallible Supreme Personality of Godhead. Yamaraja has no power to approach them."

20 This is also explained in these words of Shri Hari-bhakti-vilasa (11.677):

"One who with words and thoughts says, 'O Lord, I am Yours', and who surrenders his body to the Lord, becomes filled with bliss."

21 One who surrenders his entire body to the Lord at once attains all good fortune. Other attain different degrees of good fortune according to the degree of their surrender. Surrender to the Lord is glorified in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.19.9):

22 "My dear Lord, for one who is being tormented on the terrible path of birth and death and is constantly overwhelmed by the threefold miseries, I do not see any possible shelter other than Your two lotus feet, which are just like a refreshing umbrella that pours down showers of delicious nectar."

23 This verse means that the showers of the Lord's sweetness chase all miseries far away from the surrendered souls.

Anuccheda 237

1 In this way taking shelter of the Lord is described. Without first taking shelter of the Lord one cannot attain perfection. If one takes shelter of the Lord, then one attains all perfection.

2 This is described in the Garuda Purana:

"They who, shunning the paths of yoga and meditation, take shelter of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, cross beyond death and go to the abode of Lord Vishnu."

3 Therefore, one who desires perfection, and is able, should serve the feet of the spiritual masters who teach the scriptures and mantras glorifying the Supreme Personality of Godhead. By the mercy of these spiritual masters, one will become free of all impurities and attain the great mercy of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is described by Shri Narada in the following words of the Seventh Canto of Shrimad Bhagavatam (7.15.22-25):

4 "By making plans with determination, one should give up lusty desires for sense gratification. Similarly, by giving up envy one should conquer anger, by discussing the disadvantages of accumulating wealth one should give up greed, and by discussing the truth one should give up fear."*

5 "By discussing spiritual knowledge one can conquer lamentation and illusion, by serving a great devotee one can become prideless, by keeping silent one can avoid obstacles on the path of mystic yoga, and simply by stopping sense gratification one can conquer envy.*

6 "By good behaviour and freedom from envy one should counteract sufferings due to other living entities, by meditation in trance one should counteract sufferings due to providence, and by practicing hatha-yoga, pranayama and so forth one should counteract sufferings due to the body and mind. Similarly, by developing the mode of goodness, especially in regard to eating, one should conquer sleep.*

7 "One must conquer the modes of passion and ignorance by developing the mode of goodness, and then one must become detach from the mode of goodness by promoting oneself to the platform of suddha-sattva. all this can be automatically done if one engages in the service of the spiritual master with faith and devotion. In this way one can conquer the influence of the modes of nature.*

8 In the Vamana-kalpa, Lord Brahma explains:

"One's mantra is identical with his spiritual master. One's spiritual master is identical with Lord Hari. When the spiritual master is pleased, then Lord Hari is pleased."

9 It is also said:

"When Lord Hari is angry, one's spiritual master can protect him. When one's spiritual master is angry, no one can give protection. Therefore with all efforts one should strive to please his spiritual master."

10 Therefore one should always serve his spiritual master. In another place in the scriptures, the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself declares:

"First one should worship his spiritual master, and then afterward one should worship Me. One who does this attains perfection. One who does not finds that all his efforts are in vain."

11 In the Narada-pancaratra it is said:

"With body, mind and words, one should worship his Vaishnava spiritual master, who is like Lord Vishnu, and who teaches the science of Lord Vishnu. One who knows the true meaning of the scriptures is a Vaishnava.

12 "One who teaches the true meaning of the verses in the scriptures is always to be worshipped. What more need be said? He is a manifestation of Lord Vishnu Himself."

13 In the Padma Purana, Devadyuti prays:

"For me devotion to my spiritual master it is more important than devotion to Lord Hari. If I am devoted to my spiritual master, then Lord Hari will personally reveal Himself to me."

14 In such a situation there is no need even to worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead separate from the worship of one's spiritual master. This is explained in the Agama-sastra, where, in the course of describing the results of purascarana, it is said:

15 "As an alchemist's touch turns copper into gold, so the spiritual master's touch makes his disciple transcendental like Lord Vishnu Himself."

16 This is also explained in Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.80.34), where Lord Krishna declares:

"I, the Soul of all beings, cannot be satisfied as much by ritual worship, by generating progeny, by observing penances or by self-control, as I am by faithful service rendered to one's spiritual master."

17 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"This verse explains that no one is more to be worshipped than the spiritual master who gives transcendental knowledge. Therefore no duty is more important than the worship of him. In this verse the word "ijya" means "the ritual duties of a householder". "Prajatih" means "the second birth by accepting the sacred thread". That word describes the duties of a brahmacari. "Tapasa" describes the duties of a vanaprastha and "upasamena" describes the duties of a sannyasi". "Aham" means "I, the Supreme Personality of Godhead". The Lord then declares: "I, the Soul of all beings, cannot be satisfied by these things in the same way as I am by faithful service rendered to one's spiritual master."

18 Knowledge is of two kinds: 1. knowledge of Brahman, and 2. knowledge of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This verse has just been explained according to the first kind of knowledge. An explanation according to the second kind of knowledge follows.

Here the word "ijya" means "worship", "prajatih" means "Vaishnava initiation", "tapah" means "samadhi" and "upasama" means "faith in the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This verse was spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead to Shridama Vipra.

Anuccheda 238

1 It is good to serve other Vaishnavas when this service is ordered by one's spiritual master and when it does not create an impediment to the service of one's spiritual master. If one acts otherwise, he is at fault. Shri Narada explains this in the following words:

2 "He attains misfortune who worships someone else in the presence of his spiritual master. His worship becomes fruitless."

3 The qualities of a bona fide spiritual master are described in Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.3.21). If one's spiritual master does not have these qualities, and is envious of advanced devotees, and thus refuses to allow his disciples to honour and worship other devotees, the disciple should leave such a pretender spiritual master is not at fault. He has not disobeyed the teachings of the scriptures. The truth is that such a pretender spiritual master and his disciple both fall into calamity. This is described in the following words of Shri Narada-pancaratra:

4 "A spiritual master who speaks wrongly, without logic, and a disciple who hears wrongly, without logic, both go to a terrible hell for a long time that seems not to end."

5 Such a spiritual master should be worshipped from afar. If the spiritual master hates Vaishnavas, he should be rejected. This is described in the Smṛti-saṣṭra:

"A spiritual master who is materialistic, unaware of what should and should not be done, and deviated from the true spiritual path, should be rejected."

6 One who does not have the qualities of a Vaishnava is not a Vaishnava. This is explained in the verse beginning with the words "avaishnavopadistena" (quoted in anuccheda 207). If the spiritual master does not have the qualities thus described, it is best that one should serve a genuine exalted (maha-bhagavata) devotee instead of him. This exalted devotee, who should be equipoised and kind-hearted to his disciples, should be accepted as if he were one's spiritual master.

7 In the Shri Hari-bhakti-sudhodaya it is said:

"Association is very important. It acts just like a crystal stone, which will reflect anything which is put before it.* Therefore, for his own well-being an intelligent person will associate with someone who will bring good fortune."

This means that without the mercy of a great Vaishnava one cannot attain the condition where his heart is attracted to the Supreme Lord.

8 Therefore one should appropriately serve all persons who show the signs of being devotees of the Lord. Service to the great devotees is of two kinds: 1. association with devotees, and 2. worship and service of devotees. Association with devotees is described by Lord Krishna in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.12.1-2):

9-10 "My dear Uddhava, by associating with my pure devotee one can destroy one's attachment for all objects of material sense gratification. Such purifying association brings Me under the control of My devotee. One may perform the astanga-yoga system, engage in philosophical analysis of the elements of material nature, practice non violence and other ordinary principles of piety, chant the Vedas, perform penances, take to the renounced order of life, execute sacrificial performances and dig wells, plant trees, and perform other public welfare activities, give in charity, carry out severe vows, worship the demigods, chant confidential mantras, visit holy places or accept major and minor disciplinary injunctions, but even by performing such activities one does not bring Me under his control."

11 In the previous chapter, the Lord also explained (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.11.47):

"One who has executed sacrificial performances and pious works for My satisfaction, and who thus worships Me with fixed attention, obtains unflinching devotional service unto Me. By the excellent quality of his service such a worshipper obtains realised knowledge of Me."

12 Here the word "sadhu-sevaya" means "by a person who has faith in devotional service and who thus knows that all other spiritual paths are improper". "Ista" means "agnihotra, darsa, purnamasa, caturmasya, yaga, pasuyaga, vaisvadeva and bali-hrana, which are all described in the Seventh Canto of Shrimad Bhagavatam". "Purta" means "suralaya, arama, kupa, vapi, tadaga, and prapanna-sastra".

13 The Lord describes "ista" in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.11.43):

"One may worship Me within fire by offering oblations of ghee."

The Lord describes "purta" in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.11.38):

"One should work for the construction of flower gardens, fruit gardens and special areas to celebrate My pastimes."

14 Thus the Lord explains, "One who has executed sacrificial performances and pious works for My satisfaction, and who thus worships Me with fixed attention, obtains unflinching devotional service unto Me." This means that in the association of devotees one attains faith in confidential devotional service. The Supreme Lord is present in the sacrificial fire and thus agni-hotra-yajnas are offered to please Him. Digging wells, planting gardens, and other like activities are done here for the purpose of serving the Lord. Thus in the association of devotees one should serve the Supreme Lord. The Supreme Personality of Godhead is supremely independent and supremely powerful. It is He who gives the results of all actions. To explain the confidential truth of all this, the Lord Himself declares (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.11.49):

15 "My dear Uddhava, O beloved of the Yadu dynasty, because you are My servant, well-wisher and friend, I shall now speak to you the most confidential knowledge. Please hear as I explain these great mysteries to you."

16 Not yet having described that portion of His glories, the Lord proceeds to reveal that confidential knowledge in the passage beginning with Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.12.1.

17 In Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.12.1 the word "tyagah" means "renunciation", "daksina" means "charity", "yajnah" means "worship of the demigods", and "chandamsi" means "confidential mantras". Here the Lord explains, "By associating with My devotees, one brings Me under his control. By performing yoga or sankhya one does not bring Me under his control in the same way." That is the meaning here. The devotees are able to bring the Supreme Personality of Godhead under their control. Therefore the devotees are not ordinary persons. That is the meaning here.

18 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"Here the word 'vratani' means 'ekadashi' and 'other vows'."

However, of course, this does not mean that other Vaishnava vows are to be neglected. Still, this one vow, the ekadashi vow, bring a very great result, and thus the regular observance of it should not be avoided.

They who are qualified to perform pious deeds are described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.14.17):

19 "The Supreme Personality of Godhead, Shri Krishna, is the enjoyer of sacrificial offerings. Yet although His Lordship eats the oblations offered in the fire, my dear King, He is still more satisfied when nice food made of grains and ghee is offered to Him through the mouths of qualified brahmanas."*

20 The verse preceding this gives the following explanation (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.14.16):

"When one is enriched with wealth and knowledge which are under his full control and by means of which he can perform yajna or please the Supreme Personality of Godhead, one must perform sacrifices, offering oblations to the fire according to the directions of the sastras. In this way one should worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead."*

The devotees described here are not able to abandon the regulated performance of yajnas.

21 They who are qualified to engage in devotional service are described in these words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.19.21):

"Worship of My devotees is most important."

After one is initiated one must regularly worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead. One is not able to renounce that worship.

22 In the Skanda Purana it is said:

"In the Kali-yuga one who offers cooked rice to Lord Vishnu and then eats the remnants of that offering, obtains the pious results of a six month fast."

23 These words do not detract from the importance of observing ekadashi. One should regularly observe ekadashi and the other Vaishnava vows, for that brings a great result. Now we will reveal something about worshipping the Supreme Lord by observing ekadashi and the other Vaishnava vows.

24 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments on Shrimad-Bhagavatam 11.11.32:

"Here the word 'santyajya' means 'renouncing obstructions to true devotional service, obstructions such as fasting on viddha-ekadashi, failure to fast on krishna-ekadashi, and failure to offer foods to the Lord on ekadashi."

25 Commenting on the word "bhagavad-dharman" in a conversation of Shri Bhishma and Shri Yudhisthira in the First Canto of Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.9.27), Shrila Shridhara Svami explains:

"Dvadasi and other vows are pleasing to Lord Hari".

In the Third Canto of Shrimad Bhagavatam (3.1.19), Shrila Shridhara Svami comments on the words "vratani cere hari-tosanani":

"This refers to ekadashi and other vows."

The importance of ekadashi is also seen in the description of the Supreme Lord's mercy to King Ambarisa, the crest jewel of the devotees.

Anuccheda 239

1 Now we will continue the discussion. There are two ways to bring the Supreme Lord under one's control: a primary way and a secondary way. In the primary way one attains pure love for the Lord. This way is described in the following words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (5.6.18):

"My dear King, the Supreme Person, Mukunda, is actually the maintainer of all the members of the Pandava and Yadu dynasties. He is your spiritual master, worshipable Deity, friend and the director of your activities. To say nothing of this, He sometimes serves your family as a messenger or servant. This means He worked just as ordinary servants do. Those engaged in getting the Lord's favour attained liberation from the Lord very easily, but He does not very easily give the opportunity to render direct service unto Him."*

2 In the second way to bring the Lord under one's control one attains a result different from what is attained in the first way. The gopis are examples of devotees who employed the first way, and Banasura is an example of a devotee who employed the second way. In the second way the devotee is very eager to attain the result of his efforts. In the following words the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself gives examples of both ways to bring Him under control (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.12.3-6):

3-6 "In every yuga many living entities entangled in the modes of passion and ignorance gained the association of My devotees. Thus, such living entities as the Daityas, Raksasas, birds, beasts, Gandharvas, Apsaras, Nagas, Siddhas, Caranas, Guhyakas and Vidyadharas, as well as such lower-class human beings as the vaisyas, sudras and women and others, were able to achieve My supreme abode. Vrtrasura, Prahlada Maharaja and other like them also achieved My abode by association with My devotees, as did personalities such as Vrsaparva, Bali Maharaja, Banasura, Maya, Vibhisana, Sugriva, Hanuman, Jambavan, Gajendra, Jatayu, Tuladhara, Dharma-vyadha, Kubja, the gopis in Vrndavana and the wives of the brahmanas who were performing sacrifice."

7 Here the word "daiteyah" means "the asuras and danavas", "yatudhanah" means "the raksasas". An example of someone who took birth in these species is given in the passage beginning with the word "tvastra". "tvastra" means "Vrtrasura, who in his previous birth had the association of Lord Sankarsana, Narada Muni and Angira Muni."

8 "Kayadhava" means "Prahlada, the son of Kayadhu". When he was still in his mother's womb, Prahlada had the association of Narada Muni. The word "adayah" (beginning with) here refers to many other persons born in the previously described demonic species.

9 Vrsaparva was a danava. Abandoned by his natural mother, he was adopted by a great sage and thus he became a devotee of Lord Vishnu. His story is recounted in another Purana. Bali had the association of Lord Vamana and Prahlada Maharaja. This was because he understood the philosophy of devotion. Banasura had the association of Bali, Siva and the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Afterwards his many arms were cut off. He understood the glories of Lord Vishnu. He attained the association of the great devotee Lord Siva.

This was like having the association of the Supreme Lord Himself.

10 Maya was a danava. At the beginning of building the assembly house, he had the association of the Pandavas and the Supreme Personality of Godhead. At the end he attained the association of the Lord. Vibhisana was a yatudhana. He had the association of Hanuman and the Supreme Personality of Godhead. "Mrgah" refers to many animals, beginning with Sugriva and ending with Gajendra. "Rksa" refers to Jambavan. He had the association of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. "Gajah" refers to Gajendra. In his previous birth he had the association of great devotees, and in his final birth he had the association of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. "Grdhrah" refers to the bird (khagah) named Jatayu. He had the association of Garuda, Dasaratha and many other great souls. He directly saw both Shri Sita-devi and the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Many gandharvas and others are not specifically mentioned here because they are not very famous. Vaisyas and others among the human species are mentioned here. "Vanik-pathah" refers to Tuladhara. His glorious story is recounted in the Mahabharata. He had the association of gandharvas and Jajali Muni. The conclusion is that one should seek out the association of great devotees. "Vyadhah" refers to the hunter Dharma. "Sudrah" refers to the lowest caste.

11 The story of Dharma-vyadha is recounted in the Varaha Purana. In a former birth in the previous Kali-yuga, while he was in the company of a Vaishnava king named Vasu, he killed a brahmana, mistaking the brahmana for a deer. Then he became a brahma-raksasa. When the king went to Vishnuloka within the material world, he entered the king's body. When the king's enjoyment in Vishnuloka came to an end, he again attained the body of a king. By the power of the recitation of the prayer called Brahma-para, he left that body. He was called Dharma-vyadha and he was very averse to any violence. At the end he saw Lord Jagannatha and offered prayers to Him. Embracing the Lord, he attained sayujya-mukti.

12 Kubja had the association of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. In her previous birth she had the association of Narada Muni. She is famous among Lord Krishna's associates in Mathura. The gopis here refers the gopis in general. They came to Vraja, where they married Lord Krishna and enjoyed many pastimes with Him. They had the association of Lord Krishna's eternal beloveds. They saw Lord Krishna and enjoyed many pastimes with Him. In this way they associated with the Lord. The yajna-patnis had association with great devotees who chanted the glories of Lord Krishna. Here the word "apare" means "daityas and others".

1 No method of spiritual advancement is better than the association of devotees. This is confirmed by the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.12.7):

2 "The persons I have mentioned did not undergo serious studies of the Vedic literature, nor did they worship great saintly persons, nor did they execute severe vows or austerities. Simply by association with Me and My devotees, they achieved Me."

3 Here the Lord explains, "The persons I have mentioned did not undergo serious studies of the Vedic literature, nor did they worship great saintly persons, nor did they execute severe vows or austerities. Simply by association with Me and My devotees, they achieved Me."

Vrtrasura and others may have performed other kinds of spiritual activities in their previous births, but it was by associating with devotees that they finally attained spiritual success. This is also true of Dharma-vyadha and others.

4 Here the word "mat-sanga" means "association with Me or with My devotees". In either case there is association with Me". That is the meaning here. The association of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is present in the association of His devotees. By associating with the Lord's devotees, one attains the Lord's mercy. Thus there is no fault in the declaration that association with the Lord's devotees is the best of all spiritual activities.

5 In some situations one is able to associate with the Lord directly, and from this one attains love for the Lord. Therefore we say that in this situation the word "sat" means "the incarnation of the Lord". In this way the Lord gives His mercy. This does not deny the interpretation of the word "sat" as "devotee".

1 Association with the Lord's devotees is the primary way to bring the Lord under one's control. There is no other way. This is revealed in the following description of the gopis and others (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.12.8):

2 The inhabitants of Vrndavana, including the gopis, cows, unmoving creatures such as the twin arjuna trees, animals, living entities with stunted consciousness such as bushes and thickets, and snakes such as Kaliya, all achieved the perfection of life by unalloyed love for Me and thus very easily achieved Me."

3 Here the word "bhavena" means "with love, which is attained only by associating with devotees." This love is the primary way to bring the Lord under one's control.

4 This is explained in Shrimad Bhagavatam (9.4.66) where the Supreme Personality of Godhead declares: "As chaste women bring their gentle husbands under control by service, the pure devotees, who are equal to everyone and completely attached to Me in the core of the heart, bring Me under their full control."*

5 The Lord also says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.21):

"Being very dear to the devotees and sadhus, I am attained through unflinching faith and devotional service. This bhakti-yoga system, which gradually increases attachment for Me, purifies even a human being born among dog-eaters. That is to say, everyone can be elevated to the spiritual platform by the process of bhakti-yoga."*

6 Like the gopis, the cows were also spontaneously attracted to the Lord. Here the words "nagah" refers to the yamalarjuna and other trees, "mrgah" refers to the beings previously described, and "nagah" refers to Kaliya and other serpents. Here it is said that both yamalarjuna and Kaliya attained the same eternal association of the Lord. Here it is said that one becomes perfect by "sat-sanga", which was previously defined in two ways (as the association of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, or the association of His devotees). One does not attain the spiritual love described here by practicing yoga or following other non-devotional paths. This is described in Shrimad-Bhagavatam (11.12.2), where the word "yatha" indicates that devotional service is the best of all spiritual paths.

1 This is confirmed by the Lord Himself in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.12.9):

"Even though one engages with great endeavour in the mystic yoga system, philosophical speculation, charity, vows, penances, ritualistic sacrifices, teaching of Vedic mantras to others, personal study of the Vedas or the renounced order of life, still one cannot achieve Me."

2 Here the word "yam" refers "which love". This occurs even though (api) these devotees endeavour (yatnavan) with yoga to attain love for the Lord.

3 To show the most exalted status of the gopis, the Supreme Personality of Godhead gives an explanation that begins with the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.11.49):

"My dear Uddhava, O beloved of the Yadu dynasty, because you are My servant, well-wisher and friend, I shall now speak to you the most confidential knowledge. Please hear as I explain these great mysteries to you."

4 To reveal the greatest secret, the Lord speaks the passage that begins with these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.12.10):

"The residents of Vrndavana, headed by the gopis, were always completely attached to Me with deepest love. Therefore, when My uncle Akrura brought My brother Balarama and Me to the city of Mathura, the residents of Vrndavana suffered extreme mental distress because of separation from Me and could not find any other source of happiness."

The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

1 Even if one is not situated in transcendental knowledge, by associating with devotees he attains the goal of life. This is confirmed by the following words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (3.23.55):

2 "Association for sense gratification is certainly the path of bondage. But the same type of association, performed with a saintly person, leads to the path of liberation, even if performed without knowledge."*

3 Here the word "adhiya" means "without knowledge". The ignorance here is the mistaken idea that Narada Muni and other great sages are ordinary persons. This verse was spoken by Shri Devahuti.

Anuccheda 244

1 Thus the result of associating with great devotees has been described. The result obtained by serving great devotees is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.7.19):

2 "By serving the feet of the spiritual master, one is enabled to develop transcendental ecstasy in the service of the Personality of Godhead, who is the unchangeable enemy of the Madhu demon and whose service vanquishes one's material distresses."*

3 Here the word "yesam" means "of you great devotees", "sevaya" means "by service", and "jutashtasya" means "eternal". In this way one attains a festival of love for the feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead (bhagavatah padayo rati-raso bhavet). The adjective "tivra" here shows that by associating with devotees one attains the best result of devotional service. The result of associating with devotees is described in the passage beginning with the word "vyasanardanah". "Vyasana" here means "the material world of repeated birth and death". The value of associating with devotees is also seen in these words of Lord (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.19.21):

"Worship of My devotees is the most important."

In these words the Lord declares, "By worshipping My devotees one attains more intense love for Me than by worshipping Me directly."

4 This is confirmed by the following statement of Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda:

"My dear Devi, although the Vedas mention worship of demigods, the worship of Lord Vishnu is topmost and is ultimately recommended. However, above the worship of Lord Vishnu is the rendering of service to Vaishnavas, who are related to Lord Vishnu."*

5 The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Maitreya Muni to Vidura. Anuccheda 245

1 The result attained by not associating with devotees is shown in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.84.130:)

"One who accepts this bodily bag of three elements (bile, mucus, and air) as his self, who has an affinity for an intimate relationship with his wife and children, who considers his land worshipable, who takes bath in the waters of the holy places of pilgrimage but never takes advantage of those person who are in actual knowledge, he is no better than an ass or a cow."*

2 Here the word "kunape" means "the material body, which is meant for death, and which is defiled with the three material elements of bile, mucus, and air", "bhaume" means "thinking the land of his birth to be his worshipable Deity", "yat" means "of whom", "abhijnesu" means "they who are not wise knowers of the truth", and "atma-buddhih" means "filled with love for the material body". Such a person is said to be as lowly as a cow (sa eve go-kharah). He is like a wild ass from the forests of Sindhu or Sauvira. He is like a person born in a mleccha family. Although he thinks himself very wise and intelligent, he does not know what is the truth. Therefore he is lowly and degraded, the words "bhauma ijya-dhih" mean that he thinks the land of his birth to be his worshipable deity. He is to be distinguished from a neophyte devotee, who has begun the process of spiritual elevation. The neophyte devotee is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.47):

"A devotee who faithfully engages in the worship of the Deity in the temple but does not behave properly toward other devotees or people in general is called a prakṛta-bhakta, a materialistic devotee, and is considered to be in the lowest position."*

3 The position of the devotees is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.31.14):

"As pouring water on the root of a tree energises the trunk, branches, twigs and everything else, and as supplying food to the stomach enlivens the senses and limbs of the body, simply worshipping the Supreme Personality of Godhead through devotional service automatically satisfies the demigods, who are parts of that Supreme Personality."*

These words are not to be taken lightly. This verse was spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead to the assembled sages.

1 The result attained by serving great devotees is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.9.12):

"O Lord who have a lotus navel, if a person happens to associate with a devotee whose heart always hankers after Your lotus feet, seeking always their fragrance, he is never attached to the material body or, in a bodily relationship, to offspring, friends, home, wealth and wife, which are very, very dear to materialistic persons. Indeed, he does not care for them."*

2 Here the word "martyam" means "the material body, which is most dear to the conditioned soul". The devotees, however, forget about the material body and the children and others that are in relationship with the body.

Anuccheda 247

1 That one should appropriately worship the Vaishnavas is described in the following words of the Itihasa-samuccaya:

"To gain Lord Vishnu's mercy, one should first please the Vaishnavas. When the Vaishnavas are pleased, then Lord Vishnu is merciful. Of this there is no doubt.

2 The opposite of this is described in the following words of the Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda:

"A person who worships Lord Govinda but does not worship the Lord's devotees, is not himself a devotee. He is only a pretender."

3 In Shrimad Bhagavatam (4.21.12) it is said:

"Maharaja Prthu was an unrivalled king and possessed the sceptre for ruling all the seven islands on the surface of the globe. No one could disobey his irrevocable orders but the saintly persons, the brahmanas and the descendants of the Supreme Personality of Godhead (the Vaishnavas)."

4 This explanation is given about Shri Prthu Maharaja's pastimes. Something else is more important than birth in an exalted family. This is explained in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.11.35):

5 "If one shows the symptoms of being a brahmana, ksatriya, vaisya or sudra, as described above, even if he has appeared in a different class, he should be accepted according to those symptoms of classification."

6 In the Padma Purana, Shri Narada Muni explains:

"What more need be said? Brahmanas who are not Vaishnavas should never be seen, touched or spoken to."

7. In the Magha-mahatmya it is said: "One who refuses even to look at a non-Vaishnava brahmana, considering him degraded like a dog-eater, is a true Vaishnava. Above the class distinctions of ordinary society, he purifies the three worlds.

8 "They who are devoted to the Supreme Lord are never to be considered sudras. They are all great souls. They who are not devoted to Lord Vishnu are all sudras, regardless of the class of their birth."

9 In the Itihasa-samuccaya it is said:

"O best of brahmanas, when he is remembered, spoken to, or worshipped, a Vaishnava, even if born in a candala family, brings great purification."

10 If one sees a Vaishnava in any other way, one commits a great offense. This is described in the following words of the Itihasa-samuccaya:

"One who thinks that because of his birth a Vaishnava is a low-class sudra, or svapaca, goes to hell for a long time."

11 The nature of advanced devotional service is described in the Garuda Purana where the Supreme Personality of Godhead declares:

"The qualities of devotional service are: 1. love for My devotees, 2. being very pleased to worship Me, 3. being very pleased to hear about My glories, 4. manifesting a choked voice, tears in the eyes, and other symptoms of ecstatic love,...

12 ...5. dancing in ecstatic love for Lord Vishnu, 6. being free of hypocrisy, 7. personally worshipping the Lord, and 8. not being a professional worshipper, who worships Lord Vishnu only to earn his livelihood.

13 "These are the eight symptoms of devotional service. When these symptoms are manifested in a person born in a mlecha family, that person is the king of brahmanas. That person is the best of sages. He is wise. He is truly learned. To him gifts should be given, and whatever he offers should be accepted. As Lord Hari is worshipped, so should he also be worshipped."

14 The Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself declares:

"Even though a person is a very learned scholar of the Sanskrit Vedic literature, he is not accepted as My devotee unless he is pure in devotional service. However, even though a person is born in a family of dog-eaters, he is very dear to me if he is a pure devotee who has no motive to enjoy fruitive activity or mental speculation. Indeed all respect should be given to him and whatever he offers should be accepted. Such devotees are as worshipable as I am."*

15 Aware of the glories of devotional service, Durvasa Muni respectfully touched the feet of King Ambarisa. However, King Ambarisa did not reciprocate by worshipping Durvasa Muni. Shri Uddhava, other devotees and even the Supreme Lord Himself have offered obeisances to brahmanas who were not Vaishnavas. However, other Vaishnavas do not always do this in all circumstances. The Supreme Personality of Godhead explains (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.64.41):

16 "My dear followers, never treat a learned brahmana harshly, even if he has sinned. Even if he attacks you physically or repeatedly curses you, always continue to offer him obeisances."

17 To do otherwise is to disobey the Supreme Lord Himself. Therefore the verse from the Magha-mahatmya quoted in text 7 of this anuccheda should be understood to mean that one should not be eager to associate with Non Vaishnavas. This is also seen in the way Yudhisthira, Draupadi and other Vaishnavas dealt with Asvatthama. A person who honours Vaishnavas should not call the activities of Vaishnavas into question. This is seen in the following statement of the Lord (Bhagavad-gita 9.30):

18 "Even if one commits the most abominable action, if he is engaged in devotional service he is to be considered saintly because he is properly situated in his determination."*

20 In the Garuda Purana it is said:

"Even if he refuses to perform the duties of his asrama, and even if he acts badly, a devotee of Lord Vishnu is glorious like the rising sun. He purifies all the worlds."

21 This is confirmed by the following words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (3.33.7) where Devahuti tells Lord Kapiladeva:

"Oh, how glorious are they whose tongues are chanting Your holy name! Even if born in the families of dog-eaters, such person are worshipable. Persons who chant the holy name of Your Lordship must have executed all kinds of austerities and fire sacrifices and achieved all the good manners of the Aryans. To be chanting the holy name of Your Lordship, they must have bathed at holy places of pilgrimage, studied the Vedas and fulfilled everything required."*

22 Here the primary, etymological meaning of the word "svapaca" should be accepted. Therefore, even if he is of low birth, and even if his activities are abominable, a devotee of the Lord is not to be reviled or dishonoured. However, the devotee himself may feel remorse for his misbehaviour.

23 In the Garuda Purana it is said:

"A person who, hearing harsh words from a devotee, remains peaceful and tolerant, bows down before the devotee, and speaks sweetly to him, is a true Vaishnava."

24 In this way it is shown that one should serve the devotees of the Lord. That service begins with hearing the glories of the devotees. In Shrimad Bhagavatam (5.5.2.) it is said:

"One can attain the path of liberation from material bondage only by rendering service to highly advanced spiritual personalities. These personalities are impersonalists and devotees. Whether one wants to merge into the Lord's existence or wants to associate with the Personality of Godhead, one should render service to the mahatmas. For those who are not interested in such activities, who associate with people fond of women and sex, the path to hell is wide open. The mahatmas are equipoised. They do not see any difference between one living entity and another. They are very peaceful and are fully engaged in devotional service. They are devoid of anger, and they work for the benefit of everyone. They do not behave in any abominable way. Such people are known as mahatmas."*

25 By associating with great souls one attains the supreme auspicious benefit. The Lord explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.26.28-31):

26 "O greatly fortunate Uddhava, in the association of such saintly devotees there is constant discussion of Me and those partaking in this chanting and hearing of My glories are certainly purified of all sins."

27 "Whoever hears, chants and respectfully takes to heart these topics about Me becomes faithfully dedicated to Me and thus achieves My devotional service."

28 "What more remains to be accomplished for the perfect devotee after achieving devotional service unto Me, the Supreme Absolute Truth, whose qualities are innumerable and who am the embodiment of all ecstatic experience?

29 "Just as cold, fear and darkness are eradicated for one who has approached the sacrificial fire, so dullness, fear and ignorance are destroyed for one engaged in serving the devotees of the Lord."

30 In the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.26.27) the Lord describes the exalted qualities of the devotees:

"My devotees fix their minds on Me and do not depend upon anything material. They are always peaceful, endowed with equal vision, and free from possessiveness, false ego, duality and greed."

In Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.26.29 the word "bhaktim" means "love".

31 Lord Siva glorifies the devotees in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.24.570):

"If one by chance associates with a devotee, even for a fraction of a moment, he no longer is subject to attraction by the results of karma or jnana. What interest then can he have in the benedictions of the demigods, who are subject to the laws of birth and death?"*

32 Shri Saunaka Rsi glorifies the devotees in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.18.13):

"The value of a moment's association with the devotee of the Lord cannot even be compared to the attainment of heavenly planets of liberation from matter, and what to speak of worldly benedictions in the form of material prosperity, which are for those who are meant for death."*

33 In Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.26.31, the Lord gives an example. In that verse the word "vibhavasum" means "fire" and "srayamanasya" means "of one who approaches the fore of a yajna to begin worship". For such a person cold and other distresses are removed (apyeti). Fear (bhayam), which is caused by wicked persons and other causes, is also removed. In the same way a person who serves the devotees of the Lord (sadhun) becomes free of the material dullness caused by karma and other causes. The ignorance that is the root of the fears created in the material world of repeated birth and death, is then destroyed.

1 Now will be considered hearing the glories of the Lord. This hearing occurs when sounds describing the Lord's names, forms, qualities and pastimes, touch the ears. Hearing the holy name of the Lord is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.16.44):

2 "My Lord, it is not impossible for one to be immediately freed from all material contamination by seeing You. Not to speak of seeing You personally, merely by hearing the holy name of Your Lordship only once, even candalas, men of the lowest class, are freed from all material contamination. Under the circumstances, who will not be freed from material contamination simply by seeing You?"*

3 In this way by once hearing the holy name of the Lord one attains final liberation. However, by repeatedly hearing the holy name one attains great devotion to the Lord, which is better than liberation. This verse was spoken by King Citraketu to Lord Sankarsana.

Anuccheda 249

1 Hearing about the transcendental form of the Lord is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.9.5):

"O my Lord, persons who smell the aroma of Your lotus feet, carried by the air of Vedic sound through the holes of the ears, accept Your devotional service. For them You are never separated from the lotus of their hearts."*

2 The word "tu" (but) in this verse hints the existence of those persons who do not honour the Lord's transcendental forms, and who are thus the opposites of the devotees. Those persons are rebuked in the following words of the preceding verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.9.4):

"O Lord, those who are destined to be dispatched to the path of hell neglect Your personal form because of speculating on material topics."*

The word "asat-prasangah" here refers to they who are averse to the Lord.

3 In Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.9.5. is described great devotion to the Lord's feet. Here the word "gandham" means "the sweet fragrance of the words, form and other things". The devotees smell (jighranti) this sweet fragrance through the holes of the ears (karna-vivaraih). As through the nostrils one smells a sweet fragrance, so through the ears they relish the sweetness of the Lord. Here the word "sruti" means "the Vedas and other scriptures that follow the Vedic conclusion". The scriptures are the breeze (vata) that carries the fragrance of the Lord's sweetness. "Paraya bhaktya" means :with devotion characterised by spiritual love." Then the speaker says, "O Lord, You have no power to leave a person who has taken shelter of Your feet (grhita-caranam)." This verse was spoken by the demigod Brahma to Lord Garbhodakasayi Vishnu.

Anuccheda 250

1 Hearing about the transcendental qualities of the Lord is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.3.14-15):

"I have related to you the narrations of all these great kings, who spread their fame throughout the world and then departed. My real purpose was to teach transcendental knowledge and renunciation. Stories of kings lend power and opulence to these narrations but do not in themselves constitute the ultimate aspect of knowledge.

2 "The person who desires pure devotional service to Lord Krishna should hear the narrations of Lord Uttamasloka's glorious qualities, the constant chanting of which destroys everything inauspicious. The devotee should engage in such listening in regular daily assemblies and should also continue his hearing throughout the day."

3 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"In this verse the speaker describes the dynasties of the great kings. However, he does this with a desire to speak (vivaksaya) about transcendental knowledge (vijñāna) and renunciation (vairagya). Elaborate descriptions (vaco vibhutih) of departed (pareyusam) kings are not the ultimate aspect of knowledge (paramārthyam). In the next verse the words "nityam" and "abhikṣnam" means "every day".

4 In one sense, however, this statement is contradicted by the fact that among these descriptions of the great kings are descriptions of Lord Rama, Lord Lakṣmana and other incarnations of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. As a parasol bearer follows a king, so renunciation follows these descriptions of the Lord. In Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.1.13) it is said:

"O expert and thoughtful men, relish Shrimad Bhagavatam, the mature fruit of the desire tree of Vedic literatures. It emanated from the lips of Shri Sukadeva Gosvami. Therefore this fruit has become even more tasteful, although its nectarean juice was already relishable for all, including liberated souls."*

Although Shrimad Bhagavatam thus explains the nectar of transcendental rasas, those rasas are sometimes the santa-rasa and other rasa employed in direct devotional service, and sometimes they are santa-rasa and other rasas employed as helpers to lead one to direct devotional service. In this way the nectar rasas of devotional service are on different levels.

5 Here the word "guṇah" means "mercy and other virtues". The nature of the Lord's virtues is seen in the following statement of Bhagavad-gītā (11.36):

"O master of the senses, the world becomes joyful upon hearing Your name, and thus everyone becomes attached to You. Although the perfected beings offer You their respectful homage, the demons are afraid, and they flee here and there. All this is rightly done."*

6 The great devotees relish hearing the transcendental qualities of the Lord. This is described in the following words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.16.5-6):

"Please describe all these incidents if they relate to the topics of Lord Krishna. The devotees of the Lord are accustomed to licking up the honey available from the lotus feet of the Lord."*

7 Although the word "guṇa" here affirms that the Lord's forms and pastimes are all most excellent, it is nevertheless true that the Lord has a great variety of forms and pastimes.

8 Here the word "bhaktim" means "love" and the word "amalam" means "free from the desire for impersonal liberation". The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami.

1 The following explanation is given (Shrimad Bhagavatam 5.12.13):

"Who are the pure devotees mentioned here? In an assembly of pure devotees, there is no question of discussing material subjects like politics and sociology. In an assembly of pure devotees, there is discussion only of the qualities, forms and pastimes of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. He is praised and worshipped with full attention. In the association of pure devotees, by constantly hearing such topics respectfully, even a person who wants to merge into the existence of the Absolute Truth abandons this idea and gradually becomes attached to the service of Vasudeva."*

2 This is true of one who desires impersonal liberation. How much more true, then, it must be for one who desires only to engage in devotional service? Here the word "satim" means "free from the desire to attain impersonal liberation or anything other than devotional service". These other desires deviate one from the path of devotional service. This verse was spoken by a brahmana to King Rahugana.

1 They who are not interested in hearing the glories of the Lord are described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.1.4):

"Glorification of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is performed in the parampara system. That is, it is conveyed from spiritual master to disciple. Such glorification is relished by those no longer interested in the false, temporary glorification of this cosmic manifestation. Descriptions of the Lord are the right medicine for the conditioned soul undergoing repeated birth and death. Therefore, who will cease hearing such glorification of the Lord except a butcher or one who is killing his own self?"*

2 In this verse three kinds of persons are described: 1. the liberated souls, 2. they who aspire to become liberated, and 3. the materialists, who are interested in sense gratification. Here the word "pasughnah" means "a butcher or a hunter".

3 These three classes of persons are described in the following words:

"O prince, may you live a long life. O brahmachari, may you die now. O saintly person, may you live or die. But you, O butcher, don't either live or die."*

Note: The prince is here blessed to live a long life, for while he lives he may enjoy many hedonistic pleasures and thus postpone the suffering he will have to experience in the next life as the karmic result of his many sins. The brahmachari is presently performing severe austerities. He is blessed to die so his austerities may end and he may enjoy his reward of blissful life in the spiritual world. The saint is blessed either to live or to die. If he lives he preaches the glories of the Lord in this world and if he dies he returns to the spiritual world. Either destiny is good for him. The butcher is blessed to neither live nor die. In this life he suffers because of his sins and in the next life he will suffer even more. Therefore he should neither live nor die.

4 This nyaya affirms that a butcher is not able to relish spiritual happiness. He cannot understand spiritual happiness and, because it is very confidential, he cannot taste the sweet nectar of the topics of the Supreme Lord. Because a butcher is demonic by nature he is fit only to be criticised. Because he is violent by nature the word "pasughna" is used to describe him. The word "pasughna" means "a hunter or a butcher". Such a person does not consider the beauty and other good qualities of deer and other animals. He is interested only in harming others. Because such a person cannot taste the nectar of Krishna consciousness, Shrimad Bhagavatam declares "vina pasughnat" (except a butcher). Because they are also averse to the Supreme Lord, such persons are violent in two ways. This second form of violence is described in the following words of the Third Canto (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.13.50):

5 "Who, other than one who is not a human being, can exist in this world and not be interested in the ultimate goal of life? Who can refuse the nectar of narrations about the Personality of Godhead's activities, which by itself can deliver one from all material pangs?"*

6 This verse was spoken by King Pariksit to Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami.

1 Hearing descriptions of the Lord's pastimes is explained in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.3.12):

"Transcendental knowledge in relation with the Supreme Lord Hari is knowledge resulting in the complete suspension of the waves and whirlpools of the material modes. Such knowledge is self-satisfying due to its being free from material attachment, and being transcendental it is approved by authorities. Who could fail to be attracted?"

2 Here the words "jnanam yat" mean "knowledge of the Lord's pastimes". What is that knowledge like? The verse explains, "it results in the complete (a) suspension (pratinivrttam) of the waves (urmi) and whirlpools (cakram) of the material modes (guna). Such knowledge is self-satisfying (atma-prasadah) due to its being free from material attachment." What more may be said of it? "It brings liberation (kaivalya) as its result". This transcendental knowledge is described by the Lord Himself in these words (Bhagavad-gita 18.54):

"One who is thus transcendently situated at once realises the Supreme Brahman and becomes fully joyful. He never laments or desires to have anything. He is equally disposed toward every living entity. In that state he attains pure devotional service unto Me."*

The Shrimad Bhagavatam verse explains, "This knowledge is the path (sammatah panthah) by which one attains loving devotional service to the Lord (bhakti-yogah). Simply by hearing about the Lord all these results are obtained. Simply by hearing about Lord Krishna's pastimes (hari-kathasu) one becomes filled with happiness (nirvrtah). One no longer finds happiness in any other thing. Therefore who (kah) could fail (na) to be attracted (ratim kuryat)?"

The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 254

1 What more may be said? Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.5.8) explains:

"You have not actually broadcast the sublime and spotless glories of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. That philosophy which does not satisfy the transcendental senses of the Lord is considered worthless."*

2 In Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.5.13) it is also said:

"O Vyasadeva, Your vision is completely perfect. Your good fame is spotless. You are firm in vow and situated in truthfulness. And thus You can think of the pastimes of the Lord in trance for the liberation of the people in general from all material bondage."*

3 The Lord's pastimes are divided into two groups: 1. the pastimes that begin with creation, and 2. the pastimes of the Lord's pastime-incarnations. The second group is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.6.46):

4 "O Narada, now I shall state, one after another, the transcendental incarnations of the Lord known as lila-avatars. Hearing of their activities counteracts all foul matters accumulated in the ear. These pastimes are pleasing to hear and are to be relished. Therefore they are in my heart."*

5 Preceding this verse is this statement (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.6.42):

"Karanarnavasayi Vishnu is the first incarnation of the Supreme Lord, and He is the master of eternal time, space, cause and effects, mind, the elements, the material ego, the modes of nature, the senses, the universal form of the Lord, Garbhodakasayi Vishnu, and the sum total of all living beings, both moving and non moving."*

6 In Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.6.46 the word "purusa" means "the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is the master of time and other potencies and the creator of the mind and other ingredients of the material world". Here the speaker says, "I will describe the guna-avatars beginning with Lord Brahma, and the vibhuti-avatars beginning with Daksa, and I also will describe the Lord's pastimes beginning with His pastime of creation."

This verse declares, "O Narada, now I shall state, one after another, the transcendental incarnations of the Lord known as lila-avatars. Hearing of their activities counteracts all foul matters accumulated in the ear. Therefore they are in my heart. Hearing of these activities removes the desire to hear of anything else. Now I will describe these beautiful pastimes one after another. These pastimes should be completely drunk up (by the ears)." This verse was spoken by Lord Brahma to Narada Muni.

1 Hearing of the pastimes of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is also glorified in the prayers by the Personified Vedas (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.87.21):

"O Lord, You manifest Your personal forms to propagate this unfathomable science of the self. The fortunate souls who can thus relieve themselves of the fatigue of material life by diving into the vast ocean of nectar which is Your pastimes, O Lord, no longer desire even liberation. They renounce the happiness of family life because they have been able to associate with the swarms of swans who enjoy at the lotus flower of Your feet."

2 In the First Canto (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.2.34) it is also said:

"Thus the Lord of the universes maintains all planets inhabited by the demigods, men and lower animals. Assuming the roles of incarnations, He performs pastimes to reclaim those in the mode of pure goodness."*

Here the word "lilavataranuratah" refers to the Supreme Lord.

3 In Bhagavad-gita (4.9) Lord Krishna Himself affirms:

"One who knows the transcendental nature of My appearance and activities does not, upon leaving the body, take birth again in this material world, but attains My eternal abode, O Arjuna."*

4 In this way even a conditioned soul residing in a material body can conquer over death and become a personal associate of the Supreme Lord. This truth is also confirmed by the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.14.5-6):

5 "O warrior, the inquiry made by you is just befitting a devotee because it concerns the incarnation of the Personality of Godhead. He is the source of liberation from the chain of birth and death for all those who are otherwise destined to die."*

6 "By hearing these topics from the sage (Narada), the son of King Uttanapada (Dhruva) was enlightened regarding the Personality of Godhead, and he ascended to the abode of the Lord, placing his feet over the head of death."*

7 Here the word "munina" means "by Shri Narada". In this way are heard the topics of the Lord's incarnations. Thus in this body one conquers over death. Then one becomes a personal associate of the Lord. That is said in this verse.

8 Dhruva Maharaja's becoming a personal associate of the Lord is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.12.29):

"Before getting aboard, Dhruva Maharaja worshipped the airplane, circumambulated it, and also offered obeisances to the associates of Vishnu. In the meantime he became as brilliant and illuminating as molten gold. He was thus completely prepared to board the transcendental plane."*

9 The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Shri Maitreya.

Anuccheda 256

1 Now hearing the Lord's holy names will be described. One should also hear about the great devotees of the Lord.

2 This is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.13.4):

"Persons who hear from a spiritual master with great labour and for a long time must hear from the mouths of pure devotees about the character and activities of pure devotees. Pure devotees always think within their hearts of the lotus feet of the Personality of Godhead, who awards His devotees liberation."*

3 Although it is possible for one to jump over the many stages of spiritual advancement and attain perfection in a single moment, still, the general path is that first one hears the Lord's holy name, and in that way one's heart becomes purified. When one's heart is purified, by hearing about the Lord's transcendental form the Lord's form appears in one's heart. When the Lord's form appears in this way, the Lord's transcendental qualities are then clearly manifested.

4 As one makes spiritual advancement and the Lord's pastimes become manifest, the names, forms, and qualities of the Lord's personal associates are also manifest. In this way the devotional activities of hearing and remembering are described. Thus one hears the glories of the Lord, glories chanted by the great souls. Hearing of the Lord's glories brings great happiness to the devotees who are attracted to the Lord. Hearing of the glories of the Lord is of two kinds: 1. hearing the Lord's glories as they are revealed by the great souls, and 2. hearing the glorification of these revelations the great souls have given of the Lord's glories. The former is described in these words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.3.40):

5 "This Shrimad Bhagavatam is the literary incarnation of God, and it is compiled by Shrila Vyasadeva, the incarnation of God. It is meant for the ultimate good of all people, and it is all-successful, all-blissful and all-perfect."*

6 These words are spoken to glorify Shrimad Bhagavatam and identify its author (Shrila Vyasadeva). This verse was spoken by Shrila Suta Gosvami.

1 Shrimad Bhagavatam is also glorified in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.1.3):

"O expert and thoughtful men, relish Shrimad Bhagavatam, the mature fruit of the desire tree of Vedic literatures. It emanated from the lips of Shri Sukadeva Gosvami. Therefore this fruit has become even more tasteful, although its nectarean juice was already relishable for all, including liberated souls."*

2 Because it is nectar flowing from Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami's mouth, Shrimad Bhagavatam brings the greatest happiness. Because they have qualities like this, the Vaishnava scriptures, such as Shri Krishna-karnamrta, written by Shri Lilasuka, should be embraced to one's heart. Hearing the glorification of the revelations the great souls have given of the Lord's glories is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam

4.20.25):

3 "My dear Lord, You are glorified by the selected verses uttered by great personalities. Such glorification of Your lotus feet is just like saffron particles. When the transcendental vibration from the mouths of great devotees carries the aroma of the saffron dust of Your lotus feet, the forgetful living entity gradually remembers his eternal relationship with You. Devotees thus gradually come to the right conclusion about the value of life. My dear Lord, I therefor do not need any other benediction but the pure opportunity to hear from the mouth of Your pure devotee."*

4 The following description is given in the previous verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.20.24):

"My dear Lord, I therefore do not wish to have the benediction of merging into Your existence, a benediction in which there is no existence of the nectarean beverage of Your lotus feet. I want the benediction of at least one million ears, for thus I may be able to hear about the glories of Your lotus feet from the mouths of Your pure devotees."*

The preceding verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.20.23) means, "O Lord, the breeze carrying even a single drop of the sweetness of Your lotus feet, a breeze wafting from the mouth of Your pure devotees, at once eclipses the happiness of impersonal liberation. This breeze brings to us, who have forgotten the truth about You, the memory of You." These verses were spoken by King Prthu to Lord Vishnu.

1 Hearing of the Lord's pastimes brings great glory and great happiness. Both are described in two verses the first of which follows (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.29.40):

2 "My dear king, in the place where pure devotees live, following the rules and regulations, and thus purely conscious and engaged with great eagerness in hearing and chanting the glories of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, in that place if one gets a chance to hear their constant flow of nectar, which is exactly like the waves of a river, one will forget the necessities of life, namely hunger and thirst, and become immune to all kinds of fear, lamentation and illusion."*

3 Here the word "tasmin" means "in the association of devotees", "mahadbhir mukharitah" means "glorified by the great souls", "sesa" means "the best", "avitsah" means "without any idea of ever becoming satisfied", "gadha" means "attentive", and "asana" means "hunger".

4 In the second of these two verses (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.29.41) it is said:

"Because the conditioned soul is always disturbed by the bodily necessities such as hunger and thirst, he has very little time to cultivate attachment to hearing the nectarean words of the Supreme Personality of Godhead."*

5 This verse means, "Because the conditioned soul is always disturbed by the bodily necessities such as hunger and thirst, he has very little time to cultivate attachment to hearing the nectarean words of the Supreme Personality of Godhead."* Thus the conditioned souls neglect the glories of the Lord, which are chanted by the great souls. Instead they think only of their own material happiness. That is the meaning of these two verses. These verses were spoken by Shri Narada to King Pracinabarhi.

1 Hearing Shrimad Bhagavatam is the best kind of hearing. This is so because the words of Shrimad Bhagavatam are most glorious and also because Shrimad Bhagavatam is the sweetest nectar. This is confirmed by the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.1.2):

2 "This beautiful Bhagavatam, compiled by the great sage Vyasadeva (in his maturity), is sufficient in itself for God realisation. What is the need of any other scripture? As soon as one attentively and submissively hears the message of Bhagavatam, by this culture of knowledge the Supreme Lord is established within his heart."*

3 Here the word "maha-muni" means "the Supreme Lord, whose lotus feet are worshipped by all great souls". The words "kim va paraih" show the glory of Supreme Personality of Godhead. This verse was spoken by Shri Vyasa.

Anuccheda 261

1 At the end of Shrimad Bhagavatam (12.13.15) it is said:

"Shrimad Bhagavatam is declared to be the essence of all Vedanta philosophy. One who has felt satisfaction from its nectarean mellow will never be attracted to any other literature."*

2 Here the word "rasamrta-trptasya" means "one who is satisfied by drinking that nectar". This verse was spoken by Shrila Suta Gosvami.

Anuccheda 262

1 In this way it should be understood: Hearing the holy name of the Supreme and the descriptions of Him brings the greatest benefit. Thus hearing is of two kinds: 1. hearing the Lord's glories as they are revealed by the great souls, and 2. hearing the glorification of these revelations the great souls have given of the Lord's glories. The latter especially means glorification of Shrimad Bhagavatam.

2 In Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.3.48) it is said:

"The devotee should worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead in the particular personal form of the Lord the devotee finds most attractive."

Thus one should again and again hear the holy names and descriptions of the form of the Lord one finds most attractive. One should hear these descriptions from the mouth of a self-realised soul. By hearing the holy names and descriptions of Lord Krishna, one attains the greatest good fortune. This is so because Lord Krishna is the original form of the Lord. In the same way one should also glorify Lord Krishna and serve Him in other ways also. Thus the Supreme Lord should be glorified and the books about the Lord, books written by great souls like Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami, should also be glorified.

3 In this way hearing about the Lord is revealed. Hearing comes first, before glorifying or the other methods of devotional service to the Lord, for without first hearing one cannot attain knowledge of the Lord or the different activities of devotional service. Specifically, if the books written by great souls to glorify the Lord are not manifested, then it is not possible to attain the good fortune of hearing about the Lord. Therefore those books should also be glorified, for they are most important.

4 This is confirmed by the followings words of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (1.5.11):

"On the other hand, that literature which is full of descriptions of the transcendental glories of the name, fame, forms, pastimes, etc., of the unlimited Supreme Lord is a different creation, full of transcendental words directed toward bringing about a revolution in the impious lives of this world's misdirected civilisation. Such transcendental literatures, even though imperfectly composed are heard, sung and accepted by purified men who are thoroughly honest."*

5 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"Here the word 'srnvanti' means 'one hears someone else chant the Lord's holy names (namani), 'grnanti' means 'one accepts the Lord's holy names when they are heard', and 'gayanti' means 'one personally chants the Lord's holy names'."

6 Now will be discussed the activities of glorifying the Lord. As before, the activities of glorification relate to the different features of the Lord, beginning with His holy name. The glorification of the Lord's holy name is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.2.10):

7 "The chanting of the holy name of Lord Vishnu is the best process of atonement for a thief of gold or other valuables, for a drunkard, for one who betrays a friend or relative, for one who kills a brahmana, or for one who indulges in sex with the wife of his guru or other superior. It is also the best method of atonement for one who murders women, the king, or his father, for one who slaughters cows, and for all other sinful men. Simply by chanting the holy name of Lord Vishnu, such sinful persons may attract the attention of the Supreme Lord, who therefore considers, 'Because this man has chanted My holy name, My duty is to give him protection'."*

8 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"Here the word 'suniskrtam' means 'the best process of atonement'. The reason this is so is given in these words: 'Simply by chanting the holy name of Lord Vishnu, such sinful persons may attract the attention of the Supreme Lord, who therefore considers, 'Because this man has chanted My holy name, My duty is to give him protection'.'"

9 The Supreme Lord is present in His holy name. By hearing the holy name, the great devotees attain love for the Lord.

10 In the Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda, in the 108 names of Lord Rama, Lord Siva explains: "O goddess, whenever I hear a word that begins with the syllable 'ra', my heart becomes filled with love, for I think, 'will the next syllable make the word Rama?'"

11 If this is so, then how powerful must the Lord's holy name be in destroying sins? The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by the Vishnudutas to the Yamadutas.

Anuccheda 263

1 The result obtained by chanting the Lord's holy name is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.400):

2 "When a person is actually advanced and takes pleasure in chanting the holy name of the Lord, who is very dear to him, he is agitated and loudly chants the holy name. He also laughs, cries, becomes agitated and chants just like a madman, not caring for outsiders."*

3 The word "evam" (thus) in this verse is explained by the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.2.390):

"An intelligent person who has controlled his mind and conquered fear should give up all attachment to material objects such as wife, family and nation and should wander freely without embarrassment, hearing and chanting the holy names of the Lord, the bearer of the chariot wheel. The holy names of Krishna are all-auspicious because they describe His transcendental birth and activities, which He performs within this world for the salvation of the conditioned souls. Thus the holy names of the Lord are sung throughout the world."

4 Here the word "vratah" means "activities", "sva-priyani" means "which are dear", "namani" means "the names that are chanted", "jatanuragah" means "the love that is aroused by chanting the holy names", "druta-cittah" means "the heart melting with love", and "hasati" means "pushed by ecstatic love, he laughs". The word "nama-kirtya" is in the instrumental case for it is by chanting the holy name that one becomes advanced in spiritual life. Thus Shrimad-Bhagavatam 11.2.40 is explained.

5 The nature of advanced devotional service is also described in these words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.2.42):

"Devotion, direct experience of the Supreme Lord, and detachment from other things, these three occur simultaneously for one who has taken shelter of the Supreme Lord, in the same way that pleasure, nourishment and relief from hunger come simultaneously and increasingly, with each bite, for a person engaged in eating."

6 In the commentary it is said:

"Someone may protest: 'The supreme goal is very difficult to attain. Great yogis attain it only after many births. How is it possible that one can attain in one birth merely by chanting the holy names of the Lord?' Fearing that someone may raise this objection, the speaker of Shrimad Bhagavatam gives this example."

7 In other Puranas, in the Shri Bhagavan-nama-kaumadi and in the Sahasra-nana-bhasya the following explanation is given:

8 "Day and night one may be humble, peaceful, and fearless and one may eat frugally, see with spiritual vision and conquer over sleep. Even if one does all this, his heart may still not become attached to the Supreme Lord. However, if, unconcerned about the opinions of others, one always chants the Lord's holy names, the holy names will make one fall in love with the Supreme Lord."

9 The qualities, beginning with fearlessness, mentioned here, are meant to help one become exclusively attached to the holy name. However, they are not part of the activities of glorifying the holy, for devotional service is independent of all other activities. That is the nature of devotional service. The following explanation is given in the Vishnu-dharmottara Purana in the story of the Ksatra-bandhu who had committed great sins, very great sins, and all sins:

10 "The brahmana said: If you are not able to do all this, then I will tell you something else, something very simple, something you can do very easily.

11 "The Ksatra-bandhu said: I cannot do what you have said, for my mind is very restless. Please tell me something that my body and voice have the power to do.

12 "The brahmana said: They who stumble with hunger and thirst, they who are awake, they who are dreaming, and they who restlessly wander in this world should always chant 'O Govinda!'"

The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Shri Kavi to the king of Videha.

Anuccheda 264

1 In another verse of Shrimad Bhagavatam (6.2.11) it is said:

"By following the Vedic ritualistic ceremonies or undergoing atonement, sinful men do not become as purified as by chanting once the holy name of Lord Hari. Although ritualistic atonement may free one from sinful reactions, it does not awaken devotional service, unlike the chanting of the Lord's names, which reminds one of the Lord's fame, qualities, attributes, pastimes and paraphernalia."*

2 The chanting of the Lord's holy name not only destroys sins, it also reminds one of the Lord's transcendental qualities. This verse was spoken by the Vishnudutas to the Yamadutas.

1 At the end of the second canto of Shrimad Bhagavatam, King Pariksit expresses a desire to know what is the highest good. In the beginning of the second canto, Shri Sukadeva Gosvami gives this, the best of all answers (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.1.8-10):

2 "At the end of the Dvapara-yuga, I studied this great supplement of Vedic literature named Shrimad Bhagavatam, which is equal to all the Vedas, from my father, Shrila Dvaipayana Vyasadeva.*

3 "O saintly King, I was certainly situated perfectly in transcendence, yet I was still attracted by the delineation of the pastimes of the Lord, who is described by enlightened verses.*

4 "That very Shrimad Bhagavatam I shall recite before you because you are the most sincere devotee of Lord Krishna. One who gives full attention and respect to hearing Shrimad Bhagavatam achieves unflinching faith in the Supreme Lord, the giver of salvation."*

5 After thus explaining the supreme glory of Shrimad Bhagavatam Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami proceeds to recite the different parts of Shrimad Bhagavatam. There he explains the supreme importance of chanting the holy name of the Lord. In the following words he describes the supreme goal and best way to attain it (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.1.11):

6 "O King, constant chanting of the holy name of the Lord after the ways of the great authorities is the doubtless and fearless way of success for all, including those who are free from all material desires, those who are desirous of all material enjoyment, and also those who are self-satisfied by dint of transcendental knowledge."*

7 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"This verse means, 'No method of spiritual advancement is better than this'. Here the word 'icchatam' means 'of they who have material desires'. This method is the way for them to attain their desires. 'Nirvidyamananam' means 'of they who desire liberation'. This method is the way for them to attain liberation. 'Yoginam' means 'of the jnanis'. This method is the way for them to attain their goal. That is the conclusion (nirnitam). No further evidence is needed to prove this point.

8 In this way the chanting of the holy names of the Lord is greatly glorified. In Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.6.26) it is said:

"Thus I began chanting the holy name and fame of the Lord by repeated recitation, ignoring all the formalities of the material world. Such chanting and remembering of the transcendental pastimes of the Lord are benedictory. So doing, I travelled all over the earth, fully satisfied, humble and unenvious."*

9 In the Padma Purana it is said that ten kinds of offenses to the holy name are to be avoided. Shri Sanat Kumara explains:

"One who commits all kinds of offenses may become delivered by taking shelter of Lord Hari. One who commits offenses to Lord Hari is an animal, even though he may stand on two feet.

10 "One who takes shelter of the holy name of the Lord becomes delivered by the power of the holy name. He falls down who commits offenses to the holy name, the friend of all."

11 The offenses to the holy name are described in the following words (Padma Purana, Brahma-khanda, 25.15-18):

"1. To blaspheme the great saintly persons who are engaged in preaching of the Hare Krishna mantra is the worst offense at the lotus feet of the holy name. One should not criticise a preacher of the glories of the Hare Krishna mantra. If one does so he is an offender. The nama-prabhu, who is identical with Krishna, will never tolerate such blasphemous activities, even from one who passes as a great devotee. The second namaparadha is described as follows: 2. In this material world the holy name of Lord Vishnu is all auspicious. Vishnu's name, form, qualities, and pastimes are all transcendental, absolute knowledge. Therefore, it one tries to separate the Absolute Personality of Godhead from His holy name of His transcendental form, qualities, and pastimes, thinking them to be material, that is offensive. Similarly, to think the names of the demigods such as Lord Siva to be as good as the name of Lord Vishnu, or, in other words to think Lord Siva and the other demigods to be other forms of God and therefore an equal to Vishnu, is also blasphemous. This is the second offense at the lotus feet of the Lord.*

12 "3. The third offense at the lotus feet of the holy name, which is called guror avajna, is to consider the spiritual master to be material and therefore envy his exalted position. 4. The fourth offense (sruti-sastra-nindanam) is to blaspheme Vedic literature, such as the four Vedas and the Puranas. 5. The fifth offense (tathartha-vadah) is to consider the glories of the holy name to be exaggerations. 6. Similarly, the sixth offense (hari-namni kalpanam) is to consider the holy name of the Lord to be imaginary. 7. The seventh offense is described as follows: To think that since the Hare Krishna mantra can counteract all sinful reactions one may therefore go on with his sinful activities and at the same time chant the Hare Krishna mantra to neutralise them is the greatest offense at the lotus feet of Hari-nama.*

13 "8. The eighth offense is stated thus: It is offensive to consider the chanting of the Hare Krishna mantra to be a religious ritualistic ceremony. Performing religious ceremonies, following vows, and practicing renunciation and sacrifice are all materialistic auspicious activities. The chanting of the Hare Krishna maha-mantra must not be compared to such materialistic religiosity. This is an offense at the lotus feet of the Lord. 9. The ninth offense is described as follows: It is an offense to preach the glories of the holy name among person who have no intelligence or no faith in the subject matter. Such people should be given the chance to hear the chanting of the Hare Krishna mantra, but in the beginning they should not be instructed about the glories of the spiritual significance of the holy name. By constant hearing of the holy name, their hearts will be purified, and then they will be able to understand the transcendental position of the holy name.*

14 "If one has heard the glories of the transcendental holy name of the Lord but nevertheless continues in a materialistic concept of life, thinking 'I am this body and everything belonging to this body is mine (aham mameti)', and does not show respect and love for the chanting of the Hare Krishna maha-mantra, that is an offense."*

15 These verses should be understood in the light of the following passage from Shri Vishnu-yamala, where the Supreme Personality of Godhead explains:

16 "I forgive many millions of offenses committed by one who faithfully chants My holy names in this world. Of this there is no doubt."

17 In the description of the first offense (text 11), no mention was made of physical violence to devotees of the Lord. Physical violence and other kinds of troubles presented before devotees of the Lord are all offenses, as described in the Skanda Purana, where Shri Markandeya tells King Bhagiratha:

18 "Only fools blaspheme the great devotees of the Lord. Accompanied by their ancestors, such fools fall into the hell that bears the name Maha-raurava.

19 "A person who attacks the devotees of the Lord, criticises them, hates them, refuses to greet them, is angry with them, and is not happy to see them, falls down into the six hells.

20 Even passively to hear criticism of the devotees is an offense. This is described in the following words of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.74.40):

21 "Anyone who hears criticism of the Supreme Lord or of His faithful devotee yet fails to immediately leave the place will certainly fall down, deprived of all the pious credit of his past activities."*

22 If one is unable to do anything else, one should at least go away. If one is able, one should cut out the blasphemer's tongue. If one is unable to do that one should commit suicide. Sati-devi explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.4.17):

23 "If one hears an irresponsible person blaspheme the master and controller of religion, one should block his ears and go away if unable to punish him. But if one is able to kill, then one should by force cut out the blasphemer's tongue and kill the offender, and after that one should give up his own life."*

24 The second offense to the holy name of the Lord (which is described in text 11) should be understood in the light of the following words spoken by Lord Krishna in the Bhagavad-gita (10.41):

25 "Know that all opulent, beautiful and glorious creations spring from but a spark of My splendour."*

26 The second offense should also be understood in the light of these words of Shrimad Bhagavatam

(10.68.37):

"The dust of Krishna's lotus feet, which is the source of holiness for all places of pilgrimage, is worshipped by all the great demigods. The principle deities of all planets are engaged in His service, and they consider themselves most fortunate to take the dust of the lotus feet of Krishna on their crowns. Great demigods like Lord Brahma and Lord Siva, and even the goddess of fortune and I, are simply parts of His spiritual identity, and we also carefully carry the dust on our heads. And still Krishna is not to use the royal insignia or even sit on the royal throne?"*

27 It should also be understood in the light of these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.28.22):

"The blessed Lord Siva becomes all the more blessed by bearing on his head the holy waters of the Ganges, which has its source in the water that washed the Lord's feet. The Lord's feet act like thunderbolts hurled to shatter the mountain of sin stored in the mind of the meditating devotee. One should therefore meditate on the lotus feet of the Lord for a long time."*

28 It should also be understood in the light of these words spoken by Lord Brahma (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.6.32):

"By His will, I create, Lord Siva destroys, and He Himself, in His eternal form as the Personality of Godhead, maintains everything. He is the powerful controller of these three energies."*

29 In his commentary on this verse, Shri Madhavacharya quotes the following verses from the Brahmanda Purana:

"Because He chases away (dra) all troubles and sufferings (ru), Lord Vishnu is known as Rudra. Because He is the supreme controller (isana) He is known as Isana. Because of His greatness (maha) He is known as Mahadeva.

30 "Freed from the ocean of repeated birth and death, the liberated souls drink (pibanti) nectar in the spiritual sky (nakam). Because He is the maintainer of the spiritual world, Lord Vishnu is known as Pinaki.

31-32 "Because He happily removes all troubles, Lord Vishnu is called Siva. Because he resides (vasa) in the bodies of the conditioned souls, bodies obtained by past karma (krtti), He is known as Krttivasa. Because He purifies the conditioned souls He is known as Virinca. Because He is the greatest He is known as Brahma. Because of His power and opulence He is known as Indra.

33 "Thus the one Supreme Personality of Godhead, Lord Vishnu, is addressed by many different names in the Vedas and Puranas."

34 In the Vamana Purana it is said:

"These names, beginning with Narayana, and also other names, the names of the demigods, are all names of Lord Vishnu alone. Of this there is no doubt."

35 In the Skanda Purana it is said:

"As a king can extend his rule far beyond the sphere of his palace, so the Supreme Personality of Godhead can claim the names of the various demigods as His names also."

36 In the Brahma Purana it is said:

"The names of Lord Brahma, such as Caturmukha, Satananda, and Padma-bhu, and the names of Lord Siva, such as Ugra, Bhasmadhara, Nagna, and Kapali are also names of Lord Krishna."

37 Therefore in the description of the second offense to the holy name (in the Padma Purana verse quoted in text 11) the words "shri-visnoh sivasya guna-namadikam bhinnam yo dhiya pasyet" mean "one who sees that all-pervading, all-encompassing Lord Vishnu's powers, names, qualities, and other features are different from those of Lord Siva".

38 Thus the words "Vishnu" and "Siva" are not different, for they are both names of Lord Vishnu. This is confirmed by the genitive case ending in "visnoh" as well as the use of the words "shri" and "ca" (also). Therefore in the compound word "siva-namaparadhah (in the verse quoted in text 13) the word "siva" is a name of Lord Vishnu.

39 Now will be considered the fourth offense, blasphemy of Vedic literature. They who, claiming to be worshippers of Dattatreya and Rsabhadeva, actually follow the path of the blasphemers and atheists, think that the glories of the holy name are exaggerations (artha-vadah). They think the glories of the holy name are imaginary (kalpanam). This is described in the Vyasa-gita passage of the Kurma Purana:

40 "Atheism is millions and millions of times worse than committing offenses to the Lord and the spiritual master."

41 After hearing the glories of the holy name from the personal associates of Lord Vishnu, Ajamila declared (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.2.29):

"It is now clear that as a consequence of such activities, a sinful person like me must be thrown into hellish conditions meant for those who have broken religious principles and must then suffer extreme miseries."*

42 Seeing both his own misdeeds and the glory of the holy name, Ajamila said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.2.32-33):

"I am certainly most abominable and unfortunate to have merged in an ocean of sinful activities, but nevertheless, because of my previous spiritual activities, I could see those four exalted personalities who came to rescue me. Now I feel exceedingly happy because of their visit.*

"Were it not for my past devotional service, how could I, a most unclean keeper of a prostitute, have gotten an opportunity to chant the holy name of Vaikunthapati when I was just ready to die? Certainly it could not have been possible."*

43 Now will be considered the seventh offense: to commit sin on the strength of chanting the holy name. Although the power of the holy name destroys sins, nevertheless, a person who strives to attain the lotus feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, feet that are eternal and full of knowledge and bliss and are the ultimate goal of all human endeavours, and who then commits sins, thinking the holy name is merciful and will certainly grant forgiveness, commits the greatest sin. The holy name will punish such a person with great troubles. Such an offense is equal to many millions of other sins.

44 Even if one performs atonement by performing many austerities (yamaih), such as the yamas and niyamas, or even if one is beaten by men holding sticks, he will not become purified of that offense. Even if one performs the atonement of again and again chanting the holy name, as described in the verse beginning with the words "namaparadha-yuktanam" and even if one is sincerely devoted to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, as is described in the verse beginning with the words "sarvaparadha-krd api", one will still fall down.

45 When Indra on the strength of worshipping the Supreme Personality of Godhead with an asvamedha-yajna, killed Vrtrasura, Indra did so on the order of the great sages who wished to rescue Vrtra from having to live as a demon, and he also did so with the purpose of saving the worlds from calamity. Therefore Indra's actions do not constitute the offense of committing sin on the strength of chanting the holy name.

46 The eighth offense is to consider the chanting of the Hare Krishna mantra to be a religious ritualistic ceremony. This is explained in the following words of the scriptures:

47 "Chanting the holy names of Lord Hari is like reciting the mantras of the Vedas."

Here the holy name is glorified by using the kind of comparison called atidesa.

48 It is also said:

"The holy name of Lord Krishna is the sweetest of sweet things and the most auspicious of auspicious things. It is the transcendental fruit of the vine of all Vedic literature."

49 In the Shri Vishnu-dharma Purana it is also said:

"A person who chants the two syllables 'Hari has already studied the four Vedas: Sama, Rg, Yajur and Atharva."*

50 In the Skanda Purana, Goddess Parvati explains:

"Don't study the Rg Vedas. Don't study the Yajur Veda. Don't study anything of the Sama Veda. O my son, instead of the Vedas, always chant 'O Govinda!' Always chant the holy names of Lord Hari."

51 In the Padma Purana, in the 108 Holy Names of Lord Rama, it is said:

"To once recite one name of Lord Vishnu is better than reciting all the Vedas."

52 Now will be considered the ninth offense, which is to instruct the faithless. It is an offense to reveal the glories of the holy name to persons rapt in thoughts of "I" and "mine". This is so because such persons will not be respectful to the holy name.

53 A person who chants the holy name in order to attain wealth, the happiness of his material body, or other material things, also commits an offense. This is explained in the following words of the Padma Purana, Namaparadha-bhanjana-stotra (quoted in anuccheda 153, text 16):

"O brahmana, when, pronounced properly or not, it appears on the voice, walks on the path of the memory, a single utterance of the holy name of the Lord carries one beyond the world of birth and death. However, if the chanter commits offenses, or if he chants to attain wealth, followers, or the happiness of this material body, he will be thrown into the world of birth and death, and his chanting will not quickly bring the desired result."

In this way the ten offenses are described. The fate of they who commit these offenses is described in the following statement of the Padma Purana, Vaisakha-mahatmya:

54 "They who are disrespectful to the chanting of the holy name of the Lord, for that sinful deed go to a terrible hell.

55 For these offenses there is not atonement other than continuing to chant the holy name of the Lord. This is described in the following words:

56 "The chanting of Hare Krishna is recommended for person who commit offenses, because if they continue chanting they will gradually chant offenseless. Even if in the beginning one chants with offenses, one will become free from such offenses by chanting again and again."*

57 Thus the repeated chanting of the holy name purifies one from offenses to the devotees and other offenses also. This is seen in the activities of King Ambarisa, where the offenses (of Durvasa) were forgiven in that way.

58 This is also described in the following words of the Nama-kaumudi:

"Offenses to great devotees may be pushed away either by experiencing the calamities they bring, or by attaining the mercy of the offended devotee."

59 The conclusion, then, is that one should take shelter of the holy name alone. This is eloquently affirmed in the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (2.1.11):

"O King, constant chanting of the holy name of the Lord after the ways of the great authorities is the doubtless and fearless way of success for all, including those who are free from all material desires, those who are desirous of all material enjoyment, and also those who are self-satisfied by dint of transcendental knowledge."*

60 The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 266

1 This is also explained in the Narada Purana, where Shri Narada declares:

"Even the manus and the kings of the sages cannot cross to the farther shore of the glories of the holy name. How can I, whose intelligence is very weak, properly worship the holy name?"

2 Now will be considered the glorification of the transcendental form of the Lord. This is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.30.3):

"Once their eyes were fixed upon His transcendental form, women were unable to withdraw them, and once that form had entered the ears of the sages and become fixed in their hearts, it would never depart. What to speak of acquiring fame, the great poets who described the beauty of the Lord's form would have their words invested with transcendently pleasing attraction. And by seeing that form on Arjuna's chariot, all the warriors on the battlefield of Kuruksetra attained the liberation of gaining a spiritual body similar to the Lord's."

3 This verse explains that the poets who described the beauty of the Lord's form would have their words invested with transcendently pleasing attraction. This is also confirmed by the four Kumaras in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.15.49):

"O Lord, we pray that You let us be born in any hellish condition of life, just as long as our hearts and minds are always engaged in the service of Your lotus feet, our words are made beautiful (by speaking of Your activities) just as tulasi leaves are beautified when offered unto Your lotus feet, and as long as our ears are always filled with the chanting of Your transcendental qualities."*

This verse was spoken by the king to Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 267

1 Now will be considered the glorification of the transcendental qualities of the Lord. This is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.5.22):

"Learned circles have positively concluded that the infallible purpose of the advancement of knowledge, namely austerities, study of the Vedas, sacrifice, chanting of hymns, and charity, culminates in the transcendental descriptions of the Lord, who is defined in choice poetry."*

2 Here the word "sruta" means "study of the Vedas", "svista" means "sacrifices and other rituals to worship the Lord", "sukta" means "japa-chanting of mantras", "buddhi" means "the knowledge attained by studying the scriptures", and "datta" means "charity". When these are offered to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, they bring a result that is eternal (avicyuto rthah). What is that result? The verse explains, "They culminate in the transcendental descriptions of the Lord, who is defined in choice poetry". When the descriptions of the Lord's transcendental qualities are manifest then attraction to the Lord and love for the Lord are also manifest. Because these are filled with eternal bliss and glory, the words "infallible purpose (avicyuto rthah) are used here. The word "avicyuta" here indicates that the result obtained here is attraction to the Lord and love for Him. This verse was spoken by Shri Vyasa to Shri Narada.

Anuccheda 268

1 Now will be considered the glorification of the transcendental pastimes of the Lord. This is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.8.4): "Persons who hear Shrimad Bhagavatam regularly and are always taking the matter very seriously will have the Personality of Godhead Shri Krishna manifested in their hearts within a short time."*

2 Here the word "nati-dirghena" means "in a very short time", and "visate" means "is manifested". This verse was spoken by Shri Pariksit.

Anuccheda 269

1 It is also said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.12.49-50):

"Words that do not describe the transcendental Personality of Godhead but instead deal with temporary matters are simply false and useless. Only those words that manifest the transcendental qualities of the Supreme Lord are actually truthful, auspicious and pious."

2 "Those words describing the glories of the all-famous Personality of Godhead are attractive, relishable and ever fresh. Indeed, such words are a perpetual festival for the mind, and they dry up the ocean of misery."*

3 Here the words "asatir asat-katha na kathyate" mean "Words that do not describe the transcendental Personality of Godhead and His devotees, but instead deal with temporary matters are simply false and useless." The words "yad uttamasloka-yaso nugiyate" mean "Only words describing the glories of the pastimes of the all-famous Personality of Godhead are true." Why are such words true and auspicious? The reply is given with the word "bhagavad-gunodayam", which means "The Supreme Personality of Godhead personally appears in the heart of one who chants His glories. Thus the Lord gives the devotee the gift of love for Him." That is the meaning.

4 In the Skanda Purana it is said:

"O King, as an affectionate cow goes to her calf, so Lord Hari goes wherever His glories are chanted."

5 In the Vishnu-dharma Purana and Skanda Purana the Supreme Lord declares:

"I will never leave any person who always recounts My glories, or delights in hearing My glories, or whose heart enjoys descriptions of My glories."

6 Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.12.50 (quoted in text 2) means that if one has a sweet singing voice, one should sing songs describing the glories of the Lord. Such songs are praised in that verse.

7 The singing of the holy names of the Lord is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.39):

"An intelligent person who has controlled his mind and conquered fear should give up all attachment to material objects such as wife, family and nation and should wander freely without embarrassment, hearing and chanting the holy names of the Lord, the bearer of the chariot wheel. The holy names of Krishna are all-auspicious because they describe His transcendental birth and activities, which He performs within this world for the salvation of the conditioned souls. Thus the holy names of the Lord are sung throughout the world."

8 It is also said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.69.45):

"Lord Hari is the ultimate cause of universal creation, maintenance and destruction. My dear king, anyone who chants about, hears about, or simply appreciates the extraordinary activities He performed in this world, which are impossible to imitate, will surely develop devotion for the Supreme Lord, the bestower of liberation."

9 If one is not able to sing the glories of the Lord, or if a person very expert in singing those glories is present, one may hear those songs. Even if one thinks he will not like to hear, he will in truth feel great happiness by hearing these songs.

10 In the Shri Vishnu-dharma Purana, Lord Vishnu explains:

"If one's heart is attracted by music, one should place his thoughts in Me and sing songs glorifying Me."

11 In the Padma Purana, Karttika-mahatmya, the Supreme Personality of Godhead declares:

"I am not in Vaikuntha, nor in the heart of the yogis, I remain where my devotees engage in glorifying My activities.*

12 "When such devotees are worshipped with scents, incense, and other offerings, that worship is better than worship of Me. That worship brings Me great pleasure. I am not as much pleased when I am worshipped directly."

13 Such devotees bring great good to all other living entities, what to speak of to themselves. This is described in the Nrsimha Purana, where Shri Shri Prahlada explains:

14 "O Lord Nrsimha, the saintly devotees who cheerfully sing Your holy names are the true friends of all living beings."

15 When many people meet to glorify (kirtana) the Lord, such glorification is called sankirtana. Because it is very wonderful, sankirtana is better than kirtana. Nama-sankirtana (the great chanting of the Lord's holy name), is described in these words of the Supreme Personality of Godhead who descended to this world to deliver the people of Kali-yuga (Siksastaka 3):

16 "One who thinks himself lower than the grass, who is more tolerant than a tree, and who does not expect personal honour but is always prepared to give all respects to others, can very easily always chant the holy name of the Lord."*

The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Shrila Suta Gosvami.

Anuccheda 270

1 By engaging in the devotional activity of kirtana (chanting the Lord's glories) even the fallen souls who have neither wealth, birth in a good family, virtues, nor pious deeds, may attain the shoreless mercy of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is confirmed by the Vedas, Puranas, and other scriptures.

2 The fallen condition of the people in Kali-yuga is described in the following words of the brahma-vaivarta Purana:

"In the Kali-yuga even expert and intelligent persons will not perform austerities, yoga, Vedic study, yajnas or pious deeds."

3 The devotional activity of chanting the glories of the Lord appears among the fallen people of Kali-yuga, easily gives to them all the results of the different spiritual activities prescribed for the other yugas, and thus brings them all spiritual success. This is so because the Supreme Personality of Godhead is especially satisfied by the chanting of His glories.

4 In the Skanda Purana, Caturmasya-mahatmya, it is said:

"Hari-kirtana (the glorification of Lord Hari) is the best of all austerities. Especially in Kali-yuga, one should perform Hari-kirtana to please Lord Vishnu."

5 This is also confirmed by the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.3.52):

"Whatever result was obtained in Satya-yuga by meditating on Vishnu, in Treta-yuga by performing sacrifices and in Dvapara-yuga by serving the Lord's lotus feet can also be obtained in Kali-yuga simply by chanting the Hare Krishna maha-mantra."*

6 Whatever was obtained by any spiritual path in the Satya-yuga or any other yuga is all obtained in the Kali-yuga by Hari-kirtana.

7 It is also said (Shri Vishnu Purana 6.2.17):

"Whatever is achieved by meditation in Satya-yuga, by the performance of yajna in Treta-yuga, or by the worship of Krishna's lotus feet in Dvapara-yuga is also obtained in the age of Kali simply by chanting and glorifying Lord Kesava."*

8 The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 271

1 It is also said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.5.36):

"Those who are advanced and highly qualified and are interested in the essence of life know the good qualities of Kali-yuga. Such people worship the age of Kali because in this age, simply by chanting the Hare Krishna maha-mantra, one can advance in spiritual knowledge and attain life's goal."*

2 This verse means, "Knowing its good quality, which is the method of kirtana and not interested in its various faults, they worship the age of Kali." That good quality is revealed in these words: "In that age simply by sankirtana, and by no other means, one attains all that was obtained in the Satya-yuga and the other yugas by performance of meditation and by a thousand other methods of spiritual attainment."

Anuccheda 272

1 The glory of kirtana is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.5.37):

"Indeed, there is no higher possible gain for embodied souls forced to wander throughout the material world than the Supreme Lord's sankirtana movement, by which one can attain the supreme peace and free oneself from the cycle of repeated birth and death."*

2 Here the words "atah" and "yatah" both mean "than kirtana". "Paramam santim" means there is no peace better than what is obtained by performing kirtana. This is confirmed by the following words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.19.36):

"The word "sama" (peacefulness) or santa-rasa indicates that one is attached to the lotus feet of Krishna."*

3 These words of the Lord affirm that by performance of kirtana one attains faith in the Lord far greater than the faith attained by meditation or any other spiritual practice. By kirtana the cycle of repeated birth and death is brought to an end. By meditation performed in the Satya-yuga one does not attain this same deep faith in the Supreme Lord.

4 In the Skanda Purana it is said:

"In Kali-yuga the great devotees worship the Lord by performing kirtana."

5 These words of the Skanda Purana glorify the performance of kirtana, which brings great faith in the Supreme Lord. The Lord, who is very merciful to the fallen souls, does not reveal any spiritual path better than kirtana. If someone says that simply by moving the lips in kirtana one does not attain the same result obtained by meditation or other spiritual practices, he should not be believed.

Anuccheda 273

1 Hearing that the people who live in Kali-yuga have great faith in the Supreme Lord, the great souls pray that they may also take birth in Kali-yuga. This is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.5.38):

2 "My dear King, the inhabitants of Satya-yuga and other ages eagerly desire to take birth in this age of Kali, since in this age there will be many devotees of the Supreme Lord, Narayana."*

3 In this way the people of Kali-yuga will have great devotion and love for the Lord, as was described in Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.5.37 (quoted in anuccheda 272, text 1).

4 Great devotion to the Lord is also described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.14.5):

"O great sage, among many millions who are liberated and perfect in knowledge of liberation, one may be a devotee of Lord Narayana or Krishna. Such devotees, who are fully peaceful are extremely rare."*

5 It is not possible to adequately describe the virtues of performing kirtana in Kali-yuga. To chant the holy name of the Lord only devotion is needed. There are no restrictions according to time and place. This is described in the Vishnu-dharma Purana, in the story of the ksatra-bandhu, where it is said:

6 "O hunter, in chanting the holy names of Lord Krishna there are no restrictions of time, place or accepting remnants."

7 In the Skanda Purana, Padma Purana-Vaisakha-mahatmya, and Vishnu-dharma Purana it is said:

"One should chant the holy names of Lord Krishna, who holds the cakra, always and everywhere."

8 In the Skanda Purana it is said:

"The holy name of Lord Krishna fulfils all desires. It is independent. It does not depend on the restrictions of time, place, situated, or purification."

9 In the Vishnu-dharma Purana it is said:

"For one who has Lord Krishna in his heart, the Kali-yuga becomes Satya-yuga. For one who does not have Lord Krishna in his heart, the Satya-yuga becomes Kali-yuga."

10 One should not think, "It is because in the Kali-yuga it is not possible to attain success by any other means, that a little endeavour in kirtana brings a great result."

11 In Shri Vishnu Purana (6.8.55) it is said:

"One who fixes his mind on the Supreme Lord never goes to hell. When one meditates on the Lord even Svargaloka seems an obstacle. When one's heart goes to the Lord even Brahmaloaka seems small and pathetic. Staying in His devotee's pure heart, the eternal Lord gives the gift of liberation. Why should anyone be surprised, then, that sins at once perish when the infallible Supreme Lord is glorified?"

12 These words of Shri Vishnu Purana show that the glorification of the Lord is much more important than meditation, which leads in stages to samadhi. This is also confirmed by the following words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (2.1.11):

"O King, constant chanting of the holy name of the Lord after the ways of the great authorities is the doubtless and fearless way of success for all, including those who are free from all material desires, those who are desirous of all material enjoyment, and also those who are self-satisfied by dint of transcendental knowledge."*

13 In the Vaishnava-cintamani it is said:

"By merely moving one's lips to glorify Lord Vishnu, one attains a result better than what is attained by long and difficult meditations."

14 It is also said in the scriptures:

"One on whose mouth the holy names of Lord Krishna always stay must already have worshipped the Lord for hundreds of births."

15 However, in the Namaparadha-bhanjana-stotra it is said:

"One who commits all kinds of offenses may become delivered by taking shelter of Lord Hari. One who commits offenses to Lord Hari is an animal, even though he may stand on two feet."

16 In every yuga kirtana (glorification of the Lord) is equally powerful. However, by the mercy of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, it is especially to be performed in Kali-yuga. Therefore in Kali-yuga it is praised as being most important. In Kali-yuga the other activities of devotional service should be performed in connection with kirtana.

17 The importance of kirtana in Kali-yuga is described by these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.5.32):

"In the age of Kali, intelligent persons perform congregational chanting to worship the incarnation of Godhead, who constantly sings the names of Krishna. Although His complexion is not blackish He is Krishna Himself. He is accompanied by His associates, servants, weapons and confidential companions."*

18 That the chanting of the holy name of the Lord is supremely independent and important is confirmed by the following words (Shri Narada Purana 3.126):

"In this age of quarrel and hypocrisy, the only means of deliverance is the chanting of the holy names of the Lord. There is no other way. There is no other way. There is no other way."*

19 This truth is also eloquently explained in Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.5.36-38. The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Shri Karabhajana to Maharaja Nimi.

Anuccheda 274

1 Thus it is shown that in Kali-yuga by the chanting the holy names of the Lord one attains great devotion to Him. However, they who commit offenses to the holy name remain outside of the sphere of devotional service. This is described in these words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (12.3.43-44):

2 "O King, in the age of Kali people's intelligence will be diverted by atheism, and they will almost never offer sacrifice to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is the supreme spiritual master of the universe. Although the great personalities who control the three worlds all bow down to the lotus feet of the Supreme Lord, the petty and miserable human beings of this age will not do so."

3 "Terrified, about to die, a man collapses on his bed. Although his voice is faltering and he is hardly conscious of what he is saying, if he utters the holy name of the Supreme Lord he can be freed from the reaction of his fruitive work and achieve the supreme destination. But still people in the age of Kali will not worship the Supreme Lord."

4 The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 275

1 In this way kirtana is explained. To be included within kirtana are humble prayers and appeals to one's worshipable Deity. The Shrimad Bhagavatam's description of the glorification of the Lord's holy names and other features are most substantial and significant than those found in other puranas. In Kali-yuga the Shrimad Bhagavatam is especially praised. This is explained in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.3.43):

2 "This Bhagavata Purana is as brilliant as the sun, and it has arisen just after the departure of Lord Krishna to His own abode, accompanied by religion, knowledge, etc. Persons who have lost their vision due to the dense darkness of ignorance in the age of kali shall get light from this Purana."*

3 If a person has a pure heart, engages in the devotional activities that begin with surrender, and does not abandoning the process of chanting the Lord's holy name, a process described in Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.1.11), he will find himself engaged in smaranam (meditation) which his mind is fixed on the Supreme Lord. Meditation has many forms, beginning with meditation of the Lord's holy names. Meditation is described in a general way by the Supreme Lord Himself in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.13.14):

4 "The actual yoga system as taught by My devotees, headed by Sanaka-kumara, is simply this: Having withdrawn the mind from all other objects, one should directly and appropriately absorb it in Me."*

5 Here the word "yatha" means "properly". This verse means "One should absorb the mind in me." In the Skanda Purana, Lord Brahma declares:

"By scrutinisingly reviewing all the revealed scriptures and judging them again and again, it is now concluded that Lord Narayana is the Supreme Absolute Truth, and thus He alone should be worshipped."*

Anuccheda 276

1 Meditation on the holy name is described in the following words of the Jabali-samhita:

"One who desires liberation should always chant, sing, glorify and remember the holy name of Lord Hari."

2 A pure heart is needed in order to successfully meditate on the holy name. Meditation on the holy name is not as powerful and effective as chanting the holy name. This is so, although it is not expressly stated in this quote. Meditation on the Lord's form is described in these words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (12.12.55):

3 Remembrance of Lord Krishna's lotus feet destroys everything inauspicious and awards the greatest good fortune. It purifies the heart and bestows devotion for the Supreme Soul, along with knowledge enriched with realisation and renunciation."

4 Here the word "paramatmani" means "Shri Krishna" and "bhaktim" means "loving devotional service". Love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the primary result obtained by devotional service. The other results accompany that primary result. This verse was spoken by Shrila Suta Gosvami.

1 It is also said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.80.11):

"The Lord of the bhojas, Vrsnis and Andhakas is not at Dvaraka. He gives Himself away to anyone who simply remembers His lotus feet. What doubt is there then that He, the spiritual master of the universe, is willing to bestow prosperity and enjoyment upon a devotee who engages in worshipping Him, even though these material benefits are not very desirable?"

2 Here the word "smaratah" means "of one who meditates". The supreme Personality of Godhead directly appears before a devotee who meditates on Him. He becomes submissive to such a devotee. That is the meaning. "Artha-kaman" is in the plural because it includes liberation and the other goals of life. Here the parable of "linga-samavaya-nyaya" is appropriate. Meditation on the Lord's form is also glorified in these words of the Garuda Purana:

3 "When even a moment passes without remembrance of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, one should bitterly lament as if his precious wealth had suddenly been stolen by a band of thieves."

4 The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken to Shridama Vipra by His wife.

Anuccheda 278

1 Now the different stages of meditation (as described before) on the Lord's qualities, associates, service, and pastimes will now be considered. Meditation proceeds in five stages. The first stage is smarana, where the mind is sometimes attracted to the Lord. The next stage is dharana, where the mind is more completely attracted to the Lord. The next stage is dhyana, where one specifically meditates on the form of the Lord. The next stage is dhruvanusmrti, where one's meditation on the Lord becomes like a flood of nectar. The final stage of meditation is samadhi, where the Lord alone is present in one's thoughts.

2 Smarana is described in these words of the Narada Purana:

"Eternal Lord Narayana is pleased with even a sinner who somehow or other remembers Him. Of this there is no doubt."

3 Dharana is described by the Supreme Personality of Godhead in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.27):

"The mind of one meditating upon the objects of sense gratification is certainly entangles in such objects, but if one constantly remembers Me, then the mind is absorbed in Me."

4 Dhyana is described in these words of the Nrsimha Purana and other scriptures:

"Even a sinner who engages in undivided meditation on the lotus feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead finds that all his troubles become transformed into blessings.

5 Here the word "nirdvandvam" means "ignoring the troubles caused by heat, cold, and other dualities", and "iritam" means "spoken by the scriptures". Even a sinner engaged in such meditation finds that all this troubles become transformed into blessings. That is the meaning here.

6 Dhruvanusmrti is described in these words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (3.29.11-12):

"The manifestation of unadulterated devotional service is exhibited when one's mind is at once attracted to hearing the transcendental name and qualities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is residing in everyone's heart. Just as the water of the Ganges flows naturally down towards the ocean, such devotional ecstasy, uninterrupted by any material condition, flows towards the Supreme Lord."

7 Dhruvanusmrti is also described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.53):

"The lotus feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are sought even by the greatest of demigods, such as Brahma and Siva, who have all accepted the Supreme Personality of Godhead as their life and soul. A pure devotee of the Lord can never forget those lotus feet in any circumstance. He will not give up his shelter at the lotus feet of the Lord for a single moment, indeed, not for half a moment, even in exchange for the benediction of ruling and enjoying the opulence of the entire universe. Such a devotee of the Lord is to be considered the best of the Vaishnavas."

8 Shrila Ramanuja Acarya has also discussed this topic in his commentary on the first sutra of Vedanta-sutra.

9 Samadhi is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.10.9):

"Because Markandeya's material mind had stopped functioning, the sage failed to notice that Lord Siva and his wife, the controllers of the universe, had personally come to see him. Markandeya was so absorbed in meditation that he was unaware of either himself or the external world."

10 Here the word "tayoh" means "of Lord Siva and his wife". Because they are both potencies and amsas of the Lord they are here called "jagad-atmanoh", which means "the creators of the universe". The word "ruddha-dhi-vrttih" means "rapt in meditation on the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

Before this verse it was said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.10.6):

"Surely this saintly brahmana does not desire any benediction, not even liberation itself, for he has attained pure devotional service unto the inexhaustible Personality of Godhead."*

In this way it is shown that the samadhi described here is different from the samadhi of the impersonalists, which is called asamprajnata-samadhi.

This verse was spoken by Shrila Suta Gosvami.

Anuccheda 279

1 When one thinks only of the Lord's pastimes and other features and does not think of anything else, that is samadhi. The following description is given in Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.5.13):

"O Vyasadeva, your vision is completely perfect. Your good fame is spotless. You are firm in vow and situated in truthfulness. And thus you can think of the pastimes of the Lord in trance for the liberation of the people in general from all material bondage."*

2 The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse describes the devotees in the dasya, sakhya, vatsalya, and madhurya rasas. The devotees in santa-rasa generally do not meditate on the Lord's pastimes. This is described in the following words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (12.12.690):

3 "Let me offer my respectful obeisances unto my spiritual master, the son of Vyasadeva, Sukadeva Gosvami. It is he who defeats all inauspicious things within this universe. Although in the beginning he was absorbed in the happiness of Brahman realisation and was living in a secluded place, giving up all other types of consciousness, he became attracted by the most melodious pastimes of Lord Shri Krishna. He therefore mercifully spoke the supreme Purana, known as Shrimad Bhagavatam, which is the bright light of the Absolute Truth and which describes the activities of Lord Krishna."

4 The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Shri Narada to Shri Vyasa.
Anuccheda 280

1 If one is able and eager to do it, one may, without abandoning chanting and remembering the Lord's holy name, become active in serving the Lord's lotus feet. In order to attain the perfection of service and meditation, some devotees are engaged in this way.

2 In the Vishnu-rahasya the Supreme Personality of Godhead declares:

"O Narada, the meditating yogis do not please me as much as they who both meditate on me and serve Me with devotion."

3 The word "yogah" here means "samadhi". The word "pada-seva" means "service with devotion". That service is performed respectfully and in the proper time, place and situation. It is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.21.31):

4 "By the inclination to serve the lotus feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, suffering humanity can immediately cleanse the dirt which has accumulated in their minds during innumerable births. Like the Ganges water, which emanates from the toes of the lotus feet of the Lord, such a process immediately cleanses the mind, and thus spiritual or Krishna consciousness gradually increases."*

5 The word "tapasvinam" means "of they who are suffering in the world of repeated birth and death", and "malam" means "the many kinds of material desires". The Lord's feet are glorified in the example beginning with the word "yatha". This verse was spoken by King Prthu to Lord Vishnu.

Anuccheda 281

1 Service to the Lord's feet is also described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.51.55):

"O all-powerful one, I desire no boon other than service to Your lotus feet, the boon most eagerly sought by those free of material desire. O Hari, what enlightened person who worships You, the giver of liberation, would choose a boon that causes his own bondage?"

2 Here the word "akincana" means "without any material desires, even up to the desire for liberation." The reason the devotee has no material desires is given in these words:

"O Hari, what enlightened person who worships You, the giver of liberation, would choose a boon that causes his own bondage?"

Anuccheda 282

1 The next verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.51.56) explains:

"Therefore, O Lord, having put aside all objects of material desire, which are bound to the modes of passion, ignorance and goodness, I am approaching You, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, for shelter. You are not covered by mundane designations. Rather, You are the Supreme Absolute Truth, full in pure knowledge and transcendental to the material modes."

2 These verses are addressed to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is eternal and perfect in knowledge and bliss, and whose feet are the proper object of devotional service. This verse was spoken by King Mucukunda to the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Anuccheda 283

1 Included within serving the Lord's feet are seeing, touching, circumambulating, and bowing down before the Deity, as well as visiting the temple of the Lord, and the pilgrimages places sacred to the Lord, such as Mathura, Dvaraka, Jagannatha Puri, and the Ganges. As long as one lives one should surrender to the Lord and live near the Lord's temple. They who live by the Ganges and at other sacred places are all great devotees of the Lord. Service to the Lord finds its final expression in service to the great devotees of the Lord. Therefore the Ganges and other sacred places inspire feelings of devotion in the living entities.

- 2 Service to the devotees of the Lord is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.2.16):
"O twice born sages, by serving those devotees who are completely freed from all vice, great service is done. By such service, one gains affinity for hearing the messages of Vasudeva."*
- 3 The word "punya-tirtha" here also means the Ganges and other holy places. The Ganges is described in these words of the Third Canto (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.28.22):
"The blessed Lord Siva becomes all the more blessed by bearing on his head the holy waters that washed the Lord's lotus feet."*
- 4 The commentator explains that Lord Siva is called by the name Siva because he has attained the highest happiness. Happiness like that is attainable only by devotional service. No happiness is greater than the happiness of devotional service.
- 5 The Brahma Purana glorifies Jagannatha Puri in these words:
"The transcendental significance of Purusottama-ksetra, which is the eighty-square mile field of Jagannatha, cannot be properly described. Even the demigods from higher planetary systems see the inhabitants of this Jagannatha Puri as having exactly the same bodily features possessed by one in Vaikuntha. That is, the demigods see the inhabitants of Jagannatha Puri as being four-handed."*
- 6 In the Skanda Purana it is said:
"For a person who has lived in Dvaraka for six months, for one month, or even for one fortnight there is awaiting elevation to the Vaikunthalokas and all the profits of sarupya-mukti (the privilege of having the same four-handed bodily features as Narayana)."
- 7 In the Padma Purana, Patala-khanda, it is said:
"How wonderful it is that simply by residing in Mathura even for one day, one can achieve a transcendental loving attitude toward the Supreme Personality of Godhead! This land of Mathura must be more glorious than Vaikuntha-dhama, the kingdom of God!"*
- 8 In the Adi-Varaha Purana the Supreme Personality of Godhead declares:
"My birthplace is very dear to me."
- 9 A place where Lord Krishna is worshipped is the best of all holy places. Because Lord Krishna is the original Supreme Personality of Godhead, any place sacred to Lord Krishna gives the supreme goal of life to all who come there.
- 10 In the Adi-Varaha Purana the Supreme Personality of Godhead declares: "Any person who becomes attracted to places other than Mathura will certainly be captivated by the illusory energy."*
- 11 Because Tulasi-devi is very dear to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, service to her is included in the general category of service to the Supreme Lord.
- 12 In the Agastya-samhita and the Garuda-samhita it is said:
"As Sita-devi is dear to Lord Rama, the master of the three worlds, so is Tulasi-devi, who purifies everyone."
- 13 In the Skanda Purana it is said:
"Especially in the age of Kali the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is the master of the demigods and universes, is attracted to the Tulasi forest. He is not attracted to any other place."
- 14 "They who properly plant a Tulasi tree or gaze upon a Tulasi forest, go to the supreme abode of the Lord."
- 15 In the Skanda Purana, in the prayers to Tulasi-devi, it is said:
"The Supreme Personality of Godhead, who destroys the demons' pride, is pleased even just to hear the name Tulasi."
In this way service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead is described. That service also includes service to the Ganges and all else sacred to the Lord.
- 16 Now will be considered worship of the Lord (arcana), which begins with the invitation (avahana) to the Lord to appear. If one has faith in the path of worship, one should take shelter of a bona fide spiritual master and ask questions of him. This is described in these words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.3.48):
"Having obtained the mercy of his spiritual master, who reveals to the disciple the injunctions of Vedic scriptures, the devotee should worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead in the particular personal form of the Lord the devotee finds most attractive."

17 Although in the opinion of Shrimad-Bhagavatam the path of worshipping the Deity, as it is described in the Pancaratras and other scriptures, is not compulsory, and without engaging in Deity worship one may attain the final goal of life by engaging in even only one of the nine processes of devotional service, processes that begin with surrender, nevertheless, in the opinion of they who follow the path of Narada Muni and other great sages, by accepting initiation from a bona fide spiritual master one attains a relationship with the Supreme Personality of Godhead, a relationship established through the feet of one's spiritual master, and when one is thus initiated, the process of Deity worship is compulsory.

18 Therefore in the Agama-sastra it is said:

"Diksa is the process by which one can awaken his transcendental knowledge and vanquish all reactions caused by sinful activity. A person expert in the study of the revealed scriptures know this process as diksa.*

19 "It is the duty of every human being to surrender to a bona fide spiritual master. Giving him everything: body, mind and intelligence, one must take a Vaishnava initiation from him."*

20 The words "divyam jnanam" (transcendental knowledge) here refers to the descriptions of the Lord's transcendental form in sacred mantras. Chanting those mantras establishes a relationship with the Supreme Lord. This is explained in the Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda's description of the eight-syllable mantra. Thus for wealthy householders the path of Deity worship is most important.

21 The sages tell Maharaja Vasudeva (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.84.37):

"This is the most auspicious path of progress for a religious householder of the twice-born orders: to faithfully worship the Personality of Godhead with his uncontaminated possessions which have been acquired by just means."

22 A wealthy householder who acts like a penniless person and seeks to serve the Lord only by meditating on Him or performing similar services and not by spending money for the cause of the Lord is a hypocrite and a miser. Such a person is either materialistic or lazy. He is at fault because he does not have faith in the Lord.

23 Such a person is at risk of falling down, as is explained in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.3.38):

"Only those who render unreserved, uninterrupted, favourable service unto the lotus feet of Lord Krishna, who carries the wheel of the chariot in His hand, can know the creator of the universe in His full glory, power and transcendence."*

24 General speaking, for householders the path of Deity worship (arcana) is better than the path of direct service (paricarya). This is because of the many rules to be followed in the path of Deity worship. Householders should offer yajnas to the Supreme Personality of Godhead and not to the demigods. By worshipping the Supreme Personality of Godhead all the demigods are automatically pleased in the same way that the branches, leaves, and other parts of a tree are nourished when water is given to the tree's root. Failure to worship the Lord in this way is a great fault for a householder.

25 In the Skanda Purana, Shri Prahlada explains: "O King, do not eat in the home of one who does not worship the Deity of Lord Krishna. The food there is not fit to be eaten."

26 Any initiated devotee who fails in this duty falls into hell. This is described in the scriptures. For example, in the Vishnu-dharmottara Purana it is said:

"One should worship Lord Hari once, twice, or three times each day. One who eats without first offering the food to the Lord goes to hell."

27 If one is not able or qualified to engage in Deity worship, then the Agni Purana gives this prescription:

"One who with faith and devotion gazes at Lord Hari after or while the Lord is worshipped, pleases the Lord. That devotee attains the benefits of practicing yoga."

28 The word "yoga" here means "the yoga or devotional service as is described in the Pancaratras and other Vaishnava scriptures". In some circumstances it is appropriate to perform Deity worship in meditation. This is described in the following statement of the Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda:

"O beloved, everyone should meditate on worshipping the Deity of the Lord."

29 In the path of Deity worship one must first be initiated. Then there are many rules that must be followed. These rules are described in the scriptures.

30-31 Initiation is described in these words of the Agama-sastra:

"Even though born in a brahmana family, one cannot engage in Vedic rituals without being initiated and having a sacred thread. Although born in a brahmana family, one becomes a brahmana after initiation and the sacred thread ceremony. Unless one is initiated as a brahmana, he cannot worship the holy name properly."*

32 The rules of scripture are described in these words of the Vishnu-rahasya:

"By following the rules of worship and respectfully worshipping the Deity of Lord Hari, one attains a result a hundred times better than the result of worshipping in ignorance of the rules."

33 Here the word "bhaktya" means "with great respect". One who worships in this way attains a result a hundred times greater. One who does not worship in this way does not attain such a result. That is the meaning here. The rules of worship are understood according to the teachings of the Vaishnava-sampradaya.

34 In the Vishnu-rahasya it is said:

"One should accept words of teaching offered by persons who always worship Lord Vishnu with their body, mind, words and deeds. Such persons are like Lord Vishnu Himself."

35 In the Kurma Purana, it is said:

"One should ask questions of saintly Vaishnava brahmanas learned in the Vaishnava scriptures, acting properly, and firm in their vows. One should carefully follow what they teach."

36 In the Vaishnava Tantra it is said:

"One should not follow the teachings of a person who is not always devoted to his spiritual master, to the chanting of japa and to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Lord Vishnu."

37 This is described in the following words of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (9.4.21):

"In performing his prescribed duties as king, Maharaja Ambarisa always offered the results of his royal activities to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Krishna, who is the enjoyer of everything and is beyond the perception of material senses. He certainly took advice from brahmanas who were faithful devotees of the Lord, and thus he ruled the planet earth without difficulty."*

38 This passage describes King Ambarisa. The Shrimad Bhagavatam verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami.

1 The substance of all the Vedic mantras is the chanting of the holy name of the Lord. Every mantra begins with the prefix nama Om and eventually addresses by name the Supreme Personality of Godhead. By the supreme will of the Lord there is a specific potency in each and every mantra chanted by great sages like Narada Muni and other rsis. Chanting the holy name of the Lord immediately renovates the transcendental relationship of the living being with the Supreme Lord. To chant the holy name of the Lord one need not depend upon other paraphernalia, for one can immediately get all the desired results of connecting or linking with the Supreme Personality of Godhead. It may therefore be questioned why there is a necessity for further spiritual activities in devotional service for one who engages in the chanting of the holy name of the Lord.*

2 The answer is that although it is correct that one who fully engages in chanting the holy name need not depend upon the process of initiation, generally a devotee is addicted to many abominable material habits due to material contamination from his previous life. In order to get quick relief from all these contaminations, it is required that one engage in the worship of the Lord in the temple. The worship of the Deity in the temple is essential to reduce one's restlessness due to the contaminations of conditional life. Thus Narada in his pancaratrici vidhi, and other great sages have sometimes stressed that since every conditioned soul has a bodily concept of life aimed at sense enjoyment the rules and regulations for worshipping the Deity in the temple are essential.*

3 In the Ramarcana-candrika it is said of Lord Ramacandra:

"Among Vaishnava-mantras, the Rama-mantra is the best. The Rama-mantra is millions and millions of times more effective than Ganesa-mantras or mantras for the other demigods.

4 "O king of brahmanas, even if one is not initiated and has not performed either purascarya or nyasa, he can attain perfection simply by chanting the Rama-mantra."

5 Vaishnava mantras do not need to be purified by the processes beginning with sadhya. This is described in the following statement of the Mantradeva-prakasika:

"In chanting Saura-mantras, Nrsimha-mantras, and other Vaishnava-mantras there is no need to perform the purifying rituals known as sadhya, siddha, susiddha and ari."

6 In another Tantra it is said:

"Mantras glorifying Lord Nrsimha, Lord Surya Narayana and Lord Varaha, mantras with the sacred syllable Om, and mantras from the Vedas do not require to be purified by performing siddha or other rituals."

7 In the Sanatkumara-samhita it is said:

"O Narada, mantras glorifying Lord Gopala are all self-manifest. That is why there is no need to purify them with sadhya, siddha, susiddha, and ari."

8 In another scripture it is said:

"To all varnas and asramas, to women, and to every social class, the Gopala-mantra quickly grants whatever is desired."

9 The rules of chanting mantras are described in these words of the Brahma-yamala:

"Devotional service performed without reference to the Vedas, Puranas, Pancaratras, etc., must be considered sentimentalism and it causes nothing but disturbance to society."*

10 This is explained in the Fourth Canto of Shrimad Bhagavatam (4.18-35), where the earth-goddess says:

"To benefit all human society, not only in this life but in the next, the great seers and sages have prescribed various methods conducive to the prosperity of the people in general.*

11 "One who follows the principles and instructions enjoined by the great sages of the past can utilise these instructions for practical purposes. Such a person can very easily enjoy life and pleasures.*

12 "A foolish person who manufactures his own ways and means through mental speculation and does not recognise the authority of the sages who lay down unimpeachable directions is simply unsuccessful again and again in his attempts."*

13 In the Padma Purana, Lord Narayana tells Narada Muni:

"O sage, one who is My devotee and worships My Deity form according to the rules and regulations never meets, even in dream, any troubles or obstacles. He becomes completely fearless."

14 Deity worship is of two kinds: 1. kevala (transcendental) and 2. karma-misra (mixed with fruitive activities). The first kind, which is performed by faithful devotees who have renounced all material desires, is described by Shri Avirhotra in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.3.47):

"One who desires to quickly cut the knot of false ego, which binds the spirit soul, should worship the Supreme Lord, Kesava, by the regulations found in Vedic literatures such as the tantras."

15 Shri Narada Muni also gives this explanation (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.29.46):

"When a person is fully engaged in devotional service, he is favoured by the Lord, who bestows His causeless mercy. At such time the awakened devotee gives up all material activities and ritualistic performances mentioned in the Vedas."*

16 In the Shri Agastya-samhita it is said:

"As the duties and prohibitions of the karma-kanda portion of the Vedas cannot approach a liberated soul, so they also cannot touch a devotee of Lord Rama."

17 They who are very attached to material activities, whose faith in material nature and who do not understand the truth of devotional service are ordered, "Do not neglect the rules and regulations of the karma-kanda portion of the Vedas". This is so for those householders who are attached to the things of this world.

18-19 The rules of Deity worship are described by Lord Krishna in these words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.27.6-11):

"My dear Uddhava, there is no end to the innumerable Vedic prescriptions for executing Deity worship, so I shall explain this topic to you briefly, one step at a time.

"One should carefully worship Me by selecting one of the three methods by which I receive sacrifices: Vedic, Tantric, or mixed.

"Now please listen faithfully as I explain exactly how a person who has achieved twice-born status through the relevant Vedic prescriptions should worship Me with devotion.

"A twice-born person should worship Me, his worshipable Lord, without duplicity, offering appropriate paraphernalia in loving devotion to My Deity form, or to a form of Me appearing upon the ground, in fire, in the sun, in water, or within the worshipper's own heart.

"One should first purify his body by cleansing his teeth and bathing. Then one should perform a second cleansing by smearing the body with earth and chanting both Vedic and Tantric mantras.

"Fixing the mind on Me, one should worship Me by his various prescribed duties, such as chanting the Gayatri mantra at the three junctures of the day. Such performances are enjoined by the Vedas and purify the worshipper of reactions to fruitive activities."

The description also continues in the verses that follow in Shrimad Bhagavatam's Eleventh Canto.

20 The meaning of these verses is clear. These verses were spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Anuccheda 285

1 In the Shri Narada-pancaratra, in the beginning of His description of faith, Lord Narayana explains: "O Narada, even a liberated soul who because of an emergency or a calamity does not perform his ordinary duties, is greatly at fault.

2 "Therefore every wise man should carefully perform even the most ordinary duties until the time his material body perishes."

3 Deity worship mixed with ordinary duties (karma) is of two kinds. In Shri Narada-pancaratra it is said that all kinds of worship should be done with reference to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the Supersoul present in everyone's heart.

4 In the Vishnu-yamala it is said:

"With water that has washed the feet of Lord Vishnu one may offer tarpana to the pitas. One may honour the demigods by offering them food first offered to Lord Vishnu."

5 Ganesa, Durga, Visvakṣena, and other demigods worship and serve the Supreme Personality of Godhead in His abode of Vaikuntha. The Ganesa, Durga and other demigods mentioned here are different from the Ganesa, Durga and other demigods present in the material world. This is so because the spiritual world of Vaikuntha is different from the material world. This is explained in the following words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (2.9.10):

"In the personal abode of the Lord, the material modes of ignorance and passion do not prevail, nor is there any of their influence in goodness. There is no predominance of the influence of time, so what to speak of the illusory, external energy. It cannot enter that region. Without discrimination, both the demigods and the demons worship the Lord as devotees."*

6 In this way the demigods of Vaikuntha are all internal potencies of the Shri Supreme Personality of Godhead. In the eighteen-syllable mantra glorifying Lord Krishna, the name "Durga" refers to the goddess who establishes the various activities of devotional service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is seen in the Vedas, Tantras, and other scriptures.

7 In the Narada-pancaratra, in a conversation of Sruti and Vidya, it is said:

"Because She is willing to suffer all troubles in order to worship and serve her beloved Lord and give Him nectar happiness that never stops, the goddess who is the potency of devotional service is called "Durga" by the saintly Vaishnavas."

8 This Goddess Durga is not different from the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is confirmed by the following words of Shri Gautamiya-kalpa:

"Goddess Durga is identical with Lord Krishna. Lord Krishna is identical with Goddess Durga."

9 This is also confirmed by the words:

"O Goddess Durga, You are the presiding Deity of the eighteen syllable mantra."

10 Some say that the Supreme Lord's universal form (virat-purusa) is not different from His form in the spiritual world (maha-purusa), so the Durga in the material world is not different from the Durga in the spiritual world. The truth is that the Durga in the material world is a partial expansion of Goddess Maya. The Durga in the material world is engaged in the service of protecting the eighteen-syllable mantra. She is a maidservant of the Durga in the spiritual world, who is an internal potency of the Lord. She is not the deity that controls service to the Lord.

11 In a passage of the Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda, a passage where the spiritual world of Vaikuntha, which is beyond the touch of the illusory potency maya, is described, it is said:

"The fourth rampart surrounding Vaikuntha is guarded by Satya, Acyuta, Ananta, Visvakṣena, Ganesa, Sankhanidhi and Padmanidhi.

12 "The sages say that in the seventh rampart the east is guarded by Indra, the southeast by Agni, the south by Yama, the southwest by Nairrta, the west by Varuna, the northwest by Vayu, the north by Soma and the northeast by Siva.

13 "In the spiritual world are many Sadhyas, Maruts, and Visvadevas. These eternally liberated souls are different from the demigods that reside in the upper planets of the material world.

14 "The demigods that reside in the upper planets of the material world are not eternal. They aspire to attain the eternal spiritual world. That is the conclusion of the Vedas."

15 Also, the Supreme Personality of Godhead manifests many different forms in the spiritual world. In the beginning of its description of the different Deities in the eighteen-syllable mantra, it is said in the Trailokya-sammohana Tantra:

16 "The Supreme Personality of Godhead has different forms with different names, such as Deva-deva (the master of the demigods), Gopa-vesa-dhara (He who is a cowherd boy) and Hari (He who removes all that is inauspicious)."

17 The pure devotees do not misunderstand the names of the Supreme Personality of Godhead to be names of ordinary demigods. Still, because they are servants of the Lord in the spiritual world of Vaikuntha, the Visvakṣena and other demigods of the spiritual world should be given all honour.

18 That the devotees of the Lord should be given all honour is explained in these words of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.84.13):

"A human being who identifies this body made of three elements with his self, who considers the by-products of the body to be his kinsmen, who considers the land of birth as worshipable, and who goes to the place of pilgrimage simply to take a bath rather than meet men of transcendental knowledge, is to be considered as an ass or a cow."*

19 The offense of not honouring the Lord's devotees is described in these words of the Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda:

"A person who worships Lord Govinda but does not worship the Lord's devotees, is not himself a devotee. He is only a pretender."

20 The worship of the Lord's devotees is also described in these words of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (11.27.29):

"With offerings such as proksana one should worship Durga, Vinayaka, Vyasa, Visvakṣena, the spiritual masters and the various demigods. All these personalities should be in their proper places facing the Deity of the Lord."

21 In the Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda it is said:

"One should not worship demigods not mentioned in the Vedas. One should not think the demigods are independent of the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

22 "One should worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Lord Narayana, who is worshipped by all the worlds, and one should also worship the demigods that are His associates.

23 "To these demigods one should offer the remnants of what was enjoyed by Lord Hari. A Vaishnava should perform a yajna when he offers Lord Hari's remnants to them."

24 Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.27.29 (quoted in text 20) was spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Anuccheda 286

1 Thinking the worship of them to be part of the worship of the Lord's associates, one should not worship ghosts and other like beings. This is so because they are not associates of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The worship of them is forbidden.

2 In the Padma Purana it is said:

"Worship of yaksas, pisacas, as well as ghosts and demons who drink liquor and eat flesh, and even worship of the demigods who reside in the higher material planets, is considered sinful like drinking liquor.

3 Even the so-called compulsory worship of the material demigods is forbidden when that worship involves liquor or other abominable things. In the same way, it is also forbidden to worship Lord Balarama with offerings of varuni liquor.

4 Now will be considered, in relation to the worship of the Supreme Lord's abode, the existence of impurity, the three material modes, and other inauspicious things. The Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda and the Brahma-samhita both affirm that these inauspicious things cannot touch the transcendental abode of the Supreme Lord. Some people, claiming that the Narada-pancaratra gives a different view, quote the passage beginning with the words "The four inauspicious things, beginning with impiety, are engaged in creating evil." However, the real meaning of this passage is that impiety and other inauspicious things are potencies of the all-pervading Supersoul.

5 In the worship of the Lord's abode, the shoes of the spiritual master are to the left of the Supreme Lord. On the local level, the Supreme Personality of Godhead incarnates through His representative, the spiritual master. In this way the spiritual master is a form of the Lord. When the Lord appears directly, in His original form as the master of all, His empowered incarnation of the spiritual master is at His left side.

6 In the worship of Lord Ramacandra and other forms of the Lord, Mainda, Dvidida and others are the pure devotees who associate with the Lord in His eternal transcendental abode. When Akrura was becoming purified of all sins, he could see Prahlada and other personal associates of the Lord (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.39.54). When King Prthu milked the earth, Prahlada became the calf. At those two times Prahlada did not take birth. However, during the Caksusa-manvantara he did take birth as Hiranyakasipu's son.

7 Many other personal associates of Lord Rama and the other eternally manifested forms of the Lord also appear in the material world to assist the Lord when He incarnates there. Mainda, Dvidida, and the other eternal associates of the Lord are individual spirit souls, although they are given special powers (sakty-avesa) by the Lord. However, there are also troubles presented by Bali, who was Sugriva's enemy, and many other demons also, and at a later time there are also troubles presented by Narakasura, who was the enemy of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and many other demons also. Thus a great variety of persons associate with the Lord when He appears in the material world.

8 When Lord Krishna manifests His pastimes in Gokula, Shri Rukmini and His other associates in Dvaraka are also present. They are not openly present but they are present as Vimala and other potencies of the Lord. Because they are not openly present they are not mentioned in meditations on the Lord's Gokula's pastimes.

9 Rukmini and the other associates of the Lord at Dvaraka are also present in Gokula. There they bear other names, such as the name Radha. The conch-disc, and club the Lord carries in Dvaraka are present in Gokula as the conch, disc, and club that are auspicious markings on the Lord's feet. As the Ganges and Yamuna are both present in Dvaraka, so they are both present in Gokula, the Ganges being the famous Manasa-ganga on Govardhana Hill. Visvaksena and other associates of the Lord at Dvaraka are present in Gokula as Bhadrāsena and others. When Lord Krishna's abode of Gokula is worshipped, then the ocean of milk at Svetadvipa is also worshipped automatically. Because in Gokula a great flood of milk flows from many millions of cows, Gokula is also known by the name Svetadvipa.

10 This is explained in Shri Brahma-samhita (5.56) where at the end of a description of Gokula it is said: "In Vrndavana, spiritual cows are always supplying spiritual milk. Not a single moment is wasted there. In other words, there is no past, present or future. Not a single particles of time is wasted. Within this material universe the devotees worship that transcendental abode as Goloka Vrndavana."*

11 This is also confirmed in other scriptures. In the transcendental abode of the Lord the sun, moon, and fire are not material. This is so because in that abode there is no excessive heat or cold. Because everything is all-auspicious and all-pleasing, nothing in that abode is material.

12 This is confirmed by the following words of Shri Nrsimha-tapani Upanisad (1.5.10):

"In the transcendental abode of Shri Krishna, the master of all mantras, there are no sufferings. There the sun does not shine, the wind does not blow, the moon does not shine, the stars do not shine, fire does not burn, death cannot enter, and there are no defects."

13 Thus it is explained that the personal associates of the Lord engage in pure devotional service, free from any touch of fruitive action.

14 Now, as far as I can understand it, I will discuss the purity and other virtues of the pure devotees. The purity of the pure devotees is that, desiring to serve the Lord in a specific way, they meditate on the form of a specific personal associate of the Lord. In this way they act to attain the goal of directly serving the Lord in a particular way.

15 Whenever they meditate on the specific form of the Lord they desire to attain, they also meditate on becoming His personal associate. They do this because pure devotees hate the impersonalists' ahangrahopasana meditation, where one imagines to have become identical with the Lord.

16 When it is said that the Supreme Personality of Godhead and the individual spirit souls are one it is meant only in a very general sense. They are one only in the sense that the individual spirit souls are the spiritual potency of the Lord and in the sense that both the Lord and His personal associates have spiritual forms. One should offer nyasas and other things to the feet of the Lord's form as Kesava or His other forms. One should meditate on the various forms of the Lord, chant the appropriate various mantras, and touch the limbs of the Lord. One should not meditate on the various material demigods. That is not appropriate for the devotees.

17 Now will be described the primary kind of meditation, where the yogi-devotee meditates on the Supreme Personality of Godhead residing in His transcendental abode in the lotus flower of the devotee's heart. This meditation is described in the scriptures in the passage beginning with the words "One should meditate on Lord Krishna residing in beautiful Vrndavana."

18 Now will be considered worshipping the Lord in meditation. One should meditate on the Kama-gayatri mantra in a circle of light and there one should meditate on Goloka Vrndavana. In Brahma-samhita (5.37) it is said:

"I worship Govinda, the primeval Lord, who resides in His own realm, Goloka."*

This is certainly so, for the word "eva" (certainly) is used here.

19 Lord Krishna, the master of Vrndavana, does not personally stay on the sun planet. There He stays in a form of light. In one's heart one should meditate on the worship of Lord Krishna, the same kind of worship that is performed externally. In this way one should also worship the Lord's flute and other paraphernalia. In this way one should enter the spiritual effulgence that emanates from Lord Krishna's transcendental bodily limbs. When one has thus entered, one may meditate on Lord Krishna's face and the other parts of His transcendental body.

20 In this way one gazes on the Lord's flute and other ornaments. One does this to gaze on Lord Krishna, and one also gazes on the Lord's dear associates and paraphernalia. One does not meditate on one's own body. This is so because of the previously explained reason.

21 When one worships the Lord in meditation one should meditate on the Lord's pastimes and associates as they actually were when they appeared in this world. With the power of one's creative imagination one should not invent ideas of how they are. One should meditate on them as they are in truth. As they appeared in the material world during the time of the Lord's advent there, so they also appear in the spiritual world eternally, where their numbers are without limit.

22 In the spiritual world the demons are not alive. They are merely toys, like puppets.

23 In Shrimad Bhagavata (10.14.61) it is said:

"In this way the boys spent their childhood in the land of Vrndavana playing hide-and-go-seek, building play bridges, jumping about like monkeys and engaging in many other such games."

Note: In these pastimes the boy Krishna imitates in play the pastimes of Lord Ramacandra.

24 In these words it is seen that the Supreme Personality of Godhead sometimes plays by imitating His own pastimes in His various incarnations. This is carefully shown, with proper logical arguments in Shri Bhagavat-sandarbha and other books.

25 Now the glories of worshipping the Lord in one's meditation will be described. In the Narada-pancaratra, Lord Narayana explains:

"By worshipping the Supreme Personality of Godhead in one's meditation, one becomes free from old-age, disease and fear."

26 In the Narada-pancaratra, Lord Narayana again explains:

"O sage, I am pleased with any person who with great devotion worships Me in meditation."

27 Worship performed in meditation is independent of other kinds of worship. The Deity of the Lord conceived in meditation is one of the eight kinds of Deities. This Deity is described in these words of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (11.3.50);

"Gathering whatever ingredients are available, one should worship the Deity, either in His external form, or conceived in meditation within the devotee's heart."

This is so because Shri Avirhotra has used the word "va" (or) in this verse.

28 Now the different kinds of Deities will be considered. Because He has many different forms, the Lord manifests as many different kinds of Deities, such as His form as Salagrama-sila. In the scriptures it is said:

"Wherever is a Salagrama-sila stone, there Lord Hari is personally present."

29 The chosen Deity of the Supreme Personality of Godhead brings all perfection to the worshipper. This occurs spontaneously, without effort. Worshipping the chosen Deity of the Lord is described in these words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.3.48) it is said:

"The devotee should worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead in the particular personal form of the Lord the devotee finds most attractive."

30 For each of the Lord's forms, beginning with His original form of Lord Krishna, there is a transcendental abode, beginning with the abode of Mathura-mandala. This is described in the following words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.1.28):

"The city and district of Mathura are very intimately connected with Krishna, for Lord Krishna lives there eternally."*

31 For each of these abodes, beginning with Mathura and Vrndavana, there are mantras and ways of meditation. This is described in Shri Gopala-tapani Upanisad and other scriptures. Thus one should meditate on the Supreme Personality of Godhead as He appears in Mathura and His other transcendental abodes. Also one should meditate on the Supreme Personality of Godhead as being identical with His Deity form.

32 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead is identical with His Deity form is described in the following statement of scripture:

"He commits an offense who thinks the Deity of the Supreme Lord is merely a statue made of stone."

33 About His Deity form, the Supreme Personality of Godhead declares (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 11.27.13):

"The Deity form of the Lord, who is the shelter of all living entities can be established in two ways: temporarily or permanently. But a permanent Deity, having been called, can never be sent away, My dear Uddhava."

34 Here the word "pratistha" means "the Deity of the Lord", "jiva" means "of Me, the Supreme Personality of Godhead who gives life to all living beings", and "mandiram" means "the abode of Me, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, an abode that is the home of My various primary and secondary bodily features, or in other words My transcendental body". Or the word "mandiram" may also mean "the Deity form that is My home because it has been installed by the proper ritual". These are the meanings. In the Hayasirsa-pancaratra, in the description of installing the Deity, is given the following mantra for inviting the Lord to appear as the Deity:

"O Lord Vishnu, please come here."

Another mantra for this purpose is given in these words:

35 "O Lord, please place Your all-knowing form, a form that is the Supreme truth, in this Deity form. Please wake up, conscious and alive, as this Deity form."

36 The word "jiva-mandiram" may also be interpreted to mean "the Deity form, which is directly the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the shelter of all living entities". In this way the great devotees see that the Deity is directly the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself. The Lord and the Deity are not different.

37 This is confirmed by the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself. Speaking about His Deity form, the Lord declares (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.27.32):

"My devotee should then lovingly decorate Me with clothing, a brahmana thread, various ornaments, marks of tilaka and garlands, and he should anoint My body with fragrant oils, all in the prescribed manner."

38 Here the words "mam" (to Me) and "sa-prema" (with love) should be noted.

39 In the Vishnu-dharma Purana, Lord Vishnu describes His Deity form to King Ambarisa in these words: "Please place all your thoughts in My Deity form. Leave all other shelters and take shelter of My Deity form alone. Devotedly worship My Deity. Meditate on My Deity, who is kind to the devotees.

40 "When one is walking, standing, sleeping, eating, in front, behind, above, or below, one should always think of the Deity, knowing full well that the Deity and I are the same person.

41 The method of inviting the Lord to appear as the Deity and the method of worshipping the Deity are described in these words of the Agama-sastra:

"Avahanam' is when one respectfully invites the Lord to appear as the Deity. 'Samsthaapanam' is when with devotion one causes the Lord to enter the Deity.

42 "Sannidhapanam' is when one says to the Deity, 'I am Yours'. In this way one sees himself as a servant of the Deity. 'Sannirodhanam' is when one continues the ritual of worship until it is completed. 'Sakali-karanam' is when the Lord reveals all the limbs of His transcendental form."

43 When the scriptures declare that sudras and other low-caste persons are not allowed to worship the Deity, the scriptures refer to sudras that are not Vaishnavas. This is explained in the following words of the scriptures:

"They who are devotees of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are never sudras. They are all exalted devotees. However, they who are not devoted to Lord Vishnu are all sudras, regardless of the caste of their birth."

44 In the Seventh Canto of Shrimad Bhagavatam (7.14.34) Shri Narada explains:

"O king of the earth, it has been decided by expert, learned scholars that only the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Krishna, in whom all that is moving or non moving within this universe is resting and from whom everything is coming, is the best person to whom everything must be given."*

In this way it is affirmed that the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the highest object of worship. Therefore the jnani philosophers who desire liberation should take shelter of devotional service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

45 In Shrimad-Bhagavatam (7.15.2) it is said:

"A person desiring liberation for his forefathers or himself should give charity to a brahmana who adheres to impersonal monism (jana-nistha). In the absence of such an advanced brahmana, charity may be given to a brahmana addicted to fruitive activities (karma-kanda)."

In these words it is said that the jnanis (impersonalists) are the best objects of charity. However, in another place in the scriptures the Supreme Personality of Godhead declares:

46 "Even though a person is a very learned scholar of the Sanskrit Vedic literatures, he is not accepted as My devotee unless he is pure in devotional service. However, even though a person is born in a family of dog-eaters, he is very dear to Me if he is a pure devotee who has no motive to enjoy fruitive activity or mental speculation. Indeed, all respect should be given to him, and whatever he offers should be accepted. Such devotees are as worshipable as I am."*

47 In Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.9.21) it is said:

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead, Krishna, the son of mother Yasoda, is accessible to devotees engaged in spontaneous loving service, but He is not as easily accessible to mental speculators, to those striving from self-realisation by severe austerities and penances, or to those who consider the body the same as the self."*

48 It is also said in Shrimad Bhagavatam (6.14.5):

"O great sage, among many millions who are liberated and perfect in knowledge of liberation, one may be a devotee of Lord Narayana or Krishna. Such devotees who are fully peaceful, are extremely rare."*

49 In these words it is confirmed that a devotee of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the most exalted. How much more, then, must it be true that the worship of the Deity of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, a Deity worshipped by these exalted devotee, is the most exalted form of worship? Therefore it is said in the scriptures:

"Even if all one's past karma has already been burned away by the fire of transcendental knowledge, if one foolishly does not follow the Deity of the Lord as He goes in procession one will become a brahma-raksasa in the next birth."

50 In Shrimad Bhagavatam (7.14.34-35) the following explanation is given:

"O King of the earth, it has been decided by expert, learned scholars that only the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Krishna, in whom all that is moving and unmoving within this universe is resting and from whom everything is coming, is the best person to whom everything must be given."*

51 "O King Yudhisthira, the demigods, many great sages and saints including even the four sons of Lord

Brahma, and I myself were present at your Rajasuya sacrificial ceremony, but when there was a question of who should be the first person worshipped everyone decided upon Lord Krishna, the Supreme Person."*

52 Here the word "tatra" (there) means "in the Rajasuya-yajna".

Anuccheda 287

1 In Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.14.36) it is said:

"The entire universe, which is full of living entities, is like a tree whose root is the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Acyuta (Krishna). Therefore simply by worshipping Lord Krishna one can worship all living entities."

2 Thus by pleasing the Supreme Personality of Godhead one also pleases all living entities automatically. That is the meaning here.

Anuccheda 288

1 In Shrimad Bhagavatam (7.14.37) it is also said:

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead has created many residential places like the bodies of human beings, animals, birds, saints, and demigods. In all of these innumerable bodily forms, the Lord resides with the living being as Paramatma. Thus He is known as the purusavatara."*

2 Here the word "jiva" means "the giver of life". This word refers to the Supersoul, who is present in the hearts of all conditioned living beings.

Anuccheda 289

1 In Shrimad Bhagavatam (7.14.38) it is also said:

"O King Yudhisthira, the Supersoul in every body gives intelligence to the individual soul according to his capacity for understanding. Therefore the Supersoul is the chief within the body. The Supersoul is manifested to the individual soul according to the individual's comparative development of knowledge, austerity, penance and so on."*

2 Here the word "tasmāt" means "than the higher and lower", and "purusah patram" means "the person who is the object". Thus it is seen that the devotees of the Lord are better than the impersonalists. Therefore, as far as one has knowledge of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, so far is one advanced in spiritual life.

Anuccheda 290

1 Seeing that in the course of time faults had become manifested among the devotees of the Lord, the Vedas revealed another way to worship the Lord. This is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.14.39):

2 "My dear King, when great sages and saintly persons saw mutually disrespectful dealings at the beginning of Treta-yuga, Deity worship in the temple was introduced with all paraphernalia."*

3 This verse means, "Seeing the mutually disrespectful dealings, they introduced Deity worship." In this way the path of Deity worship was revealed. That is the meaning.

4 Deity worship is the best means of spiritual advancement for they who have these kinds of faults. In the scriptures it is said:

"Deity worship is meant for people of Treta-yuga who are all less intelligent."

Deity worship is also described in the conversations of Brahma, Ambarisa, and other great souls as recorded in the Nrsimha Purana and other scriptures.

Anuccheda 291

1 In Shrimad Bhagavatam (7.14.40) it is said:

"Sometimes a neophyte devotee offers all the paraphernalia for worshipping the Lord, and he factually worships the Lord as the Deity, but because he is envious of the authorised devotees of Lord Vishnu, the Lord is never satisfied with his devotional service."*

2 Here the word "tatah" means "because of being like this," and "kecit" means "they who are devoted to Deity worship and convinced that Deity worship is the best path". That is the meaning.

Here someone may object: Even if one offends others he can still attain perfection by worshipping the Deity.

Fearing that someone may make this claim, Shrimad Bhagavatam speaks this verse. With a desire to refute this idea and establish the truth that one should be respectful to others, Shrimad Bhagavatam speaks the words that begin with the phrase "upastapi".

Anuccheda 292

1 The word "purusa" in the previous verse is explained in these words of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (7.14.41):
"My dear King, of all persons a qualified brahmana must be accepted as the best within this material world because such a brahmana, by practicing austerity, Vedic studies and satisfaction, becomes the counterpart body of the Supreme Personality of Godhead."*

2 This verse means that they know that such a person is the best.

1 The brahmanas, who were also described in the previous verse, are again glorified in these words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (7.14.42):

"My dear King Yudhisthira, the brahmanas, especially those engaged in preaching the glories of the Lord throughout the entire world, are recognised and worshipped by the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is the heart and soul of all creation. The brahmanas, by their preaching, sanctify the three worlds with the dust of their lotus feet, and thus they are worshipable even for Krishna."*

2 Here the word "jagad-atmanah" means :engaged in preaching the truth of spiritual life to the people, and thus convincing them to follow the restrictions of spiritual life". The word "daivatam" means "worshipable". This verse was spoken by Shri Narada to King Yudhisthira.

Anuccheda 294

1 In the beginning of the next chapter (chapter 15 of the seventh canto), the brahmanas who are the best of all other brahmanas are described in the following two verses (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.15.1-2):

2 "My dear King, some brahmanas are very much attached to fruitive activities, some are attached to austerities and penances, and still others study the Vedic literature, whereas some, although very few, cultivate knowledge and practice different yogas, especially bhakti-yoga."*

3 "A person desiring liberation for his forefathers or himself should give charity to a brahmana who adheres to impersonal monism (jnana-nistha). In the absence of such an advanced brahmana, charity may be given to a brahmana addicted to fruitive activities (karma-kanda)."

4 This verse means that for they who desire impersonal liberation the most important kind of worship is worship of a jnani (impersonalist). When a jnani is not present, then other persons may be worshipped. However, they who desire to attain devotional service and pure love of God should worship a devotee who loves the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Such a devotee always thinks of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is the shelter of all. Therefore the worship of such a devotee is the best of all kinds of worship.

5 Because He is the shelter in which everything rests, because He has extraordinary powers, and because He is all-pervading, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Lord Vishnu is personally present as the Salagrama-sila and His other Deity forms. He is the all-pervading Supersoul. He is not like a human being. Jagannatha Puri and the other places where He resides are very holy places of pilgrimage. Even the insects and worms who live in these sacred places attain the highest goal of life. This is confirmed by the words of scripture.

6 In the Skanda Purana it is said:

"Any place where there is a Salagrama-sila becomes sacred for 24 miles. All charity, japa and yajna performed there becomes multiplied by many millions of times."

7 In the Padma Purana it is said:

"Any human being, or any insect or worm for that matter, who dies within two miles of a Salagrama-sila goes to the spiritual world of Vaikuntha."

8 The conclusion, then, is that worship of the Deity of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the best kind of worship. This verse was spoken by Shri Narada to King Yudhisthira.

Anuccheda 295

1 Other places where the Supreme Personality of Godhead is personally manifested are described by the Lord Himself in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.11.42-46):

2 "O saintly Uddhava, please know that you may worship Me in the sun, fire, brahmanas, cows, Vaishnavas, sky, wind, water, earth, individual soul and all living entities."

3-5 "My dear Uddhava, one should worship Me within the sun by chanting selected Vedic mantras and by performing worship and offering obeisances. One may worship Me within fire by offering oblations of ghee, and one may worship Me among the brahmanas by respectfully receiving them as guests, even when uninvited. I can be worshipped within the cows by offerings of grass and other suitable grains and paraphernalia for the pleasure and health of the cows, and one may worship Me within the Vaishnavas by offering loving friendship to them and honouring them in all respects. Through steady meditation I am worshipped within the inner space of the heart, and within the air I can be worshipped by knowledge that prana, the life air, is the chief among elements. I am worshipped within water by offerings of water itself, along with other elements such as flowers and tulasi leaves, and one may worship Me within the earth by proper application of confidential seed mantras. One may worship Me within the individual living entity by offering food and other enjoyable substances, and one may worship Me within all living entities by seeing the Supersoul within all of them, thus maintaining equal vision.

6. "Thus, in the previously mentioned places of worship and according to the processes I have described, one should meditate on My peaceful, transcendental form with four arms holding a conchshell, Sudarsana disc, club and lotus flower. In this way, one should worship me with fixed attention."

7 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"Now eleven objects of worship will be described. Here the word 'bhadra' is in the vocative case. In the first three verses (42-44), the Lord describes different objects of worship and different methods of worship. Here the word 'trayya vidyaya' means 'with prayers, worship and other kinds of service', 'anga' means 'O Uddhava', 'mukhya-dhiya' means 'by seeing the truth about the breath of life', 'toye' means 'with water and other things', 'dravyaih' means 'with tarpana and other offerings', 'sthandile' means 'on the ground', and 'mantra-hrdai' means 'with confidential mantras and nyasas'. Then, in verse 46, the Lord describes the way these objects of worship should become objects of meditation. Here the word 'iti' means 'in this way', and 'esu' means 'in these objects of worship.'

8 The four-armed, all-pervading Supersoul may be worshipped in two ways. The first way is to worship Him in the temple, for example by scenting the temple with fragrant oils. The second way is described in these verses in the words 'vaisnave bandhu-sat-kṛtya' (one may worship me within the Vaishnavas by offering loving friendship to them and honouring them in all respects) and "gosv anga yavasadinā" (I can be worshipped within the cows by offerings of grass and other suitable grains). Thus one should honour and befriend the Vaishnavas and understand that the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the supreme master. This is described in these words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.2.46):

"An intermediate, second class devotee shows love to the Supreme Personality of Godhead and is friendly to all devotees."*

Here it is said that grass should be offered to the cows. It is not proper, of course, to make such an offering to the four-armed Supreme Personality of Godhead, for that is not proper food for Him.

9 The Supreme Lord has already explained (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.11.41);

"Whatever is most desired by one within this material world, and whatever is most dear to oneself, one should offer that very thing to me. Such an offering qualifies one for eternal life."

10 Direct service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead is described in Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.11.44 (quoted in text 4 of this anuccheda) in the words "hrdi khe dhyana-nisthaya" (through steady meditation I am worshipped within the inner space of the heart) and "toye dravyais toya-puraskṛtaiḥ" (I am worshipped within water by offerings of water itself).

11 These words describe meditation on the Supersoul, who is present in fire and the other material elements. These words do not describe the form of the Lord chosen by the devotees, a form that is the shelter of all and is served with great love. This is so because that form, which is served with spiritual love, is thought by the devotees to have delicate features (and therefore it is not appropriate to think of Him as being present in fire and in various harsh conditions that present themselves to the all-pervading Supersoul).

12 The form of the Lord chosen by the devotees is described by the Lord Himself in these words of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (11.27.32):

"My devotee should then lovingly decorate Me with clothing, a brahmana thread, various ornaments, marks of tilaka and garlands, and he should anoint My body with fragrant oils, all in the prescribed manner."

13 In this way the scriptures describe the devotees' loving service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

14 In the Narada Purana it is said:

"O brahmanas, the Supreme Personality of Godhead is attained only by devotional service. He is never attained merely by collecting money. When He is worshipped with devotion, Lord Vishnu grants the desires of His devotees.

15 "When He is worshipped with a little water, Lord Hari, who is the master of the universes and the destroyer of all sufferings, is at once pleased. He is like a thirsty man given a cup of clear water."

16 Of course, in this example it should be understood that the Supreme Lord is the origin of everything (including the water that is offered to Him). To think otherwise is to commit a great blunder. To worship the Lord by taking Him to a pleasant lake is praiseworthy in the hot summer but not praiseworthy during the monsoon.

17 In the Garuda Purana it is said: They who in the summer worship Lord Kesava by taking Him to a pleasant lake and offering Him many different flowers become free from the tortures of Yamaraja.

18 "O best of kings, they who take Lord Jagannatha to a pleasant lake during the monsoon season spend a long time in hell."

19 This is also explained in other scriptures. Many hundreds of rules are given for the appropriate times and places of various kinds of services offered to the Lord. To offer these services at other times is forbidden. This is explained in the Vishnu-yamala in the passage that begins, "Now the ways to serve Lord Vishnu in the various seasons will be described.

20 The Supreme Lord also explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.11.41):

"Whatever is most desired by one within this material world, and whatever is most dear to oneself, one should offer that very thing to me. Such an offering qualifies one for eternal life."

21 In this way the appropriate mantras, meditations, and places as well as the appropriate pleasing and beautiful forms, tastes, scents, touches and sounds, are understood. One who does not follow these rules finds his worship of the Lord is performed in vain. In this way the Lord's form as the Supersoul, who is present in fire and other like places in this world, is understood.

Anuccheda 296

1 Now offering foodstuffs to the Lord will be discussed. In Shrila Kesavacarya's Krama-dipika, in the description of the Aniruddha-mantra, it is said that pure devotees of Lord Krishna desire a mula-mantra glorifying Lord Krishna.

2 When the Lord eats His meal, one should meditate on a fire or a light coming from the Lord's mouth. As the Lord enjoys His meal one should meditate on the Lord's mouth smiling with happiness. Because Lord Krishna enjoys pastimes like those of a human being, He enjoys His meals in the same way meals are enjoyed in the world of human beings.

3 Now chanting japa will be considered. Even though there are many different Vaishnava mantras with different meanings, these mantras all bring the final goal of life. In the eight-syllable mantra and other Vaishnava mantras the purpose is to surrender to the Lord, even when the mantra does not address the Lord in the dative case.

4 One should follow the various rules of Deity worship when they are appropriate. All the various activities of devotional service ultimately lead to the perfection of pure devotional service. Still, those activities are of a great variety. Some are considered pure devotional service and others are not pure devotional service. The Lord Himself describes result of Deity worship in these words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.27.49):

5 "By worshipping Me through the various methods prescribed in the Vedas and tantras, one will gain from Me his desired perfection in both this life and the next."

Anuccheda 297

1 The Supreme Lord also explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.27.53):

"But one who simply engages in devotional service with no consideration of fruitive results attains Me. Thus whoever worships Me according to the process I have described will ultimately attain pure devotional service unto Me."

2 Here the word "nairapeksyena" means (free from material designations", and "bhakti-yogena" means

"with love". The second half of this verse means, "In this way Deity worship is performed." This verse was spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Anuccheda 298

1 Accepting flowers offered to the Lord and drinking water that has washed the lotus feet of the Lord are some of the signs by which a Vaishnava is known. The great glories of these many signs are described in thousands of scriptures.

2 Now the persons who are qualified to worship the Lord will be described. In Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.27.4) it is said:

"This process is accepted by and appropriate for all the occupational and spiritual orders of society. Therefore I consider worship of You in Your Deity form to be the most beneficial of all spiritual practices, even for women and sudras."

3 Here the word "sarva-varnanam" means "of the three varnas".

4 In the Smṛty-artha-sara, as well as in the Vaisakha-mahatmya portion of the Padma Purana, it is said:

"Following the path described in the Agama-sastras, women and sudras may, thinking of Him as the Lord in their hearts, engage in the Deity worship of Lord Vishnu.

5 "By chanting the Lord's holy names, even sudras may worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead. All may worship the Lord by following the path of the Agama-sastras, which follow in the footsteps of the Vedas.

6 "Women who are dear and kind to their husbands are also qualified to worship Lord Vishnu. This is the eternal teaching of the Vedas."

7 In the Vishnu-dharma Purana it is said:

"Lord Krishna is pleased with anyone who is in eight ways devoted to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the initiating spiritual master, and the sacred mantras glorifying the Lord.

8 "1. One should be affectionate to the devotees of the Lord. 2. One should be very happy to worship the Lord. 3. With a pure heart one should regularly worship the Lord. 4. In worshipping the Lord one should be free of pride and hypocrisy.

9 "5. One should be eager to hear about the Lord. 6. One should engage one's body in the service of the Lord. 7. One should always remember the Lord. 8. One should make the chanting of the holy name of the Lord one's life and soul.

10 "These are the eight activities of devotional service, which even a person in a mleccha family may perform. Anyone who engages in these eight activities of devotional service becomes a saintly sage. He becomes honest, truthful, famous, and glorious among men."

11 In the tattva-sagara it is said:

"As bell-metal is turned to gold when mixed with mercury in an alchemical process, so one who is properly trained and initiated by a bona fide spiritual master immediately becomes a brahmana."*

12 In Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.5.21 it is said:

"In Satya -yuga the Lord is white and four-armed, had matted locks and wears a garment of tree bark. He carries a black deerskin, a sacred thread, prayer beads and the rod and waterpot of a brahmachari."

13 In the different yuga the Supreme Lord appears in different incarnations and is worshipped in different ways. A specific incarnation is established as the incarnation for a specific yuga. In this way the upasana-sastras explain the incarnations for the four yugas. Even when the time is not appropriate for a certain method of worship, one may still worship the Lord in that way. Thus, the scriptures explain, in every yuga one may, as one wishes, worship any form of the Lord with any of the proper methods of worship.

14 This is also described in Shrimad-Bhagavatam 11.27.4 (which was quoted in text 2 of this anuccheda). That verse was spoken by Uddhava to the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Anuccheda 299

1 In this way the worship of the Deity of the Supreme Personality of Godhead has been explained. In the Agama-sastras and other scriptures other aspects of Deity worship are also discussed. Included in these are Shri Krishna-janmastami, Karttika-vrata, Ekadashi, Magha-snana and other auspicious vows.

2 In the Vishnu-rahasya, in a conversation of Brahma and Narada, Janmastami is described in the following words:

"With devotion, and without cheating on one's true financial situation, the devotees should observe the birthday of Devaki's son. One who does not observe this holy day will stay in hell for the lifetimes of fourteen Indras."

3 It is also said:

"One who neglects Shri Krishna-janmastami and follows another vow in its place does not attain any pious merit that has even been seen or heard of anywhere."

4 Not cheating on one's true financial situation is described in these words of the Eight Canto (Shrimad Bhagavatam 8.19.37):

"Therefore one who is in full knowledge should divide his accumulated wealth in five parts: for religion, for reputation, for opulence, for sense gratification and for the maintenance of his family members. Such a person is happy in this world and in the next."*

5 Now Karttika will be described. In the Skanda Purana it is said:

"O child, all holy places reside in the month of Karttika, which is eternally dear to Lord Krishna. Whatever pious deeds one performs to please Lord Vishnu during the month of Karttika brings a benefit that is eternal. O Narada, I speak to you the truth.

6 "A person who refuses to follow the vow of this month, which is very dear to Lord Damodara, loses his pious deeds and takes birth as an animal.

7 Now ekadashi will be described. Even they who are not Vaishnavas should regularly observe ekadashi. This is described in the following words of the Vishnu-dharma Purana:

"Whether a Vaishnava or a worshipper of Surya, one should regularly observe ekadashi."

8 In the Saura Purana it is said:

"Whether a Vaishnava, a worshipper of Lord Siva, or a worshipper of Surya, one should regularly observe ekadashi."

9 In the Narada-pancaratra, in the discussion of duties to be performed after initiation, after the passage beginning with the words "samayams ca pravaksyami", it is said:

"During ekadashis of both pakshas one should not eat. At that time one should keep an all-night vigil and one should worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

10 In the Vishnu-yamala, in the discussion of the dig-viddha ekadashi, it is said:

"One should not act impiously on either the sukla or the krishna ekadashis, without distinction. In the same way, on ekadashi one should not, if one is able, eat fruits or other foods. One should not perform a sraddha ceremony on ekadashi. On dvadasi one should not sleep during the day and one should not pick tulasi leaves."

11 During dvadasi one should not bathe Lord Vishnu during the daytime. In the Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda, in the description of Vaishnava-dharma, it is said:

"One should observe the vow of dvadasi".

12 In the Skanda Purana, Kasi-khanda, Sauparna-dvaraka-mahatmya, Candrasarma recounts the following vow of devotional service:

13 "O Lord Krishna, please hear my vow. For this day on I will never eat during ekadashi. On every ekadashi I will observe an all-night vigil.

14 "With great devotion I will worship You every day. I will not observe the viddha-ekadashis. To please You I will observe the eight maha-dvadasis. This is my vow."

15 In the Agni Purana it is said:

"On ekadashi one should not eat. That is the great vow of the Vaishnavas."

16 In the Gautamiya Tantra it is said:

"If a Vaishnava foolishly eats during ekadashi, he worships Lord Vishnu in vain. He will go to a terrible hell."

17 In the Matsya and Bhavisya Puranas it is said:

"One should fast on the sukla and krishna ekadashis and break the fast on dvadasi. That is the great vow of the Vaishnavas."

18 In the Skanda Purana it is said:

"He who eats during ekadashi murders his mother, father, brother and spiritual master. He falls from the path that leads to Vishnuloka.

19 The Vaishnavas always fast on ekadashi. On ekadashi they will not even eat maha-prasadam, what to speak of other foods, which they are forbidden to eat at any time.

20 In the Narada-pancaratra it is said:

"O Narada, one must always accept the remnants of food offered to the Lord. However, on ekadashi one must not accept them. Even Goddess Laksmi, and her peers observe ekadashi. What, then, can be said of other persons?"

21 In the Brahmanda Purana it is said:

"Without first offering them to Lord Vishnu, one should not enjoy or consume any leaf, flower, fruit, water, food, drink, or medicine.

22 "They who do enjoy or consume these things without offering them first should perform atonement. One should always offer all of these things first to Lord Vishnu before one consumes or enjoys them oneself."

23 Now will be discussed the importance of always observing an all-night vigil on ekadashi. In the Skanda Purana, Lord Siva tells Goddess Uma:

"They who do not observe an all-night vigil on ekadashi are rebuked by the Vaishnavas and their piety is destroyed.

24 "They who never consider observing an all-night vigil on dvadasi are not qualified to worship Lord Krishna."

25 By observing ekadashi and dvadasi one pleases Lord Vishnu. This is explained in the following words of the Padma Purana, Uttara khanda:

"O goddess, now I will describe the observance of dvadasi. Simply by hearing these words one pleases Lord Krishna."

26 In the Bhavisya Purana it is said:

"Sacred ekadashi destroys all sins. It is a lamp that lights that path of devotion to Lord Vishnu. It leads one to the highest goal of life."

27 By showing how ekadashi is observed by Shri Ambarisa and other great souls who have faith in devotional service alone and who eat only maha prasadam offered to the Lord, Shrimad Bhagavatam affirms that the observance of ekadashi is an important part of devotional service to Lord Vishnu.

28 In the Padma Purana, Karttika-mahatmya, is told the story of how by observing ekadashi during the month of karttika a brahmana's daughter became Lord Krishna's dear Satyabhama. What more need be said?

29 Now the month of Magha will be discussed. In the Garuda Purana it is said:

"O leader of the demigods, O husband of Saci, the rare month of Magha is very dear to the Vaishnavas, devas, rsis and munis. It is especially dear to Lord Madhava."

30 In the Skanda Purana, in a conversation of Brahma and Narada, it is said:

"O Narada, year after year one should regularly bathe during the month of Magha. One should do this to please Lord Krishna and to destroy all one's past sins."

31 In the Bhavisya Purana, Uttara-khanda it is said:

"A person who renounces sense pleasures and bathes at dawn during the month of Magha goes to Vishnuloka with twenty one generations of his kinsmen."

32 Many other vows beginning with Shri Rama-navami and Vaisakha-vrata should also be understood here. All are included as pious deeds.

33 Pious deeds are described in these words of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (3.1.19):

"While so traversing the earth, he simply performed duties to please the Supreme Lord Hari. His occupation was pure and independent. He was constantly sanctified by taking his bath in holy places, although he was in the dress of a mendicant and had no hair dressing nor a bed on which to lie. Thus he was always unseen by his various relatives."*

34 Here the word "vratani" means "many vows, beginning with ekadashi". This verse describes the activities of Vidura. This verse was spoken by Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 300

1 In this way the devotees of the Lord follow these various vows to please their chosen Deity.

2 Thirty two offenses in the path of serving the Lord's feet and serving His Deity form are described in the Agama-sastras, where it is said:

"One should not wear shoes or ride on a palanquin when one enters the house of the Lord."

In the Varaha Purana it is said:

"One should not eat the food known as rajanna."

More offenses are described in the passage that begins with the words, "Outside of My scriptures."

3 In the Varaha Purana the Supreme Personality of Godhead says:

"O earth goddess, Vaishnavas should carefully avoid committing offenses in their worship of Me."

4 In Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.27.17-18) it is said:

5 "One should worship Me in the form of water by offering water itself. Actually, whatever is offered to Me with faith by My devotee, even if only a little water, is most dear to Me. Even very opulence presentations do not satisfy Me if they are offered by non devotees."

6 The words "faith" and "devotion" indicate respect for the Supreme Lord. All offenses have disrespect of the Lord as their nature. There is disrespect for the Lord's status as the supreme master, and there is also disrespect born from ignorance. Therefore disrespect, which is the creator of offenses, should be given up. That is the meaning. This verse was spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

1 Disrespect to great souls destroys everything. This is described in the following words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (4.31.21):

2 "The Supreme Personality of Godhead becomes very dear to those devotees who have no material possessions but are fully happy in possessing the devotional service of the Lord. Indeed, the Lord relishes the devotional activities of such devotees. Those who are puffed up with material education, wealth, aristocracy and fruitive activity are very proud of possessing material things, and they often deride the devotees. Even if such people offer the Lord worship, the Lord never accepts them."

3 Here the words "adhana" and "atma-dhana" refer to they whose only wealth is the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Such person are very dear (priya) to the Lord. The Lord (harih) relishes (rasajna) the service of His devotees. What persons are foolish and unintelligent? This question is answered in the words beginning with "sruta". Here the word "papam" means "offense". This verse was spoken by Shri Narada to the Pracetas.

1 It is also said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 5.10.25):

"O my dear lord, you are the friend of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is the friend of all living entities. You are therefore equal to everyone, and you are free from the bodily conception. Although I have committed an offense by insulting you, I know that there is no loss or gain for you due to my insult. You are fixed in your determination, but I have committed an offense. Because of this, even though I may be as strong as Lord Siva, I shall be vanquished without delay due to my offense at the lotus feet of a Vaishnava."*

2 The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by King Rahugana to Shri Bharata.

Anuccheda 303

1 If one foolishly offends a devotee, one should try to attain the mercy of the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

2 In Skanda Purana, Avanti-khanda, Vyasa explains:

"If a human being daily reads Bhagavad-gita, Lord Kesava forgives the thirty two kinds of offenses he commits."

3 In the Skanda Purana, Dvaraka-mahatmya it is said:

"One who recites or hears the thousand names of the Lord is not touched by even a thousand offenses."

4 In the Skanda Purana, Reva-khanda, it is said:

"If on dvadasi a person keeps an all-night vigil to please Lord Vishnu, and then recites prayers glorifying Tulasi-devi, then Lord Kesava forgives the thirty two kinds of offenses he commits."

5 In another passage of the Skanda Purana it is said:

"If one plants a Tulasi tree, especially during the month of Sravana (July-August), the Supreme Personality of Godhead forgives thousands of the offenses he commits."

- 6 In the Skanda Purana, Karttika-mahatmya, it is said:
"If one worships Salagrama-sila and Tulasi-devi together, then Lord Kesava forgives the thirty two kinds of offenses he commits."
- 7 In another passage of the Skanda Purana it is said:
"If a person whose body is decorated with the weapons of Lord Krishna engages in the worship of Lord Krishna, the Lord Krishna again and again forgives thousands of his offenses."
- 8 In the Adi-Varaha Purana, the Supreme Personality of Godhead declares:
"A person who in the middle of the year fasts and bathes in the Ganga at My sacred Sukara-tirtha becomes pure in heart."
- 9 "An offender who thus fasts and bathes at Mathura also becomes pure in heart. A devotee who thus serves both holy places as if they were one becomes free from the offenses committed in thousands of births."
- 10 Here the word "saukarake" means "the holy place named Sukara-tirtha". A great offender who offers prayers to the Lord or for a long time chants the holy name of the Lord attains the mercy of the Lord. Such a person is forgiven. Without the Lord's mercy one is not forgiven.
- 11 Daksa tells Lord Siva (Shrimad Bhagavatam (4.7.15):
"I did not know your full glories. For this reason, I threw arrows of sharp words at you in the open assembly, although you did not take them in account. I was going down to hell because of my disobedience to you, who are the most respectable personality, but you took compassion upon me and saved me by awarding punishment. I request that you be blessed by your own mercy, since I cannot satisfy you by my words."*
- 12 More will be said of this later in this book.
- 13 Now offering obeisances will be discussed. Although offering obeisances may be considered a part of Deity worship, it is also separate, in the same way glorifying and remembering the Lord are separate. Thus offering obeisances will be considered separately here. The other activities of devotional service may also be considered in this way.
- 14 Now will be discussed the truth that offering obeisances may be considered separately from Deity worship. Hearing the glories of the Supreme Lord's limitless transcendental qualities and opulences, some devotees may feel very humble, lowly and unqualified to serve the Lord's feet. Thus they may decide only to offer obeisances to the Lord and not directly engage in Deity worship. In this way offering obeisances is considered separate from Deity worship.
- 15 In the Nrsimha Purana it is said:
"Offering obeisances is the best of all yajnas. By once offering sastanga (dandavat) obeisances one attains Lord Hari."
- 16 Offering obeisances is described in these words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.14.8), where Brahma tells Lord Krishna:
"One who seeks Your compassion and thus tolerates all kinds of adverse conditions due to the karma of his past deeds, who engages always in Your devotional service with his mind, words and body, and who always offers obeisances unto You is certainly a bona fide candidate for becoming liberated."*
- 17 The reason why the devotees offer obeisances to the Lord is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.7):
"In time, great scientists may be able to count all the atoms of the universe, all the stars and planets in the sky, and all the particles of snow, but who among them can count the unlimited transcendental qualities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead? He descends on the surface of the globe for the benefit of all living entities."*
- 18 Here the word "tat" means "therefore", and "namah" means "obeisances". The ninth word "mukti-pade" means "You who are the shelter of liberation". This is confirmed by the tenth word. Or, if it is considered the fifth word according to prose order, the word "mukti" may also mean "spiritual love". The word "pade" then means "the object". "Mukti-pade" then means "You, the original Supreme Personality of Godhead, who are the object of the devotees' love". The word "daya-bhak" means "an inheritor, like a person who inherits something from his brother". The verse then means, "O Lord, You become favourable to such a person in this way". This interpretation (that it does not mean "liberation") of the word "mukti" must be correct, for liberation itself is attained by merely once offering obeisances to the Lord. This is confirmed by the following words of the Vishnu-dharma Purana:

19 "When a person once offers obeisances to Lord Krishna, that offering of obeisances becomes a guide to lead him out from the frightening and impassable jungle of repeated birth and death."

20 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"Here the word 'su-samiksamanah' means 'waiting'."

This words thus means that every moment the devotee expects the Lord's causeless, limitless mercy (anukampam). Seeing and meditating in this way in his heart (hrda), the devotee becomes blissful. Also, with his words (vaca) and body (vapusa) the devotee offers obeisances (namo vidadhat). That is the explanation of this verse.

21 One should avoid the various offenses in offering obeisances. These are described in the Vishnu-smṛti and other scriptures as being: 1. offering obeisances with one hand, 2. offering obeisances when the body is completely covered with cloth, 3. offering obeisances directly facing the Lord, or from behind or from the left side and 4. offering obeisances very close to the Lord within the inner Deity room. The verse discussed here (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.8) was spoken by Lord Brahma to the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

1 Now servitorship will be discussed. A general description of servitorship to Lord Vishnu is given in these words of the scriptures:

"After a thousand births one comes to understand: 'I am the servant of Lord Vasudeva, the maintainer of all the worlds'."

2 In this way one engages in devotional service. By thinking in this way one attains perfection. More will be said of this later in this book.

3 At the end of the passage beginning with the verse quoted in text 1 are these words:

"What then can be said of those persons who control their senses and have given their lives to the service of the Lord?"

4 Shri Prahlada speaks the following prayers (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.9.50):

"Therefore, O Supreme Personality of Godhead, the best of all person to whom prayers are offered, I offer my respectful obeisances unto You because without rendering six kinds of devotional service unto You: offering prayers, dedicating all the results of activities, worshipping You, working on Your behalf, always remembering Your lotus feet and hearing about Your glories, who can achieve that which is meant for the paramahansas?"*

In the commentary on this verse it is said that service to the Lord includes offering respectful obeisances, offering prayers, dedicating all the results of activities, worshipping You, working on the Lord's behalf, always remembering the Lord's lotus feet and hearing about the Lord's glories.

5 Shri Uddhava declares (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.6.46):

"Simply by decorating ourselves with the garlands, fragrant oils, clothes and ornaments that You have already enjoyed, and by eating the remnants of Your meals, we, Your servants, will indeed conquer Your illusory energy."

6 The different activities of service are described in these words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (9.4.18-20):

"Maharaja Ambarisa always engaged his mind in meditating upon the lotus feet of Krishna, his words in describing the glories of the Lord, his hands in cleansing the Lord's temple, and his ears in hearing the words spoken by Krishna or about Krishna. He engaged his eyes in seeing the deity of Krishna, Krishna's temples and Krishna's places like Mathura and Vrndavana, he engaged his sense of touch in touching the bodies of the Lord's devotees, he engaged his sense of smell in smelling the fragrance of tulasi offered to the Lord, and he engaged his tongue in tasting the Lord's prasada. He engaged his legs in walking to the holy places and temples of the Lord, his had in bowing down before the Lord, and all his desires in serving the Lord, twenty four hours a day. Indeed, Maharaja Ambarisa never desired anything for his own sense gratification. He engaged all his senses in devotional service, in various engagements related to the Lord. This is the way to increase attachment for the Lord and be completely free from all material desires."*

7 This verse means that his desires (kamam) were placed in service (dasye). The word "ca" (and) means that he thought, 'I am a servant of Lord Krishna. I will serve Him'. That was his desire. That is the meaning here. He did not desire to enjoy the sense gratification available in Svargaloka or other places (na tu kama-kamyaya). He had no desires other than devotional service.

8 This verse was spoken by Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 305

1 Worship of the Lord that is performed with the activities of service is the best kind of worship. In Shrimad Bhagavatam (9.5.16) it is said:

"What is impossible for the servants of the Lord? By the very hearing of His holy name one is purified."*

2 If one somehow or other hears the holy name of the Supreme Lord, then what more need he do to become purified? By hearing the Lord's holy name one thinks, "I am a servant of the Lord". What spiritual activities and what spiritual attainment then remain undone (avasisyate) by him? No spiritual activity is better than what he has done. That is the meaning. This verse was spoken by Durvasa Muni to King Ambarisa.

Anuccheda 306

1 Now thinking of the Lord as one's friend will be described. Being a friend of the Lord and desiring His welfare is described in these words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.14.32):

"How greatly fortunate are Nanda Maharaja, the cowherd men and all the inhabitants of Vrajabhumi! There is no limit to their fortune because the Absolute Truth, the source of transcendental bliss, the eternal Supreme Brahman, has become their friend."*

Here the word "mitra" indicates friendship with the Lord.

2 In the Ramarcana-dipika it is said:

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead now stays in a place as if He were a human being. Many great devotees have come to see Him and to act like His friends and relatives."

3 Intimate love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, as His friend or relative, is even better than being a servant of the Lord. Friendship for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is in this way described in the Vedic scriptures. This is not surprising. That one must have a nature like the Lord's to thus approach Him is described in these words of the scriptures:

"the Lord cannot be served by one whose nature is not like the Lord's nature."

Sometimes it is said that being thus in an equal position with the Lord is an impediment to true devotional service. The pure devotees of the Lord reject this idea. They accept that friendship with the Lord is very favourable for devotional service.

4 Servitorship and friendship are two ways of direct devotional service to the Lord. This is shown in the following Shrimad-Bhagavatam verse and its commentary. There Shridama Vipra declares (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.81.36):

"Life after life may I have a relationship of love, friendship, sympathy and service toward Him, the supremely compassionate reservoir of all transcendental qualities. And may I cultivate my firm attachment to Him by the precious association of His devotees."

5 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"Seeing Lord Krishna's love for His devotees, Shridama Vipra prays for devotion to the Lord. Here the word "sauhrdam" means :love", "sakhyam" means "being the well-wisher", "maitrim" means "benefiting Him", and "dasyam" means :being His servant and order-carrier". Shridama prays, "Let my (me) relationship with Him be (syat) like this. Let it not be a relationship of awe inspired by His great opulences".

6 Because it is the goal of the nine methods of devotional service, pure love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is not included among the items discussed here. However, being a friend of the Lord and being His well-wisher are included. Friendship and servitorship are accepted in this way.

7 Offering the results of one's work and attaining faith in devotional service are not mentioned here because these two are not direct devotional service. Offering the results of one's work leads to faith in devotional service and faith in devotional service leads to engagement in devotional service. This has already been explained. The devotee becomes the well-wishing friend of the Lord and the Lord becomes the well-wishing friend of His devotee. They associate with each other eternally.

8 It is not very difficult to worship the Lord as one's friend. Shri Prahlada explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.7.38):

"O my friends, sons of the asuras, the Supreme Personality of Godhead in His Supersoul feature always exist within the cores of the hearts of all living entities. Indeed, He is the well wisher and friend of all living entities, and there is no difficulty in worshipping the Lord. Why, then should people not engage in His devotional service? Why are they so addicted to unnecessarily producing artificial paraphernalia for sense gratification?"*

9 Here the word "chidravat" means "like the sky, which is never contaminated". The reason why there is no difficulty in worshipping the Lord is given in the following words: 1. In His pure form the Supreme Lord is the Supersoul present in all embodied beings (dehinam sva atma), 2. the Supreme Lord is the friend of everyone, equally and without exception (samanyatah), 3. as the Supersoul in the heart He is the well wisher of all. Therefore at the appropriate times He gives either material things or a wealth of spiritual love for Him (hareh). The conclusion, however, is, "What is the use of temporary material benefits like having a beautiful wife or mastery over others?" This verse was spoken by Shri Prahlada to the sons of the demons.

1 The Supreme Personality of Godhead declares (Shrimad Bhagavatam 9.4.66):

"As chaste women bring their gentle husbands under control by service, the pure devotees, who are equal to everyone and completely attached to Me in the core of the heart, bring Me under their full control."*

2 The example given in this verse shows the nature of devotional service in friendship with the Lord. This verse is spoken by the Lord of Vaikuntha to Durvasa Muni.

Anuccheda 308

1 In Shrimad Bhagavatam (4.12.37) it is said:

"Persons who are peaceful, equipoised, cleansed and purified, and who know the art of pleasing all other living entities, keep friendship only with devotees of the Lord. They alone can very easily achieve the perfection of going back home, back to Godhead."*

2 Here the word "acyuta-priya-bandhavah" means "they whose friends are the persons dear to the infallible Supreme Personality of Godhead" and the word "acyuta-padam" means "the spiritual world, where the infallible Supreme Personality of Godhead is the master". Thus it is shown that the word "acyuta", appearing two times in this verse, has the same meaning each time. The meanings are not different. This verse was spoken by Maitreya Muni.

Anuccheda 309

1 Now will be discussed surrendering everything to the Lord. That means offering everything, from the external material body to the pure spirit soul, to the Lord. That means that one does nothing for one's own sake, but everything for the sake of the Lord. That means that all one's activities and goals are meant to please Him. When one surrenders to the Lord, one becomes like a cow sold to a buyer. When the cow is sold, the seller no longer works to maintain the cow. The buyer must now work to maintain it. The seller does not again maintain the cow.

2 Surrendering everything to the Lord is described in these words of Shri Rukmini (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.52.39):

"Therefore, my dear Lord, I have chosen You as my husband, and I surrender myself to You. Please come swiftly, O almighty one, and make me Your wife. My dear lotus-eyed Lord, let Sisupala never touch the hero's portion like a jackal stealing the property of a lion."

3 Some say that surrendering everything means surrendering one's material body to the Lord. This is described in Bhakti-viveka:

"When one sells a cow, one no longer worries how to maintain the cow. In the same way, when one surrenders one's body to Lord Hari, one puts an end to the struggle to maintain it."

4 Others say that surrendering everything means surrendering oneself, the pure spirit soul, to the Lord. This is described in the prayers of Shri Yamunacarya (Stotra-ratna 49):

"O Lord, whatever I possess in terms of this body and its paraphernalia, and whatever I have from the modes of nature, today I offer at Your feet."

5 Others say that surrendering everything means surrendering to the Lord the deeds that begin with one's right hand. Thus the word that one performs with one's body or other instruments is not performed for one's own benefit. It is offered to the Lord. This is described in the following words of Shrimad-Bhagavatam

(9.4.18-20):

6-8 "Maharaja Ambarisa always engaged his mind in meditating upon the lotus feet of Krishna, his words in describing the glories of the Lord, his hands in cleansing the Lord's temple, and his ears in hearing the words spoken by Krishna or about Krishna. He engaged his eyes in seeing the Deity of Krishna, Krishna's temples and Krishna's places like Mathura and Vrndavana, he engaged his sense of touch in touching the bodies of the Lord's devotees, he engaged his sense of smell in smelling the fragrance of tulasi offered to the Lord, and he engaged his tongue in tasting the Lord's prasada. He engaged his legs in walking to the holy places and temples of the Lord, his head in bowing down before the Lord, and all his desires in serving the Lord. twenty four hours a day. Indeed, Maharaja Ambarisa never desires anything for his own sense gratification. He engaged all his senses in devotional service, in various engagements related to the Lord. This is the way to increase attachment for the Lord and be completely free from all material desires."*

9 Here the word "cakara" means : "he offered". "Krishna-padaravindayoh" means "in many different ways he served Lord Krishna's lotus feet and the other parts of the Lord's transcendental body". "Lingam" means "the Deity form of the Lord", "alayah" means "the Lord's devotees, the Lord's temple, and the holy places sacred to the Lord", "tat-pada-sarjoh-saurabhe shrimat-tulasyah" means "he smelled the fragrance of Shri Tulasi offered to the lotus feet of the Lord", "tad-arpita" means "maha-prasada foods and other things offered to the Lord", and "kamam ca dasye" means "his desires were placed in serving the Lord". What activities did he perform? That is explained in the words "yathottamasloka-janasraya ratih" (he engaged all his senses in devotional service, in various engagements related to the Lord). In these many ways he surrendered to the Lord. Worshipping the Lord by remembering Him and in other ways also, he surrendered to the Lord.

10 The Lord explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.19.24):

"Firm faith in the blissful narrations of My pastimes, constant chanting of my glories, unwavering attachment to ceremonial worship of Me, praising Me through beautiful hymns, great respect for My devotional service, offering obeisances with the entire body, performing first-class worship of My devotees, consciousness of Me in all living entities, offering of ordinary, bodily activities in My devotional service, use of words to describe My qualities, offering the mind to Me, rejecting of all material desires, giving up wealth for My devotional service, renouncing material sense gratification and happiness, and performing all desirable activities such as charity, sacrifice, chanting, vows and austerities with the purpose of achieving Me, these constitute actual religious principles, by which those human beings who have actually surrendered themselves to Me automatically develop love for Me. What other purpose or goal could remain for My devotee?"

11 Remembering the Lord, glorifying Him and serving His feet are all included with devotional service. Although the Agama-sastras sometimes describe Deity worship as something different from devotional service, it is not really different. Bathing and dressing the Deity as well as the other activities of Deity worship are all appropriate activities of devotional service. Also, these activities are not opposed to or different from surrendering everything to the Lord.

12 Surrendering everything is praised in these words of Shri Prahlada (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.6.26):

"Religion, economic development and sense gratification, these are described in the Vedas as tri-varga, or three ways to salvation. Within these three categories are education and self-realisation, ritualistic ceremonies performed according to Vedic injunction, logic, the science of law and order, and the various means of earning one's livelihood. These are the external subject matters of study in the Vedas, and therefore I consider them material. However, I consider surrender to the lotus feet of Lord Vishnu to be transcendental."*

13 Surrendering everything is also praised in these words of the Supreme Personality of Godhead (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.29.34):

"A person who gives up all fruitive activities and offers himself entirely unto Me, eagerly desiring to render service unto Me, achieves liberation from birth and death and is promoted to the status of sharing My own opulences."*

14 Surrendering everything to the Lord is seen to be of two kinds: 1. surrender performed without ecstatic love, and 2. surrender performed with ecstatic love. The verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.29.34) quoted in the preceding text is an example of the former. An example of the latter is found in Shrimad Bhagavatam

(11.11.35) where the Supreme Personality of Godhead declares:

"Accepting oneself as My eternal servant, one should give oneself completely to Me."

15 Another example of surrender with ecstatic love is seen in these words of Shri Rukmini (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.52.39):

"Therefore, my dear Lord, I have chosen You as my husband, and I surrender myself to You. Please come swiftly, O almighty one, and make me Your wife. My dear lotus-eyed Lord, let Sisupala never touch the hero's portion like a jackal stealing the property of a lion."

16 The verses (Shrimad Bhagavatam 9.4.18-20) quoted in texts 6-8 of this anuccheda were spoken by Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami.

1 In this way devotional service performed by following the rules and regulations (vaidhi bhakti) has been described. Some features of vaidhi bhakti have been described here, some have not been described here, and some have not been described here, and some have been glorified in other parts of this book. The different kinds of faith and different kinds of glorious features or vaidhi bhakti described here are not at odds with each other. They are meant for different kinds of persons in the same way different kinds of medicines are meant for different kinds of patients.

2 Now spontaneous devotional service (raganuga bhakti) will be described. In raganuga bhakti there is great love and a strong desire to attain the Lord. This is called raga. When the eyes and other senses are attracted to the handsomeness and other transcendental qualities of the Lord, that is called raga, or passionate love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

3 There are many different kinds of raga. This is seen in the following statement of the Supreme Personality of Godhead (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.25.38):

"My dear mother, devotees who receive such transcendental opulences are never bereft of them. Neither weapons nor the change of time can destroy such opulences. Because the devotees accept Me as their friend, their relative, their son, preceptor, benefactor, and Supreme deity, they cannot be deprived of their possession at any time."*

4 The Supreme Personality of Godhead is the beloved (priya) of the dear gopis, the Supreme Brahman (atma) for the sages headed by Shri Sanaka-kumara, the son (suta) of they who are headed by the King of Vraja, the friend (sakha) of they who are headed by Shridama, the preceptor (guru) of they who are headed by Pradyumna, the brother of someone, the cousin of someone, and the father-in-law of someone. He is the friend (suhrah) of many friends headed by Shridama. He is the master (daivam istam) of many servants headed by Daruka.

5 Here it may be said that the demigods Siva fell in love with the Supreme Lord's incarnation of Shrimati Mohini-devi, and this should be considered ecstatic love for the Lord. This idea is not accepted, for it is not confirmed by the words of scripture. Lord Siva became bewildered by the Lord's illusory potency (maya) and his love for Mohini was material lust.

6 When one thinks of the Lord in one of these different relationships and engages in the activities of devotional service that begin with hearing about the Lord, glorifying Him, remembering Him, serving His feet, offering obeisances to Him, and surrendering everything to Him, and when one loves the Lord, but one's love is not yet natural or spontaneous, his devotional service is called ragatmika bhakti.

7 When one has already attained passionate love for the Lord, love like a great Ganges river of devotion in which the waves are the various activities of devotional service, and when the activities of devotional service are no longer a means of attaining something that is not already attained, his devotion is called raganuga bhakti.

8 From the passionate love (raga) thus described, attraction (ruci) is born. Attraction (ruci) is not manifested of its own accord. It comes from love (raga). When the faint reflection of the light shining from the nectar moon of this passionate love (raga) shines in the crystal jewel of the heart, then attraction (ruci) is born by the action of passionate love (raga). When attraction (ruci) thus follows (anuga) passionate love (raga), the condition is known as raganuga bhakti.

9 Some call this stage of devotional service avihita bhakti, for it is impelled by attraction alone and is not bound to follow rules and regulations. This explanation should not be accepted. It is not possible for a person completely aloof from all rules and regulations to engage in devotional service.

10 In Shrimad Bhagavatam (2.1.7) it is said:

"O King Pariksit, mainly the topmost transcendentalists, who are above the regulative principles and restrictions, take pleasure in describing the glories of the Lord."*

11 Vaidhi bhakti, which is dependent on following rules and regulations, is weak, but raganuga bhakti, which is independent of rules and regulations, is powerful. By engaging in raganuga bhakti one comes to dislike anything that has no relation to devotional service. This is explained in the Third Canto, where, describing attraction to the descriptions of the Lord, Shri Vidura says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.5.13):

12 "For one who is anxious to engage constantly in hearing such topics, Krishna-katha gradually increases his indifference towards all other things. Such constant remembrance of the lotus feet of Lord Krishna by the devotee who has achieved transcendental bliss vanquishes all his miseries without delay."*

13 Ruci means when the mind is in the grip of hearing the previous described topics of the Lord. Because raganuga bhakti is not dependent on rules and regulations, the servitorship (dasya) and friendship (sakhyā) for the Lord manifested in raganuga bhakti are different from the servitorship and friendship for the Lord manifested in vaidhi bhakti.

14 In Shrimad Bhagavatam (7.5.24) it is said:

"These nine processes are accepted as pure devotional service. One who has dedicated his life to the service of Krishna through these nine methods should be understood to be the most learned person, for he has acquired complete knowledge."*

15 Great importance is not given to the stages of development manifested in raganuga bhakti. However, importance is given to the stages of development in ragatmika bhakti. In ragatmika bhakti comes the manifestation of ruci. This is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.8.35):

16 "The Supreme Personality of Godhead is absolutely the most dear one for all living beings because He is everyone's well-wisher and Lord. He is the Supreme Soul situated in everyone's heart. Therefore I will now pay the price of complete surrender, and thus purchasing the Lord I will enjoy with Him just like Lakṣmi-devi."*

17 Thinking of the Supreme Personality of Godhead as her friend and well-wisher, in this verse Pingalā desires to attain Him as her husband. That is the meaning here.

18 In the Chandogya-pariśiṣṭa it is said:

"Following a vow of chanting caru-mantras, a girl attains oneness with her desired husband."

The "oneness" mentioned here is artificial, not real. As a girl may thus purchase an ordinary husband, in the same way, by full self-surrender, one may purchase the Supreme Personality of Godhead as one's husband and enjoy with Him as Lakṣmi-devi enjoys with her handsome husband. In this way is shown Pingalā's attraction (ruci) to the Lord.

Anuccheda 311

1 The activities of raganuga bhakti are described in these words of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (11.8.40):

"I am now completely satisfied and I have full faith in the Lord's mercy. Therefore I will maintain myself with whatever comes of its own accord. I shall enjoy life with only the Lord, because He is the real source of love and happiness."

2 This verse means, "In my mind (atmana) I will enjoy (viharami) with Him (amuna), my affection lover". The mind is mentioned here because the mind is most important in the path of attraction (ruci) to the Lord. Because she did not have the spiritual form of a beloved of the Lord, Pingalā engaged her mind in meditating on the Lord in this way. Deity worship tends to remove the boldness (that is a natural part of amorous pastimes). Therefore Deity worship naturally leads to vatsalya rasa, where one is a parent or other guardian of the Lord. This verse was spoken by Shri Pingalā.

1 In this way raganuga bhakti where the devotee has the idea of becoming one of the Lord's beloveds is shown. An example of this is seen in the Brahma-vaivarta Purāṇa, in the story of the girl Kamakalā. Examples of ruci-bhakti where the devotee has the idea of becoming a servant of the Lord or associating with Him in the other rasa are seen in other places in the scriptures. An example of a servant is given in the following words of Shri Prahlaḍa (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.9.24):

"My dear Lord, now I have complete experience concerning the worldly opulence, mystic power, longevity and other material pleasures enjoyed by all living entities, from Lord Brahma down to the ant. As powerful time, You destroy them all. Therefore, because of my experience, I do not wish to possess them. My dear Lord, I request You to place me in touch with Your pure devotee and let me serve him as a sincere servant."*

2 In Shri Narada-pancaratra a devotee says:

"O master of the universes, when, with a graceful and deep voice will you order me, "Take a camara in your hand and fan Me'."

3-4 In the Skanda Purana and in the Sanat-kumara-samhita, in the story of King Prabhakara, it is said:

"Although he was sonless, the king did not desire a son. He considered that his condition was already ordained by his past karma. Instead, he wished that Lord Vasudeva, the eternal Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is glorified by all the Upanisads and who is the Supersoul in everyone's heart, would become his son. He wanted to crown the Supreme Lord as the next king and give the kingdom to Him. He did not wish for a son that would not be the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself."

5 Finally the Supreme Personality of Godhead appeared before the king and said, "I will become your son."

6 In the Narayana-vyuha-stava it is said:

"I offer my respectful obeisances to they who always meditate on Lord Hari as their husband, son, friend, brother, father, or mother."

7 In this verse the words husband, son, friend, and brother refer to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the object of meditation and the words father and mother refer to the devotee who is meditating on the Lord. The affix "vat" (like) here means that the devotee does not directly become the Lord's mother, but rather becomes a follower of the Lord's mother. The same is true for the Lord's father. To think otherwise is to accept the impersonalists' error of ahangrahopasana (thinking oneself the object of worship). Here the word "dhyayant" (they meditate) confirms the previous explanation of the importance of the mind in raganuga bhakti. The word "api" (even) here means "How exalted are they who serve the Lord in perfect raganuga bhakti?"

8 Here someone may object: The Purva-mimamsa affirms, "Religion means following the orders of scripture", and the Brahma-yamala also affirms, "Devotional service to the Lord that ignores the authorised Vedic literatures like the Upanisads, Puranas, Narada-pancaratra, etc., is simply an unnecessary disturbance in society."* Therefore to ignore the orders of the Sruti-sastra and other scriptures is a great fault.

9 The Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself affirms:

"The Sruti and Smṛti sastras are My commands. Therefore one who disobeys the scripture disobeys Me. Such a person hates Me. He may claim to be devoted to Me, but in truth he is not."

10 This verse shows that disobedience to the duties and prohibitions of the Sruti-sastra and other scriptures makes one ineligible to be a Vaishnava. How, then can one attain perfection by following a kind of devotional service (ragatmika bhakti) that ignores these rules and regulations?

If this is said, then the following reply is given: Spiritual potency is present in the Lord's holy name, qualities and all else that is in relation to Him. It is not present in the rules of ordinary religion. In many places the scriptures affirm that one attains the result of devotional service without reference to impersonal speculation or any other method. The rules of the scriptures do not have power to act by themselves, without reference of a person. They have power because they have come from the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Therefore they who, having no knowledge of attraction (ruci) to the Lord, raise these objections, have no real understanding of the activities of ragatmika bhakti.

11 This is shown by the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.2.35):

"O King, one who accepts this process of devotional service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead will never blunder on his path in this world. Even while running with eyes closed, he will never trip or fall."

12 A person who is somehow or other engaged in the attempt to fix his mind in thinking of the Lord is a person who actually follows the rules of devotional service. A person who does not have attraction for the Lord and does not yearn to always engage in devotional service does not actually follow the rules of devotional service. Such a person may perish from the attack of impersonalism or from other calamities. The rules of devotional service are not established for their own sake. They are meant to make one attracted to the Lord, to make the mind fall in love (ragatmika) with the charming Supreme Personality of Godhead.

13 The Supreme Personality of Godhead declares (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.11.33):

"My devotees may or may not know exactly what I am, who I am and how I exist, but if they worship Me with unalloyed love, then I consider them to be the best of devotees."

This means that even if one acts with the wrong motive, or even out of malice, and even if one is merely mimicking the actions of devotional service, if one somehow or other engages in ragatmika bhakti, he will attain the result obtained by engaging in ragatmika bhakti. This is described in the scriptures.

14 Simply by mimicking the activities of the Lord's nurse or mother, Putana attained the perfection of ragatmika bhakti. This is described in the following words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.14.35) where Brahma tells Lord Krishna:

"My mind becomes bewildered just trying to think of what reward other than You could be found anywhere. You are the embodiment of all benedictions, which You bestow upon these residents of the cowherd community of Vrndavana. You have already arranged to give Yourself to Putana and her family members in exchange for her disguising herself as a devotee. So what is left for You to give these devotees of Vrndavana, whose homes, wealth, friends, dear relations, bodies, children and very lives and hearts are all dedicated only to You?"

If this was true for Putana, then what may be said of the devotees who are attracted (ruci) to the Lord and always sincerely engaged in the activities of devotional service? In Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.6.35-36) it is also said:

15-16 "Putana was always hankering for the blood of human children, and with that desire she came to kill Krishna. But because she offered her breast to the Lord, she attained the greatest achievement. What then is to be said of those who had natural devotion and affection for Krishna as mothers and who offered Him their breasts to suck or offered something very dear, as a mother offers something to a child?"*

17 The Lord Himself declares (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.20.36):

"Material piety and sin, which arise from the good and evil of this world, cannot exist within My unalloyed devotees, who, being free from material hankering, maintain steady spiritual consciousness in all circumstances. Indeed, such devotees have achieved Me, the Supreme Lord, who am beyond anything that can be conceived by material intelligence."

18 The state of being an unalloyed (ekanti) devotee of the Lord is attained by having faith in devotional service. When one is attracted (ruci) to the Lord, one naturally respects the rules and regulations described in the scriptures. Attraction to the Lord is very rare. If a person has no respect for the rules and regulations of the scriptures and thinks himself an unalloyed devotee, he is merely a proud hypocrite. This is confirmed by the following words of the Brahma-yamala:

"Devotional service to the Lord that ignores the authorised Vedic literatures like the Upanisads, Puranas, Narada-pancaratra, etc., is simply an unnecessary disturbance in society."*

Therefore the criticism that they do not honour the rules of scripture cannot be thrown at they who are genuinely attracted (ruci) to the Lord. This is also seen in Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.6.35-36 (quoted in texts 15 and 16 of this anuccheda).

19 In the Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda it is said:

"They who have no love or attraction for the Supreme Personality of Godhead and act as they like, ignoring the instructions of the Vedas, are known as offenders and atheists."

Here the word "priti" means "attraction".

20 One who deliberately dishonours the instructions of scripture is to be criticised, but one who is merely ignorant of those instructions is not to be criticised. This is seen in the following words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.2.35):

"O King, one who accepts this process of devotional service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, will never blunder on his path in this world. Even while running with eyes closed, he will never trip or fall."

21 In the Gautamiya Tantra it is said:

"For they who are always fallen in love with the lotus feet of Lord Krishna there is no japa, no Deity worship, no meditation, and no rules."

22 When attraction (ruci) is not yet manifested even the best raganuga bhakti is considered to be mixed with vaidhi bhakti. Even a devotee who has attraction (ruci) for the Lord may, in order to benefit the people of the world, engage in raganuga bhakti mixed with vaidhi bhakti. Therefore, in some situations it is appropriate to practice raganuga bhakti mixed with vaidhi bhakti.

23 Some devotees chant the eighteen-syllable mantra and meditate on Lord Krishna surrounded by all His associates attracted by the music of His flute at the time for milking the cows. Other devotees think in this way: "I chant this mantra that my spiritual master has given me so that I may attain my desire and become one of the people of Vraja. Then I will directly serve Lord Krishna, the son of Vraja's king."

24 Now will be discussed these words spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead (and previously quoted in text 9):

"The Sruti and Smṛti sastras are My commands. Therefore one who disobeys the scripture disobeys Me. Such a person hates Me. He may claim to be devoted to Me, but in truth he is not."

Disobedience of the commands of scripture is of two kinds: 1. disobeying the dharma-sastras, and 2. disobeying the bhakti-sastras.

25 A person who has faith in devotional service does not fall down from his position as a Vaishnava if because of wickedness, or another reason, or for no reason at all, he does not perform the duties described in the dharma-sastras. This is described in the following words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.5.41):

"One who has given up all material duties and taken full shelter at the lotus feet of Mukunda, who gives shelter to all, is not indebted to the demigods, great sages, ordinary living beings, relatives, friends, mankind, or even one's forefathers who have passed away."*

26 The Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself declares (Bhagavad-gita 9.30):

"Even if one commits the most abominable action, if he is engaged in devotional service he is to be considered saintly because he is properly situated in his determination."*

27 They who are attracted to the Lord in this way do not desire the happiness of liberation from the world of birth and death, what to speak of the horrible happiness created by sinful deeds. They do not commit sins, if somehow by mistake or by accident they commit a sin, that sin is destroyed in a single moment.

28 Also, in Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.5.42) it is said:

"One who has given up everything and taken full shelter at the lotus feet of Hari, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, is very dear to Krishna. If he is involved in some sinful activity by accident, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is seated within everyone's heart, removes his sins without difficulty."*

29 The duties and prohibitions described in the Vaishnava-sastras have the pleasure of Lord Vishnu as their only goal. Thus a person who is attracted (ruci) to the Lord and who loves (raga) the Lord will perform certain activities and refrain from other activities. This is because such a person has the pleasure of the Lord as the only goal of his life.

30 A person following the path of ragatmika bhakti does not consider what should be done and what should not be done from the point of view of ordinary considerations. He accepts only activities that are favourable for devotional service.

31 Thus a devotee who is attracted (ruci) to the Lord and who follows the path of raganuga bhakti will follow the scriptures' description of how to engage in devotional service. However, even the residents of Gokula, the raganuga-bhaktas who were personal associates of the Lord, performed Vaishnava duties and even ordinary worldly duties to bring auspiciousness to Krishna and protect Him from troubles and obstacles.

32 The Supreme Personality of Godhead declares (in Brahma-yamala, also quoted in texts 9 and 24 of this anuccheda):

"The Sruti and Smṛti sastras are My commands. Therefore one who disobeys the scripture disobeys Me. Such a person hates Me. He may claim to be devoted to Me, but in truth he is not."

These words do not apply to the devotees engaged in raganuga bhakti, for such devotees are already on the right path in spiritual life. Rather, this verse is addressed to they who follow the wrong paths, the paths of heretics and atheists like Buddha, Rṣabhadeva, Dattatreya and others.

33 The scriptures declare:

"A heretic opposed to the religion of the Vedas may worship his own deity. However, he will go to hell until the time when the universe is destroyed by floods."

34 Even though many Vedic rules are not followed in it, raganuga bhakti is not outside the path of the Vedas. Actually raganuga bhakti is the perfection of the religion described in the Vedas and the scriptures that explain the Vedas. This is so because raganuga bhakti makes one attracted (ruci) to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. In the Vedas are described many heretics and atheists, such as Buddha, who are opposed to the Vedas and thus are outside the sphere of Vedic religion. For example, in Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.3.24) it is said:

35 "Then, in the beginning of Kali-yuga, the Lord will appear as Lord Buddha, the son of Anjana, in the province of Gaya, just for the purpose of deluding those who are envious of the faithful theist."*

36 Therefore raganuga bhakti is proper and correct. It is much better than vaidhi bhakti. The previously discussed rules of the scriptures are meant for merging into the existence of the Lord. When the mind is attracted to the Lord, then one may merge into Him. It is not a matter of rules and regulations. It is a matter of the nature of the mind.

37 The rules encourage what is favourable for this and forbid what is not favourable. In that way one quickly merges into the existence of the Lord. When all unwanted materialism is destroyed, then one is able to merge into the existence of the Lord. This is a vivid example of the great power of the path followed by the mind. When the conditions are favourable, then one can attain the goal sought by the impersonalists.

38 The following explanation (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.1.15) is given to show the power of the mind's thoughts and emotions:

39 "Maharaja Yudhisthira inquired: It is very wonderful that the demon Sisupala merged into the body of the Supreme Personality of Godhead even though extremely envious. This sayujya-mukti is impossible to attain even for great transcendentalists. How then did the enemy of the Lord attain it?"*

40 Here the word "ekantinam" means "of the impersonalists".

1 Generally it is not possible, even for the great impersonalists, to merge into the existence of the Lord. Shrimad Bhagavatam (7.1.16) asks this question:

"O great sage, we are all eager to know the cause for this mercy of the Lord. I have heard that formerly a king named Vena blasphemed the Supreme Personality of Godhead and that all the brahmanas consequently obliged him to go to hell. Sisupala should also have been sent to hell. How then did he merge into the Lord's existence?"*

2 Here the word "tamasi" means "in hell". In the Vamana Purana it is said that after suffering in many different hells, Vena was rescued by the power of King Prthu.

1 In Shrimad Bhagavatam (7.1.18) it is also said:

"From the very beginning of his childhood, when he could not even speak properly, Sisupala, the most sinful son of Damaghosa, began blaspheming the Lord, and he continued to be envious of Shri Krishna until death. Similarly, his brother Dantavakra continued the same habits."*

2 The meaning of this verse is clear.

Anuccheda 315

1 Shri Narada gave this reply: To whom do you refer when you say that a person who offends the Supreme Personality of Godhead must go to hell? Do you refer to a person who gives suffering to the Lord? Or, if you do not refer to such a person, do you refer to a person who offends the Lord by drinking liquor and performing other forbidden acts?

2 The bewildered conditioned souls have the power to blaspheme and offend only things created from the material modes of ignorance, passion and goodness. They who have taken shelter of the material nature do not have the power to blaspheme or offend a person whose form, qualities and other features are not material. Unlike the conditioned souls, the Supreme Personality of Godhead does not identify Himself as a product of the material nature. Therefore He is never troubled by the offenses committed by the conditioned souls. This is explained in the following three and a half verses of Shrimad Bhagavatam.

3 In Shrimad Bhagavatam (7.1.22) it is said:

"O King, blasphemy and praise, chastisement and respect, are experienced because of ignorance. The body of the conditioned soul is planned by the Lord for suffering in the material world through the agency of the external energy."*

4 Here the word "nindanam" means "describing faults", and "nyakkarah" means "eclipsed". This means, "for making one aware of praise, criticism, and other dualities". Then the verse explains, "The body of the conditioned soul is planned by the Lord for suffering in the material world through the agency of the external energy."*

Anuccheda 316

1 Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.7.23-24) continues:

"My dear King, the conditioned soul, being in the bodily conception of life, considers his body to be his self and considers everything in relationship with the body to be his. Because he has this wrong conception of life, he is subjected to dualities like praise and chastisement."*

2 Because of the bodily conception of life, the conditioned soul thinks that when the body is annihilated the living being is annihilated. Lord Vishnu, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, is the supreme controller, the Supersoul of all living entities. Because He has not material body, He has no false conception of 'I' and 'mine'. It is therefore incorrect to think that He feels pleasure or pain when blasphemed or offered prayers. This is impossible for Him. Thus He has no enemy and no friend. When He chastises the demons it is for their good, and when He accepts the prayers of the devotees it is for their good. He is affected neither by prayers nor by blasphemy."*

3 The word "iha" means "in the material world". These verses explain, "The conditioned soul, being in the bodily conception of life, considers his body to be his self and considers everything in relationship with the body to be his. Because he has this wrong conception of life, he is subjected to dualities like praise and chastisement. Because of the bodily conception of life, the conditioned soul thinks that when the body is annihilated the living being is annihilated.* However, the Supreme Personality of Godhead is not like the conditioned soul. How can He be punished or made to suffer? There is no way that this can be possible."

4 The reason the Supreme Personality of Godhead does not identify with a material body is given with the word "kaivalyat" (because His body is not material). This is described in the following words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.7.35):

"The bodies of the inhabitants of Vaikuntha are completely spiritual, having nothing to do with the material body, senses, or life air."*

If the inhabitants of Vaikuntha have pure and spiritual bodies that cannot be blasphemed or offended, then how much more so must the body of the Supreme Personality of Godhead be spiritual, pure, eternal, and full of knowledge and bliss? That is the meaning here.

5 The conditioned souls cannot even approach the Supreme Personality of Godhead. He Himself affirms this in the following words of Bhagavad-gita (7.25):

"I am never manifest to the foolish and unintelligent. For them I am covered by My internal potency and therefore they do not know that I am unborn and infallible."*

6 The Supreme Personality of Godhead is different from the individual spirit souls because: 1. He is the Supersoul present in everyone's heart, 2. He is untouched by the material energy, 3. He can never be harmed, 4. He is the supreme controller (dharma-kartuh) and 5. as the master of limitless wonderful potencies, He is the master and teacher of all.

Anuccheda 317

1 Because the Supreme Personality of Godhead is never troubled by blasphemy or any other offense, therefore one should meditate on Him, somehow or other, by any means available. In Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.12.39 it is said:

"If even only once or even by force one bridges the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead into one's mind, one can attain the supreme salvation by the mercy of Krishna, as did Aghasura. What then is to be said of those whose hearts the Supreme Personality of Godhead enters when He appears as an incarnation, or those who always think of the lotus feet of the Lord, who is the source of transcendental bliss for all living entities and by whom all illusion is completely removed"?"*

Therefore they who meditate on the Supreme Lord's effulgence merge into the Lord's effulgence, and they who meditate on the Lord because they hate Him also merge into the Lord's effulgence. By thus merging these persons become purified of their blasphemies and other sins. That such persons attain sayujya-mukti

2 "Therefore by enmity or by devotional service, by fear, by affection or by lusty desire, by all of these or any one of them, if a conditioned soul somehow or other concentrates his mind upon the Lord, the result is the same, for the Lord, because of His blissful position, is never affected by enmity or friendship."*

3 The word "yunjyat" means that if one is not able to meditate on the Lord with love, lust or in any favourable way, then one should meditate on Him in whatever way one can, even if that means to meditate on Him with hatred. Here the vidhi-lin (potential mood) is used to indicate a command. Somehow or other one should think of the Lord alone and nothing else (neksate prthak). Thus the mind is fixed on the Lord. That is the meaning.

Here the word "vairena" means "with enmity" and "nirvairena" means "without enmity" or "in a neutral way". Thus one may meditate on the Lord without passionate desire, hatred or any other emotion. That is the meaning here. When one meditates (yunjyat) on the Lord without enmity and with full concentration of the mind, that meditation is known as devotional service (bhakti-yoga). That is the meaning.

The word "snehah" means "affection", which is different from lust (kama). This means mutual, sincere love. The Supreme Personality of Godhead becomes attracted to His affectionate devotee.

Anuccheda 318

1 The result of all this is that one quickly becomes merged in the Lord. Thus the path of thinking of the Lord, even if it is done with enmity and even if one blasphemes the Lord is not on the same level as mere vaidhi bhakti. This is explained in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.1.26):

2 "By devotional service one cannot achieve such intense absorption in thought of the Supreme Personality of Godhead as one can through enmity toward Him. That is my opinion."*

3 This is the nature of fear and enmity (vairanubandhena). When they are directed to the Lord one may easily merge into the existence of the Lord (tan-mayatam). By engaging in vaidhi bhakti (bhakti-yogena) one does not attain that result at all (tu na tatha).

Anuccheda 319

1 In this way it is said that the enemies of the Lord merge into the effulgence emanating from the Lord's transcendental form. Even though their hatred was material in nature, it brought them the great and auspicious result of merging into the Lord's effulgence. This is explained in the following example (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.2.17-28):

2-3 "A grassworm confined in a hole of a wall by a bee always thinks of the bee in fear and enmity and later becomes a bee simply because of such remembrance. Similarly, if the conditioned souls somehow or other think of Krishna, who is sac-cid-ananda-vigraha, they will become free from their sins. Whether thinking of Him as their worshipable Lord or an enemy, because of constantly thinking of Him they will regain their spiritual bodies."*

4 This verse means, "By fear and hatred they attain their own spiritual forms, which are like that of the Lord. The word "evam" means "thus". The form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is like the form of a human being. Because of the influence of the illusory potency, the Lord is often believed to be an ordinary human being in the material world.

5 Here someone may object: The grassworm does not commit a sin by hating the bee. However by hating the Supreme Lord one certainly does commit a sin.

Fearing that someone would object in this way, this verse explains, "By thinking of the Lord as their enemy, they become purified of their sins." This is so because meditation on the Lord has this power.

Anuccheda 320

1 One does not attain perfection merely by following the rules of vaidhi bhakti. Neither does one attain perfection by disobeying the rules of vaidhi bhakti. The way to attain perfection is given in the following words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (7.1.30):

2 Many, many persons have attained liberation simply by thinking of Krishna with great attention and giving up sinful activities. This great attention may be due to lusty desires, inimical feelings, fear, affection or devotional service. I shall now explain how one receives Krishna's mercy simply by concentrating one's mind upon Him."*

3 This verse means, As some persons concentrate their minds on the Supreme Personality of Godhead and thus attained liberation by following the rules of vaidhi bhakti, so many other persons also attained liberation by violating the rules of vaidhi bhakti and following lust and other vices in their stead." Among lust and other vices are the sin of hatred and fear. They gave up (hitva) that sin. Because it is mixed with hatred, fear is also considered a sin.

4 Some consider lust a sin. However, the following should be considered: When it is directed to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, lust is transcendental and removes sin, whether one thinks of the Lord as one's husband or one's paramour. If this kind of lust is transcendental, then does it remove hatred and other sins because that is its nature, because the lusty person drinks nectar from the lips of the supremely pure Personality of Godhead and therefore this "lust" is not actually lust at all but something far beyond what is known in this world as lust, or merely because the scriptures affirm that it destroys sins? It is not like that. Shri Sukadeva Gosvami rebukes King Pariksit in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.29.13);

5 "This point was explained to you previously. Since even Sisupala, who hated Krishna, achieved perfection, then what to speak of the Lord's dear devotees."*

6 In these words lust and other like emotions are criticised and lust is praised. Because lust for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is not different from love for Him, there is nothing wrong with it. Here lust is one kind of love.

7 In Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.31.19) the gopis declare:

"O dearly beloved! Your lotus feet are so soft that we place them gently on our breasts, fearing that Your feet will be hurt. Our life rests only in You. Our minds, therefore, are filled with anxiety that Your tender feet might be wounded by pebbles as You roam about on the forest path."*

8 Unconcerned for their own happiness, the gopis wish that Krishna will be happy. Kubja, however is mostly concerned about her own happiness. She is not like the gopis, and therefore her attitude is the best criticised. She is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.48.7):

"Simply by smelling the fragrance of Krishna's lotus feet, Kubja cleansed away the burning lust Cupid had aroused in her breasts, chest and eyes. With her two arms she embraced between her breasts her lover, Shri Krishna, the personification of bliss, and thus she gave up her long-standing distress."

9 She also declares (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.48.9):

"O beloved, please stay here with me for a few days more and enjoy. I cannot bear to give up Your association, O lotus-eyed one."

In this way she expresses her love.

10 It is also said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.48.8):

"Having thus gotten the hard-to-get Supreme Lord by the simple act of offering Him body ointment, unfortunate Kubja submitted to that Lord of freedom the following request."

11 It is also said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.48.11):

"Lord Vishnu, the Supreme Lord of all lords, is ordinarily difficult to approach. One who has properly worshipped Him and then chooses the benediction of mundane sense gratification is certainly of poor intelligence, for he is satisfied with an insignificant result."

12 In Shrimad-Bhagavatam 10.48.8 (quoted in text 10) the word "kaivalya-nathah" means "the Lord who is served by pure devotees". Kubja is described here as "unfortunate" because her body was deformed bent in three places. The word "aho (Oh!) is uttered in surprise. Her offering of body ointment to the Lord was an activity of devotional service. Because of this service she was prompted to ask (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.48.9):

"O beloved, please stay here with me for a few days more and enjoy. I cannot bear to give up Your association, O lotus-eyed one."

In these words she begs that she may become fortunate.

13 In Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.80.25) it is said:

"What piety has this unwashed, impoverished (brahmana) performed? Everyone looks down on him as most fallen, and yet the spiritual master of the three worlds, the abode of goddess Shri, is serving him reverentially. Leaving her, the goddess of fortune, sitting on her bed, the Lord has embraced this (brahmana) as if he were His older brother."

The residents of the palace spoke these words about Shridama Vipra.

14 Here someone may object: Why is lusty Kubja praised? This objection is answered in Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.18.11 (quoted in text 11). There it is said, "One who chooses the benediction of mundane sense-gratification is certainly of poor intelligence." The meaning here is that a girl who desires the Supreme Personality of Godhead is supremely intelligent. Her desire to enjoy with the Supreme Lord removes hatred and a host of sin.

15 This is so because the pastimes of the Lord are by nature all-perfect. This is confirmed by the following words of Shri Vedanta-sutra (2.1.33);

"The pastimes of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are transcendental, although they seem to be like those of an ordinary human being in the material world."

16 As He enjoys amorous pastimes like these with the gopis and Kubja, so the Lord also enjoys with Shri, Bhu, Lila and other goddesses in Shri Vaikunthaloka and other places. The Lord is eternally perfect and independent. He can enjoy any pastimes that He wishes to enjoy. Therefore these pastimes should be understood as existing because the Lord wishes to enjoy them. These pastimes are naturally very charming and sweet like nectar. It is not possible to fully understand the nature of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. His amorous pastimes exist because He wishes to enjoy them. To that extent they may be understood.

17 The goddesses who are the Lord's beloveds are manifested from His internal potency. Therefore their forms are all pure and spiritual. These goddesses are very exalted and important. They are not ordinary or unimportant by any means. Their pastimes of drinking the nectar of the Lord's lips is not improper. This has already been explained. These pastimes exist because the Supreme Lord wishes to enjoy them.

18 One should not make the mistake of thinking these goddesses to be ordinary persons. They are the internal potencies of the Lord, and it is by the Lord's wish that they have attained His association.

19 The scriptures declare that amorous pastimes with the Supreme Personality of Godhead are not sins. Rather, hearing of these pastimes removes sin. Certainly there is no fault in amorous pastimes where the Supreme Lord assumes the role of the husband. On the contrary, such pastimes are glorified in the scriptures. In Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.90.27) it is said:

20 "And how is it even possible to describe the great austerities that must have been performed by the women who were able to serve Him, the spiritual master of the universe, in pure, ecstatic love? Thinking Him to be their own husband, rendered such intimate services as massaging His feet."*

21 Many exalted sages have become the Lord's beloveds and enjoyed these pastimes with Him. This is described in many places in the scriptures. For example, Shri Madhvacarya quotes the following words of the Kurma Purana:

22 "By performing great austerities, Agnideva's sons became women and attained Lord Vasudeva, the unborn and all-powerful creator of the universes, as their husband.

23 In the Narayana-vyuha-stava these exalted devotees are offered respects in these words:

"I offer my respectful obeisances to they who always meditate on Lord Hari as their husband, son, friend, brother, father or mother."

24 To enjoy amorous pastimes with the Supreme Personality of Godhead as a paramour is also no sinful. In Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.29.32) the gopis tell Lord Krishna:

"Our dear Krishna, as an expert in religion You have advised us that the proper religious duty for women is to dutifully serve their husbands, children and other relatives. We agree that this principle is valid, but actually this service should be rendered to You. After all, O Lord, You are the dearmost friend of all embodied souls. You are their most intimate relative and indeed their very Self."*

25 Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami also explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.33.35):

"He who lives as the overseeing witness within the gopis and their husbands, and indeed within all embodied living beings, assumes forms in this world to enjoy transcendental pastimes."*

26 Lord Krishna Himself declares (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.32.22):

"O gopis, I am not able to repay My debt for your spotless service, even within a lifetime of Brahma. Your connection with Me is beyond reproach. You have worshipped Me, cutting off all domestic ties, which are difficult to break. Therefore please let your own glorious deeds be your compensation."*

27 This verse was spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself. Many other great devotees also attained this kind of relationship with the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Another example of this is given in these words of the Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda:

28 "When they saw Lord Ramacandra, the handsome Supreme Personality of Godhead, all the great sages in the Dandaka forest desired to enjoy with Him.

29 "Becoming women, they took birth in Gokula and enjoyed amorous pastimes with Lord Krishna. Then they became liberated from the ocean of repeated birth and death."

30 Then men also may attain the forms of women and associate with the Lord in this way. The Lord appears before them not as the material god of love (Kamadeva), but as a spiritual god of love. This is explained in the following words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.32.2):

"Then Lord Krishna, a smile on His lotus face, appeared before the gopis. Wearing a garland and a yellow garment, He directly appeared as one who can bewilder the mind of Cupid, who himself bewilders the minds of ordinary people."

Thus, because He is worshipped by the material god of love, Lord Krishna is the spiritual god of love (Kamadeva).

31 Shri Uddhava and many other great devotees have glorified the Lord's beloveds. Shri Uddhava declares (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.47.580):

"Among all persons on earth, these cowherd women alone have actually perfected their embodied lives, for they have achieved the perfection of unalloyed love for lord Govinda. Their pure love is hankered after by those who fear material existence, by great sages, and by ourselves as well. For one who has tasted the narrations of the infinite Lord, what is the use of taking birth as a high class brahmana, or even as Lord Brahma himself?"

32 What more need be said? In the Vamana Purana it is said that even the Vedas Personified attained this nature. Desiring to become eternally perfect gopis, the Vedas personified took birth among the gopis. The glory of the gopis is described by the Vedas Personified in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.87.23):

33 "By practicing the mystic yoga system and controlling their breath, the great sages conquered the mind and senses. Thus engaging in mystic yoga, they saw the Supersoul within their hearts and ultimately entered into the impersonal Brahman. However, even the enemies of the Supreme Personality of Godhead attain that position simply by thinking of the Supreme Lord. The damsels of Vraja, the gopis, simply wanted to embrace Krishna and hold His arms, which are like serpents. Being attracted by the beauty of Krishna, they ultimately acquired a taste for the nectar of the Lord's lotus feet. We can also taste the nectar of Krishna's lotus feet by following in the footsteps of the gopis."*

34 The meaning of this verse is very clear. This verse means, "Seeing with the eyes of scripture, with a great effort the sages worship the Absolute Truth, who is known as Brahman. However, without worshipping the Lord, only by thinking of Him, the enemies of the Lord also attain the Brahman.

35 "The beautiful-eyebrowed gopis, their hearts attached to the serpentlike arms of You, who are Nanda's son, attained the sweetness of love for the nectar of Your lotus feet.

36 "We Personified Vedas will become like these gopis and we will also attain the nectar of Your lotus feet." That is the meaning. The inflections of the words are altered to show this meaning.

37 Here the words "the nectar of Your lotus feet" are spoken with great respect. The words 'even the enemies of the Supreme Personality of Godhead attain that position simply by thinking of the Supreme Lord' show that by following the path of thinking of the Lord one quickly attains the goal. The words "We can also taste the nectar of Krishna's lotus feet by following in the footsteps of the gopis" show the method practiced by a person following the path of raganuga bhakti. If this were not the best method to attain the best goal, then the Personified Vedas, who are fully aware of all methods and all goals, would not have adopted it.

38 In this verse two pairs of paths of remembering the Lord are described. In the first pair the path of the Personified Vedas is superior. In the second their path is inferior. The word "api" (also) applies to both these pairs of paths. Thus this word is not employed only once here. The word "striyah" here refers to the eternal gopis. In the Vamana Purana it is said that the Personified Vedas see the gopis in the eternal abode of Lord Krishna.

Note: The two pairs of paths of remembering the Lord are: 1. the paths of Personified Vedas and the enemies of the Lord, and 2. the paths of Personified Vedas and the gopis. The Personified Vedas are superior to the enemies of the Lord but inferior to the gopis.

39 All of this is nicely explained in these words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (7.1.29):

"Many, many persons have attained liberation simply by thinking of Krishna with great attention and giving up sinful activities. This great attention may be due to lusty desires, inimical feelings, fear, affection or devotional service. I shall now explain how one receives Krishna's mercy simply by concentrating one's mind upon Him."

In this way one becomes free of the sins of fear and hatred.

Anuccheda 321

1 Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.1.29 (which was quoted in anuccheda 320, text 2) is further explained by the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.1.30), where some examples are given:

2 "The gopis by their lusty desires, Kamsa by his fear, Sisupala and other kings by envy, the Yadus by their familial relationship with Krishna, you Pandavas by your great affection for Krishna, and we, the general devotees, by our devotional service, have obtained the mercy of Krishna."*

3 Here references is made to the previous lives of the gopis and the other devotees. With the word "vayam" (we) Shri Narada refers to his previous birth.

4 Shri Narada explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.6.28):

"Having been awarded a transcendental body befitting an associate of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, I quit the body made of five material elements, and thus all acquired fruitive results of work (karma) stopped."*

In this way in his previous birth he attained the perfect form of a personal associate of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. In this way the word "vayam" (we) is explained.

5 Thus vaidhi bhakti has been described. Raganuga bhakti is described in these words of the Supreme Personality of Godhead (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.20.36);

"Material piety and sin, which arise from the good and evil of this world, cannot exist within My unalloyed devotees, who, being free from material hankering, maintain steady spiritual consciousness in all circumstances. Indeed, such devotees have achieved Me, the Supreme Lord, who am beyond anything that can be conceived by material intelligence."

6 The Lord also explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.19.35):

"To constantly see good and bad is itself a bad quality. The best quality is to transcend material good and evil."

7 In this way it is seen that ragatmika bhakti is not dependent on the rules and regulations of vaidhi bhakti. In Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.1.29 the past tense is used to describe the attainment of the result. However, in the following verse the gopis are described in the present tense. By hearing of the Supreme Lord's transcendental qualities, the gopis become rapt in meditation on Him. They are described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.90.26):

8 "Glorified variously by countless songs, He is the Lord who forcibly attracts the minds of any women who simply hear about Him. What to speak, then, of those women who see Him directly?"

9 Sisupala, who had been a liberated associate of the Lord in Vaikuntha, appeared to have been killed when he arrived as an unwelcome guest and tried to cause a calamity. Then his true position as a devotee of the Lord was revealed. In Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.1.31 (quoted in text 2) the words "sambandhad yo vrsnayo yuyam", mean "you Vrsnis have a relationship of affection with the Supreme Personality of Godhead". Therefore Shrimad Bhagavatam (7.1.26) affirms:

"Therefore by enmity or by devotional service, by fear, by affection, or by lusty desire, by all of these or any one of them, if a conditioned soul somehow or other concentrates his mind upon the Lord, the result is the same, for the Lord because of His blissful position, is never affected by enmity or friendship."*

10 In Shrimad Bhagavatam (7.1.30) it is said:

"Many, many persons have attained liberation simply by thinking of Krishna with great attention and giving up sinful activities. This great attention may be due to lusty desires, inimical feelings, fear, affection or devotional service. I shall now explain how one receives Krishna's mercy simply by concentrating one's mind upon Him."*

These quotes both affirm the same conclusion.

11 This same conclusion is also confirmed in a verse that follows in the same passage. There it is said

(Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.1.32):

"Somehow or other one must consider the form of Krishna, very seriously. Then, by one of the five different processes mentioned above, one can return home, back to Godhead. Atheists like King Vena, however, being unable to think of Krishna's form in any of these five ways, cannot attain salvation. Therefore, one must somehow think of Krishna, whether in a friendly way, or inimically."*

12 In Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.1.31 (quoted in text 2) the words sambandha (relationship) and sneha (affection) are both related to raganuga bhakti. In their previous lives the Vrsnis and Pandavas, like the gopis, were aspiring devotees engaged in vaidhi bhakti. From sambandha (a relationship with the Lord) comes sneha (affection for the Lord), and from that comes ruci (attraction to the Lord). In this way it is shown that vaidhi bhakti eventually leads to raganuga bhakti.

1 Here someone may object: If simply by hating the Supreme Lord one attains perfection, then why did King Vena fall into hell?

Fearing that someone would raise this objection, Shrimad Bhagavatam (7.1.32) explains:

"Somehow or other one must consider the form of Krishna very seriously. Then, by one of the five different processes mentioned above, one can return home, back to Godhead. Atheists like King Vena, however, being unable to think of Krishna's form in any of these five ways, cannot attain salvation."*

2 The words, "katamo 'pi na vena syat pancanam purusam prati" mean "Vena did not have one of the five relationships with the Supreme Personality of Godhead, relationships that begin with enmity." This means that Vena did not have a relationship of blaspheming and hating the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

3 Vena's sins bore fruit because he did not engage in intense meditation on the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Even though he was a demon, he did not hatefully and violently attack the Supreme Personality of Godhead, an attack that would have brought him liberation. That is the meaning.

4 In Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.2.34) it is said:

"Even ignorant living entities can very easily come to know the Supreme Lord if they adopt those means prescribed by the Supreme Lord Himself. The process recommended by the Lord is to be known as bhagavata-dharma, or devotional service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

In this way even very great sins perish. This is so even if one is ignorant.

Anuccheda 323

1 Therefore, in Shrimad Bhagavatam (7.1.32) it is said:

"Therefore, one must somehow think of Krishna, whether in a friendly way, or inimically."*

2 The conclusion here is that one should somehow fix his mind on the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The conclusion here is not that one should engage in vaidhi bhakti. Here the word "kenapi" means "somehow or other". By engaging in vaidhi bhakti one finally attains the Lord after a long time and a great struggle. However, by engaging in raganuga bhakti, by thinking of the Lord as one's enemy or in other ways, one quickly and easily attains the Lord. A fallen sinner who hates the glorious Supreme Personality of Godhead is actually virtuous. Who, then, is truly fallen and degraded? The answer is that a person who is indifferent to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, a person who does not love the Supreme Personality of Godhead, is truly fallen and degraded. This verse was spoken by Shri Narada to Shri Yudhisthira.

Anuccheda 324

1 If the path of thinking of the Lord somehow or other is this powerful, then how powerful must be the path of raganuga bhakti, where one thinks of the Lord with love? This is affirmed by the following words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.5.48):

2 "Inimical kings like Sisupala, Paundraka and Salva were always thinking about Lord Krishna. Even while they were lying down, sitting or engaging in other activities, they enviously meditated upon the bodily movements of the Lord, His sporting pastimes, His loving glances upon His devotees, and other attractive features displayed by the Lord. Being thus always absorbed in Krishna, they achieved spiritual liberation in the Lord's own abode. What then can be said of the benedictions offered to those who constantly fix their minds on Lord Krishna in a favourable, loving mood?"

3 Here the word "akrti-dhiyah" means that their thoughts were placed in the Lord's forms.

4 In the Garuda Purana it is said:

"Even foolish sinners like Sisupala and Duryodhana who personally insulted the Supreme Personality of Godhead attained liberation. Simply by remembering the Lord, they became purified of all their sins. How, then, can there be any doubt that the great devotees, who sincerely love the Lord, also become purified and attain liberation?"

5 In Shrimad Bhagavatam (7.1.27) it is said:

"By devotional service one cannot achieve such intense absorption in thought of the Supreme Personality of Godhead as one can through enmity to Him."*

However, one should not interpret these words to mean that hating the Supreme Personality of Godhead is better than all other relationships with the Lord.

6 In Shrimad Bhagavatam (3.16.31) the Lord assured the two Vaikuntha inhabitants, Jaya and Vijaya:

"By practicing the mystic yoga system in anger, you will be cleansed of the sin of disobeying the brahmanas and within a very short time return to Me."*

7 These words were spoken by the Lord of Vaikuntha to Jaya and Vijaya. To become free of their offense they must practice mystic yoga. Because they are by nature eternally perfect associates of the Lord, this entire incident was arranged so that the Lord would have the opportunity to enjoy pastimes of fighting with them. For this reason some consider that these activities of the Lord should be considered activities of devotional service. That is not true. Words like "bhakti" (devotional) and "seva" (service) are used when one has a favourable relation with the Lord. They cannot be used when one is an enemy of the Lord.

8 In the Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda, it is said:

"The yogis are able to see the Supreme Personality of Godhead because they are devoted to Him, not because they hate Him. Anger and envy will not help one see Lord Krishna.

9 Here someone may object: The enemies of the Lord are also devotees. This is seen in the following statement of Shri Uddhava (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 3.2.24):

"I consider the demons, who are inimical toward the Lord to be more than the devotees because while fighting with the Lord, absorbed in thoughts of enmity, they are able to see the Lord carried on the shoulder of Garuda, the son of Tarksya (Kasyapa) and carrying the wheel weapon in His hand."*

10 To this objection the following reply is given: Please do not think in this way. This verse is an example of the rhetorical device called utpreksa, where one imagines one thing to be like another that is in truth very different. This verse does not prove that the demons are devotees of the Lord. In this example utpreksa, Uddhava, overcome with longing and grief, sees only the good fortune attained by the demons, their good fortune in directly seeing the Lord. He says, "Alas, we cannot see the face of the Lord. At the moment of death we will not be able to see, even in meditation, the moonlike face of the Lord. Therefore the demons are better devotees than us, for at the moment of their deaths they had the opportunity to see the moonlike face of the Lord." The conclusion is that this verse does not in any way prove that hating the Lord is the same as devotional service. This verse was spoken by Shri Narada to Shri Vasudeva.

1 In this way raganuga bhakti is attained. Raganuga bhakti is primarily directed to Lord Krishna. In Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.1.41 it is said:

"My dear King Yudhisthira, the gopis by their lust desires, Kamsa by his fear, Sisupala and other kings by envy, the Yadus by their familial relationship with Krishna, you Pandavas by your great affection for Krishna, and we, the genera devotees, by our devotional service, have obtained the mercy of Krishna."*

Here it is seen that Lord Krishna is the object of raganuga bhakti. Also, only the demons who direct their hatred to Lord Krishna attain the perfection of merging into His effulgence. The demons who hate the Lord's other full and partial forms do not attain that perfection.

2 For this reason Shrimad Bhagavatam (7.1.32) declares:

"Therefore one must somehow think of Lord Krishna, whether in a friendly way or inimically."*

3 By engaging in raganuga bhakti one very quickly fixes his mind on the Lord. That is why raganuga bhakti, and not vaidhi bhakti, is discussed in the eleventh canto of Shrimad Bhagavatam. Sometimes raganuga bhakti is directed to the four-armed form of the Lord, but pure raganuga bhakti is seen primarily in Shri Gokula, where raganuga bhakti is most prominent, and where the Supreme Personality of Godhead, in His original form as Lord Krishna, enjoys pastimes as the son, master, friend, or beloved of His devotees.

4 These different relationships with the Lord are described in Bhagavad-gita (4.11), where Lord Krishna affirms:

"As all surrender unto Me, I reward them accordingly. Everyone follows My path in all respects, O son of Prtha."*

5 These different relationships are also seen in these words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.43.17):

"The various groups of people in the arena regarded Krishna in different ways when He entered it with His elder brother. The wrestlers saw Krishna as a lightning bolt, the men of Mathura as the best of males, the women as Cupid in person, the cowherd men as their relative, the impious rulers as a chastiser, His parents as their child, the King of the Bhojas as death, the unintelligent as the Supreme Lord's universal form, the yogis as the Absolute Truth and the Vrsnis as their supreme worshipable Deity."*

6 That the Lord accepts different relationships to fulfil the desires of His devotees is seen in these words of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.14.2):

"My dear Lord, neither I nor anyone else can estimate the potency of this transcendental body of Yours, which has shown such to me and which appears just to fulfil the desires of Your pure devotees."*

7 To please His devotees the Lord pretends to desire their services of giving Him food and drink, bathing Him, fanning Him, and affectionately serving Him in many ways. These activities of devotional service are described by the Lord Krishna Himself in these words (Bhagavad-gita 9.26):

8 "If one offers Me with love and devotion a leaf, a flower, fruit or water, I will accept it."*

9 In these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.15.17) Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami praises the devotees' eager service:

10 "Some of the cowherd boys, who were all great souls, would then massage His lotus feet, and others, qualified by being free of all sin, would expertly fan the Supreme Lord."*

11 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead thus fulfils the desires of His devotees does not negate His supreme power over everything. That supreme power is manifested in other situations. In truth it is glorious and praiseworthy that He is happy to fulfil His devotees' wishes. This is seen in His pastime of being bound by the queen of Vraja and delivering the yamala-arjuna trees.

12 Even though He has all power, the Lord voluntarily agrees to be under the control of the queen of Vraja. In the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.9.19) Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami praises that quality of the Lord:

"O Maharaja Pariksit, this entire universe, with its great, exalted demigods like Lord Siva, Lord Brahma and Lord Indra, is under the control of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Yet the Supreme Lord has one transcendental attribute: He comes under the control of His devotees. This was now exhibited by Krishna in this pastimes."*

13 Even today many devotees follow the path of raganuga bhakti and thus worship Lord Krishna, the son of Vraja's king. In Shri Vishnu Purana, when the gopas were very surprised to see Him lift Govardhana Hill, the Supreme Personality of Godhead gave them this reply:

14 "If your truly love Me, then please think of Me as your kinsman."

15 In an alternate reading of this text the Lord says, "O My kinsmen, then please honour Me like a kinsman."

16 The Lord also said to them (Shri Vishnu Purana 5.13.12):

"I am not a demigod. I am not a gandharva. I am neither a yaksa nor a danava. I am your kinsman. Please don't think of Me in any other way."

17 In Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.3.45) Lord Krishna tells Maharaja Vasudeva:

"Both of you, husband and wife, constantly think of Me as your son, but always know that I am the Supreme Personality of Godhead. By thus thinking of Me constantly with love and affection, you will achieve the highest perfection: returning home, back to Godhead."*

Because knowledge of the Lord's supreme power and opulence is prominent in the hearts of Maharaja Vasudeva and many other devotees, the Lord here gives permission to think of Him in two ways: as the all-powerful Supreme Lord and as one's kinsman.

18 Although Yasoda, the queen of Vraja, saw the Lord's great power and opulence by gazing into His mouth, this is not said to be her true good fortune. Influenced by the Lord's yogamaya potency, she always thought of Lord Krishna as her son. In this way the Lord was merciful to her in many ways. In this way she was very fortunate. Vasudeva and Devaki were not as fortunate as Nanda and Yasoda. The good fortune of Nanda and Yasoda is that they think of Krishna as their son. In this way they enjoy His childhood pastimes. Maharaja Pariksit praises Nanda and Yasoda in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.8.46-47):

19 "O learned brahmana, mother Yasoda's breast milk was sucked by the Supreme Personality of Godhead. What past auspicious activities did she and Nanda Maharaja perform to achieve such perfection in ecstatic love?*

"Although Krishna was so pleased with Vasudeva and Devaki that He descended as their son, they could not enjoy Krishna's magnanimous childhood pastimes, which are so great that simply chanting about them vanquishes the contamination of the material world. Nanda Maharaja and Yasoda, however, enjoyed these pastimes in full, and therefore their position is always better than that of Vasudeva and Devaki."*

20 Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami, the king of sages, also praised the love of Nanda and Yasoda for Lord Krishna. He said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.9.19):

"O Maharaja Pariksit, this entire universe, with its great, exalted demigods like Lord Siva, Lord Brahma and Lord Indra, is under the control of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Yet the Supreme Lord has one transcendental attribute: He comes under the control of His devotees. This was now exhibited by Krishna in this pastime."*

21 Shri Narada told Shri Vasudeva and Devaki (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.5.47):

"My dear Vasudeva, you and your good wife Devaki have manifested great transcendental love for Krishna, accepting Him as your son. Indeed, you are always seeing the Lord, embracing Him, speaking with Him, resting with Him, sitting together with Him, and taking your meals with Him. By such affectionate and intimate association with the Lord, undoubtedly both of you have completely purified your hearts. In other words, you are already perfect."

22 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"Loving Lord Krishna as their son, they attained the perfection of the great treasure of devotional service."

23 Shri Narada also told Vasudeva and Devaki (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.5.49):

"Do not think of Krishna as an ordinary child, because He is the Supreme Personality of Godhead, inexhaustible and the Soul of all beings. The Lord has concealed His inconceivable opulences and is thus outwardly appearing to be an ordinary human being."

24 These words do not contradict what was previously said of Nanda and yasoda. Shrila Shridhara Svami comments in these words:

"Someone may object: If by loving a son one becomes liberated, then every parent would automatically attain liberation. This verse is spoken to answer this objection."

25 Thus to think of Lord Krishna as one's son is a great opulence and a great good fortune. That is the meaning. The word "akrthah" here is an example of arsa usage, where what is ordinarily a grammatical flaw is considered correct because it is used by a great sage. The letter "a" in "akrthah" should be omitted because the word "ma" is used here. In the Sabda-kosa it is said, "abhava na hy ano na". Because of these two prohibitions the words "kuru" should be used here in place of "akrthah".

26 Whether they are aware of the truth or not aware, the devotees who follow the path of pure raganuga bhakti, worshipping the Lord without awe and veneration are in a glorious position. In Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.11.33) Lord Krishna affirms:

"My devotees may or may not know exactly what I am, who I am, and how I exist, but if they worship Me with unalloyed love, then I consider them to be the best of devotees."

27 Because it is the most pure, raganuga bhakti in Shri Gokula is the best kind of devotional service. This is said. Pure raganuga bhakti is not possible in any other place. By understanding the glories of raganuga bhakti, and by understanding the truth of the original Supreme Personality of Godhead, the supremely exalted nature of devotional service to Lord Krishna is proved. Thus also it is proved that Lord Krishna, who enjoys transcendental pastimes in Gokula is the original Supreme Personality of Godhead.

28 Devotional service to Lord Krishna is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.2.5):

29 "O sages, I have been justly questioned by you. Your questions are worthy because they relate to Lord Krishna and so are of relevance to the world's welfare. Only questions of this sort are capable of completely satisfying the self."*

30 In Shrimad Bhagavatam an inquiry was made to determine what brings genuine satisfaction to the heart. In this way questions were asked about Lord Krishna and the following answer was given (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.6):

31 "The supreme occupation (dharma) for all humanity is that by which men can attain to loving devotional service unto the transcendental Lord. Such devotional service must be unmotivated and uninterrupted to completely satisfy the self."*

In this way the spiritual path that begins with making a great effort to offer the Lord the results of one's work and culminates in faith in devotional service is described. In this way devotional service is manifested. Hearing descriptions of the various incarnations of the Lord eventually brings one to the stage where one's thoughts are fixed in Lord Krishna, the original Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.8.3):

32 "Narrations concerning the Lord who possesses wonderful potencies, are certainly auspicious for living beings in all planets. O greatly fortunate Sukadeva Gosvami, please continue narrating Shrimad Bhagavatam, so that I can place my mind upon the Supreme Soul, Lord Krishna, and, being completely freed from material qualities, thus relinquish this body."*

33 In this verse the word "hareh" means "of the various incarnations of the Lord". "Akhilatmani krsne" means "to Lord Krishna, who is the original Supreme Personality of Godhead, in whom all incarnations are present, and who is also the friend of Arjuna." This verse was spoken by Maharaja Pariksit.

1 At the end of His conversation (in the eleventh canto of Shrimad Bhagavatam), Lord Krishna in the previous chapter (chapter 28) described the results obtained by jnana, yoga, and bhakti. Nevertheless, Shri Uddhava, because he was a pure devotee, refused to accept even the slightest part of jnana and yoga. Uddhava said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.29.1-2):

2 "My dear Lord Acyuta, I fear that the method of yoga described by You is very difficult for one who cannot control his mind. Therefore please explain to me in simple terms how someone can more easily execute it."*

3 "O lotus-eyed- Lord, generally those yogis who try to steady the mind experience frustration because of their inability to perfect the state of trance. Thus they weary in their attempt to bring the mind under control."*

4 Here Uddhava explains that the goal of jnana and yoga is attained only with great difficulty. However, the goal of faithful devotional service is attained very easily. Therefore one should engage in devotional service. That is the meaning here.

5 Here Uddhava says, "The great souls reject jnana and yoga. Instead they engage in devotional service to You, O Krishna. They do not have a high regard for the results obtained by practicing jnana and yoga."

Shri Uddhava continues his explanation in the next four verses (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.29.3-6, which are discussed here in anucchedas 126-129). In the first of these verses (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.29.3) he says:

6 "Therefore, O lotus-eyed Lord of the universe, swanlike men happily take shelter of Your lotus feet, the source of all transcendental ecstasy. But those who take pride in their accomplishments in yoga and karma fail to take shelter of You and are defeated by Your illusory energy."*

7 (In the previous verse, Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.29.2) it is said that some become weary (visidanti) by practicing jnana and yoga. This verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.29.3) then declares: "Now (atah) therefore (atah) the swanlike men (hamsah) who are expert at distinguishing what is valuable and what has no value, happily (sukham) serve (srayeran) Your lotus feet (padambujam eva nu), which are flooded with all transcendental bliss." The unstated meaning of this verse is that they do this in order to directly see the Lord's lotus feet.

8 The verse continues, "However, they (ami) who are proud (maninah) and devoted to yoga and karma (yoga-karmabhih) are defeated (vihatah). They do not (na) engage in devotional service because they are proud (maninah)." The best spiritual path is the one that brings one to the Lord's mercy, which He liberally bestows on even the most fallen souls. The great effort that must be expended to pursue jnana and yoga are not the best path.

1 A pure devotee does not attain the small result obtained by jnana and yoga. He attains a different, a very great result. Shri Uddhava explains (Shrimad-Bhagavatam 11.29.4):

2 "My dear infallible Lord, it is not very astonishing that You intimately approach Your servants who have taken exclusive shelter of You. After all, during Your appearance as Lord Ramacandra, even while great demigods like Brahma were vying to place the effulgent tips of their helmets upon the cushion where Your lotus feet rested, You displayed special affection for monkeys such as Hanuman because they had taken exclusive shelter of You."

3 Here the words "asesa-bandho dasesv ananya-saranesu" mean "O friend who are unlimitedly kind to everyone, even the demons, and who give them various gifts, beginning with liberation". The verse continues "What is surprising about that (tavaitat kim citram)? You give Yourself (atma-satvam) to Your pure devotees (dasesu) who are averse to jnana, yoga, and karma (ananya-saranesu). This means that You become subordinate to them, submissive to them." That is the meaning here.

4 Lord Krishna Himself affirms (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.20):

"My dear Uddhava, neither through astanga-yoga (the mystic yoga-system to control the senses), nor through impersonal monism or an analytical study of the Absolute Truth, nor through study of the Vedas, nor through practice of austerities, nor through charity, nor through acceptance of sannyasa can one satisfy Me as much as one can by developing unalloyed devotional service unto Me."*

5 In this verse it is seen that noble birth, noble qualities, and other like considerations are not relevant to participation in the Lord's confidential internal pastimes. Here the word "saha" (with) indicates friendship. "Mrgaih" means "with the animals that wander in Vrndavana forest", "svayam" means "like that", and "isvaranam" means "of the demigods headed by Siva and Brahma". Here Uddhava says, "O Lord, the results obtained by practicing jnana, yoga, and karma cannot be very valuable, for You give them even to the demons. However, You are willing to become the friend, messenger, and charioteer for the Pandavas and Your other devotees. In this way You become submissive to Your devotees. You are under their control." In this way devotional service to Lord Krishna is described as the best of spiritual paths.

1 In the next verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.29.5) Uddhava describes the result obtained by engaging in devotional service:

"Who, then, could dare reject You, the very Soul, the most dear object of worship, and the Supreme Lord of all, You who give all possible perfections to the devotees to take shelter of You? Who could be so ungrateful, knowing the benefits You bestow? Who would reject You and accept something for the sake of material enjoyment, which simply leads to forgetfulness of You? And what lack is there for us who are engaged in the service of the dust of Your lotus feet?"

2 This verse says, "Who, knowing how handsome and glorious You are, and knowing the benefits You bestow, could abandon You?" Lord Kapiladeva describes the Lord's handsomeness in a passage beginning with these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.28.13):

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead has a cheerful, lotuslike countenance, with ruddy eyes like the interior of a lotus and a swarthy body like the petals of a blue lotus."*

3 The attractiveness of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is also described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.28.34):

"By following this course, the yogi gradually develops pure love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Hari. In the course of his progress in devotional service, the hairs on his body stand erect through excessive joy, and he is constantly bathed in a stream of tears occasioned by intense love. Gradually, even the mind, which he used as a means to attract the Lord, as one attracts a fish to a hook, withdraws from material activity."

4 Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.29.5 (quoted in text 1) then asks, "O Supreme Lord, what learned and qualified person would reject You?" No such person would. That is the meaning. Any person who would reject the Supreme Lord is ungrateful.

5 O Lord, what are You like? The verse explains, "You are dear (dayitam) to all (akhila). You are millions of times more dear than life itself. You are the supreme controller (isvaram)." The word "nu" is used here in the sense of "conclusion". The verse then asks, "Who, in order to attain material wealth (aisvaryaya), or in order to attain liberation, which enables one to forget (vismrtaye) the world of repeated birth and death, would follow the paths of dharma or jnana and worship the demigods?" The answer is: No one. The words "kim va" imply, "We will attain all these benefits simply by engaging in devotional service". The word "va" here implies disrespect.

6 That all goals may be attained by devotional service is confirmed by the Supreme Personality of Godhead in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.20.32):

"Everything that can be achieved by fruitive activities, penance, knowledge, detachment, mystic yoga, charity, religious duties and all other means of perfecting life is easily achieved by My devotee through loving service unto Me. If somehow or other My devotee desires promotion to heaven, liberation, or residence in My abode, he easily achieves such benedictions."

Anuccheda 329

1 Here the Supreme Personality of Godhead may raise the following objection: Why is it that the devotees renounce so many attainments, but they do not renounce Me? Did I do something to convince them to act in this way?

Shri Uddhava gives the following reply (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.29.6):

2 "O my Lord! Transcendental poets and experts in spiritual science could not fully express their indebtedness to You, even if they were endowed with the prolonged lifetime of Brahma, for You appear in two features: externally as the acarya and internally as the Supersoul, to deliver the embodied living being by directing him how to come to You."*

3 The first part of this verse means, "O Lord (isa), even they who know everything (kavayah), who live as long as Lord Brahma, and who worship You during that entire time." The verse then continues, "These blissful saintly devotees remember (smarantah) how You helped them. Thus they consider that they are indebted (apacaitim) to You. They do not see (upayanti) any way to repay their debt, and therefore they never leave You."

4 What the Lord did to help them is then described in these words; "You appear in two features: externally as the acarya and internally as the Supersoul, to deliver the embodied living being by directing him how to come to You."*

Anuccheda 330

1 Then, in the next four verses, the Supreme Personality of Godhead proceeded to explain the nature of pure devotional service unto Him. He said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.29.8-11):

"Yes, I shall describe to you the principles of devotion to Me, by executing which a mortal human being will conquer unconquerable death."

"Always remembering Me, one should perform all his duties for Me without becoming impetuous. With mind and intelligence offered to Me, one should fix his mind in attraction to My devotional service."

"One should take shelter of holy places where My saintly devotees reside, and one should be guided by the exemplary activities of My devotees, who appear among the demigods, demons and human beings."

"Either alone or in public gatherings, with singing, dancing, and other exhibitions of royal opulence, one should arrange to celebrate those holy days, ceremonies, and festivals set aside specially for My worship."

In these verses the Supreme Personality of Godhead mercifully describes the activities of devotional service.

2 Most people are engaged in a frantic competition to exploit the resources of material nature. The wise, however, are not like that. They are introspective. They worship the Supersoul present in the heart. Seeing the condition of the people in general, the Supreme Personality of Godhead endeavours to turn the people away from their material competition and place their attention on Him, the Supersoul in their hearts. In the following words He describes His Supersoul form (Bhagavad-gita 10.42):

3 "With a single fragment of Myself I pervade and support this entire universe."*

In this verse and in the following one, the Lord teaches the worship of His partial expansion as the Supersoul. He says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.29.12):

4 "With a pure heart one should see Me, the Supreme Soul within all beings and also within oneself, to be both unblemished by anything material and also present everywhere, both externally and internally, just like the omnipresent sky."*

5 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"In these three verses (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.29.12-14), the Lord describes internal devotional service. He says, 'One should see Me, the Supreme Soul within all beings and also within oneself'."

6 What is the nature of the Supreme Lord? He explains in this verse, "I am within and without and I am perfect and complete". How is that? He again explains, "I am unblemished by anything material". How is that? Again He explains, "Because I am all-powerful, I am not touched by ether or the other material elements". That is the meaning. The words "mam eva ikseta" do not only mean that one should see the Supersoul. They also mean that one should see the form of Lord Shri Krishna. This is so because Shrila Shridhara Svami has explained in his commentary, "In these verses the Lord describes internal devotional service."

Anucchedas 331 and 332

1-2 The Supreme Personality of Godhead then continues (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.29.13-14):

"O brilliant Uddhava, one who thus views all living entities with the idea that I am present within each of them, and who by taking shelter of this divine knowledge offers due respect to everyone, is considered actually wise. Such a man sees equally the brahmana and the outcaste, the thief and the charitable promoter of brahmanical culture, the sun and the tiny sparks of fire, the gentle and the cruel."

3 Here "kevalam jnanam" means "seeing the Supersoul". In this verse the Lord declares, "One who thus views all living entities with the idea that I am present, in My form of Shri Krishna, within each of them, is considered actually wise. Seeing Me, he sees equally the brahmana and everyone else."

4 The Supreme Lord then explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.29.15):

"For him who constantly meditates upon My presence within all persons, the bad tendencies of rivalry, envy, and abusiveness, along with false ego, are very quickly destroyed."

In this way by serving the Lord in devotional service one becomes free from rivalry and other faults.

5 Then the Supreme Lord explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.29.16):

"Disregarding the ridicule of one's companions, one should give up the bodily conception and its accompanying embarrassment. One should offer obeisances before all, even the gods, outcastes, cows and asses, falling flat upon the ground like a rod."

In this way one should offer respectful obeisances to everyone.

6 Then the Supreme Lord explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.29.17):

"Until one has fully developed the ability to see Me within all living beings, one must continue to worship me by this process with the activities of his speech, mind and body."

Thus one should continue this method of worship until one sees the Supreme Lord everywhere.

7 Then the Supreme Lord explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.29.18):

"By such transcendental knowledge of the all-pervading Personality of Godhead, one is able to see the Absolute Truth everywhere. Freed thus from all doubts, one gives up fruitive activities."

8 It is also said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.30.20):

"Always engaging in the activities of devotional service, devotees feel ever-increasingly fresh and new in all their activities. The all-knower, the Supersoul within the heart of the devotee, makes everything increasingly fresh. This is known as the Brahman position by the advocates of the Absolute Truth. In such a liberated stage (brahma-bhuta), one is never bewildered. Nor does one lament or become unnecessarily jubilant. This is due to the brahma-bhuta situation."

9 Thus in this verse spoken by the Supreme Lord to the Pracetas, and in Shrila Shridhara Svami's commentary on this verse as well, it is confirmed that devotional service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead is always new and fresh. Thus the result of devotional service is described.

10 In the Gopala-tapani Upanisad (2.34) it is asked:

"Why is Lord Krishna the best form of the Supreme Lord?" In this way it is affirmed that the humanlike spiritual form of Lord Krishna is the best form of the Supreme Lord and therefore the worship of Him is the highest kind of worship.

11 This is confirmed by Lord Krishna Himself in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.29.19):

"Indeed I consider this process: using one's mind, words, and bodily functions for realising Me within all living beings, to be the best possible method of spiritual enlightenment."*

12 Here the word "sarva-kalpanam" means "of all spiritual processes", "sadhricinah" means "most appropriate", and "mad-bhavaḥ" means "meditation on Shri Krishna".

13 Thus it is better to worship Lord Krishna than to worship the Supersoul. This is confirmed by Lord Krishna Himself in the final words of Shri Bhagavad-gita (18.61-66):

14 "The Supreme Lord is situated in everyone's heart, O Arjuna, and is directing the wanderings of all living entities, who are seated on a machine made of the material energy.*

15 "O scion of Bharata, surrender unto Him utterly. By His grace you will attain transcendental peace and the supreme and eternal abode.*

16 "Thus I have explained to you knowledge still more confidential. Deliberate on this full, and then do what you wish to do.*

17 "Because you are My very dear friend, I am speaking to you My supreme instruction, the most confidential knowledge of all. Hear this from Me, for it is for your benefit.*

18 "Always think of Me, become My devotee, worship Me and offer your homage unto Me. Thus you will come to Me without fail. I promise you this because you are My very dear friend.*

19 "Abandon all varieties of religion and just surrender unto Me. I shall deliver you from all sinful reactions. Do not fear."*

20 In the previous chapters of Bhagavad-gita were presented first confidential knowledge, then more confidential knowledge, which is the knowledge of the Supersoul, and then the most confidential knowledge, which is the knowledge of fixing the mind on Lord Krishna, taking shelter of Him alone, surrendering to Him along, and worshipping Him. Lord Krishna begins His description of the most confidential knowledge with these words (Shri Bhagavad-gita 9.1-2):

21 My dear Arjuna, because you are never envious of Me, I shall impart to you this most confidential knowledge and realisation, knowing which you shall be relieved of the miseries of material existence.*

22 "This knowledge is the king of education, the most secret of all secrets. It is the purest knowledge, and because it gives direct perception of the self by realisation, it is the perfection of religion. It is everlasting, and it is joyfully performed."*

In the verses that follow this, Lord Krishna praises they who have faith in Him and criticises they who have no faith in worshipping Him in His original form as Lord Krishna. He says (Bhagavad gita 9.11-13):

23 "Fools deride Me when I descend in the human form. They do not know My transcendental nature as the Supreme Lord of all that be.*

24 "Those who are thus bewildered are attracted by demonic and atheistic views. In that deluded condition, their hopes for liberation, their fruitive activities, and their culture of knowledge are all defeated.*

25 "O son of Prtha, those who are not deluded, the great souls, are under the protection of the divine nature. They are fully engaged in devotional service because they know Me as the Supreme Personality of Godhead, original and inexhaustible."*

26 Bhagavad-gita 9.11 means, "Fools deride Me when I descend in the human form". In this way it is proved that to worship Lord Krishna is in every way better than to worship the all-pervading Supersoul, and the worship of Lord Krishna is the most confidential knowledge described in the Bhagavad-gita.

Anuccheda 333

1 How important and exalted, then, must be the activities of devotional service. Lord Krishna Himself explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.29.21):

"O Uddhava, greatest of saints, in a dangerous situation an ordinary person cries, becomes fearful and laments, although such useless emotions do not change the situation. But activities offered to Me without personal motivation, even if they are externally useless, amount to the actual process of religion."*

2 Here the word "mayi" means "offered to Me", "yo yo dharmah" means "whatever activities are prescribed by the Vedas", "nisphalaya kalpyate" means "if they brings no result". These activities are offered without any desire to attain a result. That is the meaning. If they are offered in that way, however, these activities are not useless. The words "bring no result" here mean that they do not bring karmic results that will become an impediment to devotional service. That is the meaning.

3 If this is so for these activities, then how much more so must it be for direct devotional service to Lord Krishna, which is so rare? Here an example is given with the word "bhayadeh". Here the Lord says, "The fear and other emotions that Kamsa and other demons felt for Me were not in vain." This is so because these emotions brought liberation. That is the meaning.

Anuccheda 334

1 Pure devotees of Lord Krishna, who are like Shri Uddhava, find that Lord Krishna is both the goal and the means to attain the goal. Lord Krishna explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.29.33):

2 "Through analytic knowledge, ritualistic work, mystic yoga, mundane business and political rule, people seek to advance in religiosity, economic development, sense gratification and liberation. But because you are My devotee, whatever men can accomplish in these multifarious ways you will very easily find within Me."

3 Here Lord Krishna says, "All of the four goals of human life, goals that begin with material piety, You will very easily find within Me". Here the word "jnane" means "liberation", "karmani" means "pious deeds and sense gratification", "yoge" means "the various kinds of mystic perfections", "vartayam" means "mundane business", and "danda-dharane" means "in political rule". In this way the four goals of human life are understood. This verse was spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Anuccheda 335

1 Shri Uddhava again offers prayers. He says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.29.40):

"Obeisances unto You, O greatest of yogis. Please instruct me, who am surrendered unto You, how may I have undeviating attachment to Your lotus feet."

2 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"Here Shri Uddhava says, 'Although You have already helped me in many ways, still I make this request.' Then Uddhava says 'O Lord, please instruct me'. The word 'anapayini' here means even after liberation'."

This verse was spoken by Shri Uddhava.

Anuccheda 336

1 In another passage Shri Uddhava asks the following question (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.14.31):

"My dear lotus-eyed Krishna, by what process should one who desires liberation meditate upon You, of what specific nature should his meditation be, and upon which form should he meditate? Kindly explain to me this topic of meditation."

2 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"Here Shri Uddhava asks, 'How should one who desires liberation meditate on You. Please tell this to me'. Uddhava continues, 'I am Your servant, and I wish to understand this. I need not engage in yoga meditation.' Shri Uddhava himself answered this question in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.6.460):

"Simply by decorating ourselves with the garlands, fragrant oils,, clothes and ornaments that You have already enjoyed, and by eating the remnants of Your meals, we, Your servants, will indeed conquer Your illusory energy."

Anuccheda 337

1 Auspiciousness greater than that manifested in Lord Krishna was never manifested in any one of the many incarnations of the Lord. In Shrimad Bhagavatam (3.2.23) it is said:

2 "Alas, how shall I take shelter of one more merciful than He who granted the position of mother to a she-demon (Putana) although she was unfaithful and she prepared deadly poison to be sucked from her breast?"*

3 The words "dhatrya ya ucita gatih" mean "the position of a mother". This verse was spoken by Shri Uddhava.

Anuccheda 338

1 Thus is revealed the great glory of devotional service to Lord Krishna, who enjoys transcendental pastimes in Shri Gokula. That glory is also revealed in the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.6.35):

"Putana was always hankering for the blood of human children, and with that desire she came to kill Krishna, but because she offered her breast to the Lord, she attained the greatest achievement. What then is to be said of those who had natural devotion and affection for Krishna as mothers and who offered Him their breasts to suck or offered something very dear, as a mother offers something to a child?"*

2 The glory of devotional service is also revealed in the following passage of Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.7.1), which has already been quoted in Shri Krishna-sandarbha:

"King Pariksit said: My lord, Sukadeva Gosvami, all the various activities exhibited by the incarnations of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are certainly pleasing to the ear and to the mind. Simply by one's hearing of these activities, the dirty things in one's mind immediately vanish. Generally we are reluctant to hear about the activities of the Lord, but Krishna's childhood activities are so attractive that they are automatically pleasing to the mind and ear. Thus one's attachment for hearing about material things, which is the root cause of material existence, vanishes, and one gradually develops devotional service to the Supreme Lord, attachment for Him, and friendship with devotees who give us the contribution of Krishna consciousness. If you think it fit, kindly speak about those activities of the Lord."*

The Lord's best pastimes are those in Gokula such as His pastime of the rasa dance with the gopis. This is also confirmed by the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.33.39):

3 "Anyone who faithfully hears or describes the Lord's playful affairs with the young gopis of Vrndavana will attain the Lord's pure devotional service. Thus he will quickly become sober and conquer lust, the disease of the heart."*

4 Here the word "ca" means "others also" and "atha" means "or". Thus the words "srnuyad atha varnayet" means "hears or describes". Thus one meditates on the Lord's pastimes or perceives them in other ways. "Param" means "nothing is better than this", "hrd-rogam" means "one is quickly cured of lust and other vices in the heart". In this way it is proved that the worship of Lord Krishna as He enjoys pastimes with His most beloved Shri Radha is the highest form of worship.

However, these pastimes are very confidential. One should not think these pastimes are like the pastimes of human beings with material senses and material relations of father, sons, servants and the like. Such an idea contradicts the true situation. Such an idea will become an impediment to one's spiritual progress. In one sense, some parts of these pastimes are especially confidential. In another sense, all of these pastimes are very confidential. In this way it should be understood. This verse was spoken by Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami.

1 In this way the path of devotional service has been revealed. This confidential knowledge should be revealed to a person who has attained the mercy of his spiritual master or the mercy of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, a person who has attained the goal of his spiritual endeavours. This confidential knowledge should not be revealed to others. This is explained in the following words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (8.17.20):

2 "O Lady, even if someone inquires, you should not disclose this fact to anyone. That which is very confidential is successful if kept secret."*

3 Here the word "sampadyate" means "gives the result". This verse was spoken by Lord Vishnu to Aditi. Anuccheda 340

1 In this way the path of sadhana bhakti has been revealed. The path to perfection is revealed in these words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.2.16):

"O twice-born sages, by serving those devotees who are completely freed from all vice, great service is done. By such service, one gains affinity for hearing the messages of Vasudeva."*

2 The path to perfection is also revealed in these words of Shri Narada Muni (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.5.23-26): "O Muni, in the last millennium I was born as the son of a certain maidservant engaged in the service of brahmanas who were following the principles of Vedanta. When they were living together during the four months of the rainy season, I was engaged in their personal service.*

"Although they were impartial by nature, those followers of the Vedanta blessed me with their causeless mercy. As far as I was concerned, I was self-controlled and had no attachment for sports, even though I was a boy. In addition, I was not naughty, and I did not speak more than required.*

"Once only, by their permission, I took the remnants of their food, and by so doing all my sins were at once eradicated. Thus being engaged, I became purified in heart, and at that time the very nature of the transcendentalist became attractive to me.*

"O Vyasadeva, in that association and by the mercy of those great Vedantists, I could hear them describe the attractive activities of Lord Krishna. And thus listening attentively, my taste for hearing of the Supreme Personality of Godhead increased at every step."*

3 The path to perfection is also revealed in these words of Lord Kapiladeva (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.25.25):

"In the association of pure devotees, discussion of the pastimes and activities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is very pleasing and satisfying to the ear and the heart. By cultivating such knowledge one gradually becomes advanced on the path of liberation, and thereafter he is freed, and his attraction becomes fixed. Then real devotion and devotional service begin."*

4 Devotional service performed with a desire to attain liberation is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.25.26):

"Thus consciousness engaged in devotional service in the association of devotees, a person gains distaste for sense gratification, both in this world and in the next, by constantly thinking about the activities of the Lord. This process of Krishna consciousness is the easiest process of mystic power. When one is actually situated on that path of devotional service, he is able to control the mind."*

5 Pure devotional service is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.25.34):

"A pure devotee, who is attached to the activities of devotional service and who always engages in the service of My lotus feet, never desires to become one with Me. Such a devotee, who is unflinchingly engaged, always glorifies My pastimes and activities."*

In this way the sequence of activities by which one gradually makes advancement in devotional service is to be understood.

6 The activities of pure devotional service are also described in this instructions spoken by Shri Prahlada to the demons' sons (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.7.30-31):

"One must accept the bona fide spiritual master and render service unto him with great devotion and faith. Whatever one has in one's possession should be offered to the spiritual master, and in the association of saintly persons and devotees one should worship, the Lord, hear the glories of the Lord with faith, glorify the transcendental qualities and activities of the Lord, always meditate on the Lord's lotus feet and worship the Deity of the Lord strictly according to the injunctions of the sastra and guru.*

7 In some circumstances it may be possible to pass over the various stages in the path of devotional service and quickly attain perfection. The following example is given (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.42-43):

8 "Devotion, direct experience of the Supreme Lord, and detachment from other things, these three occur simultaneously for one who has taken shelter of the Supreme Lord, in the same way that pleasure, nourishment and relief from hunger come simultaneously and increasingly, with each bite, for a person engaged in eating.*

9 "My dear King, the devotee who worships the lotus feet of the infallible Personality of Godhead with constant endeavour thus achieves unflinching devotion, detachment and experienced knowledge of the Personality of Godhead. In this way the successful devotee of the Lord achieves supreme spiritual peace."

10 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"Here the word 'prapadyamanasya' means 'of a person who worships Lord Hari', 'bhaktih' means 'devotional service characterised by love of God', 'paresanubhavah' means 'the direct manifestation of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is the abode of spiritual love', 'viraktih' means 'filled with spiritual happiness by seeing the Lord, one becomes detached from his home and other material attractions', 'ity esa trika eka-kalah' refers to the time of engaging in devotional service, 'yathasatah' means 'of one engaged in eating', 'tustih' means 'happiness', and 'pustih syuh' means 'filling the stomach'. This means that with every bite one's hunger becomes diminished. This happens with every mouthful of rice. By once worshipping the Lord the three things that begin with love for the Lord are manifested simultaneously. When one worships the Lord constantly 'bhajato nuvrttya' one gains great love for the Lord. As by eating many mouthfuls of food one attains great satisfaction, so by worshipping the Lord constantly by the Lord's mercy one also attains great satisfaction and the supreme success in life. This is described in Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.43."

11 Here the word "santim" means "the final success", "saksat" means "which has neither inside nor outside". This is so because by always worshipping the Lord one attains the final goal of life. In the previous verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.2.42) an example of devotional service, satisfaction, and other things was given. In that example devotional service and pleasure were compared because they both have happiness as a common element, nourishment and direct perception of the Lord were compared because they both have satisfaction of the self as a common element, and relief from hunger was compared to detachment because they both have peacefulness as a common element. As by eating food one becomes free from hunger, so by worshipping the Supreme Personality of Godhead one becomes detached from material things. This example is given here because it shows disinterest in other things. This verse was spoken by Shri Kavi to Maharaja Nimi.

In this way devotional service, which is known as abhidheya, has been explained. One should learn more about devotional service by studying the scriptures and hearing the explanations of the great devotees.

Epilogue

Shri Shri Radha-Krishna, at whose lotus feet stay the spiritual master, the scriptures, faith, attraction, following, and perfection, whose lotus feet are my everything, whose eyes are flooded with tears of mercy, and who are the shelter of they who have no other shelter, are my only shelter.

Thus ends Shрила Jiva Gosvami's Shri Bhakti-sandarbha.

Introduction

The second sandarbha, called Bhagavat-sandarbha, draws a distinction between impersonal Brahman and localised Paramatma, and describes the spiritual world and the domination of the mode of goodness devoid of contamination by the other two material modes. In other words, there is a vivid description of the transcendental position known as suddha-sattva. Material goodness is apt to be contaminated by the other two material qualities - ignorance and passion - but when one is situated in the suddha-sattva-position, there is no chance for such contamination. It is a spiritual platform of pure goodness. The potency of the Supreme Lord, and the living entity, is also described, and there is a description of the inconceivable energies and varieties of energies of the Lord. The potencies of the Lord are divided into categories - internal, external, personal, marginal, and so forth. There are also discussions of the eternality of Deity worship, the omnipotence of the Deity, His all-pervasiveness, His giving shelter to everyone, His subtle and gross potencies, His personal manifestations, His expression of form, qualities, and pastimes, His transcendental position and His complete form. It is also stated that everything pertaining to the Absolute has the same potency and that the spiritual world, the associates in the spiritual world, and the threefold energies of the Lord in the spiritual world are all transcendental. There are further discussions concerning the difference between the impersonal Brahman and the Personality of Godhead, the fullness of the Personality of Godhead, the objective of all Vedic knowledge, the personal potencies of the Lord, and the Personality of Godhead as the original author of Vedic knowledge.

His Divine Grace A.C. Bhaktivedanta Swami Prabhupada

Anuccheda 1

In the previous (Tattva) Sandarbha I have described in a general way the nature of the non-dual Absolute Truth and the eternal distinction between that Absolute and the individual living entities, who are naturally the servants and worshippers of the Absolute. Now I shall describe some of the variegated features of the Absolute. The Absolute is known in three features, called Brahman, Paramatma and Bhagavan. This is described in the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.2.11):

“Learned transcendentalists who know the Absolute Truth call this non dual substance Brahman, Paramatma or Bhagavan.”*

Anuccheda 2

1 In this and other verses of the Bhagavatam, and in other Vedic literatures as well, the Absolute Truth is indicated by the use of these three words. In some places the Absolute is called Brahman, in other places Paramatma, and in other places Bhagavan. In the description of Shrila Vyasa's perception, in spiritual trance, of the Supreme (described in the Tattva Sandarbha), the individual living entities (jivas) are clearly described as different from the Supreme. For this reason no one should claim that the jivas are identical with the Supreme, and no one can artificially add the phrase “jiva iti ca sabdyate” (and the Supreme is also known as jiva) to this verse (1.2.11) of Shrimad Bhagavatam.

Although the Bhagavatam gives elaborate explanations of Brahman and Bhagavan first, and only after some while describes at length the feature of Paramatma, nevertheless this verse (1.2.11) gives the three features of the Supreme in the sequence Brahman, Paramatma, Bhagavan. This sequence shows the relative importance of the three features, the most important given last.

2 The non-dual Supreme, whose spiritual bliss is without interruption is understood in the three features of Brahman, Paramatma and Bhagavan. I shall now describe the feature called Brahman:

Those transcendentalists who realise the Brahman feature of the Lord experience so much spiritual happiness by this realisation that they spit in contempt on the happiness attained by the demigod Brahma, what to speak of the little happiness available to the other insignificant creatures in the material world. By rigidly following the practices of spiritual life (sadhana), these transcendentalists are able to understand that the individual living entity is spiritual and his nature is like that of the Supreme. These persons however, remain unable to understand the variety of spiritual form and potencies in the transcendental world, and neither can they understand the difference between the potencies (sakti) and Supreme Lord who is the master of all potencies (saktiman). Their limited knowledge of the mutual spiritual nature of the individual living entities and the Supreme is known as the Brahman understanding of the Lord.

3 The Bhagavan feature of the Absolute Truth may be explained in the following way:

The Supreme is in some ways different from His potencies, and He is the Supreme Shelter upon which all His transcendental potencies rest. The devotees directly perceive with their senses the personal form of the Lord everywhere, within and without everything, and in this way the devotees experience intense transcendental bliss. This realisation of the devotees, that the potencies (sakti) and the Supreme Lord who is the master of all potencies (saktiman) are different, is known as the Bhagavan understanding of the Lord.

4 These three features of the Supreme Lord are described in the same way in the following verse of Shrimad Bhagavatam (5.12.11), where Jada Bharata says:

"What, then, is the ultimate truth? The answer is that non dual knowledge is the ultimate truth. It is devoid of the contamination of material qualities. It gives us liberation. It is the one without a second, all-pervading and beyond imagination. The first realisation of that knowledge is Brahman. Then Paramatma, the Supersoul, is realised by the yogis who try to see Him without grievance. This is the second stage of realisation. Finally, full realisation of the same supreme knowledge is realised in the Supreme Person (Bhagavan). All learned scholars describe the Supreme Person as Vasudeva, the cause of Brahman, Paramatma and other."*

5 The same description is found in the following verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.11.30) where Manu says to Maharaja Dhruva:

"Regaining your natural position and rendering service unto the Supreme Lord (Bhagavan), who is the all-powerful reservoir of all pleasure and who lives in all living entities as the Supersoul, you will very soon forget the illusory understanding of 'I' and 'my'."*

1 In this verse the word 'bhagavan' is modified by the adjectival compounds 'ananda-matre' (the reservoir of all pleasure) and 'upapanna-amastra-saktau' (the master of all potencies). When the Supreme completely reveals Himself He is known as Bhagavan, and in comparison to this the Brahman feature, where the transcendental form of the Lord is not manifested, is only a partial manifestation of the Supreme. This will be discussed in great detail later on in this book. Now let us consider the definition of the word 'Bhagavan' given in the following verses of Vishnu Purana (6.5.66-69):

2 "The impersonal Brahman feature of the Supreme is unmanifested, free from old-age, inconceivable, birthless, free from decay and diminution, indescribable, formless, without hands, feet, or other limbs, all-powerful, all-pervading, eternal, the origin of all material element, without any cause, present in everything, although nothing is situated in it, the source of the material cosmos, the object of vision for the demigods, and the object of meditation for they who aspire after liberation. The impersonal Brahman I the supremely subtle spiritual effulgence and abode of Lord Vishnu, which I described in the mantras of the Vedas. Brahman is the effulgence of the Bhagavan feature of the Lord, and the all-pervading Supersoul (Paramatma) I the partial manifestation of the transcendental form of the imperishable Supreme Person, Shri Bhagavan."

3 The Vishnu Purana further explains (5.6.73-75):

"O sage, the word Bhagavan may be explained in the following way: the syllable 'bha' may be understood to mean 'bharta', or 'sambharta', the maintainer and nourisher of the devotees, and the syllable 'ga' may be understood to mean 'gamayita', the leader of the devotees, or the original creator of the good qualities present in the devotees.

4 "The word 'bhaga' also means 'opulences'. There are six opulences: wealth, strength, fame, beauty, knowledge, and renunciation. "Bhagavan" means the person who possesses all these opulences in full.

5 "In the word 'bhagavan', the syllable 'va' stands for the verb 'vas' to reside. Because all material elements and all living entities rest within the Supreme Lord, and because He is present in the heart of all conditioned souls, He is addressed by the syllable 'va'."

6 It is also said (Vishnu Purana 6.5.79);

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead possesses all strength, beauty, wealth, fame, knowledge, and renunciation, and therefore He is known as 'bhagavan'. He is free from all faults."

7 Now let us consider this description of Bhagavan from the Vishnu Purana. In the first four verses (quoted in text 2), the word 'brahma' may be taken as an adjective ('great'), modifying 'visnoh paramam padam' (supreme nature of Lord Vishnu). Interpreted in this way the words 'vibhum' (all-powerful) and 'sarva-gamam' (all-pervading) describe Lord Bhagavan's nature, which is full of all opulences (aisvaryasya samagasya). The adjectives 'arupam' (formless) and 'pani-padady-asamyutam' (without hands, feet, or other limbs) should be understood to mean that the Supreme Lord Bhagavan has no material form, for His form is perfectly spiritual, and no material hands, feet, or other limbs, for His limbs are not made of matter.

8 In this passage the word 'vibhum' means 'full of all powers and opulences', 'vyapi' means 'all-pervading', and 'avyapya' means 'nothing else can enter Him and be pervading within Him.' The word 'bhagavan' directly indicates the Absolute Truth and is not in any way an indirect or incomplete description of Him. A certain river may be directly indicated by the name 'ganga', although this river is only indirectly indicated by the word 'riverbank'. In the same way the word 'bhagavan' directly indicates the absolute Truth and 'brahman' indirectly refers to the Absolute Truth.

9 The Nirukta dictionary begins its list of definitions by announcing (1.2.1) "Now we shall give synonym for some difficult words". In the same way we shall now explain some of the words quoted in the definition of the word Bhagavan. In that explanation the syllable 'bha' was described as standing for the word 'bharta'. "Bharta" means 'the nourisher, maintainer and establisher of the devotees.' In the same way the syllable 'ga' stands for the word 'gamayita', which means "He who creates all kinds of auspicious qualities within His devotees", or "He who grants pure love of Godhead, which is the actual result of devotional service", or 'He who brings His devotees to His own transcendental planet'. The words 'bharta' and 'gamayita', should not be interpreted here to mean 'the creator and maintainer of the universe.' In this context these words are used to express the relationship between the Supreme Lord and His devotees. This is the opinion of the disciplic succession of Vaishnava acaryas.

10 Synonyms for the next verse from the Vishnu Purana (quoted in Text 4) follow: "Aisvarya" means "ability to control others", "samagra" means "in all respects", "virya" means "the potency of Vedic mantras chanted by great sages", "yasah" means "fame of good qualities in relation to body, mind and words", "Shri" means "all kinds of opulence and good fortune", "jnana" means "omniscience", "vairagya" means "non-attachment to material things", and 'ingana' means "name".

11 The word "bhagavan" may be understood to mean "He who possesses ('vat' is the affix known as 'matup'), the qualities previously described by the syllable 'bha', 'ga' and 'va' (bha+ga+van). The 'a' in the third quality (va), was elided, enabling the two v's to join and become a single letter. In this way the word "Bhagavavan" becomes Bhagavan). "Bhagavan" is therefore the possessor of 'bha', 'ga' and 'va'.

12 In the next verse (Text 6) the six opulences possessed by Bhagavan are also described. In this verse the word 'jnana' means 'knowledge', which is the domain of the mind and intelligence, 'sakti' mean 'the power of the senses', 'balam' means 'the strength of the body', 'tejah' means 'beauty', and 'asesatah' means 'completely' (aisvarya and 'virya' have been described in the previous texts). The possessor of all these in full ('van') is known as Bhagavan. The Supreme is manifest in three features: Brahman, Paramatma, and Bhagavan (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.2.11). The Bhagavan feature is the complete manifestation of the Supreme, and the other two are partial revelations of the actual nature of the Supreme.

1 The nature of Brahman and Bhagavan are revealed in the following question posed by Maharaja Nimi, and its answer by Pippalayana Muni (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.3.34 and 35):

"King Nimi inquired: Please explain to me the transcendental situation of the Supreme Lord, Narayana, who is Himself the Absolute Truth and the Supersoul of everyone. You can explain this to me, because you are all most expert in transcendental knowledge."

2 "Shri Pippalayana said: The Supreme Personality of Godhead is the cause of the creation, maintenance and destruction of this universe, yet He has no prior cause. He pervades the various states of wakefulness, dreaming and unconscious deep sleep and also exists beyond them. By entering the body of every living being as the Supersoul, He enlivens the body, senses, life airs and mental activities and thus all the subtle and gross organs of the body begin their functions. My dear King, know that Personality of Godhead to be the Supreme."

3 Maharaja Nimi's question may be explained in the following way: The word 'narayanabhidhanasya' means 'of Bhagavan, who is known as Narayana' and 'nistha' means 'the transcendental situation'. The Lord's features as Brahman and Paramatma as mentioned in this verse are His appearance specifically within the material world. He appears as Bhagavan in the spiritual world, and His appearance as Brahman and Paramatma is limited, for the most part, to the material world. This is confirmed in the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.15.16):

"Narayana, who is known as Bhagavan, appears in the spiritual world (turiya), unlike other manifestations of the Lord that appear in the material world."

4 In this verse (11.3.35), in answer to King Nimi's question, Pippalayana Muni speaks verse 11.3.35. He says there that the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the 'cause of the creation, maintenance and destruction of this universe (sthiti-adi-hetu) and He has no prior cause (ahetu). He enters the body of the living entity as the Supersoul and enlivens the body, senses, life-air, and mental activities, and thus all the subtle and gross organs of the body begin their functions (dehendriyasu-hridayani caranti yena sanjivitani).

In his answer Pippalayana says: Please know that Personality of Godhead, who appears in the form of Narayana and other forms, to be the Supreme (avehi param).

This explanation clearly describes the Bhagavan feature of the Supreme, for the Brahman feature has a different description. The three features of the Supreme (Brahman, Paramatma and Bhagavan) have different names and they appear in different ways to their worshippers. Each is distinct from the others. Brahman is different from Paramatma and Paramatma is different from Bhagavan. Pippalayana Muni answered the question of King Nimi by describing the Bhagavan feature of the Supreme.

5 The word 'ahetu' may also be interpreted to mean 'Because the Supreme Lord in His Bhagavan feature always remains in the spiritual world with His transcendental pastime potency, He remains aloof from the activities of material creation.' Bhagavan appears in the form of His partial expansion, Paramatma, who then creates the forms of the conditioned souls (who are the Lord's parts and parcels) and the material energies. It is the Paramatma who 'enters the body of every living entity, and enlivens the body, senses, life-air and mental activities.' The phrase 'avehi param' may then be interpreted to mean 'Please know that this is the Paramatma feature of the Supreme.'

6 The three features of the Supreme are mentioned by Varunadeva in the following prayer to Shri Krishna (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.28.7):

"I offer my respectful obeisances to the Supreme Lord, who appears in three features as Bhagavan, Paramatma, and Brahman."

In commenting on this verse, Shridhara Svami said:

"The word 'paramatmane' in this verse means 'the controller of living entities.'"

The Paramatma feature of the Lord is then the constant companion of the conditioned souls, but He is always their superior, and therefore He is called 'paramatma', or 'the Supreme Soul'. In the verse from the Eleventh Canto (11.3.35) the Brahman feature of the Supreme is described in the following words:

"He pervades the various states of wakefulness, dreaming and unconscious deep sleep, and also exists beyond them."

The word 'ca' (and) is significant in this verse, for it distinguishes Brahman from the individual living entities ("There are the individual living entities and there is also the Brahman"). In these ways in this verse (11.3.35) it is said: "Please understand the Bhagavan, Paramatma and Brahman features of the Supreme Lord." This verse was spoken by Shri Narada Muni.

Anuccheda 5

1 The following three verses of Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.15.15-17) describe the three features of the Absolute (Brahman, Paramatma and Bhagavan) in connection with the description of the attainment of mystic yoga powers. The Bhagavatam explains:

"One who concentrates his consciousness in Vishnu, the Supersoul, the prime mover and Supreme Lord of the external energy consisting of the three modes, obtains the mystic perfection of controlling other conditioned souls, their material bodies and bodily designations."

2 "The yogi who places his mind in My form of Narayana, known as the fourth factor, full of all opulences, becomes endowed with My nature and thus obtains the mystic perfection called vasisa."

3 "One who fixes the pure mind in Me in My manifestation as the impersonal Brahman obtains the greatest happiness, wherein all of his desires are completely fulfilled."

4 Shridhara Svami explains these verses in the following way:

"Of these three verses the first (quoted in Text 7) describes the Paramatma feature of the Lord. In that verse the word 'try-adhisvare' means 'the supreme controller of maya', which consist of three modes of nature', and the word 'kala-vigrahe' means 'the Supersoul who perceives everything'.

"The second of these verses (quoted in Text 8) describes the Bhagavan feature of the Lord. In this verse Bhagavan is described as 'turiyakhya' (He who is known as the fourth factor). The meaning of this word is given in the following statement of Vedic literature: "Within the material world the Supreme Lord appears in three forms Karanodakasayi Vishnu, Garbhodakasayi Vishnu, and Ksirodakasayi Vishnu. The original form of the Lord is different from these three forms, and therefore He is known as turiya, the fourth form of the Lord."

"This compound word 'bhagavac-chabda-sabdite' is explained in the following statement of Vishnu Purana (6.5.74): 'There are six opulences: wealth, strength, fame, beauty, knowledge and renunciation. Bhagavan means the person who possesses all these opulences in full.'"

Anuccheda 6

1 The view held by some that Impersonal Brahman is the ultimate feature of the Supreme will be discussed in the Third (Paramatma) Sandarbha. In that Sandarbha we will quote the following verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.6) which the impersonalists repeat to substantiate their position:

2 "O unlimited Lord, only persons who have cleansed their hearts of contamination are able to understand the glories of Your transcendental form. Because You do not undergo any material transformation, because You have no material form and because You are self-manifest, unless You choose to reveal Yourself to someone, there is no other means to understand You."

3 This verse should be understood in the following way:

"O Lord (bhuman), although it is very difficult to understand whether Your ultimate feature is Brahman or Bhagavan, nevertheless (tathapi), it is clear that the unlimited qualities of Your own transcendental form are now hidden (agunasya)."

The word 'mahima' in this verse means 'greatness'. We may note in this connection that the word 'Brahman' means 'the great'. This is confirmed in the following statement of the Sruti-sastra:

"What is the meaning of the word Brahman? Brahman means He whose greatness is expanded without limit (brmhati), or He who causes His devotees to become great (brmhayati)."

4 In this verse Brahma says:

"O Lord, only persons who have cleansed their hearts of contamination (amalantaratmabhih) are able to understand (vibodhum arhati) Your glories (mahima)."

One may ask: Why are only the pure-hearted able to understand the Lord? To this question the answer is given:

"O Lord, because You are self-manifest (svanubhavat), unless You choose to reveal Yourself to someone, there is no other means to understand You."

5 At this point someone may object: "According to our perception all gross and subtle bodies are subject to various kinds of material transformations (such as birth, growth, old-age, and death). For this reason we may assume that the form of Shri Krishna is also subject to these material transformation."

In order to answer this objection, Brahma uses the word 'avikriyat', which means 'because Your form does not undergo any material transformations.'

6 At this point someone may raise the following objection: "All forms which we have perceived are material in nature, and therefore we consider that the form of Shri Krishna, which is perceivable by the senses, must also be material."

In order to answer this objection, Brahma uses the word 'arupatah' (the form of Shri Krishna is not material).

7 At this point Lord Krishna may pose the following question to Brahma: "How can My transcendental form become manifest before the living entities?"

In order to answer this question, Brahma says: "ananya-bodhyatmataya (You can be understood only by devotional service)." Although no one has, by his own merit, the ability to understand Krishna, if one worships Him by Performing devotional service, the Lord voluntarily appears before that devotee. This is described in the following verse from Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.2.12 the verse immediately following the description of Brahman, Paramatma and Bhagavan) where Suta Gosvami says:

8 "The seriously inquisitive student or sage, well equipped with knowledge and detachment, realises that Absolute Truth by rendering devotional service in terms of what he has heard from the Vedanta-sruti."*

9 This is also confirmed in the following verse from Shrimad Bhagavatam (8.24.38) where Lord Matsya instructs Maharaja Satyavrata in the following word:

"You will be thoroughly advised and favoured by Me, and because of your inquiries, everything about My glories, which are known as param brahma, will be manifest within your heart. Thus you will know everything about Me."*

Anuccheda 7

1 The three aspects of Brahman, Paramatma and Bhagavan are also described in the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (2.7.47):

"What I realised as the Absolute Brahman I full of unlimited bliss without grief. That I certainly the ultimate phase of the supreme enjoyer, the Personality of Godhead (Bhagavan). He is eternally void of all disturbances and fearless. He I complete consciousness as opposed to matter. Uncontaminated and without distinctions, He is the primeval cause (Paramatma) of all causes and effects, in whom there is no sacrifice for fruitive activities and in whom the illusory energy does not stand."*

2 Because the Absolute Truth I the greatest (brttama) He is known as Brahman (brahmeti yad viduh). Brahman and Bhagavan both refer to the same Supreme Truth (paramasya pumso bhagavatah padam), and therefore they are not different from each other. Bhagavan is, however, the original feature of the Supreme and Brahman is manifested at a later time from the form of Bhagavan, who I the reservoir in whom the Brahman and other features of the Supreme remain.

3 In this verse the Impersonal Brahman is described by the words 'pratibodha-matram' (complete consciousness, as opposed to matter), and 'ajasra-sukham' (unlimited bliss). The word 'atma-tattvam' indicates that the Supreme Truth is the original root from whom all individual spirit souls have become manifested. Because the Supreme is the original father of all spirit souls, He loves them all equally without discrimination.

4 The Absolute Truth is full of unlimited bliss because He is 'sasvat' (eternal), 'prasantam' (free from all disturbances), 'abhayam' (without fear), and 'visokam' (without grief). The Supreme does not need to perform pious activities in order to reap happiness as a result. This is confirmed in the following words:

"The Supreme does not perform sacrifices in order to reap material benefits.

This means that the fruitive sacrifices described in the karma-khanda section of the Vedas will not help one to understand the Absolute truth. Only the philosophical portions of the Vedas, such as the Upanisads, will help one to understand the Supreme. This is confirmed in the following statement of the Brhad-aranyaka Upanisad (3.9.26):

"The Supreme Person is revealed in the Upanisads.

5 That the Lord's transcendental bliss I not dependent on the interaction of senses with sense-objects is confirmed by the following words used in this verse to describe the Lord: 'suddham' (the Lord is uncontaminated), 'saman' (without distinction) and 'sad-asatah param' (and beyond the interactions of material causes and effects).

The phrase 'maya paraity abhimukhe ca vilajjamana' means 'The illusory energy maya is ashamed to come before the Lord of His devotees. She flees far away from them.'

Anuccheda 8

1 When the truth of the Lord's original feature, known a Bhagavan, becomes manifested, then the truth of the Impersonal Brahman feature automatically becomes manifested also. For this reason this explanation of Brahman has been included in this essay, which explains the nature of Bhagavan.

2 The proper method of understanding the Bhagavan feature of the Supreme is described in the following verse of Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.7.4) where Suta Gosvami says:

"Thus he fixed his mind, perfectly engaging it by linking it in devotional service (bhakti-yoga) without any tinge of materialism, and thus he saw the Absolute Personality of Godhead along with His external energy, which was under full control."*

Anuccheda 9

That the Bhagavan feature of the Supreme may be understood only by devotional service is also confirmed in the following statement of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (3.9.11) where Brahma says:

"O my Lord, Your devotees can see You through the ears by the process of bona fide hearing, and thus their hearts become cleansed, and You take Your seat there. You are so merciful to Your devotees that You manifest Yourself in the particular eternal form of transcendence in which they always think of You."*

This verse was recounted by Shrila Suta Gosvami.

Anuccheda 10

1 The Bhagavan feature of the Lord is described in the following ten and a half verses of Shrimad Bhagavatam (2.9.9-19) where Sukadeva Gosvami says:

"The Personality of Godhead, being thus very much satisfied with the penance of Lord Brahma was pleased to manifest His personal abode, Vaikuntha, the supreme planet above all others. This transcendental abode of the Lord is adored by all self-realised persons freed from all kinds of miseries and fear of illusory existence.*

2 "In that personal abode of the Lord, the material modes of ignorance and passion do not prevail, nor is there any of their influence in goodness. There is no predominance of the influence of time, so what to speak of the illusory, external energy; it cannot enter that region. Without discrimination, both the demigods and the demons worship the Lord as devotees.*

3 "The inhabitants of Vaikuntha planets are described as having a glowing sky-bluish complexion. Their eyes resemble lotus flowers, their dress is of yellowish colour, and their bodily features very attractive. They are just the age of growing youths, they all have four hands, they are all nicely decorated with pearl necklaces with ornamental medallions, and they all appear to be effulgent.*

4 "Some of them are effulgent like coral and diamonds in complexion and have garlands on their heads, blooming like lotus flowers, and some wear earrings.

5 "The Vaikuntha planets are also surrounded by various airplanes, all glowing and brilliantly situated. These airplanes belong to the great mahatmas or devotees of the Lord. The ladies are as beautiful as lightning because of their celestial complexions, and all these combined together appear just like the sky decorated with both clouds and lightning.*

6 "The goddess of fortune in her transcendental form is engaged in the loving service of the Lord's lotus feet, and being moved by the black bees, followers of spring, she is not only being engaged in variegated pleasure-service to the Lord, along with her constant companions - but is also engaged in singing the glories of the Lord's activities.*

7 "Lord Brahma saw in the Vaikuntha planets the Personality of Godhead, who is the Lord of the entire devotee community, the Lord of the Goddess of fortune, the Lord of all sacrifices, and the Lord of the universe, and who is served by the foremost servitors like Nanda, Sunanda, Prabala and Arhana, His immediate associates.*

8 "The Personality of Godhead, seen leaning favourably towards His loving servitors, His very sight intoxicating and attractive, appeared to be very much satisfied. He had a smiling face decorated with an enchanting reddish hue. He was dressed in yellow robes and wore earrings and a helmet on His head. He had four hands, and His chest was marked with the lines of the goddess of fortune.*

9 "The Lord was seated on His throne and was surrounded by different energies like the four, the sixteen, the five, and the six natural opulences, along with other insignificant energies of the temporary character. But He was the factual Supreme Lord, enjoying His own abode.*

10 "Lord Brahma, thus seeing the Personality of Godhead in His fullness, was overwhelmed with joy within his heart, and thus in full transcendental love and ecstasy, his eyes filled with tears of love. He thus bowed down before the Lord. That is the way of the highest perfection for the living being (paramahansa).*

11 "And seeing Brahma present before Him, the Lord accepted him as worthy to create living beings, to be controlled as He desired, and thus being much satisfied with him, the Lord shook hands with Brahma and, smiling, addressed him thus."*

12 The first of these verses (2.9.9 quoted in Text 1) should be interpreted in the following way: Brahma stayed in the lotus flower of the navel of the Purusa-avatara named Narayana, and there he worshipped the Lord by performing austerities for His satisfaction, as the Lord Himself had previously ordered. The Supreme Lord became pleased with Brahma (sabhajita), and showed him His own (sva-lokam) Vaikuntha realm, the topmost of all planetary systems. In this verse the word 'yat-param' may be interpreted to mean "The highest of all Vaikuntha planets: the abode of the original form of the Personality of Godhead", or it may also be interpreted to mean 'the Vaikuntha realm which is not different from the Supreme Truth, Brahman Himself.'

This Vaikuntha realm is described in these verses as full of transcendental varieties and free from the influence of the illusory potency, maya.

13 In this verse (2.9.9) the Vaikuntha realm was revealed to Brahma. Vaikuntha is described here as free from all miseries and fears (vyapeta-sanklesa-vimoha-saddhvasam). According to Patanjali's Yoga-sutras (Sadhana-pada, Sutra 3), the five miseries of material existence are: 1. Ignorance, 2. False-ego, 3. Lust, 4. Hatred, and 5. Attachment. Vaikuntha is free from these and all other sufferings. Self-realised souls are able to see Vaikuntha (sva-drstavadbhih), and they always worship and glorify it (abhistutam).

14 That self-realised souls are able to see Vaikuntha is confirmed by the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (3.16.27-28) which describes the Four Kumaras' visit to Vaikunthaloka:

"Lord Brahma said: After seeing the Lord of Vaikuntha, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, in the self-illuminated Vaikuntha planet, the sages left that transcendental abode.*

15 "The sages circumambulated the Supreme Lord, offered their obeisances and returned, extremely delighted at learning of the divine opulence of the Vaishnava."*

16 In the next verse (2.9.10) we read that "In the personal abode of the Lord the material modes of ignorance and passion do not prevail, nor is there any of their influence in goodness." The material mode of goodness, which is invariably mixed with the lower mode of passion and ignorance, does not exist in Vaikunthaloka. Only the spiritual mode of goodness, known as 'suddha-sattva', which is completely free from the touch of the illusory energy, maya, exists in the spiritual realm of Vaikuntha.

17 That the three modes of material nature are not present in the Vaikuntha planets is described in the following verse from the Jitanta-stotra of the Narada-pancaratra:

"The planets known as Vaikuntha are filled with all six spiritual opulences. The three modes of material nature are not present on these planets, which cannot be entered by they who are not devotees of the Lord."

18 In the description of Vaikunthaloka found in the Padma Purana Uttara-khanda, the mode of goodness present in the spiritual world is clearly described as being non-material. In this passage, after describing the opulences and powers of the material potency, Lord Siva explains (Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda 255.56.59):

19 "My dear Parvati, you have just heard about the opulences of the material energy, now hear about the supreme opulences of the spiritual world, which comprises three quarters of all existence.

20 "Produced from the perspiration of the Personality of Godhead, whose limbs are all the Vedic literatures, the auspicious Viraja River flows on the boundary that separates the material energy from the spiritual sky.

21 "On the farther shore of the Viraja River is the spiritual sky. In that spiritual sky I the abode of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. That abode is eternal, imperishable, unlimited, effulgent, transcendental, and full of nectar. That abode is made of the transcendental energy known as the mode of pure goodness (suddha-sattva)."

22 The three modes of material nature never exist alone. If one of the modes is present, then the other two are also present. This I confirmed in the following statements of Vedic literature:

"The three modes of material nature are present together."

Sankhya-kaumudi

"The three modes of material nature are present together. They do not remain alone. If one is present, then the others are also present."

Bhattika

"Wherever one mode of material nature is present, the other modes are also there. The mode of goodness, therefore, does not exist alone, but is always mixed with passion and ignorance. In the same way the other modes of nature cannot be manifested alone. They are always mixed with the other modes."

Agama-sastra

"The three modes of material nature are always together, they cannot be separated from each other."

Vedic literature

23 Because in the Vaikuntha planets there is no mode of material passion, nothing is created there; because there is no mode of material ignorance, nothing is destroyed there; and because there is no mode of material goodness, nothing is material there, but everything is spiritual, eternal, full of knowledge and bliss. This verse (2.9.10) gives the reason for the absence of the three modes of material nature within the realm of Vaikuntha by saying:

"There is no predominance of the influence of time."*

The time element agitates the material energy, and from that agitation the three modes of nature are born. Because in Vaikuntha there is no material time, which is the cause of the six varieties of material transformation, there are also no three modes of material nature.

24 In this verse (2.9.10) the phrase 'na yatra maya' (There is no predominance of the external, illusory energy) is like an axe that cuts at the root of any conception that material time or the modes of material nature have any influence in the Vaikuntha world. In this verse the word 'maya' does not only mean 'illusion', but it refers to a specific potency of the Personality of Godhead entrusted with the creation, maintenance and dissolution of the material universes. Because maya is absent in Vaikuntha, the modes of passion and ignorance, as well as material goodness, which is invariably contaminated by the lower modes of passion and ignorance, are also absent. In this verse the word 'misram' may also be interpreted to mean 'pradhana', or the unmanifested stage of the modes of nature, where the modes are not yet differentiated, but are merged together as a single unit.

Interpreted in this way it may be understood that even at the beginning of the creation maya and pradhana were two distinct potencies of the Lord and were not identical. Because even at the beginning of material creation pradhana was different from maya, it may be understood that pradhana is always independent of both maya and time. It is a separate, independent potency.

The phrase 'kim utapare' (what to speak of) reinforces the statement of this verse, that in Vaikunthaloka there is no influence of the material energy. There is no need to belabour this point, but it is sufficient to state, in a general way, that in Vaikunthaloka there is no influence of the mode of passion and ignorance.

25 At this point someone may object: "Is it not so that because in Vaikuntha there is no influence of the three modes of material nature, which are the origin of varieties, it may be logically concluded that there is no variety in Vaikunthaloka?"

Considering that someone might raise this objection, Sukadeva Gosvami describes the varieties present in the Lord's transcendental potency known as suddha-sattva, which prevails in the Vaikuntha planets. This description begins with the word 'hareh' in verse 2.9.10 (quoted in Text 2).

26 In this verse the word 'sura' means 'those influenced by the mode of material goodness', and 'asura' means 'those influenced by the baser modes of passion and ignorance'. In Vaikuntha both these classes of living entities worship the Lord. In fact, however, because the residents of Vaikuntha constantly worship the Lord they are most exalted and are beyond all the modes of material nature. They are actually above the status of either demon or demigod.

27 Sukadeva Gosvami describes the residents of Vaikunthaloka in the following words (2.9.11):

The inhabitants of the Vaikuntha planets are described as having a glowing sky-bluish complexion (syamavadatah). Their eyes resemble lotus flowers (sata-patra-locanah), their dress is of yellowish colour (pisanga-vastra), and their bodily features very attractive (surucah). They are just the age of growing youths (supesasah), they are all nicely decorated with pearl necklaces (mani-praveka) and with ornamental medallions (niskabharanah) and they all appear to be effulgent (suvarcasah).

Many of the Vaikuntha residents have a bluish complexion like that of the Lord, but some have a different complexion and they are described in the following words (2.9.12):

"Some of them are effulgent like coral and diamonds in complexion."

28 In the next verses (2.9.13-15), Sukadeva Gosvami, after describing the residents of Vaikuntha, continues his description of the Vaikuntha planets. Synonyms for some of the words in these verses follow:

'rih' means 'the goddess of fortune, who is the transcendental potency of the Lord', 'rupini' means 'in the form of the most dear consort of the Lord', 'manam' means 'respectful services', 'vibhutibhih' means 'accompanied by her personal associates', 'prenkham' means 'movement of enjoyment', 'shrita' means 'engaging in transcendental pastimes', 'kusumakarah' means 'spring', 'kusumakaranuga' means 'the bumble bees, who are followers of spring', 'giyamana' means 'being glorified in various ways', and 'priya-karma' means 'the activities of the dearest Lord Hari.'

29 The Personality of Godhead is also described as the master of the heroes in the Yadava dynasty. This is confirmed in the following verse of Shrimad Bhagavatam (2.4.19), where Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami says:

"May Lord Shri Krishna, who is the worshipable Lord of all devotees, the protector and glory of all the kings like Andhaka and Vrsni of the Yadu dynasty, the husband of all goddesses of fortune, the director of all sacrifices and therefore the leader of all living entities, the controller of all intelligence, the proprietor of all planets, spiritual and material, and the supreme incarnation on the earth (the supreme all in all), be merciful upon me."*

30 In the next verse (2.9.16 quoted in text 8), Sukadeva Gosvami says that the very sight of the Lord is 'intoxicating and attractive', and 'His chest is marked with the lines of the goddess of fortune.' The goddess of fortune remains as a golden line on the left side of the Lord's chest. In the next verse (2.9.17, quoted in Text 9), the four potencies mentioned may be interpreted to refer to the four spiritual potencies beginning with the potency of religious piety. The four potencies clearly does not refer to irreligion or any similar external, material energies. These spiritual potencies in the spiritual realm are described in the following statement of the Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda (91.100):

31 "In the spiritual world the Rg, Yajur, Sama and Atharva Vedas, as well as the four potencies: piety, knowledge, opulence, and renunciation, eternally remain."

We may note that the use of the word 'tatha' in this verse in the middle of samasa is not a grammatical flaw, for this verse is spoken by Shrila Vyasadeva Himself.

32 The sixteen potencies mentioned in this verse (2.9.17 quoted in Text 9) are the sixteen doorkeepers of Vaikuntha, who are described in the following statement of Padma Purana Uttara-khanda (256.14-17), where Lord Siva says to Parvati:

"O beautiful-faced Parvati, Canda and Pracanda are the guards posted at the eastern gate of Vaikuntha. Bhadra and Subhadra guard the southern gate, Jaya and Vijaya remain at the western gate, and Dhata and Vidhata protect the northern gate. In addition to them Kumuda and Kumudaksa guard the southeast, Pundarika and Vamana guard the southwest, Sankukarna and Sarvanetra guard the northeast. These are the names of the sixteen protectors of Vaikuntha-puri."

33 The five potencies mentioned in this verse (2.9.17 quoted in Text 9) are named in the following verse from the Padma Purana Uttara khanda (256-24):

"Kurma, Nagaraja, Vainateya the master of the Vedas, Chandah and Sarvamantra are the five potencies that comprise the form of the spiritual realm."

34 Later, in the Krishna-sandarbha, we will describe the personal abode of Shri Krishna, which is situated in the highest part of the Vaikuntha realm. In that realm of Shri Krishna there are also sixteen transcendental potencies, and their names beginning with Cyuta and Alambini will be given in a passage from the Prabhasa-khanda quoted in the Krishna-sandarbha.

35 In this verse (2.9.17 quoted in text 9) the word 'svaiḥ' means 'personal', 'bhagaih' means 'with various opulences and potencies', and 'yuktam' means 'empowered'. 'Itaratra' means 'among the mystic-yogis', and 'adhruvaiḥ' means 'temporary'. In other words, the mystic yogis attain opulences that are a faint reflection of those the Lord manifests in the spiritual world. The word 've' means 'own', and 'dhaman' means 'in the Lord's abode of Vaikuntha'. Because Lord Narayana is supremely independent and because He engages only in enjoying various pastimes (ramamanam) in the Vaikuntha world, therefore He should be understood to be the Personality of Godhead (isvaram). He is not an ordinary living entity.

36 The next verse (2.9.18 quoted in text 10) says: 'bowing before the Lord's lotus feet is the way of highest perfection for the living being.' This statement confirms that the form of the Lord is not material, but purely spiritual, eternal, full of knowledge and full of bliss.

37 In the next verse (2.9.19 quoted in text 11), Sukadeva Gosvami says the Supreme Lord 'accepted Brahma as worthy to create living beings, to be controlled as He desired (praja-visarge nija-sasanarhanam), and thus the Lord spoke to him as follow (babhase).'

38 At this point someone may raise the following objection: "Brahma is merely the creator of the material universes, and is very insignificant in comparison to the Personality of Godhead, the greatest of the great. I do not think it is possible for Brahma to have a direct relationship with the Supreme Lord.”

In order to answer this question, Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami described the Supreme Lord’s intense love for His devotees in the next verse (2.9.19 quoted in text 11) by saying: “The Lord was very much satisfied with Brahma, shook hands with him, and, slightly smiling, addressed him thus.”*

Anuccheda 11

The Bhagavan, or personal, feature of the Supreme Spirit is not an artificial creation sprung from the imagination of some theologicians and philosophers, but it is the actual truth. This personal aspect of the Supreme Truth, who is always accompanied by His various potencies, is the subject matter described in the verses of Shrimad Bhagavatam, and in the very beginning of the Bhagavatam, Shrila Vyasadeva stresses the reality of this subject matter (the Supreme Person) by saying (1.1.2):

“This Bhagavata Purana propounds the highest truth which is understandable by those devotees who are fully pure in heart. The highest truth is reality distinguished from illusion for the welfare of all. Such truth uproots the threefold miseries.”*

In this verse the Supreme Truth is described by the two adjectives ‘sivadam’ and ‘trayonmulanam’. ‘Sivadam’ means ‘He who give transcendental bliss by the means of His own transcendental potency’, and ‘tapa-trayonmulanam’ means ‘He who uproots the threefold miseries caused by the illusory potency, maya.’

Anuccheda 12

The potencies of the Lord may be divided into two opposite kinds: 1. The internal, or spiritual potency, and 2. The external, or material potency, maya. These two potencies inspire their followers to think and act in diverse ways, and in this way there are innumerable different activities and innumerable different philosophies, each hostile to the others. Nevertheless all this variety has a single origin. That single origin is described by Maharaja Daksa in the following prayer (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.4.31) addressed to the Supreme Personality of Godhead:

“Let me offer my respectful obeisances unto the all-pervading Supreme Personality of godhead, who possesses unlimited transcendental qualities. Acting from within the cores of the hearts of all philosophers, who propagate various views, He causes them to forget their own souls while sometimes agreeing and sometimes disagreeing among themselves. Thus He creates within this material world a situation in which they are unable to come to a conclusion. I offer my obeisances unto Him.

That all variegated potencies have their origin in the Supreme Personality of Godhead is also confirmed in the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (4.9.16) where Dhruva Maharaja says to the Supreme Lord:

“My dear Lord, in Your impersonal manifestation of Brahman there are always two opposing elements - knowledge and ignorance. Your multi-energies are continually manifest, but the impersonal Brahman, which is undivided, original, changeless, unlimited and blissful, is the cause of the material manifestation. Because You are the same impersonal Brahman, I offer my respectful obeisances unto You.”*

The multi-energies of the Lord may be divided into three broad categories: the superior, intermediate, and inferior potencies. Inspired by these variegated energies of the Lord, the living entities act in various ways.

Anuccheda 14

That the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the origin and reservoir of all potencies is also confirmed in the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (4.17.33), where Maitreya Muni says to Vidura:

“My dear Lord, by Your own potencies You are the original cause of the material elements, as well as the performing instruments (the senses), the workers of the senses (the controlling demigods), the intelligence and the ego, as well as everything else. By Your energy You manifest this entire cosmic creation, maintain it and dissolve it. Through Your energy alone everything is sometimes manifest and sometimes not manifest. You are therefore the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the cause of all causes. I offer my respectful obeisances unto You.”*

Anuccheda 15

That the Lord’s variegated potencies are inconceivable and cannot be completely understood by the individual living entity is confirmed by the following statements of Vedic literature:

"O Lord, You are the Supreme Personality of Godhead for all living entities. Your diverse energies can act multifariously. This is inconceivable to us."*

Devahuti-devi to Lord Kapila (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.33.3)

"The Absolute Truth and His potencies are inconceivable. They can only be understood by the Vedic literatures, which are the direct revelation of the Lord."

Vedanta-sutra 2.1.27

"Innumerable variegated and inconceivable potencies exist within the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

Vedanta-sutra 2.1.28

Anuccheda 16

1 The nature of the Lord's potencies is further described in the following verse of Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.3.37) where Pippalayana Rsi says to Maharaja Nimi:

"Originally one, the Absolute, Brahman, comes to be known a threefold, manifesting itself as the three modes of material nature: goodness, passion and ignorance. Brahman further expands its potency, and thus the power to act and the power of consciousness becomes manifest, along with the false ego, which covers the identity of the conditioned living being. Thus, by the expansion of the multi-potencies of the Absolute, the demigods, as the embodiment of knowledge, become manifest, along with the material senses, their objects, and the results of material activity, namely happiness and distress. In this way the manifestation of the material world takes place as the subtle cause and as the material effect visible in the appearance of gross material objects. Brahman, which is the source of all subtle and gross manifestations, is simultaneously transcendental to them, being absolute."

2 In this verse the phrase 'brahmaiva uru-sakti bhati' means 'The Supreme Truth possesses many potencies'. The word 'eva' (certainly) emphasises the fact that Lord's potencies are not merely imagined to exist, but are real, the potencies naturally possessed by the Lord. In the last line of this verse 'yat' refers to Brahman, 'sat' to earth and the other gross material elements, 'asat' to prakrti and the other subtle material elements, 'tayoh' to these two external potencies, and 'param' to the Lord's personal internal potency, which is the spiritual planets of Vaikuntha, and the pure spirit souls, who are His marginal potencies. Any conception that contradicts this is in error.

3 Someone may ask: "What different kinds of potencies are the property of the Lord?" In order to answer this question, Pippalayana Muni said: 'jnana-kriyarthaphalarupataya'. This means that the Lord has many potencies, such as His jnana-sakti, which consists of the mahat-tattva and other potencies, kriya-sakti, which consists of the sutras and other potencies, and artha-sakti, which consists of the tan-matras and other potencies. These sat and asat potencies are material in nature. Above them (tayoh param) is the supreme goal of life, the spiritual Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is known as Bhagavan and who is accompanied by His potencies. Also above them is the spiritual living entity, who is known as jiva, and who, because He follows the Lord, is pure. In this way the Lord's many potencies (uru-sakti), which begin with His jnana-sakti and kriya-sakti are described.

4 The Lord's potencies are real, not imagined, for they have emanated from the Lord Himself, the Supreme Reality. This is confirmed by Pippalayana Muni in the following statement:

"Originally one, the Absolute, Brahman, comes to be known as threefold, manifesting itself as the three modes of material nature: goodness, passion and ignorance. In this way Brahman expands its potency."

From the Supreme Brahman the unmanifested modes of material nature (tri-vrt) are manifested; from the unmanifested mode of nature the kriya-sakti is manifested, from the kriya-sakti the sutram is manifested.

From jnana-sakti the power of consciousness is manifested and from the power of consciousness the false-ego (aham) is manifested. The false ego covers the awareness of the pure individual soul (jivam) which is one of the Lord's spiritual potencies.

The Vedic literatures explain (pravadanti) the manifestation of the Lord's potencies in this way. That all these variegated energies have emanated from the Supreme Godhead is explained in the Chandogya Upanisad (6.2.1) in the following words:

"O gentle student, in the beginning, before the creation, only the Supreme Godhead was manifest. It is from Him that everything has come."

Because the variegated potencies have emanated from the Supreme Truth, they must also be real, they cannot be false. All these potencies are like the limbs and parts of the limbs of the Personality of Godhead. He is like the sun, and all these potencies are like the rays of light emanating from that Supreme-sun. This is confirmed by the following statement of Sruti-sastra (found in the following places: Katha Upanisad 2.2.15, Mundaka Upanisad 2.2.10, and Svetasvatara Upanisad 6.14):

"Everything that exists is like rays of light emanating from the Supreme."

5 That the Lord's potencies are real, and also inconceivable to the living entities, is confirmed by the following question posed by Maitreya Muni, and answered by Parasara Muni.

Maitreya asked (Vishnu Purana 1.3.2):

"The Personality of Godhead is supremely pure in heart and mind, and He is beyond the influence of the three modes of material nature. He is unlimited. How is it possible for Him to directly engage in the creation, maintenance and destruction of the various material universes? I would expect that He would have no direct connection at all with the material world."

6 Parasara Muni answered Maitreya's question in the following words (Vishnu Purana 1.3.3):

"O best of the ascetics, the potencies of the Supreme Personality of Godhead (such as sarga-sakti, the potency of material creation, and others) are all inconceivable and cannot be understood by the individual living entities. Just as heat is the potency of fire, these are all the potencies of the Supreme."

7 Shridhara Svami comments on this verse in the following words:

"In this verse Maitreya Muni doubts that it is possible for the transcendental Personality of Godhead to engage in the mundane activity of material creation. The word 'nirgunasya' used in this verse means 'free from the influence of the material modes of goodness, passion and ignorance'. 'Aprameyasya' means 'free from the limitations of time, space, and other material restricting factors'. 'Suddhasya' means 'without a material body', or 'He who does not require anyone's help in order to do anything'. 'Amalatmanah' means 'He who is free from material piety and impiety, and who does not have to perform any Vedic ritual in order to become purified.' Observing that the Supreme is different from, and untouched by, matter, Maitreya Muni doubts that it is possible for Him to create something so different from Himself.

8 "In the next verse and a half, Parasara Muni answers Maitreya's question by saying that the Personality of Godhead acts within the material world through the agency of His inconceivable potencies. The Lord's potencies may be considered inconceivable in two ways. First, they are inconceivable because they are so great and powerful that the tiny logical apparatus of the conditioned soul does not have the strength to understand them, and second, they are inconceivable because they are simultaneously one and different from the Personality of Godhead, a seeming contradiction which the intelligence of the conditioned souls is generally not large enough to house. This seeming contradiction can be understood, however, by the example of the fire and its potency heat. Heat is the potency of fire and it has specific burning power obtained from its origin, the fire. In some ways the heat is the same as the fire itself, and in other ways it is different. In the same way everything that exists is the potency of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, simultaneously one and different from Him.

"In this way the simultaneous oneness and difference may be understood. We may also note in this verse that the word 'bhava-saktayah' means 'perfect by nature'. In this way, even though the Personality of Godhead is never touched by the three modes of material nature, and even though He never directly contacts the material nature, He creates the material universes, and performs various activities within them, by means of His inconceivable potencies."

9 That the Personality of Godhead is the master of inconceivable potencies is also confirmed by the following statement of the Svetasvatara Upanisad (6.8):

"He does possess bodily form like that of an ordinary living entity. There is no difference between His body and His soul. He is absolute. All His senses are transcendental. Any one of His senses can perform the action of any other sense. Therefore, no one is greater than Him or equal to Him. His potencies are multifarious, and thus His deeds are automatically performed as a natural sequence."*

10 That the Personality of Godhead is the master of innumerable potencies is also confirmed by the following statement of the Sruti-sastra (Svetasvatara Upanisad 4.10):

"Although maya is false or temporary, the background of maya is the supreme magician, the Personality of Godhead, who is Mahesvara, the supreme controller.”*

11 Everything that exists is the potency of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and is simultaneously one and different from Him just as heat is not different from fire. The word ‘bhava-saktayah’ may also be interpreted to mean ‘produced from the transcendental body of the Lord.’ Because the Lord’s potencies are manifested from His own form, they are also simultaneously one and different from Him. No one can defeat this argument or prove anything different than this. That the Personality of Godhead is the master of innumerable potencies is confirmed in the following statements of the Upanisads:

“The Personality of Godhead has multifarious potencies.”

Svetasvatara Upanisad 6.8

“The Personality of Godhead is the supreme master and controller of everything that exists.”

Brhad-aranyaka Upanisad 4.4.22

12 In this passage (from the Vishnu Purana, quoted in Texts 5 and 6) Maitreya poses his question from the point of view of the impersonalists, who maintain that the Supreme has no qualities, and Parasara Muni replies by taking the stance of the personalists who teach that the Supreme has qualities, and that variety exists even in the spiritual world. Maitreya uses words like “suddhasya” (pure) and ‘adehasya’ (without a body) to describe the Supreme. He was thinking in terms of an impersonal Supreme without potencies. Parasara Muni, in his reply, used these same terms to describe the personal feature of the Supreme. In Parasara’s answer the term ‘nirgunasya’ (without qualities) used by Maitreya to describe the Supreme was answered by the word ‘acintya-jnana-gocarah’ (inconceivable). By using this word, Parasara hinted to Maitreya that the Supreme is called ‘nirguna’ (without qualities) because His qualities are so great that they cannot be fully or properly understood by the individual living entities. When Maitreya used the words ‘amatmanah’ (flawless) and ‘suddhasya’ (pure), he considered that the Supreme was without qualities, in other words he thought of the Supreme as pure in the way an unflawed piece of glass or crystal is pure by virtue of having no qualities. Parasara Muni accepted the description of the purity of the Supreme in a different way. For Him the Supreme had qualities, but no vices or imperfections. In this way the Supreme is pure. In his answer Parasara rejected the impersonalistic concept of the Supreme referred to by Maitreya and instead described the Supreme as person, the master of innumerable inconceivable potencies. Heat is sometimes present in water, air, or other elements, but it is always present in the fire-element, and can never be separated from it. Just as heat is always present in fire, in the same way the inconceivable potencies of the Supreme cannot be separated from Him. They are an intrinsic part of His nature. Because the Supreme possesses unlimited inconceivable potencies, He is the greatest, and no one is equal or greater than Him. This is confirmed in the following statement of Svetasvatara Upanisad (6.8):

“No one is equal to or greater than the Supreme Personality of Godhead.”

13 In the Upanisads and other Vedic literatures the Lord’s potencies are sometimes described as ‘brahma’ (the greatest). This does not mean that the Lord’s potencies are greater than the Lord Himself, but merely that the Lord’s potencies are extremely powerful, and cannot be checked by anyone except for the Personality of Godhead Himself. The Lord’s transcendental potency activates the material nature, which moves the three modes of material nature, which become transformed into the ‘sarga-sakti’ (potency of material creation) and other material potencies. In this way the affairs of the material universes are conducted by the Lord’s potencies, without any direct intervention by the Personality of Godhead, who is never touched by the material energy.

14 The word ‘brahma’ (the greatest) is also used to describe the Lord’s potencies in the following statement of the Chandogya Upanisad (3.14.1):

“This entire material world is Brahman, the greatest.”

This description of the material potency of the Lord as the ‘greatest’, should be understood, however, only in a relative sense, for the Lord’s material potency is not greater than the Lord Himself, as Maitreya Muni has already explained by using the word ‘nirgunasya’ (untouched by the material modes of nature) to describe the Lord. The Svetasvatara Upanisad (4.10) also describes the Personality of Godhead as superior to His material potency in the following words:

“The Personality of Godhead is the master and controller of this material world, which is His illusory potency, maya.”

That maya is inferior to the Personality of Godhead is also confirmed by the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.7.4):

"The illusory potency maya takes shelter of the Personality of Godhead and is independent on Him."

In this way the Personality of Godhead is superior to His illusory potency, maya, even though that potency is sometimes described as 'brahma' (the greatest). Because the Lord's potencies (known as 'brahma') are subordinate to Him, He delegates to them various duties in relation to the material world. They contact the material energy, not He.

15 That the Personality of godhead is superior to His potencies ('brahma') is also confirmed in the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavad-gita (13.12-13), where the Lord Himself says:

"I shall now explain the knowable, knowing which you will take the eternal. This beginningless, and it is subordinate to Me. It is called Brahman, the spirit, and it lies beyond the cause and effect of this material world."*

16 The Supreme Truth has innumerable inconceivable potencies, which may be grouped into four broad categories: 1. His internal potency, 2. The secondary potencies manifest from His internal potency, 3. The individual living entities (jivas), and 4. The unmanifest state of the modes of material nature (pradhana). As the sun remains in one place, although its potency, the sunshine, expands in all directions, so the personality of Godhead remains in one place, although His variegated potencies are everywhere.

17 This is described in the following statement of the Vishnu Purana (1.22.54):

"Just as the illumination of a fire, which is situated in one place, is spread all over, the energies of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Parabrahman, are spread all over this universe."*

18 This is also confirmed by the following statement found in both the Katha Upanisad (2.2.15) and Svetasvatara Upanisad (6.14):

"This entire cosmos is the effulgence manifested from the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

19 Someone may argue that it is contradictory to say that the Supreme stays in one place, and at the same time He is present everywhere. This objection is not valid, for the Lord possesses all inconceivable potencies by which He can do any impossible thing. In this way He can be simultaneously localised and all-pervading. The Lord's potencies are divided into three categories as follows: 1. Antaranga-sakti, the internal potency, which is present in the spiritual world of Vaikuntha, 2. Tatastha-sakti, the marginal potency, or individual spirit souls, who are like sparks of the Supreme Whole, and 3. Bahiranga-sakti, the external potency known as maya, which is inert matter, the unmanifested stage (pradhana) of the modes of nature. These three potencies of the Lord are described in the following statement of the Vishnu Purana (6.7.61-63):

20 However, there is another energy, called illusion, which consists of fruitive activity. That is the Lord's third potency."*

21 "This living entity, covered by the influence of nescience, exists in different forms in the material energy, to greater or lesser degrees."*

22 In this verse the words 'avidya-karma' mean 'the potency that bewilders', and the word 'samjna' (named) identifies that potency as the illusory potency, maya. Although the maya potency is external and inferior to the marginal potency, or individual living souls, nevertheless, the external potency has the power to cover and bewilder the marginal potency. This is explained in the next verse, where the word 'taratamyena' describes the external potency's ability to place the individual spirit-souls in various higher and lower material bodies, extending from the body of the demigod Brahma down to the insignificant bodies of plants and other non-moving creatures. This power of the external potency over the marginal potency is described in the following statement of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (1.7.5):

"The individual living entities (jivas) are placed in illusion by the external potency, maya."

23 In this verse (1.7.5) the word 'yay' refers to the Lord's inconceivable illusory potency maya, by whose influence the unmanifested modes of material nature (pradhana) are inert, unconscious and constantly mutable. That the pradhana is manifested from the maya-potency we shall demonstrate later on in this book. The three potencies: ataranga, tatastha and bahiranga, are similar in many but not all respects. Each has distinguishing features, and each has some defects not present in the others.

Anuccheda 17

1 The Supreme Personality of Godhead is the master of all spiritual and material potencies. Even Hiranyakasipu confirms this in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.3.34):

"Let me offer my respectful obeisances to the Supreme, who possesses external and internal energies."*

The Supreme Personality of Godhead is spiritual in nature and He is the shelter of innumerable spiritual potencies (the individual living entities). He is like the sun-planet, which by nature consists of light, and which is the shelter of innumerable rays of light, which have the same nature as the sun-planet itself. The marginal spiritual potency known as jiva-sakti, or the individual spiritual entities, will be explained in the next treatise, the Paramatma-sandarbha.

2 In the following statement of the Vishnu Purana (1.19.76-77) the antaranga-sakti (internal potency) is described by contrasting it with the bahiranga-sakti (external, material potency):

"O Supreme Personality of Godhead, O master of the demigods, O Supersoul present in the hearts of all creatures, I offer my respectful obeisances to Your inferior material potency, which is eternal, and which is the resting place for the three modes of material nature. O Lord, I also offer my respectful obeisances to Your internal, spiritual potency, which has no material attributes, and which cannot be understood by the material mind or material words, but only by the statements of the advanced transcendentalists."

We may note that the Lord possesses innumerable spiritual potencies. This is confirmed by the following statement of the Svetasvatara Upanisad (6.8):

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is the master of multifarious superior spiritual potencies."

Anuccheda 18

1 In the following statement of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (2.9.34), the Personality of Godhead describes the external, material potency, bahiranga-sakti, in the following words:

"O Brahma, whatever appears to be of any value, if it is without relation to Me, has no reality. Know it as My illusory energy, that reflection which appears to be in darkness."*

2 In the first part of this verse, the Personality of Godhead says:

"O Brahma whatever appears to be of any value, if it is without relation to Me, has no reality."*

3 In this verse the word 'atmanah' means 'of Me, the Supreme Personality of Godhead', and the word 'maya' refers to two potencies of the Lord: the bahiranga-sakti, or material energy maya, and the tatastha-sakti, or individual spirit souls. Interpreted in relation to the individual spirit souls, the word 'abhasa' means 'effulgence'. In other words, the individual spirit souls are likened to particles of light emanating from the supreme sun of the Personality of Godhead.

If the word 'maya' is taken to mean the bahiranga-sakti, then the word 'abhasa' may be understood to mean 'illusion'. The illusory potency presents a great variety of constantly changing forms of the inert material energy, which bewilders the conditioned souls by presenting before their eyes a great variety of temporary and constantly changing forms of the inert and unconscious material energy, or three modes of nature, goodness, passion and ignorance. The word 'abhasa' is used in this way, to mean the material cosmos, in Shrimad Bhagavatam (2.10.7 abhasas ca nirodhas ca). The word 'abhasa' is also described in Vishnu Purana 1.22.54 (quoted in Anuccheda 16, Text 17).

4 The Lord's potencies are also described in the following statement spoken by the scholars of the Ayur-Veda:

"The Personality of Godhead, whose desires are automatically fulfilled, is the original creator of the material universes. His form is eternal and full of transcendental knowledge, and His eternal transcendental potency emanates from Him as particles of light from the sun. As an actor, who changes his appearance when he enters the stage, the Personality of Godhead appears in the form of the Supersoul when He enters the material realm. He activates the inert material energy, and in this way causes the creation of the material universes."

5 In the first part of the verse, where the Lord's 'maya' is described as 'abhasa', the word 'abhasa' may be interpreted in two different ways in order to match the two interpretations of the word 'maya' (which may mean either the individual spirit souls or the external material energy). In the second part of the verse, where the 'abhasa' is described as reflected on the 'tamah' (darkness), there is no need to interpret the word 'tamah' in two different ways in order to fit the two interpretations of the words 'maya' and 'abhasa'. The single meaning 'darkness' naturally fits the two possible interpretations of the verse.

6 The darkness (tamah) of the material cosmos is described as created by the Lord's shadow. This is described in the following verse of Shrimad Bhagavatam (3.20.18), where Maitreya Muni says to Vidura:

"First of all, Brahma created from his shadow the coverings of ignorance of the conditioned souls. They are five in number and are called tamisra, andha-tamisra, tamas, moha and mahamoha."*

7 The material world is also compared to darkness (tamah) in the following verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.11) where Lord Brahma says to Lord Krishna:

"Where am I, a small creature of seven spans the measure of my own hand? I am enclosed in the universe composed of material nature, the total material energy, false ego, ether, air, water and earth. And what is Your glory? Unlimited universes pass through the pores of Your body just like particles of dust passing through the opening of a window."*

8 This verse (3.20.18 quoted in text 8) explains that Brahma, using the instrument of the shadow potency (chaya-sakti) manifested 'avidya' at the time of creating the material universe. The word 'avidya' here may refer either to the different classes of conditioned souls (jiva-maya) or to the different manifestations of the modes of nature (guna-maya).

9 The difference between the avidya-sakti (ignorance potency) and vidya-sakti (knowledge potency) is described in the following verse of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (11.11.3) where Lord Krishna says:

"O Uddhava, both knowledge and ignorance, being products of maya, are expansions of My potency. Both knowledge and ignorance are beginningless and perpetually award liberation and bondage to embodied living beings."

10 The knowledge potency is described in the following verses of the Padma Purana (Uttara-khanda 73.230-231) in the Karttika-mahatmya, in connection with the prayers of the demigods to Maya, which are related by Lord Krishna to Satyabhama-devi:

"As the demigods were offering prayers in this way, they saw a portion of the sky become very brilliant with a great light. From that effulgent part of the sky they heard the goddess Sarasvati speak the following words: 'I appear in this material world in three ways, in relation to the three modes of goodness, passion, and ignorance.'"

11 The ignorance-potency (avidya-sakti) is described in the following statement of the Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda (91.51) where the Supreme Personality of Godhead says to Lord Brahma:

"The dense darkness of the ignorance potency in this material world is immeasurable and inexhaustable."

Anuccheda 19

1 The internal spiritual potency (antaranga-sakti), without whose help the individual living entities are powerless to act, is described in the following two verses of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (6.16.23-24), where Narada Muni says to Maharaja Citraketu:

2 "The Supreme Brahman emanates from the Supreme Personality of Godhead and expands like the sky. Although untouched by anything material, it exists within and without. Nonetheless, the mind, intelligence, senses and living force can neither touch Him nor know Him. I offer unto Him my respectful obeisances."*

3 "As iron has the power to burn when made red-hot in the association of fire, so the body, senses, living force, mind and intelligence, although merely lumps of matter, can function in their activities when infused with a particle of consciousness by the Supreme Personality of Godhead. As iron cannot burn unless heated by fire, the bodily senses cannot act unless favoured by the Supreme Brahman."*

4 Shridhara Svami comments on these verses in the following words:

"In the first verse (6.16.23) Narada said: The Supreme Brahman (yat) emanates from the Supreme Personality of Godhead and expands like the sky (vitatam vyomavat). Nonetheless, the living force (asavah) can neither touch him (na sprsati) by using the instrument of kriya-sakti, nor can the mind, intelligence and senses know Him (na viduh) by using the instrument of jnana-sakti. I offer unto Him my respectful obeisances (nato smi). The reason the mind, intelligence, senses and living force cannot understand the Supreme Brahman is explained in the next verse (6.16.24), where Narada says: 'The body, senses, living force, mind and intelligence, although merely lumps of matter, can function in their activities (karmasu) when infused by a particle of consciousness (ami yad-amsa-viddhah) by the Supreme Personality of Godhead.' Without the Supreme Personality of Godhead's intervention, they cannot act either in the states of wakefulness, dreaming, deep-sleep, unconsciousness, or any other condition of life. In order to explain the senses' dependence on the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Narada gives the following example: 'As iron cannot burn unless heated by fire (aprataptam lauham), the bodily senses cannot act unless favoured by the Supreme Brahman.' A red-hot iron rod gets its burning potency from fire, and although it can burn many objects, it cannot burn fire itself. In the same way, because the material body, senses, living force, mind and intelligence of the living entities have obtained their powers to act (kriya-sakti) and understand (jnana-sakti) from the Supreme Personality of Godhead, although they may be able to touch or understand many things, they are unable to touch or understand the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the source of all their power."

5 That the senses are dependent on the Supreme Personality of Godhead for their powers is confirmed by even Sankaracarya, the leader of the impersonalists, who in the course of refuting the atheistic Sankhya philosophy said (Sariraka-bhasya 1.1.5):

"The material eyes have the power to see because it is given to them by the Supreme. As an iron rod or similar object obtains the power to burn by being placed near a fire, so the senses obtain the power to act from the Supreme. The omniscient Supreme Truth is the primary cause of the entire material cosmos."

6 That the senses are dependent on the Supreme Personality of Godhead is also confirmed in the following statements of the Upanisads:

"When the Supreme Personality of Godhead appears, then the various different planets may also become manifested. They cannot appear unless He appears first."

Katha Upanisad 2.2.15, Mundaka Upanisad 2.2.10 and Svetasvatara Upanisad 6.14

"Unless the supremely blissful Personality of Godhead is present within the sky of the heart, what living entity has the power to do anything, or even to remain alive?"

Taittiriya Upanisad 2.7.1

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead grants the power of sight to the eyes and the power of hearing to the ears of the individual living entities."

Bṛhad-aranyaka Upanisad 4.4.18

7 In the concluding portion of his commentary on this verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.16.24) Shridhara Svami says:

"At this point someone may say: 'All right, the senses cannot act independently, only the individual spirit soul is the seer and the knower of what is experienced by the senses.' To this I reply; 'No, no, in all states of being, whether awake, dreaming, or deeply asleep, the individual living entity is dependent on the Supreme. Without the mercy of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the individual spirit soul cannot see or perceive anything with any one of his senses (na drastrapadesam eti). This is confirmed in the following statement of Bṛhad-aranyaka Upanisad (3.7.23): 'Without the Supreme Personality of Godhead's mercy, no one can see anything.'

"Another way to interpret the words no drastrapadesam eti is to accept them as meaning: 'Although the senses of the individual living entity can perceive various things, under normal conditions they cannot perceive the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is the source of their power.'"

8 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the origin of all sensory perception is confirmed in the following statement of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (2.10.9):

"All three of the above-mentioned stages of different living entities are interdependent. In the absence of one, another is not understood. But the Supreme Being who sees every one of them as the shelter of the shelter is independent of all, and therefore He is the supreme shelter."*

9 In various places in the Sruti-sastra also it is confirmed that the individual living entities (jivas) are never independent of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. He is the original seer of everything, and no one can see anything without His mercy. In this way these verses (6.16.23-24) may be understood.

Anuccheda 20

1 That the senses of the conditioned souls cannot perceive the Supreme Personality of Godhead who is the source of their power is confirmed in the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (6.4.25) where Maharaja Dakṣa says:

"Because they are only matter, the body, the life airs, the external and internal senses, the five gross elements and the subtle sense objects (form, taste, smell, sound and touch) cannot know their own nature, the nature of the other senses or the nature of their controllers. But the living being, because of his spiritual nature, can know his body, the life airs, the senses, the elements and the sense objects, and he can also know the three qualities that form their roots. Nevertheless, although the living being is completely aware of them, he is unable to see the Supreme Being, who is omniscient and unlimited. I therefore offer my respectful obeisances unto Him.”*

2 In this verse the word ‘prana’ means ‘life-airs’, ‘aksah’ means ‘the senses’, ‘manavah’ means ‘the mind’, ‘bhuta-matram’ means ‘the tan-matras’, ‘atmanam’ means ‘themselves’, ‘anyam’ means ‘other areas of perception’. The demigods who are beyond (param) these two they do not know. These things they do not know (na viduh). ‘Puman’ means ‘the living being’, ‘sarvam’ means ‘themselves and whatever is beyond themselves’. Beyond themselves (param) are the material body, things in relation to the body, and the controlling demigods. This the living entity knows (veda). ‘Gunams ca’ means ‘the mode of goodness and the other material modes’, which are the root from which the material bodies and other material things have grown. Even though the living entity knows all these (taj-jnah) he still does not know (na veda) the sarvajna. Sarvajna here means “He who knows the living entities and everything else also.” The word ‘anantam’ is explained in the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.18.19):

“The Personality of Godhead, unlimited, in potency and transcendental by attributes, is called the ananta (Unlimited).”*

The speaker then says: “I worship (ide) the unlimitedly powerful Supreme Lord.”

3 In connection with the statement that the individual entity is unable to see the Supreme the Brhad-aranyaka Upanisad (4.5.15) says:

“There (in the material world of duality) the individual living entity sees the Supreme as different from himself.”

In these words is described how the individual spirit soul sees himself as different from the Supreme. The Upanisad then says:

“When he sees that everything is the Supreme Soul, then how, or what will he see (that is different from himself)?”

Then the living entity does not see the Supreme Soul as the observer, but rather he sees that everything is the observer of the Supreme Soul and that what he sees is himself.”

Then the Upanisad says:

“How can he know the knower?”

An explanation of the meaning of these passages follows. In these statements the word ‘yatra’ means ‘in the illusory potency, maya, where duality is manifested.’ Under the influence of the inconceivable potency named maya, and under the influence of the temporary world of the contamination of matter, what is not different is perceived to be different. Because of this influence the individual spirit soul is born again and again as if he were independent and separate. In this way the ‘separate’ (itarah) living entity sees others as ‘separate’ (itaram). He is able to see others as separate because the instrument of seeing and the object of vision are both suitable for this kind of vision. That is the meaning.

The word ‘yatra’ here means ‘in His personal potency’. The individual soul, or jiva here is compared to a particle of light, and the Supreme Soul, described here as the ‘atma’, is compared to the sun-globe. The words ‘sarvam abhut’ mean that everything is manifested by the Lord’s personal potency. Everything exists from beginningless time. It is not manifest only in that entrance at that time. What (kam) and by what separate (itarena) method (kena) can the separate (itarah) individual soul (jiva) see? He cannot see anything by any such method. That is the meaning. By their own power individual rays of light cannot display the splendour manifest in the sun itself and neither can individual sparks burn a fire. That is the meaning. By what separate method may one understand the omniscient (vijnataram), unlimited, omnipotent Supreme Soul? There is no separate method to understand Him. That is the meaning. When the jnana-sakti is manifest, then the kriya-sakti and iccha-sakti are also seen. The verse quoted in Text 1 was spoken by Maharaja Dakṣa to the Supreme Personality of Godhead

The Supreme Personality of Godhead is always in full control of His various potencies. This is confirmed by the following verse of Shrimad Bhagavatam (7.9.22) where Prahlada Maharaja says to Lord Nrsimhadeva:

"My dear Lord, O supreme great, You have created this material world of sixteen constituents, but You are transcendental to their material qualities. In other words, these material qualities are under Your full control, and You are never conquered by them. Therefore the time element is Your representation. My Lord, O Supreme, no one can conquer You. As for me, however, I am being crushed by the wheel of time, and therefore I surrender fully unto You. Now kindly take me under the protection of Your lotus feet."*

Shridhara Svami explains that the word 'sva-dhamna' means 'by Your personal spiritual energy', and 'kala' means 'the time element, which creates the material manifestation, or maya.' 'Atma' here means 'the individual living entities', and 'guna' means the three modes of material nature (goodness, passion, and ignorance). Although the individual living entities may come under the control of the modes of nature, the Supreme Personality of Godhead is never controlled by them. This is confirmed by the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.25.12) where the Personality of Godhead says:

"The individual living entities may come under the control of goodness, passion and ignorance, but I am never controlled by them."

1 That the Supreme Lord's potencies are always under His full control is also confirmed by the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (5.18.38), where the Earth-deity says to Lord Varaha:

"O Lord, You do not desire the creation, maintenance or annihilation of this material world, but You perform these activities for the conditioned souls by Your creative energy. Exactly as a piece of iron moves under the influence of a lodestone, inert matter moves when You glance over the total material energy."*

2 Shridhara Svami explains in his commentary:

"This verse means" 'O Lord, You do not desire the creation (nepsitam), maintenance or annihilation of this material world (visva-sthiti) but You perform (karoti) these activities for the conditioned souls by Your creative energy (maya) who uses the three modes of material nature (gunaih) as her instruments. As (yatha) a piece of iron (ayah) moves (bhramati) under the influence of a lodestone (gravnah), inert matter moves when You glance (saksine) over the total material energy, observing the modes of nature (guna) and the fruitive actions of the conditioned souls (karma), which although seen by you, remain invisible to them. I therefore offer my respectful obeisances unto (namah)."

Anuccheda 23

1 The Personality of Godhead is always situated in transcendence and filled with spiritual bliss. In this condition He remains eternally unaffected by the inert material potency maya. This is described in the following verse of Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.7.23), where Arjuna says to Lord Krishna:

"You are the Original Personality of Godhead who expands Himself all over the creations and is transcendental to material energy. You have cast away the effects of the material energy by dint of Your spiritual potency. You are always situated in eternal bliss and transcendental knowledge."*

2 In this verse the word 'adyah purusah' refers to the Bhagavan feature of the Lord, and the word 'isvarah' refers to the Supersoul feature of the Lord. Both features of the Lord are described as 'prakrteh parah' (transcendental to the material energy).

Someone may ask the following question: "Please describe how the Bhagavan feature of the Lord enjoys transcendental bliss untouched by the material energy, and please also explain how it is possible for the Supersoul feature of the Lord to remain untouched by the material energy, even though the Supersoul is the predominating Deity who controls the material energy, and is apparently directly in contact with it?"

To these questions the following answers may be given: The Supreme Personality of Godhead, by His transcendental internal potency, sends the external illusory potency, maya, far away from Himself. By means of His internal spiritual potency He enjoys transcendental knowledge and bliss (kaivalye). This is described in the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.9.18) where it is said:

3 "He is also the supreme worshipable object for all beings, including liberated souls, demigods and ordinary conditioned souls. The Lord is eternally free from any material designation, and he constitutes the totality of spiritual bliss derived from perception of His own spiritual form. The Lord exhibits the fullest meaning of the word liberation".

4 In this verse from the Eleventh Canto of the Bhagavatam, the Personality of Godhead is describes as situated in His own transcendental eternal bliss (atmani sthitah). This is also explained in the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (6.9.33):

"O my Lord, You are situated in Your own transcendental bliss."

5 In the quote from the Eleventh Canto of Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.9.18) the word 'sandoha' (multitude) indicates that the spiritual potencies of the Lord are manifested in endless variety. In connection with the verse from the first canto (1.7.23), Shridhara Svami has explained that the word 'prakrteh' refers to the three modes of material nature. That the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the master of all potencies is also described by Devahuti-devi in the following verse of Shrimad Bhagavatam (3.24.33):

6 "I surrender unto the Supreme Personality of Godhead, descended in the form of Kapila, who is independently powerful and transcendental, who is the Supreme Person and the Lord of the sum total of matter and the element of time, who is the fully cognisant maintainer of all the universes under the three modes of material nature, and who absorbs the material manifestations after their dissolution.""*

7 Shridhara Svami comments on this verse in the following words:

"In this verse the word param means 'the Supreme Personality of Godhead.' Why is He the Supreme Godhead? The reasons are given in the following words: He is 'svacchanda-sakti' (the independent master of innumerable potencies), 'pradhanam purusam' (the Lord of the sum total of matter, 'mahantam' (the Universal Form), 'kalam' (time, which prods the material energy into activity), 'tri-vrtam' (the three modes of nature, and the false-ego), and 'loka-pala' (the maintainer of all the universes.

After describing how the Personality of Godhead is the master of the material creation, Shrimati Devahuti-devi explains that the Supreme Lord, by manifesting His internal spiritual potency, remains always untouched by the material energy. In this connection she says atmanubhutyanugata-prapancam' (He manifests His spiritual potency, and thus absorbs the material manifestations after their dissolution). She also describes the Supreme Personality of Godhead as 'kavim' (He who is fully cognisant of everything that happens in the material realm)."

8 Although the Personality of Godhead sometimes remains within the material energy as its controller, He is always superior to that energy and aloof from it. This is confirmed in the following statement of Lord Kapiladeva Shrimad-Bhagavatam (3.26.3):

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is the Supreme Soul, and He has no beginning. He is transcendental to the material modes of nature and beyond the existence of this material world. He is perceivable everywhere because He is self-effulgent, and by His self-effulgent lustre the entire creation is maintained.""*

9 In the course of describing the Supreme Lord's holy names and forms, the Maha-samhita gives the following description of the Lord's three material potencies:

"The Personality of Godhead manifests three potencies in relation to the conditioned souls in the material world. These three potencies are known as 1. Shri, or the potency for maintaining the material universes, 2. Bhu, or the potency for creating the material universes, and 3. Durga, or the potency for annihilating the material universes. Aside from these potencies, the Lord has His own personal potencies (atma-maya) which are manifested as iccha-sakti (His spiritual potency, by which whatever He wishes becomes immediately fulfilled), and guna-maya-sakti, (His external potency, by which the inert material universes are constructed)."

In this verse the word 'shri' means 'the potency for maintaining the material universes', 'bhu', means 'the potency for creating them', and 'durga' means 'the potency for annihilating them'. These are the divisions of different potencies. The potency of the individual living entities is called 'jiva-maya.'

10 These three (Shri, Bhu and Durga) potencies of the Lord are described in the following passage of the Padma Purana (Karttika-mahatmya 73.231-232) where Lord Krishna says to Satyabhama-devi:

"Lord Krishna said: 'O Satyabhama, I remain in this material world in the form of My three potencies associated with the three modes of material nature.'" When the demigods heard this statement of the Lord, they understood His intention, and with great devotion they offered their respects to the three goddesses Laksmi-devi, Parvati-devi and Prthivi-devi, the three potencies of the Lord."

11 The three potencies of the Personality of Godhead are also described in the following statement of

Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.3.16), where Antariksa Rsi says:

"I have now described maya, the illusory energy of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This illusory potency, consisting of the three modes of material nature, is empowered by the Lord for the creation, maintenance and annihilation of the material universe. Now, what more do you wish to hear?"

12 The demigod Brahma describes the Supreme Personality of Godhead's potencies in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.13.45):

"As the darkness of snow on a dark night and the light of a glow-worm in the light of day have no value, the mystic power of an inferior person who tries to use it against a person of great power is unable to accomplish anything; instead the power of that inferior person is diminished."*

13 In this verse Brahma explains that there are different degrees of mystic power (maya). A small amount of mystic power may be genuine or illusory, but whatever the nature of that power, if someone uses a small mystic power challenge a greater power, the small power will certainly be defeated and appear insignificant in relation to the greater power. To demonstrate this, Brahma gives to examples in this verse.

14 The word 'maya' in this verse means 'mystic power'. It does not mean 'illusion' here. For example, the Puranas and other Vedic literatures sometimes describe battles where various weapons composed of 'maya' wounded and killed many soldiers. If the 'maya' which was the active principle of those weapons had been an illusion, it would not have been able to hurt anyone, just as no one becomes wet by touching the mirage of water seen in a desert. The word 'maya' is used in various Vedic literatures to describe the Lord's eternal transcendental potency, which always accompanies Him. For example the Catur-veda-sikha explains:

"The eternal Personality of Godhead, Lord Vishnu, is described as the supreme master of all transcendental potencies (maya-mayam)."

The Maha-samhita explains:

"The potency known as atma-maya fulfils all the desires of the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

This atma-maya is manifested in two divisions as jnana-sakti and kriya-sakti. The word 'maya' may also be interpreted to mean 'knowledge', for the Vedic dictionary explains:

"Another meaning of the word maya is knowledge."

15 Some different meanings from the word 'maya' are given in the following verse from the Sabda-mahodadhi Dictionary:

"They who understand the meanings of words say that the word 'maya' may be defined to mean: 1. The three modes of material nature, 2. Knowledge, and 3. The transcendental potency of Lord Vishnu."

16 In this verse the word 'gunatmika' may be understood to mean the Lord's original potency, by which the modes of nature and the various material universes are created. According to the Trikhanda-sesa Dictionary the word 'maya' may be interpreted in two ways:

"The word 'maya' may be understood to mean 'trickery' or 'mercy'."

In his commentary on Shrimad-Bhagavatam (11.24.27) Shridhara Svami says:

"The word 'maya-maye' used in this verse may be understood to mean 'pushing the illusory potency into action', or 'full of knowledge', depending on whether we interpret the word 'maya' to mean 'illusory potency' or 'knowledge'.

Commenting on Shrimad Bhagavatam (9.20.27) Shridhara Svami also says:

"The word 'maya' used in this verse should be understood to mean 'opulences.'"

In his commentary on Shrimad-Bhagavatam (3.15.26) Shridhara Svami has explained that the word 'yoga-maya' used in that verse may be interpreted to mean either 'the mystic yoga powers attained by the Four Kumaras', or 'the spiritual pastime potency of the Personality of Godhead.' In Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.7.23, the verse quoted in the beginning of this Anuccheda, Arjuna explains that in the liberated Vaikuntha spiritual planets (kaivalye), which are situated on the platform of liberation, the Personality of Godhead appears in His own plenary portion (atmani sthitah). One may ask: How is the Supreme Lord situated in that spiritual world? The answer is given in the next part of the verse:

"You cast away the effects of the material energy by dint of Your spiritual potency."

In this verse the word 'maya' is used in the sense of 'the illusory material energy', and it is clearly explained that the illusory material energy has no influence over the Personality of Godhead and cannot enter His spiritual world of Vaikuntha. This is also explained in the following verse of Shrimad Bhagavatam (2.9.10), where Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami says:

17 "In that personal abode of the Lord, the material modes of ignorance and passion do not prevail, nor is there any of their influence in goodness. There is no predominance of the influence of time, so what to speak of the illusory, external energy, it cannot enter that region. Without discrimination, both the demigods and the demons worship the Lord as devotees."*

18 In the Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda, the following synonyms are given for the word 'vaikuntha':

"Some synonyms for the word 'vaikuntha' are:

1. Moksa (the position of liberation), 2. Param padam (the supreme abode), 3. Lingam (the subtle spiritual realm), 4. Amrtam (the eternal place), and 5. Vishnu-mandiram (the palatial residence of Lord Vishnu)."

Anuccheda 24

1 All transcendental qualities and opulences are present in the transcendental form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead by the agency of His internal spiritual potency. This point will be discussed now in the next Anucchedas.

Anuccheda 25

1 That the transcendental form of the Personality of Godhead is full of all spiritual attributes and opulences is confirmed by the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.87.38) where the Personified Vedas address the Lord:

"O Supreme Personality of Godhead, when there is cosmic manifestation, the jivatma, or the individual soul, appears in the creation in different forms, according to his previous fruitive activities, and due to his long forgetfulness of real existence, he identifies himself with a particular form awarded to him by the laws of material nature. After assuming a material form, he becomes subjected to the three material modes of nature and acts accordingly to continue his existence in the material world. While enwrapped in such ignorance, his natural opulences, although existing in minute quantity, are almost extinct. Your opulences, however, are not diminished, although You appear within this material world. The conditioned soul becomes entrapped in the material world, whereas You leave it without affection, just as a snake sheds his skin. The distinction between You and the conditioned individual soul is that You maintain Your natural opulences, known as sad-aisvarya, asta-siddhi and asta-guna."

2 Shridhara Svami comments on this verse in the following words:

"In this verse the word 'sah' means 'the individual spirit soul'. 'Yat' means 'because', 'ajaya' means 'by the material energy maya', 'ajam' means 'ignorance', 'anusayita' means 'embraces', 'gunams ca' means 'the material body and senses', 'jusan' means 'serving, or considering the material body as the self', 'svarupatam jusan apeta-bhagah' means 'absorbed in the material energy, the individual spirit soul become bereft of his natural spiritual opulences such as bliss and knowledge', 'mrtyum' means 'the material realm of repeated birth and death', 'bhajati' means 'attains', 'tvam uta' means 'but You', and 'jahasi tam' means 'abandon all attachment for that material energy.'

3 "At this point someone may ask: 'O Lord, how is that You remain aloof from the material energy maya?' In order to answer this question, the Personified Vedas say: 'Ahir iva tvacam' (O Lord, just as a snake sheds its skin, in the same way you shed all contact with the illusory potency maya). This means: 'You never fall into the illusion of identifying with a material body constructed of the three modes of material nature'. Because the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the master of limitless transcendental bliss and knowledge, He remains always aloof from the inferior material energy.

4 "Someone may ask: 'How is it that the Personality of Godhead remains full of all transcendental opulences?' To answer this question, the Personified Vedas say: 'Atta-bhagah' (O Lord, You are full of eternal spiritual opulences).

Now someone may ask: 'How is it that the Supreme Lord's opulences are so extraordinary?' To answer this question, the Personified Vedas say: 'Aparimeya-bhagah' (O Lord, Your opulences are unlimited. Neither time nor space impose restrictions on Your opulences)."

5 The limitless opulences of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are also described in the following verse from Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.87.14), where the Personified Vedas say to the Supreme Lord:

"O Lord, You are the master of all opulences."

6 The example of the snake shedding its skin may be explained in the following way: A snake shed its skin when the skin becomes too old. The snake will not go at all near the old rejected skin, but avoids it completely. In the same way, the Personality of Godhead will not even come near the material energy maya, but completely rejects it.

7 The Lord's transcendental opulences are also described in the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.37.22), where Lord Krishna is addressed in the following words:

"O Lord, You are full of supremely pure transcendental knowledge. All Your desires are automatically fulfilled, and none of Your desires can ever be thwarted."*

8 In the following verses from Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.15.3-5) the Personality of Godhead describes His opulences to Uddhava:

"The masters of the yoga system have declared that there are eighteen types of mystic perfection and meditation, of which eight are primary, having their shelter in Me, and ten are secondary, appearing from the material mode of goodness."

9 "Among the eight primary mystic perfections those three by which one adjusts one's own body are anima, becoming smaller than the smallest, mahima, becoming greater than the greatest, and laghima, becoming lighter than the lightest. Through the perfection of prapti one acquires whatever one desires, and through prakamya-siddhi one experiences any enjoyable object, either in this world or the next. Through isita-siddhi one can manipulate the sub potencies of maya, and through the controlling potency called vasita-siddhi one is unimpeded by the three modes of material nature. One who has acquired kamavasayita-siddhi can obtain anything from anywhere, to the highest possible limit. My dear gentle Uddhava, these eight mystic perfections are considered to be naturally existing and unexcelled within this world."

10 The potencies of the Supreme Personality of Godhead included the material potency maya. Maya is described in the following verse of Shrimad Bhagavatam (7.6.23), where Prahlada Maharaja says to the sons of the demons:

"The Personality of Godhead is simply perceived as the supreme sac-cid-ananda (eternity, knowledge and bliss). Being covered by the curtain of the external energy, to the atheist He appears non-existent."*

11 Shrila Shridhara Svami discusses this verse:

"Someone may ask: 'If God is all-pervading, then why do we not see the omniscient, all-powerful Godhead everywhere?'

The answer to that question is given in this verse: 'mayayantarhitaisvaryah' (The supremely opulent Personality of Godhead is covered by the curtain of the external energy, and to the atheist He appears non-existent)."

This verse explains that the glories and opulences of the Lord are hidden from the view of the conditioned souls by the external material potency (mayaya guna-sargaya). These explanations clearly refer to the Supreme Personality of Godhead who is indicated by the word 'paramesvarah'.

12 Maya is also described in the following statement of Svetasvatara Upanisad (4.5):

"The unborn material nature creates the many material bodies assumed by the conditioned souls. This material nature has three features, the three modes of material nature: goodness (white), passion (red) and ignorance (black). In the conditioned state the unborn eternal spirit soul becomes the follower and servant of the material energy. When liberated from illusion, the spirit soul abandons the attempt to enjoy what is offered by the material energy."

13 How may the Supreme Personality of Godhead be described? He is the possessor of all knowledge and the master of all opulences and potencies. This is described in the following statements of Vedic literature:

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is the master of all transcendental qualities and potencies."

Svetasvatara Upanisad 1.3

"The transcendental potencies of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are beyond the perception or description of the conditioned souls."

Vishnu Purana 1.19.77

Anuccheda 26

1 This is also explained in Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.13.40, where the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself says:

"All superior transcendental qualities, such as being beyond the modes of nature, detached, the well-wisher, the most dear, the Supersoul, equally situated everywhere, and free from material qualities, find their shelter and worshipable object in Me."

2 Shridhara Svami explains in his commentary:

"What is the nature of the Supreme Personality of Godhead? He is described in this verse by the word 'aguna'. Here the word 'aguna' means 'without any of the temporary, constantly changing qualities of the material nature'. The Lord has no material qualities, for all His attributes are eternal and changeless."

This is also described in the following statement of the Narada-pancaratra, Jitanta-stotra:

"I offer my respectful obeisances to the Supreme Personality of godhead. He is the original creator of everything. Although He has no material qualities, He is fully endowed with all six transcendental opulences."

3 The transcendental qualities of the Lord are also described in the following statement of the brahma-tarka:

"The Personality of Godhead possesses all transcendental qualities. The qualities of the Supreme Lord and the liberated living entities are the same. In quality they are one."

4 The spiritual qualities of the Lord are also described in the following verses of the Kalika Purana, where goddess Durga prays to Lord Vishnu:

"O Personality of Godhead, even Brahma, the demigods, sages, and ascetics cannot understand Your transcendental forms. How is it possible, then, for an insignificant person like myself to describe You? O Lord, You are nirguna, without any material qualities. Even the demigods, headed by Maharaja Indra, and the demons cannot understand Your transcendental qualities. How is it possible, then, for me, who am only a woman, to understand them?"

This verse was recounted by Shri Hamsadeva to Sanaka and the Kumaras.

Anuccheda 27

1 In the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.16.29), the earthly deity confirms the statement of Hamsa-avatara (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.13.40 quoted in Anuccheda 26, text 1) and, after listing some of the Supreme Lord's transcendental qualities, (such as cleanliness and truthfulness) affirms that all these qualities are eternally present in the Lord, and He is never separated from them. She says:

"Many transcendental qualities are eternally present in the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and are never to be separated from Him."*

2 Shridhara Svami explains in his commentary:

"In this verse the word 'ete' refers to the 40 qualities of the Lord listed here. The words 'anye ca' refer to innumerable other great qualities of Lord not included in this list. Among such qualities are the Supreme Lord's mercy to the Brahmanas and His protection of the surrendered souls. The word 'nityah' means that the Lord's qualities are all eternal and they are naturally His property. They are not artificially imposed from without. The words 'na viyanti' mean that the Lord's qualities never deteriorate and the Lord is never bereft of them."

3 That the transcendental qualities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are beyond the influence of material time is confirmed by the following statement of Vishnu Purana (4.1.27):

"Time, which is composed of seconds, minutes, hours, years and so forth, is not able to change the eternal qualities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

Anuccheda 28

1 That the qualities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are completely spiritual and not at all material is also confirmed in the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.28.7) where Varunadeva says to Shri Krishna:

"O Lord, O Supreme Personality of Godhead, Supreme Brahman and Supersoul of everything, let me offer my respectful obeisances unto You. You are the supreme transcendental personality; there is no possibility of imposing the influence of material nature upon You."*

2 In this verse the word 'yatra' refers to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is manifest as Brahman, Paramatma and Bhagavan. He is never under the influence of the external material energy (maya na srutyate). Maya's jurisdiction is limited to the creation, maintenance, and annihilation of the various material universes. The Supreme Personality of Godhead is spiritual and beyond the limited material universes. Therefore He is not within maya's jurisdiction, and He is not controlled by her.

3 As he was asking Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami about the geography of the earth planet, Maharaja Pariksit spoke the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 5.16.3), confirming that the Personality of Godhead is beyond the reach of the material energy and the three modes of nature:

"When the mind is fixed upon the Supreme Personality of Godhead in His external feature made of the material modes of nature - the gross universal form - it is brought to the platform of pure goodness. In that transcendental position, one can understand the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Vasudeva, who in his subtler form is self-effulgent and beyond the modes of nature."*

Anuccheda 29

1 That the material energy is ashamed even to approach the Personality of Godhead is described in the following verses of Shrimad Bhagavatam (2.5.12-13) where Lord Brahma says to Narada:

"I offer my obeisances and meditate upon Lord Krishna (Vasudeva), the Personality of Godhead, whose invincible potency influences them (the less intelligent class of men) to call me the supreme controller.*

2 "The illusory energy of the Lord cannot take precedence, being ashamed of her position, but those who are bewildered by her always talk nonsense, being absorbed in thoughts of 'It is I' and 'It is mine'."

3 In this verse Brahma explains that because the material energy, maya, is composed of the three modes of ignorance, passion and goodness, she is contaminated and full of faults. The Personality of Godhead, because He is spiritual, and possesses eternity, knowledge and bliss to the highest degree, is completely flawless. The contaminated material energy is therefore embarrassed to come within the energy is therefore embarrassed to come within the vision of the supremely pure Personality of Godhead. This verse explains that the material energy maya bewilders (vimohitah) Lord Brahma and all other conditioned souls.

Anuccheda 30

1 Having demonstrated that the transcendental form of the Personality of godhead is full of the six opulences of wealth, strength, fame, beauty, knowledge, and renunciation, and many other powers and opulence also, we will now establish that the form of the Lord is perfect and complete in all respects. First we will show that because the Personality of Godhead is the supreme ruler of the spiritual planets known as Vaikunthaloka, therefore His spiritual form is eternal, and will never cease to exist. This is confirmed by the following three verses of Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.3.25-27). when Lord Krishna descended to this material world, Devaki-devi prayed to Him (10.3.25):

2 "After millions of years, at the time of cosmic annihilation, when everything, manifested and unmanifested, is annihilated by the force of time, the five gross elements enter into the subtle conception, and the manifested categories enter into the unmanifested substance. At that time, You alone remain, and You are known as Ananta-Sesa-naga."*

3 In the next verse (10.3.26) Devaki explained why the Lord is known by the name 'sesa':

"O inaugurator of the material energy, this wonderful creation works under the control of powerful time, which is divided into seconds, minutes, hours and years. This element of time, which extends for many millions of years, is but another form of Lord Vishnu. For Your pastimes, You act as the controller of time, but You are the reservoir of all good fortune. Let me offer my full surrender unto Your Lordship."*

4 In this verse the word 'avyakta-bandho' means 'O inaugurator of the material energy', and 'cestam' means 'time', which is divided into seconds, minutes, hours, and years'. That the Personality of Godhead is the original creator of time is confirmed in the following statement of the Maha-Narayana Upanisad (1.8):

"Time is born from the splendid Personality of Godhead."*

In other words, time, which is the cause of the creation and destruction of the material universes, is simply one of the limbs of the Personality of Godhead. Although the Personality of Godhead is the origin of the destructive time-factor, still, He is also supremely auspicious, as Devaki-devi has said: 'ksema-dhama' (O Lord, You are the reservoir of all good-fortune). By His own wish the Supreme Lord appeared in this material world and frightened the demon Kamsa (by His time-potency), what to speak of giving protection to the devoted Devaki (ksema-dhama). These two activities are clearly described in the next verse of Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.3.27) where Devaki says:

5 "No one in this material world has become free from the four principles of birth, death, old age, and disease, even by fleeing to various planets. But now that You have appeared, My Lord, death is fleeing in fear of You, and the living entities, having obtained shelter at Your lotus feet by Your mercy, are sleeping in full mental peace.”*

6 In this verse Devaki-devi contrasts the various material planets with the lotus feet of the Shri Krishna. By fleeing to various material planets (lokan prapya), one cannot become free from fear (nirbhayam). On the other hand, by taking shelter of Lord Krishna’s lotus feet (tvat-padabjam prapya), one becomes free from the fears of material existence. We may note in this connection that by saying ‘tvat-padabjam’ (Your lotus feet), Devaki-devi clearly refers not only to the Lord’s lotus feet but to His complete transcendental form also.

In this verse Devaki says that death flees in fear of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is also confirmed in the Vishnu-sahasra-nama prayers, which describe the Supreme Lord as ‘amṛta-vapuh’ (He whose form is eternal). Even Sankaracarya confirms this in His commentary on this word of the Vishnu-sahasra-nama, by saying:

“The word ‘amṛta-vapuh’ means ‘He whose form is free from death’.”

7 In this verse the word ‘adya’ may be interpreted to mean: “O Lord who does not take birth in this material world, although You are the original father of all the living entities who do take birth here.” That the Supreme Personality of Godhead does not take birth in the material world as an ordinary conditioned soul but appears here in His original transcendental form by His own wish, is confirmed by the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.3.8) where the Lord’s ‘birth’ as Devaki’s son is described in the following words comparing the Lord’s ‘birth’ to the rising of the moon:

“Then the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Vishnu, who is situated in the core of everyone’s heart, appeared from the heart of Devaki in the dense darkness of night, like the full moon rising on the eastern horizon.”*

8 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead never takes birth is also described in the following statement of Maha Upanisad:

“Lord Hari is the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and He is full of all transcendental bliss. He is never born and He never dies. He causes Brahma to create the material universe and Siva to destroy it.”

The verses quoted in the beginning of this Anuccheda were spoken to the Supreme Personality of Godhead by Shri Devaki-devi.

Anuccheda 31

1 That the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is birthless and beginningless is also confirmed in the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (5.25.9):

“The Supreme Personality of Godhead is beginningless and unlimited. He enables the modes of material nature to act as the causes of universal creation, maintenance and destruction.”*

2 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead is never affected by birth, death, or any other material transformation is explained in the following verse from Shrimad Bhagavatam (5.17.19) where Lord Siva describes the Personality of Godhead Lord Sankarsana in the following words:

“We cannot control the force of our anger. Therefore when we look at material things, we cannot avoid feeling attraction or repulsion for them. But the Supreme Lord is never affected in this way. Although He glances over the material world for the purpose of creating, maintaining and destroying it, He is not affected, even to the slightest degree. Therefore, one who desires to conquer the force of the senses must take shelter of the lotus feet of the Lord. Then he will be victorious.”*

3 That the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is always unaffected by the transformations caused by the material energy is confirmed by the following statements of Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami:

“My dear King, approximately 240 000 miles beneath the planet Patala lives another incarnation of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. He is the expansion of Lord Vishnu known as Lord Ananta or Lord Sankarsana. He is always in the transcendental position, but because He is worshipped by Lord Siva, the deity of tamoguna or darkness, He is sometimes called tamasi. Lord Ananta is the predominating Deity of the material mode of ignorance as well as the false ego of all conditioned souls. When a conditioned living being thinks ‘I am the enjoyer, and this world is meant to be enjoyed by me’, this conception of life is dictated to him by Sankarsana. Thus the mundane conditioned soul thinks himself the Supreme Lord.”*

Shrimad Bhagavatam 5.25.1

“In Ilavṛta-varṣa, Lord Siva is always encircled by ten billion maidservants of goddess Durga, who minister to him. The quadruple expansion of the Supreme Lord is composed by Vasudeva,, Pradyumna, Anirrudha and Sankarsana. Sankarsana, the fourth expansion, is certainly transcendental, but because his activities of destruction in the material world are in the mode of ignorance, He is known as tamasi, the Lord's form in the mode of ignorance. Lord Siva knows that Sankarsana is the original cause of his own existence, and thus he always meditates upon Him in trance by chanting the following mantra."*

Shrimad Bhagavatam 5.17.16

4 That all the forms of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are transcendental to the inferior material energy is also confirmed by the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (5.25.10) where Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami says:

"This manifestation of subtle and gross matter exists within the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Out of causeless mercy toward His devotees, He exhibits various forms, which are all transcendental. The Supreme Lord is most liberal, and He possesses all mystic power. To conquer the minds of His devotees and give pleasure to their hearts, He appears in different incarnations and manifests many pastimes."*

5 That all the forms of the Personality of Godhead are eternal is also confirmed by the following prayer from the Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda:

"I offer my respectful obeisances to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who appears as the Universal Form. All the forms of the Lord are birthless, deathless and unlimited."

6 Here someone may protest that there are statements in the Skanda Purana and other Vedic literatures that describe the Supreme Lord's form as temporary and material. Such statements are deliberately inserted in some scriptures in order to hide the Lord's glories from the eyes of the atheists, and the Puranas containing such faulty information are clearly known as Puranas in the mode of ignorance. Even the Shrimad Bhagavatam contains some few statements that are not to be accepted by the devotees as the Bhagavatam itself declares (10.77.30):

We will specifically establish this point later on in the Shri Krishna-sandarbha.

7 My only opinion is that the Lord's forms are certainly eternal and transcendental and this view is confirmed by the statements of Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.16.27 (where the earth deity explains that the Supreme Lord's qualities, such as beauty, endurance, energy, and strength are all eternal), 10.3.25 and 5.25.9 which have been quoted in the previous texts.

The verse quoted in the beginning of this Anuccheda was spoken by Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 32

1 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead is all-pervading is confirmed by the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.9.13-14):

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead has no beginning and no end, no exterior and no interior, no front and no rear. In other words, He is all-pervading. Because He is not under the influence of the element of time, for Him there is no difference between past, present and future; He exists in His own transcendental form at all times. Being Absolute, beyond relativity, He is free from distinction between cause and effect, although He is the cause and effect of everything. That unmanifested person, who is beyond the perception of the senses, had now appeared as a human child, and mother Yasoda, considering Him her own ordinary child, bound Him to the wooden mortar with a rope."*

2 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments on this verse in the following words:

"If an object has limits of beginning and end, it may be bound with a rope, but if an object has no limits, then it cannot be surrounded by anything, or bound with any rope. In this verse Shrimad Bhagavatam confirms that Shri Krishna is all-pervading and without limits (na cantah). Indeed, He is everything (jagac ca yah). Still, 'the unmanifested Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is beyond the perception of the senses (adhoksajam) had now appeared as a human child (martya-lingam) and Mother Yasoda considering (matva) Him (tam) her own ordinary child (atmajam) bound (babandha) Him to the wooden mortar with a rope.'"

3 The phrase 'jagac ca yah' (He is everything in creation in total) may be understood in the following way: The Supreme Personality of Godhead is not different from either the cause of creation, or the cosmic manifestation that is the effect of that cause. In other words, because the entire material universe is nothing but the potency of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, He is not different from it. Because an ordinary material rope is simply a fragmental part of one of His energies, such a rope has no power to bind Him, any more than a small flame has the power to burn up a large fire.

4 At this point someone may raise the following objection: "If the Supreme Personality of Godhead is all-pervading, then how is it possible that Yasoda-devi tied Him with a small rope that could not even have extend the breadth of the material universe?" This objection is answered in this verse by the words 'martya-lingam' (in order to perform His pastimes, the Supreme Personality of Godhead appeared like an ordinary human child). In order to act like an ordinary human being, the Supreme Lord allowed Himself to be bound by Mother Yasoda's rope.

5 At this point someone may raise the following question: 'If the Supreme Personality of Godhead has a human-like form, than that form is certainly manifested within a limited area of space. How can such a limited form be all-pervading?'

This question is answered by the use of the word 'adhoksajam' (beyond the perception of the senses). The form of the Personality of Godhead cannot be properly understood by the senses of the conditioned soul, nor can it be understood by any other process for acquiring knowledge available to the conditioned souls. Because He is thus inconceivable, although He may appear to be limited within time and space, in actual fact He is all-pervading. Because He is not properly understood by ordinary living entities, He is therefore described in this verse as 'avyaktam' (unmanifested).

6 At this point someone may ask: "If the Supreme Personality of Godhead is all-pervading, even though His form appeared like that of an ordinary human being, then why did He not reveal His all-pervading nature to His mother, Yasoda-devi?"

This question is answered by the words 'atmajam-matva' (Mother Yasoda considered Krishna her own ordinary child). The relationship between Shri Krishna and Yasoda-devi was that of son and mother. In order not to disrupt the blissful exchange of love between Himself and His mother, Lord Krishna concealed His all-pervasiveness and His other opulences from her eyes. Mother Yasoda's ignorance of the super human prowess of her son was actually her great glory, for in order to keep the loving parent-child relationship with her, He allowed Himself to be bound by a few small ropes. The exalted position of Mother Yasoda is described in the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.9.20):

"Neither Lord Brahma, nor Lord Siva, nor even the goddess of fortune, who is always the better half of the Supreme Lord, can obtain from the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the deliverer from this material world, such mercy as received by mother Yasoda."*

7 Some may say that the phrase 'adhoksajam prakrtam yatha' means that the Personality of Godhead, who is all-pervading, accepted the illusory form of a human being through the agency of His maha-maya potency. Such a conception is completely false. They who think that the Supreme Lord, who cannot be touched by the material potency maya, can be understood by the infantile logic of the conditioned souls, are great fools. They are just like the gullible audience that believes in the existence of the magician's creation of a blazing fire in the middle of the ocean. They do not understand the nature of the Supreme. That the Supreme Personality of Godhead is difficult to understand is confirmed by the following statement of Sruti-sastra:

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is all-powerful. He alone created all the demigods. Who can understand how He appears in this world?"

8 In this verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.9.13-14), the relative and co-relative pronouns 'yat' and 'tat' both refer to Shri Krishna. For this reason it should be understood that the form of Shri Krishna is simultaneously limited within space, (because He has a clearly defined form with hands, feet, and other limbs) and also all-pervading. These apparently contradictory qualities of the Lord may be accepted because He is the reservoir of hundreds of mutually contradictory potencies, and therefore any otherwise impossible thing may easily be done by Him. That mutually contradictory actions may performed by a single cause may be seen even in the material sphere where there are some medicines that create many different effects on the body, some of them contradicting other effects caused by the same medicine.

9 That Shri Krishna is simultaneously limited within space and also all-pervading is possible because He is the master of all inconceivable potencies which cannot be grasped by the tiny brains of the conditioned souls, is confirmed by the following statement of Brahma-samhita (5.34):

"I worship Govinda, the primeval Lord, only the tip of the toe of whose lotus feet is approached by the yogis who aspire after the transcendental and betake themselves to pranayama by drilling the respiration; or by the jnanis who try to find out the non differentiated Brahman by the process of elimination of the mundane, extending over thousands and millions of years.”

10 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead possesses mutually contradictory qualities, including the ability to be simultaneously limited in space and all-pervading, is confirmed in the following statement of the Sruti-sastra as quoted in the commentaries of Shripada Madhvacarya:

“Lord Hari is neither large, small, or of a middle-size. He is simultaneously all-pervading and not all-pervading. He has and does not have a beginning. He is and is not the material universe. He has qualities and He does not have qualities.”

11 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead possesses mutually contradictory qualities is also described in the following statement of the Nrsimha-tapani Upanisad (2.6.1):

“The Supreme Personality of Godhead exists outside the material sphere, but then again He exists within the material sphere. He is the self, but then again He is not the self. He is ferocious and He is also not ferocious. He is powerful and also powerless. He is great, and He is also not great. He is all-pervading, and not all-pervading. He is very splendid and He is not splendid at all. His faces are manifest everywhere, and again His faces are not manifest everywhere.”

12 This is also confirmed by the following statement of the Brahma Purana:

“The Supreme Godhead has a form neither large nor small. He is not the material universe, but then again He is the material universe. He possesses innumerable qualities and opulences, many of which contradict each other. Because He is full of all opulences, He is known as the Supreme Person.”

13 This is also confirmed by the following statement of the Vishnu-dharma Purana:

“I offer my respectful obeisances to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is simultaneously the greatest and the smallest. He is one thousandth the size of an atom, and at the same time He is so large that all the material universes barely occupy a millionth part of the size of His abdomen.”

14 The Supreme Personality of Godhead describes His own self-contradictory powers and opulences in the following verses of Bhagavad-gita (9.4-5):

“By Me in My unmanifested form, this entire universe is pervaded. All beings are in Me, but I am not in them. And yet everything that is created does not rest in Me, behold My mystic opulence!”*

We may note that the word ‘avyakta-murtina’ used in this verse may mean ‘by My form, which is beyond the comprehension of the limited material intelligence.’

Anuccheda 33

1 In the next section of this book (Anucchedas 31-39) we will quote various statements of the demigod Brahma that confirm the statement that the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is simultaneously limited within space, and yet all-pervading. In the first quotation (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.11) Brahma says:

“Where am I, a small creature of seven spans of the measure of my own hand? I am enclosed in the universe composed of material nature, the total material energy, false ego, ether, air, water and earth. And what is Your glory? Unlimited universes pass through the pores of Your body just like particles of dust passing through the opening of a window.”*

2 In the next verse Brahma explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.12):

“O Adhoksaja, if a child within the womb plays with his legs, and while playing touches the body of the mother, is the mother offended with the child? Of course she isn’t. Similarly, I may be a very great personality within this universe, and yet not only myself but everything that be is existing within You. Therefore You are considered to be the mother and everything existing within Your womb is considered to be a child. And a good mother is never offended with the child, even if he touches her body by kicking his legs.”*

3 In the next verse (10.14.13) Brahma explains that it is well known that Brahma himself has taken birth from the Supreme Personality of Godhead:

“At the end of the universe, when the three planetary systems are merged into the ocean of devastation, Your plenary portion Narayana lies down on the waters of that ocean, and from His navel a lotus stem grows. The Puranas describe that Brahma, the unborn, appears from that lotus stem. O Supreme Controller, indeed, am I not born from You?”*

4 Considering that Lord Krishna might say "If I were Lord Narayana, who lies down on the waters of devastation, then you might say that you have taken birth from Me. The actual truth, however, is something else. I am not Narayana", Brahma spoke the next verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.14):

"O Lord of lords, You are the seer of all creation. You are indeed everyone's dearest life. Are You not therefore, my father, Narayana? Narayana refers to one whose abode is in the water born from Nara (Garbhodakasayi Vishnu) and that Narayana is Your plenary portion. All Your plenary portions are transcendental. They are absolute and are not creations of maya."*

5 In this verse the word 'adhisa' means 'O Supreme Personality of Godhead, who are situated above the form of Lord Narayana, who resides in the hearts of all conditioned souls,' 'hi' means 'certainly', 'narayanas tvam na' means 'Are You not Narayana?', and 'naravano nigam' means 'Lord Narayana is Your plenary portion'. Brahma says in this verse 'O Lord, because I have taken birth from Your plenary portion, therefore it may be considered that I have taken birth from You.'

6 Brahma thought Shri Krishna might say; 'How is it that You say I am Lord Narayana? Certainly there is a great difference between Lord Narayana and Me. In order to answer this question, Brahma said the words 'dehinam atma' (You are Lord Narayana, the all-pervading Supersoul present in the hearts of all conditioned souls).

The word Narayana may be interpreted to mean 'He who is the refuge (ayana) of all living entities (nara). Narayana is the Supersoul who resides in the hearts of all conditioned souls, but Shri Krishna is the Original form of the Personality of Godhead, situated above Narayana, and taking no part in Narayana's activities as the Supersoul.

7 Lord Brahma continued His explanation by using the word 'akhila-loka-saksi' (Lord Narayana is the seer of all creation). If the word 'nara' is taken to mean 'all living entities' and the word 'ayana' is taken to mean 'understanding', the word 'narayana' may be understood to mean 'He who knows everything about all living entities.' In this way the word 'akhila-loka-saksi' refers to Lord Narayana. Lord Krishna does not directly take part in the activities of witnessing the actions of the conditioned souls, but He does this activity through His plenary expansion of the Supersoul Narayana. In this way, also, Lord Krishna is different from Narayana.

8 Brahma thought that Shri Krishna might raise the following objection: 'My dear Brahma, your statement 'narayanas tvam na' certainly means that I am not Narayana. If one were to interpret this phrase to mean that I am Lord Narayana, then this interpretation would make no senses. How is it possible that I am Lord Narayana?'

In order to answer this possible objection, Brahma addressed Krishna using the word 'adhisa', 'Isa' means 'the controller', and that word clearly refers to Lord Narayana, the controller of all living entities. The word 'adhisa' however, means 'the controller of the controller'. In other words, by addressing Shri Krishna as 'adhisa', Brahma explained that Krishna is the controller of Lord Narayana, just as the king of a country is the controller of many aristocrats. That Shri Krishna is the Original Personality of Godhead, superior to Lord Narayana and the other forms of the Lord will be explained at a later time, according to the methodical arrangement of these six sandarbhas, in the book known as Shri Krishna-sandarbha.

9 At this point someone may object: The proper understanding of the name Narayana is found in the following statement of Vedic literature:

"They who are wise know that the word 'nara' means 'the various material elements manifested from the purusa-avatara (nara). 'Ayana' means 'resting place', and therefore the word 'narayana' means 'He who is the resting place within which the various material elements are contained.'"

10 Our objector may also quote the following verse from Vishnu Purana (1.4.6) to support his interpretation of the name Narayana:

"The water (Garbhodaka ocean) produced from the purusa-avatara is known as 'nara'. 'Ayana' means 'resting place', and therefore the name 'narayana' means 'He who rests on the Garbhodaka ocean.'"

11 Thinking Shri Krishna might interpret the word 'narayana' to mean 'He who lies down on the Garbhodaka Ocean', Brahma said: 'nara-bhu-jalayanat tac capi satyam na tavaiva maya' (The word 'Narayana' does not mean 'He who lies down on the Pralaya ocean'. This interpretation of the word 'Narayana' is created by Your illusory potency, maya)."

Here we may quote the Visva-prakasa Dictionary's definition of the word 'maya':

"The word 'maya' may be taken to mean 'trickery' or 'mercy'.

The meaning of Brahma's statement should be understood in the following way: "O lord, because of Your inconceivable potency, Your form is simultaneously limited in space and also all-pervading. Therefore any conception of You that limits You to the form of Narayana who lies down on the Pralaya ocean is certainly an illusion."

In these four verses Brahma says: 'O Lord, myself, this entire universe, and all other universes also, all rest in Narayana. The form of Narayana, however, rest within You.'

Therefore the proper definition of the word 'Narayana' is 'He who is all-pervading.'

12 The proper interpretation of the word Narayana is given in the following mantra of the Maha-Narayana Upanisad (2.6):

"Lord Narayana is all-pervading. He is present within and without everything that has ever been seen or heard in all the material universes."

Anuccheda 34

1 Brahma cites his own direct experience to prove that Shri Krishna's transcendental form is not limited by the Garbhodaka Ocean or any other boundary placed within this material world. He says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.15):

"The gigantic universal body, which is still resting on the water known as Garbhodaka, is another manifestation of Your energy. On account of His resting on the water, this universal form is also Narayana, and we are all within the womb of this Narayana form. I see Your different Narayana forms everywhere. I can see You on the water, I can feel You within my heart, and I can also see You before me now. You are the original Narayana."*

2 In this verse Brahma said: "The form of Narayana, who rests on the Garbhodaka Ocean, is not eternally manifest there. O Lord who is the master of all inconceivable opulences (bhagavan), if this form eternally remains on the Garbhodaka Ocean, then why did I not see it when I climbed down the stem of the lotus flower?

"If one were to say that the form of Naryana is an illusion created by the maya-potency (which is described in the Trikanda-sesa Dictionary as 'the energy by which Sambara and others created many illusory things that did not actually exist) then why was it that I was able to see the form of Narayana, which is eternal, full of knowledge and bliss, when I meditated upon Him and was able to see Him in my heart, although after the yogic meditation was ended I was no longer able to see Him?"

From this we may understand that the transcendental form of the Lord is certainly real and eternal, but the conception that the Lord's existence is limited by any specific form, and therefore He is not all-pervading, is not a true conception.

Anuccheda 35

1 The account of Brahma's failure to see Narayana by climbing down the lotus stem, and His ultimately seeing Him in the trance of meditation is recounted in the Third Canto of Shrimad Bhagavatam and the reader is referred to that for the details of the story. In this verse the words 'tac cej jala-stham tava saj jagad vapuh' inform us that the form of Lord Narayana is real, eternal, and transcendental, and because the material universe is expanded from that Supreme Reality of Lord Narayana, it is also real. The material universe is situated within the form of the Lord Narayana, as was directly perceived by Mother Yasoda. This is explained by Brahma in the next verse (10.14.16):

2 "My dear Lord, in this incarnation You have proved that You are the supreme controller of maya. You remain within the cosmic manifestation, and yet the whole creation is within You. This fact has already been proved by You when You exhibited the whole universal creation within Your mouth before Your mother Yasoda. By Your inconceivable potency of yogamaya, You can make such things effective without external help."*

3 In this verse Brahma says: "My dear Lord, in this incarnation You have proved that You are the supreme controller of maya (mayadhamanavatare). You remain within the cosmic manifestation, and yet the whole creation is within You" (prapancasya bahih sphutasya krtsnasya cantar jathare). Because Lord Krishna is both within and without the cosmic manifestation, we may understand that He is not limited by the boundaries of matter, and when He appears to occupy a limited position in relation to time and space, that appearance of limitation is simply an illusion. Although Lord Krishna appears to be situated within the cosmic manifestation, the cosmic manifestation is also within Him, for it has emanated from Him. Brahma says in this verse: "O Lord, By Your inconceivable potency of yogamaya, You are now all-pervading within the cosmic manifestation, although originally the cosmos is within You." Brahma gives an example to demonstrate that the cosmos actually exists within Lord Krishna by saying: 'This fact has already been proved by You when You exhibited the whole universal creation within Your mouth before Mother Yasoda.'

Anuccheda 36

1 In this verse the word 'mayadhamana' means 'O supreme controller of maya'. Brahma said: 'O Lord, by Your mercy You revealed that the entire cosmic manifestation is situated within You.' In order to establish the truth of this statement, as well as to refute any contrary argument, Brahma spoke the next verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.17):

2 "My dear Lord Krishna, the whole cosmic manifestation that we are visualising at present is all within Your body. Yet I am seeing You outside, and You are also seeing me outside. How can such things happen without being influenced by Your inconceivable energy?"*

3 When the words of this verse are placed in their prose order they read 'yasya kuksau sarvam idam satman yatha bhati tat sarvam iha (bahir api tathaiva) tvayi bhati'.

The meaning of this verse is that just as Shri Krishna is situated within Vrajabhumi, in the same way (because Shri Krishna is all-pervading) Vrajabhumi is situated within Him. In this way the statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.16, that Shri Krishna is within the cosmic manifestation, and the cosmic manifestation is also within Him, is confirmed. When Mother Yasoda saw Shri Krishna before her with the entire cosmos within His mouth, she was able to directly perceive these two truths about Krishna. At that time she tried to understand what she had just seen and she said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.8.40):

"Is this a dream, or is it an illusory creation by the external energy? Has this been manifested by my own intelligence, or is it some mystic power of my child?"*

Brahma explains in this connection: "O Lord, although by the power of Your inconceivable potency You appear to occupy a limited space within the land of Vraja, You are nevertheless all-pervading. You directly showed these two truths about Yourself to Your mother, Yasoda."

4 The statement of this verse (10.14.17) is also confirmed by the following explanation of Shrimad Bhagavatam (2.7.30):

"When the cowherd woman (Krishna's foster mother, Yasoda) was trying to tie the hands of her son with ropes, she found the rope to be always insufficient in length, and when she finally gave up, Lord Krishna, by and by, opened His mouth, wherein the mother found all the universes situated. Seeing this, she was doubtful in her mind, but she was convinced in a different manner of the mystic nature of her son."*

This is confirmed by the words '(tava) kuksau sarvam idam yatha bhati iha' (My dear Lord Krishna, the whole cosmic manifestation that we are visualising at present is all within Your body). Although the cosmic manifestation is situated within You, You are still all-pervading within it. The Bhagavatam says: 'tvayi tat sarvam bhati' (Everything is present within You).

1 Brahma intended to say: "O all-pervading Lord, without being influenced by Your maya-potency, which conceals the actual truth about You, how is it possible to believe that You are limited by the boundaries of material time and space? It is not possible. This I have directly seen." Brahma said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.18):

2 "My dear Lord, leaving aside all other things and just considering today's happenings - what I have seen - are they not all due to Your inconceivable energies? First of all I saw You alone; thereafter You expanded Yourself as Your friends, this calves and all existence of Vrndavana; then I saw You and all the boys as four-handed Vishnus, and They were being worshipped by all elements and demigods, including myself. Again They were all wound up, and You remained alone as You were before. Does this not mean that You are the Supreme Lord Narayana, the origin of everything, and from You everything emanates, and again everything enters unto You, and You remain the same as before?"*

3 In this verse Brahma says: 'Just today (adyaiva) was it not revealed to me (mama) that this universe (asya), which is filled with bewildered conditioned souls and is a product of Your maya potency (mayatvam), has emanated from Your humanlike form (tvad rte)? This has certainly been revealed to me.”

4 At this point Lord Krishna might raise the following question: “What is the nature of My form?” In order to answer this question Brahma says: ‘eko si’ (You are alone). This means ‘Now that all the cowherd boys and calves have disappeared, You have manifested Yourself as these boys and calves, and therefore these are all You (eko si). Because You are able to do this, I declare that You are in truth the non-dual Supreme Brahman (advayam brahma)’.

All material substances are born at a certain time, remain manifested for a certain period, and perish at certain time. These material changes are known as the ‘duality’ of matter. Because the Supreme Brahman is not affected by any of these changes, but is eternal and unchanging, He is known as ‘advayam’. The Supreme Brahma is by nature all-pervading. By establishing Shri Krishna as the Supreme Brahman, Brahma has proven that Shri Krishna is all-pervading.

1 At this point Shri Krishna might raise the following question: “At the beginning of universal creation, only Brahma, Vishnu, and Siva were manifest, and they are considered the original causes of everything that exists. During the time of cosmic manifestation, many incarnations also appear, and I may be considered such an incarnation, but how is it possible to say that I am the original cause of all causes? Brahma, Siva and Vishnu are the original causes.” To answer this question, Brahma says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.19):

2 “Persons who are unaware of Your inconceivable energy cannot understand that You alone expand Yourself as the creator Brahma, maintainer Vishnu, and annihilator Siva. Persons who are not in awareness of things as they are contemplate that I, Brahma, am the creator, Vishnu is the maintainer, and Lord Siva is the annihilator. Actually, You are alone everything: creator, maintainer and annihilator.”*

3 In this verse the second-person pronoun ‘tvam’ (You) is the subject of the sentence and the word ‘bhasi’ (are manifest) is the verb. The word ‘iva’ (as if) does not refer to ‘tvam’, but rather to ‘esah’ (He, Lord Vishnu). The word ‘esah’ does not refer to the transcendental form of Lord Krishna, because Lord Krishna is the Original Personality of Godhead, and not a guna-avatara, such as Lord Vishnu is. To consider Shri Krishna as guna-avatara would contradict the previous verse, where Brahma said: “O Krishna, everything emanates from You.” In this verse the word ‘tvat-padavim’ means ‘Your transcendental form’, ‘ajanatam’ means ‘to those who do not understand’, ‘atma’ means ‘You who are the origin of all incarnations of Godhead’, ‘atmana’ means ‘by Your various expansions’, ‘mayam’ means ‘the potency for creating, maintaining, and annihilating the material universes’, ‘anatmani’ means ‘in the inert, unconscious, unmanifested three modes of material nature (pradhana), which are the original cause of the mahat-tattva, and other forces that cause the creation of the material universes’, ‘vitatya’ means ‘having expanded’ and ‘bhasi’ means ‘You are manifested, appearing in different forms according to these different activities of creation, maintenance, and annihilation of the material universes.’

At this point Shri Krishna might say: ‘How is it possible that I perform the activities of Brahma, Vishnu and Siva?’ In order to answer this question, Brahma says: ‘You appear as if You are me, who am engaged in the activities of universal creation (jagatah srstav aham), You appear as if You are Vishnu, who is engaged in the activities of universal maintenance (vidhane esa iva), and You also appear as if You are Siva, who is engaged in the activities of universal destruction (ante tri-netra iva). In truth, You expand Yourself in these various forms. Only they who are foolish and bewildered see these three demigods as different from You.’

4 That Shri Krishna performs the activities of creation, maintenance and destruction of the material universes is confirmed by the following verse of Shrimad Bhagavatam (2.6.32), where Lord Brahma says:

“By His will, I create, Lord Siva destroys and He Himself, in His eternal form as the Personality of Godhead, maintains everything. He is the powerful controller of these three energies.”*

From this verse we may understand that Lord Vishnu is a direct manifestation of the Personality of Godhead, and thus He is essentially non-different from the transcendental form of Shri Krishna. Vishnu is therefore, different from Brahma and Siva, who are not direct manifestations of the Personality of Godhead, but are of a different category.

Anuccheda 39

Lord Krishna expands not only as the guna-avatars, but as other incarnations as well. Brahma describes this in the next verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.20):

"Similarly, You expand Yourself in different incarnations among the demigods You incarnate as Vamanadeva, among the great sages You incarnate as Parasurama, among the human beings You appear as Yourself, as Lord Krishna, or Lord Rama, among the animals You appear as the boar incarnation, and among the aquatics You appear as the incarnation of fish. And yet You have no appearance; You are always eternal. Your appearance and disappearance are made possible by your inconceivable energy just to give protection to the faithful devotees and to annihilate the demons."*

We may note that in this verse the words 'ajanasya janma (the unborn has taken birth) indicate that Shri Krishna does not take birth, but simply appears in this world according to His own wish.

Anuccheda 40

1 At this point Shri Krishna might raise the following objection: "My dear Brahma, how is it that you have come to this conclusion? It is not possible for My form to be all-pervading. My form is composed of various material elements just like an earthen pot or other material substances seen in this world. How is it that you say My form is otherwise? How is it that you say My form is spiritual? You may have become a little bewildered seeing some wonderful opulences here, but I assure you, you perfectly understand Me. You completely know the full extent of My powers. As far as the transformation of these boys and calves into four-armed Vishnu-forms which you have just seen, it has happened somehow or other, because of the expansion of some unknown person, but I have certainly nothing to do with this magical display. Furthermore, all these forms are spiritual, full of knowledge and unlimited bliss, and all these human-like forms appeared at the same moment, and there were so many of them, that you did see all of them. How is it possible for a little cowherd boy like Me to manifest so many spiritual forms at the same time? I am not the cause of this wonderful thing." Thinking that Shri Krishna might present this argument, Brahma said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.21):

2 "O supreme great one! O Supreme Personality of Godhead! O Supersoul, master of all mystic power! Your pastimes are taking place continuously in these worlds, but who can estimate where, how and where You are employing Your spiritual energy and performing Your pastimes? No one can understand the mystery of these activities."*

3 In this verse Brahma says "O Lord, Your pastimes are taking place continuously (kati va) in these worlds (trilokyam), but who can estimate (ko vetti) where (kva), how (katham) and when (kada) You are employing Your spiritual energy (yogamayam vistarayan) and performing Your pastimes (kridasi bhavata utih)? No one can understand the mystery of these activities."

No one can completely understand Lord Krishna. This is also confirmed by the following statement of the Kena Upanisad (2.3):

"One who thinks he understands the Supreme Personality of Godhead does not actually understand Him, but one who knows that he does not actually understand the Lord is actually aware of the nature of the Supreme Person."

4 In the previous four verses Brahma has explained that Shri Krishna is by nature inconceivable. In this verse he explains why the Lord is inconceivable by addressing Him with the word 'bhuman', which means 'O Lord who appears in innumerable different forms.' This means that although the Supreme Personality of Godhead has one principal form, He also appears in innumerable other transcendental forms. This is confirmed by the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.40.7), where Akrura prays to Shri Krishna:

"I offer my obeisances to the Supreme Personality of Godhead who, although Me originally appears in a single transcendental form, has expanded into innumerable other transcendental forms."

In this connection the Sruti-sastra also says:

"Although He is one, the Supreme Personality of Godhead is seen to appear in many different transcendental forms."

5 The Supreme Personality of Godhead appears in different forms according to the way in which He is worshipped. This is confirmed by the following statement of Madhva Muni in his commentary on Vedanta-sutra 3.3.52:

"The Personality of Godhead appears in different forms according to the way in which His devotees worship Him."

The following example may be given in this regard: A silken garment may be fashioned with many different colours in an intricate design, just as a peacock feather is decorated with many colours. If one looks at a specific part of such a garment he may see a specific colour, and if one looks at another part of the garment he may see another colour. If one looks at the entire garment at once he will see the garment as a whole. In this example Shri Krishna is the entire garment, and when He is partially manifested this is known as the various incarnations of Godhead.

6 That innumerable forms of Godhead emanate from the form of Shri Krishna is also confirmed by the following statement of Narada-pancaratra:

"When the jewel known as vaidurya touches other materials, it appears to be separated into different colours. Consequently the forms also appear different. Similarly, according to the meditational ecstasy of the devotees, the Lord, who is known as Acyuta (infallible) appears in different forms, although He is essentially one."*

In this verse the jewel referred to is the vaidurya stone (lapis lazuli), and the words 'nila-pitadibhih' refer to the various transcendental attributes of the Lord. This explanation of the various forms of the Lord reveals the meaning of the word 'kva' (where?) in the previously quoted statement of Lord Brahma (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.21).

7 The Supreme Lord's expansion in the forms of the various incarnations manifested from His single original form is described in the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (8.18.12), where Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami describes the form of the Vamana-incarnation:

"The Lord appeared in His original form, with ornaments and weapons in His hands. Although this ever-existing form is not visible in the material world, He nonetheless appeared in this form. Then, in the presence of His father and mother, He assumed the form of Vamana, a brahmana-dwarf, a brahmacari, just like a theatrical actor."*

8 In this verse Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami explains that the Lord first appeared in His original form (vapuh), which is not a manifestation expanded from any other form of Godhead, but is originally existing and has no other forms as its origin. That form is spiritual (cit) and full of perfect and complete transcendental bliss, and that form is manifested (bhati) with ornaments and weapons in its hands (vibhusanayudhaih). The Lord appeared in this original form in the material world (vyaktam adharayat). After this original form was manifested, the Lord assumed the form of a brahmana-dwarf, a brahmacari (tenaiva vmano vatur babhuva harih). The word 'eva' (certainly) emphasises that this was the form the Lord assumed. He did not assume any other form at that time.

9 One may ask: "Under what circumstances did the Lord appear as the Vamana-incarnation?" The answer is given in this verse with the word 'sampasyatoh' (the Lord appeared as Vamana in the presence of His parents Kasyapa and Aditi). The question may be asked: "What is the nature of the Lord's form? The answer is given in the word 'divya-gatih' (His movements are wonderful). 'Divya' means 'supremely inconceivable', and 'gatih' means 'movements or pastimes'. The Lord's forms and pastimes are all eternal, although sometimes they may be seen by the living entities, and sometimes they cannot be seen. That the Lord's forms are eternal is confirmed by the following statement of Sruti-sastra:

"The Personality of Godhead existed in the past. He exists in the present, and He will continue to exist in the future eternally."

10 In this connection in order to give an example of how the Supreme Lord assumes the forms of His various incarnations, thus manifesting certain features of His original form, Sukadeva Gosvami says:

"The Lord assumed the form of Vamana, just like a theatrical actor."*

In this comparison of the Lord to an actor, Sukadeva Gosvami notes that the Lord is a wonderful actor (divya-gatih) and the gestures of His hands and movements of His body will fill the audience with wonder. Although when the Lord appears in His various incarnations He may seem to be an ordinary human being or demigod, in truth He never suffers the material miseries which are the everyday experiences of the conditioned souls, and He is never imperfect in any way.

11 The Personality of Godhead is supremely independent. For example, He creates the various material universes without any external help, just as a spider constructs a web from the saliva within its own body. This is described in the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.9.21):

"As a spider creates a web with saliva from within its mouth, and then, having created it, again swallows it, so does the Supreme Personality of Godhead create, and again swallow, the material worlds."

12 In the following verse from Shrimad Bhagavatam (3.9.11), Lord Brahma explains that the Personality of Godhead appears in the forms of His many different incarnations according to the different ways in which the devotees approach Him. Brahma says:

"O my Lord, Your devotees can see You through the ears by the process of bona fide hearing, and thus their hearts become cleansed, and You take Your seat there. You are so merciful to Your devotees that You manifest Yourself in the particular eternal form of transcendence in which they always think of You."*

In this verse the word 'pranayase' means 'You manifest'. We may note that by saying 'sruteksita-pathah' (the devotees learn about the Lord by hearing the bona-fide descriptions of Him in the Vedic literatures), Brahma confirms the reality of the Supreme Lord's transcendental forms. In other words, the Lord's forms are not the product of the meditator's imagination. They actually exist.

13 Some may say that the various forms of the Personality of Godhead do not delight the devotees. This false conception is refuted by the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (3.24.31), where Kardama Muni addresses the Personality of Godhead in the following words:

"My dear Lord, although You have no material form, You have Your own innumerable forms. They truly are Your transcendental forms, which are pleasing to Your devotees."*

This verse means 'Whatever (yani yani) forms (rupani) of You (te) there are, these forms (tany eva), please (rocante) Your devotees.' The word 'abhirupani' means 'the Lord only accepts forms that are suitable.' He never accepts any unsuitable form.

14 The Lord may sometimes accept forms that appear to be unsuitable. An example of this is when He assumed an apparently abominable material form before King Rantideva. That this form was abominable and material is, of course, an illusion. This form is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 9.21.15):

"Demigods like Lord Brahma and Lord Siva, who can satisfy all materially ambitious men by giving them the rewards they desire, then manifested their own identities before King Rantideva, for it was they who had presented themselves as the brahmana sudra, candala, and so on."*

15 Shridhara Svami comments on this verse: 'The word 'tribhuvanandhisah' means 'Brahma, Vishnu and Siva', and the word 'maya' means that in order to examine how patient and tolerant Maharaja Rantideva was, the Lord, with the assistance of His bewildering maya-potency, assumed the form of the brahmana, sudra and candala.'

The reason the Lord never accepts an unpleasant form is given in the word 'arupinah', which means 'He who never accepts a material form.'

Shridhara Svami comments: "Because the Lord never accepts an abominable form, His forms are never material."

16 Returning now to the verse originally under discussion (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.21, quoted in text 2) we may note the three phrases 'katham va' (how?), 'kati va' (how many?) and 'kada va' (when?), and we may also note the three words in the vocative case (bhagavan, paramatman, and yogesvara), used to address the Lord. Each of these three phrases is related to one of the three vocative addresses, as we shall now explain.

The word 'katham va' (how You are performing Your pastimes)' is used with the word 'bhagavan' which should be interpreted to mean "O Master of all inconceivable potencies." The Lord's form is full of all inconceivable potencies, and any other interpretation that contradicts this should not be accepted.

17 The word 'kati va' (how many times You incarnate and perform pastimes) is used with the word 'paratman', which may be explained to mean: 'O Lord, because You are unlimited You possess all opulences and are the origin of innumerable incarnations of Godhead, who each possess limitless potencies. O Lord, You cannot be understood by the limited material mind or adequately described by the limited material power of speech. For this reason it is said: 'No one can understand how many times You incarnate in this world and perform pastimes (kati va).'

18 The phrase 'kada' (when You appear and perform pastimes) is used with the word 'yogesvara' (O master of all mystic power). This word means 'O Lord, You are the master of the yogamaya potency, by whose assistance You appear in many different forms. O Lord, all these transcendental forms of Your Lordship are contained within Your single most important form. When You wish, You appear in one of these forms, which are manifested according to the different ways in which the devotees worship You.” From this we may understand that the forms of all incarnations of Godhead are contained in the form of Shri Krishna, the Original Form of the Lord.

Anuccheda 41

1 In the next verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.22) Lord Brahma concludes that Shri Krishna is the Original Form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead:

“My dear Lord, this whole cosmic manifestation is just like a flashing dream, and its temporary existence simply disturbs the mind. As a result, we are full of anxiety in this existence; to live within this material world means simply to suffer and to be full of miseries. And yet this temporary existence of the material world appears to be pleasing and dear on account of its having evolved from Your body, which is eternal and full of bliss and knowledge. My conclusion is, therefore, that You are the Supreme Soul, Absolute Truth, and the supreme original person; and although You have expanded Yourself in so many Vishnu forms, or in living entities and energies, by Your inconceivable transcendental potencies, You are the supreme one without a second, You are the supreme Supersoul.”*

2 In this verse Brahma says: ‘O Lord, You are the origin of everything that is material and everything that is spiritual. Because You are the origin of everything, Your own form is eternal, and full of knowledge and bliss. From Your unlimited form, all the material universes have become manifested.’

3 One may ask: “What is the nature of this transcendental form of the Lord?” The answer is given in the words: ‘udayad api yat sad ivavabhati’ (O Lord, the material cosmic manifestation is continually being manifested from Your body, and then again enters within it. In this way the material universe is in a state of constant flux).”

4 At this point Shri Krishna might say: “If I am the source of the constantly changing material nature, then why is it that You say that I am unchanging. I should also be constantly changing if I am the source of all this change.” In answer to this, Brahma uses the word ‘mayatah’. Brahma says:

“O Lord, You are eternal, and unchanging. This changing material universe is manifested by the aid of Your inconceivable potency known as maya. You are Yourself aloof from the changes of matter, and Your contact with matter, is only by the means of Your maya potency. Therefore You do not change.”

That the Personality of Godhead is unchanging is also confirmed by the Vedanta-sutra 2.1.27:

“The Supreme Personality of Godhead is free from all faults. This is so because it is declared in the Vedas, the source of revealed knowledge.”

Therefore the Supreme Lord never changes.

5 Brahma continues to differentiate Shri Krishna from the changing material manifestation. He says:

“O Lord, this whole cosmic manifestation is just like a flashing dream. You, however, are reality. You are not another illusory manifestation like this material cosmos.”

That dreams are an unreal state of existence is described in Vedanta-sutra (2.2.29):

“Reality is different from the existence perceived in dreams.”

6 Brahma continues to describe the dreamlike state of material illusion by saying ‘asta-dhisanam’ (by depriving the conditioned souls of knowledge about the Supersoul, the maya potency places them in great mental anxiety).

7 For these reasons, although it may sometimes appear to be a place of happiness, the material world is a place of intense suffering (puru-duhkha-duhkham). Furthermore, Brahma says the material world is devoid of spiritual reality (asat-svarupam). Just as the horns of a rabbit have no real existence, in the same way the illusory conceptions of material existence have no reality. Brahma also explains that although the material world is temporary and changing, it appears to be eternal (sad iva) according to the mistaken conceptions of the bewildered conditioned souls. The implication of this verse is that because the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the origin of the awareness of material existence, He is also the origin of real transcendental knowledge, and thus the supreme teacher of everyone. Another implication of this verse is that because the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the origin of the material heavenly planets, He is the reservoir of all pleasure.

8 This concludes the explanation of how the form of Shri Krishna is simultaneously all-pervading and, by the agency of His internal potency, limited within a certain space.

1 In this way we have demonstrated that although the form of Shri Krishna may be situated within the cosmic manifestation, nevertheless, it is the resting place within which everything that exists is situated, and because it is the resting-place of everything, therefore, it is also all-pervading. Because Shri Krishna is by nature all-pervading, it is very easy for Him to expand into as many forms in as many places as He likes. An example of this is described in the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.69.2):

"It is astounding that Lord Shri Krishna, who is one without a second, expanded Himself in sixteen thousand similar forms to marry sixteen thousand queens in their respective homes."*

2 In this verse the words 'citram bataitat' mean 'it is astounding'. One may ask: "What is so astounding?" In answer to this question, Narada Muni says "It is astounding that Shri Krishna, who is one without a second (ekah), married (udvahat) sixteen thousand queens (dvy-asta-sahasram)." Our questioner may answer: "What is so astounding about that?" In answer to this Narada says:

"He married them in sixteen thousand places (grhesu)."

Our unsatisfied questioner may respond: "That may be. Still, what is astounding in all this?" To this Narada may answer: "Lord Krishna did not marry them all together in one place, but He married each one of them individually (prthak)."

Our questioner may answer: "That is all right. It is not possible for one husband to marry many wives one after another. Such things have occurred before." At this point Narada says:

"But Lord Krishna married all these queens at the same moment (yugapat)."

Our question may say: "That's all right. Many perfect yogis have the mystic power to expand into many forms. My dear Narada, you yourself are a great mystic yogi, worshipped by all other yogis, and therefore You know this mystic trick yourself. What can be considered to be astounding, therefore, in Lord Krishna's expansion into many forms?" In answer to this, Narada says:

"Lord Krishna's expansion into many forms was not like the expansion of the yogis', who can make reflections of their own form appear in many different places. These reflected forms of the yogis are not the yogis themselves, however, in the case of Lord Krishna, each one of His expansions was He Himself, and He could perform all sorts of activities in these expanded forms. In other words, these expansions of the Lord were not mere reflections of the Lord, but were the Lord Himself.

Hearing this, our questioner may reply: "No. That is not possible. No one can do that."

3 That each one of these expanded forms were not a mere reflection, but actually the Lord Himself is confirmed in the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (3.3.8), where Shri Uddhava says:

"All those princesses were lodged in different apartments, and the Lord simultaneously assumed different bodily expansions exactly matching each and every princess. He accepted their hands in perfect rituals by His internal potency."*

4 In this way all objections are removed and it is clearly established that Lord Krishna can manifest His personality in any number of places at the same moment (ekena vapusa prthag yugapat). This is certainly very wonderful. This is also confirmed by Shрила Shridhara Svami, who states (in his commentary on Shrimad Bhagavatam 5.20.40, which is a prose description of the Supreme Personality of Godhead's form as the predominating Deity of the sphere known as Lokaloka):

"Because He is the master of all supreme powers and opulences, the Personality of Godhead can be personally present in His own form in all places simultaneously."

5 This expansion of Lord Krishna into many personal forms simultaneously is also described in the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.59.42):

"After defeating Indra, Krishna, the changeless Supreme Personality of Godhead arranged to marry the 16 100 girls brought from the custody of Bhaumasura. By expanding Himself in 16 100 forms, He simultaneously married them all in different palaces in one auspicious moment."*

These expansions of Lord Krishna all had bodily features that were exactly identical with Lord Krishna Himself. There was no difference, as there is in other expansion of the Lord, such as the expansion of the Lord into the form of Narayana, whose bodily features are slightly different from those of Lord Krishna. The expansion of Lord Krishna into many forms whose features are all identical with His described in the following statement of Shрила Rupa Gosvami's Shri Laghu-bhagavatamrta (1.1.21):

6 "If numerous forms, all equal in their features, are displayed simultaneously, such forms are called praksas-vigrahas of the Lord."*

Anuccheda 43

1 Lord Krishna's expansion into many forms simultaneously is also described in the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.69.41):

"Thus Narada saw one single Krishna living in sixteen thousand palaces by His plenary expansions. Due to His inconceivable energy, He was visible in each and every individual queen's palace. In this way He demonstrated the path of sanctifying ordinary household life."*

2 These expansions of the Lord were not expansions of portions of His personality, as the incarnations of Godhead generally are, but each form was Shri Krishna in full (sarva-gehesu tam eva, ekam eva santam). This multiple appearance of the original form of the Lord is described in the Sruti-sastra in the following words:

"Although the Supreme Personality of Godhead is one, He appears to have become many."

That the Lord is all-pervading is also confirmed in Shrimad-Bhagavatam (10.9.13):

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead, Shri Krishna, is all-pervading. He has neither inside nor outside, for He is everywhere."

By the arrangement of Shri Krishna's internal potency, Narada Muni was able to directly see Lord Krishna's presence in the many palaces of Dvaraka. Narada did not speculate or guess about the Lord's omnipresence. He directly saw it.

3 After seeing the many expansions of the original form of Shri Krishna, Narada Muni became astonished, as the Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.69.42) explains:

"Lord Krishna has unlimited power, and Narada Muni's astonishment was boundless upon observing again and again the demonstration of Lord Krishna's internal energy."*

4 The word 'yogamaya' used in this verse refers to the Lord's spiritual potency by which He can perform any impossible action.

In Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.15.26 in the story of the Four Kumaras' visit to Vaikunthaloka, this word is used to describe the Supreme Lord's potency. In his commentary on that verse, Shrila Shridhara Svami also confirms this explanation of the word 'yogamaya'.

5 When Narada Muni saw these expansions of the personal form of Shri Krishna He became astonished because he understood that these expansions were not like the limited expansions manifested by an ordinary mystic yogi, but each of these expansions was the original Lord Krishna, and not a mere yogic reflection.

6 The Supreme Personality of Godhead's personal presence everywhere is described by the following quotation from Vedic literature:

"The Supersoul is all-pervading. His hands and feet are everywhere.

Bhagavad-gita 13.14 and Svetasvara Upanisad 3.16

"Although the Supreme Personality of Godhead remains in His own place in the transcendental world, still He is present everywhere.

Vedanta Sutra 3.2.11 (interpreted according to the commentary of Shripada Madhvacarya)

"The Personality of Godhead appears as the omnipresent Supersoul. This form of the Supersoul is not different from the form of the Supreme Lord. They are the same person."

Sruti-sastra

"Spiritual authorities explain that the Personality of Godhead is present in the hearts of all living entities."

Sruti-sastra

7 The Supreme Lord's all-pervasiveness is also described in the Matsya Purana:

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead, Vishnu, is all-pervading. Of this there is no doubt. By His transcendental opulence He remains in His original transcendental form, and yet He appears everywhere, just as the sun which, although it remains in one place, appears to be present everywhere."

8 That the expansion of the Supersoul is not different from the Personality of Godhead Himself is confirmed in the Vedanta-sutra (3.2.12-13):

"If one says that the expansion of the Supersoul is different from the Original Personality of Godhead, he should know that statement is false. The Supersoul is the same as the Original Personality of Godhead. This is confirmed in the Sruti-sastra and all other Vedic literatures."

That the Lord is not different from His expansion as the all-pervading Supersoul is also described in the following statement of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (1.9.42), where Bhishma says:
Anuccheda 44

1 "Now I can meditate with full concentration upon that one Lord, Shri Krishna, now present before me because now I have transcended the misconceptions of duality in regard to His presence in everyone's heart, even in the hearts of the mental speculators. He is in everyone's heart. The sun may be perceived differently, but the sun is one."*

2 In this verse Bhismadeva says: "The Personality of Godhead, Shri Krishna, is now present before me (tam imam). He is present in the hearts of all conditioned souls in the form of His expansion as the all-pervading Supersoul (sarira-bhajam hr̥di hr̥di dhisthitam)". The form of the Lord as the all-pervading Supersoul is also described in Shrimad Bhagavatam (2.2.8):

"Others conceive of the Personality of Godhead residing within the body in the region of the heart and measuring only eight inches, with four hands carrying a lotus, wheel of a chariot, a conch shell and a club respectively."*

Bhishma continues: "Although these forms of the Supersoul appear to be different from the form of the original Personality of Godhead, in truth They are not at all different from Him (ekam). Now I can meditate with full concentration on that one Lord, Shri Krishna (samadhi-gato smi). I am now aware of the all-pervading blissful form of the Supreme Lord as the Supersoul."

3 Bhismadeva continue: "I have now transcended the misconceptions of duality in regard to His presence everywhere. Formerly I thought the forms of the Supersoul were different from each other and from other forms of the Supreme Lord, for I thought it impossible for the Lord to be all pervading. Now I am free of that illusion (vidhuta-bheda-mohah). The Supreme Lord is certainly present everywhere in His form as the Supersoul."

4 The Lord's all-pervasiveness is described in the following words: "Shri Krishna is present in everyone's heart, even in the hearts of the speculative philosophers (atma-kalpitanam pratidrsam). He remains within the sight of all living entities, even though they are situated in many different places."

Bhismadeva gives the example of the sun: In many different places all over the world the sun appears to be just overhead, over this tree or that wall. In reality the sun is in a single place in outer space, but still in so many places the sun seems to be just over this tree or that wall. In the same way the Supreme Personality of Godhead appears everywhere, in the hearts of all living entities, in His form of the Supersoul. The difference between the Supersoul and the sun is that the sun truly is situated in a single place far away and its omnipresence is the misunderstanding of the observers, but the Supersoul expansion of the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is, by His inconceivable potency, the Lord Himself, and thus the Lord Himself is truly present everywhere.

Bhismadeva continues: "Now I can meditate with full concentration (samadhi-gato smi) upon that one Lord, Shri Krishna, now present before me (tam imam), whom I have described in the previous prayers. The Supreme Lord is present in the hearts of all conditioned souls (sarira-bhajam hr̥di hr̥di). Although the Lord is generally all-pervading in his four-armed Supersoul form, I now see Him everywhere in His two-armed form of Shri Krishna, which is supremely powerful and is now present before me. No other form is equal to the form of Shri Krishna."

5 In this verse the word 'bheda' refers to the Supreme Lord's presence in many places. It does not refer to the Lord's perfection or imperfection. In Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.9.30-43 Bhismadeva glorified the transcendental form of the Lord. These prayers clearly do not glorify the impersonal Brahman aspect of the Supreme. In this way we have now described how the Supreme Personality of Godhead is manifested within a limited area of space, and yet is also all-pervading, present within the hearts of all moving and non-moving creatures.

Anuccheda 45

1 Thus we have proved that the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is eternal and all-pervading. This is also explained in the following verse from Shridhara Svami's commentary (8.6.8.):

"In this verse, by saying that although the Personality of Godhead is unborn, he repeatedly appears in the forms of His incarnations, Brahma clearly establishes the eternality and omnipresence of the Supreme Lord's transcendental form."

2 The eternality and all-pervasiveness of the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is described in Shrimad Bhagavatam (8.6.8-9) where Lord Brahma says:

"Although You are never born, Your appearance and disappearance as an incarnation never cease. You are always free from the material qualities, and You are the shelter of transcendental bliss resembling an ocean. Eternally existing in Your transcendental form, You are the supreme subtle of the most extremely subtle. We therefore offer our respectful obeisances unto You, the Supreme, whose existence is inconceivable.*

3 "O best of persons, O supreme director, those who actually aspire for supreme good fortune worship this form of Your Lordship according to the Vedic Tantras. My Lord, we can see all the three worlds in You."*

4 Shridhara Svami comments: "In this verse Brahma says: 'O Lord, Your appearance in this material world and Your pastimes are not like our birth and activities.' How are the Lord's appearance and activities different from those of the conditioned soul? Brahma gives the answer in the word 'agunaya' (O Lord, You are always free from the material qualities) and 'nirvana-sukharnavaya' (O Lord, You are the shelter of transcendental bliss resembling an ocean).

5 In this verse Brahma says although the Personality of Godhead is smaller than the atom (anor animne), He is also so large that no one can measure Him (paraiganya-dhama). This should not be considered impossible because, as Brahma explains, the powers and opulences of the Personality of Godhead are inconceivable (mahanubhavaya). In these words Brahma proves that the form of the Personality of Godhead is eternal and inconceivable.

6 "Brahma continues: 'O best of persons (purusarsabha), those who actually aspire for good fortune (sreyo-rthibhih) worship (ijyam) this form (rupam etat) of Your Lordship (tava) according to the Vedic Tantras (vaidika-tantrikena)'. In this way Brahma described the exalted transcendental nature of the form of the Personality of Godhead. From this we may understand that the Lord's appearance in this material world is not like the material birth of the conditioned souls.

7 "At this point someone may object: 'The demigods are also worshipable. Why is it not thought that the birth of the demigods is also transcendental and non-material like that of the Personality of Godhead?'

To this I reply: True, the demigods are worshipable. Still, they are not equal to the Personality of Godhead, for they are all situated within the universal form of the Personality of Godhead, as Brahma says: 'My Lord, we can see (pasyami) that all the three worlds (tri-lokam) and we demigods and living entities as well (nah) are all situated within Your universal form (visva-murtau). Your transcendental form, therefore, is limitless, and we are clearly Your inferiors.'"

8 In Shrimad Bhagavatam 8.6.8. Brahma metaphorically described the Personality of Godhead as 'an ocean of transcendental bliss' (nirvana-sukharnavaya). In this way Brahma explained that the bliss of realising the personal form of God is superior to the happiness of realising His impersonal aspect (nirvana). This is also described by Dhruva Maharaja in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.9.10):

9 "My Lord, the transcendental bliss derived from meditating upon Your lotus feet or hearing about Your glories from pure devotees is so unlimited that it is far beyond the stage of brahmananda wherein one thinks himself merged in the impersonal Brahman as one with the Supreme. Since brahmananda is also defeated by the transcendental bliss derived from devotional service, then what to speak of the temporary blissfulness of elevating oneself to the heavenly planets, which is ended by the separating sword of time? Although one may be elevated to the heavenly planets, he falls down in due course of time."*

10 In Shrimad Bhagavatam 8.6.8 Brahma said that the Personality of Godhead is smaller than the atom, and at the same time He is so large that no one can measure Him. This is possible because the Lord is the master of all inconceivable potencies. Brahma then said to the Lord: "O Lord, everything is resting within You."

11 "The Supreme Personality of Godhead is neither demigod nor demon, neither human nor bird or beast. He is not woman, man, or neuter, nor is He an animal. He is not a material quality, a fruitive activity, a manifestation or non manifestation. He is the last word in the discrimination of 'not this, not this', and He is unlimited. All glories to the Supreme Personality of Godhead!"*

12 "When the King of the elephants was describing the supreme authority, without mentioning any particular person, he did not invoke the demigods, headed by Lord Brahma, Lord Siva, Indra and Candra. Thus none of them approached him. However, because Lord Hari is the Supersoul, Purusottama, the Personality of Godhead, He appeared before Gajendra."*

13 Because the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the original cause of all causes, no demigod or other living entity can be His equal. This is confirmed by Gajendra in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 8.3.22-23):

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead creates His minor part and parcels, the jiva-tattva, beginning with Lord Brahma, the demigods and the expansions of Vedic knowledge (Sama, Rg, Yajur and Atharva) and including all other living entities, moving and non moving, with their different names and characteristics. As the sparks of a fire or the shining rays of the sun emanate from their source and merge into it again and again, the mind, the intelligence, the senses, the gross and subtle material bodies, and the continuous transformations of the different modes of nature all emanate from the Lord and again merge into Him."*

Gajendra continues by explaining that the Supreme Personality of Godhead has no material qualities. "He is not woman, man, or neuter, nor is He an animal. He is not a material quality, a mode of material nature, a pious or impious fruitive activity." He is not any of these things because He is the creator of them and therefore He is not different from them. We may also note that the phrase 'na san na casat' may be interpreted to mean "He is neither small nor large." This means that He can appear in any form, large or small, as he wishes.

Shridhara Svami comments on this verse:

"The word 'nisedha-sesah' means 'negating the different material forms fashioned by the illusory energy, maya, one may understand the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is not a product of maya.' In this verse Gajendra says: 'All glories to the Supreme Personality of Godhead! I pray He may appear before me so I may become free from this distressing situation and attain liberation.'"

14 In Shrimad Bhagavatam 8.3.30 (quoted in text 13) Sukadeva Gosvami says: "When the king of the elephants was describing (upavarnita) the supreme authority, without mentioning any particular person (nirvisesam), he did not invoke the demigods, headed by Lord Brahma, Lord Siva, Indra and Candra (vividha-linga-bhidabhimana). Thus none of them approached him (naite yadopasasrpuh). However, because Lord Hari is the Supersoul (nikhilatmakatvat), Purusottama, the Personality of Godhead (akhilamara-mayo harih), He appeared (avirasit) before Gajendra."*

In these prayers Gajendra said: 'O Lord, Your transcendental form is neither large nor small, for it is never limited by material designations.' In the same way in other places of Vedic literature it is said that the Personality of Godhead has neither hands nor feet. In this way the transcendentalists meditate on the Lord in their heart. This, of course, means that the Personality of Godhead has no material hands and feet, for all the limbs of the Lord's body are spiritual. This is confirmed by the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.14.2), where Lord Brahma says:

"My dear Lord, Your form is transcendental to all material elements. I can understand that You have mercy upon me because You are revealing that form, standing before me like a small child. But although I am Lord Brahma, the so-called creator of this universe, I am unable to ascertain the transcendental potencies of Your body. And if I am unable to understand the spiritual potency of Your childlike body, then what can I understand about Your transcendental pastimes?"*

Many other verses from Vedic literature confirm this point, but to avoid undue repetition we will not quote them.

1 The Supreme Personality of Godhead's presence as the Supersoul in the hearts of all conditioned souls is described by Maharaja Nrga (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.64.26):

"My dear Lord, You are the Supersoul seated in everyone's heart. There are many great mystic yogis who have eyes to see You through the Vedas and Upanisads. In order to achieve the elevated position of being equal in quality with You, they always meditate on You within their hearts. Although such exalted saintly persons may see You constantly within their hearts, they still cannot see You eye to eye: therefore I am very much surprised that I am able to see You personally. I know that I was engaged in so many activities, especially as a king. Although I was in the midst of luxury and opulence and was subjected to so much of the happiness and misery of material existence, I am so fortunate to be seeing You personally. As far as I know, when one become liberated from material existence, he can see You in this way.”*

2 Shridhara Svami comments:

“In this verse Maharaja Nrga says to the Supreme Personality of Godhead: ‘O Lord, I am very much surprised that I am able to see You personally’ (sa tvam katham mama vibho ksi-pathah). Someone may ask: Why is this so surprising? In answer to this Maharaja Nrga says: ‘O Lord, You are the Supersoul (paramatma) seated in everyone’s heart. There are many great mystic yogis (yogesvaraih) who have eyes to see You though the Vedas and Upanisads (sruti-drsa) and they always meditate on You within their pure hearts (amala-hrd-vibhavyah). Although such exalted saintly persons may see You constantly within their hearts, they still cannot see You eye to eye, for You remain beyond the perception of the material senses (adhoksajah). When one becomes liberated from material existence (bhavapavargah), he can see You as I am seeing You now (anudrsya). Although my intelligence has become blinded by the great suffering I have experienced in this lifetime as a lizard, I have become so fortunate as to see You personally. This is certainly very surprising.”

3 The reason Maharaja Nrga was able to directly see the Supreme Personality of Godhead is described in the Narayanadhyatma:

“Although the Supreme Personality of Godhead remains always invisible to the conditioned souls, He may be seen by the intervention of the Lord’s transcendental potency. Without the mercy of the Lord’s potency, who is able to see the eternal Supreme Lord?”

4 The Supreme Personality of Godhead can be seen only with the grace of His own potency, which He manifests by His own mercy. Therefore, the Lord’s mercy is the actual cause of being able to see Him. This is confirmed in the following statements of the Upanisad:

“With material eyes no one can see the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead.”

Katha Upanisad 2.3.9

“The Supreme Personality of Godhead reveals Himself of His own accord to those He chooses.”

Mundaka Upanisad 3.2.3

“The conditioned living entity is not able to see the Supreme Personality of Godhead.”

Katha Upanisad 2.3.9 and Svetasvatara Upanisad 4.20

5 This is also explained in the Narayaniya chapter of the Moksa-dharma (Mahabharata, Santi-parva 339.45-46), where Lord Narayana, the master of Svetadvipa says to Narada:

“O Narada, I am the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the master of the universe. You are not able to completely understand My transcendental form. Because I desired to reveal Myself to you I have momentarily appeared before you and then disappeared. You are no longer able to see Me, but can only see this material nature of the three modes and various elements I have created. At the present moment you can see only this. You cannot see Me.”

6 In this verse Lord Narayana says “You have seen My form (drsate), but you have not understood it (tvaya na jneyam)’. By saying that His form cannot be understood within the reference of matter, the Lord affirms that His form is spiritual and not material. Nevertheless, because the Lord desires to show mercy to His devotees, He sometimes wishes (icchan) to reveal His form to them, and then He also disappears from their sight (nasyeyam). Because the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the supreme controller (isah) of everything, He is supremely independent, and He is also different from the material universe. For this reason He can appear and then disappear whenever He likes. The phrases ‘maya hy esa maya srsta yan mam pasyasi’ and ‘sarva-bhuta-guanir yuktam’ means ‘Now you do not see Me. Now you see only My illusory energy.”

7 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead may be seen only by His mercy is confirmed by Bhismadeva (Mahabharata, Santi-parva 339.12):

“The eternal Supreme Personality of Godhead, the master of the demigods, then became pleased and personally revealed Himself to Upacari Vasu. This is the only way He may be seen. If He does not wish to show Himself, He will remain invisible.”

In this verse the word 'tam' refers to Upacari Vasu.

8 Before this passage a group of devotees headed by Upacari Vasu says (Mahabharata, Santi-parva 336.19):

"O Brhaspati, neither you nor we are able to see the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Only they who obtain His mercy can see Him."

9 The various attributes of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, such as His remaining invisible to the eyes of the conditioned souls, are described in the Upanisads. For example, the Katha Upanisad (2.3.9) says:

"With material eyes no one can see the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

The verse quoted in the beginning of this Anuccheda was spoken by King Nrga to the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Anuccheda 47

1 In the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (8.3.8) the conception that the forms, qualities, and pastimes of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are material is refuted. Here the Lord's forms are described as spiritual and not material:

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead has no material birth, activities, name, form, qualities or faults. To fulfil the purpose for which this material world is created and destroyed, He comes in the form of a human being like Lord Rama or Lord Krishna by His original internal potency."*

2 This verse describes the various transformations present in the material bodies of the conditioned souls. The first transformation is birth (janma), the next transformation is work (karma), by which the imperfect and unfulfilled soul tries to become perfect and fulfilled. The next transformation is name (nama), or the system of sounds by which various objects within the mind's reach are indicated for the purpose of facilitating everyday activities. The next transformation is form (rupa), the quality perceived by the visual sense. The last transformation is quality (guna), or the conditioned souls' different natures, born from their contact with the three modes: goodness, passion and ignorance. The material transformations are present in the conditioned souls, but they are not present in the Supreme Personality of Godhead because He is always situated in His own original transcendental form, which is perfect and complete, beyond the understanding of the limited material mind, beyond the touch of the material energy, and visible only by the Lord's consent and not otherwise. Although the Lord remains untouched by the material transformations, He nevertheless comes to the material world in a human like form like the forms of Lord Rama or Lord Krishna (yas tani rcchanti). The sentence begun in this verse is completed in the next which says:

"He has immense potency, and in various forms, all free from material contamination, He acts wonderfully. He is therefore the Supreme Brahman. I offer my respects to Him."*

That the Supreme Personality of Godhead has no material form is also described in the following statements from the Upanisads:

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is perfect and complete. He is supremely peaceful. His activities are never material."

Svetasvatara Upanisad 6.19

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead has no material name or form. He is eternal and changeless. He is not understood by the material senses."

Katha Upanisad 1.3.15

Although He has no material attributes, the Supreme Personality of Godhead has a spiritual form and senses. This is confirmed in the following words:

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is omnipotent. He can do whatever He likes. All His desires are automatically fulfilled. He tastes and smells all that exists. His senses perceive everything."

Chandogya Upanisad 3.14.2

4 In this verse the word 'guna-dosah' means that although they who are not Supreme may have faults, the Supreme Personality of Godhead has no faults. This is described in Kurma Purana:

"Because the Supreme Personality of Godhead is full of all opulences, some of His opulences may seem to contradict some of His other opulences. Because the Supreme Personality of Godhead is supreme in all respects, these contradictions should not be taken as faults."

5 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead is perfect and free from any defect is also confirmed in the following statements of the Upanisads:

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead remains always untouched by material impurity or sin."
Chandogya Upanisad 8.1.5.

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is described in the Vedas, is supremely auspicious because not only does He possess all inauspiciousness within Himself, but He also leads others to an auspicious condition."

Chandogya Upanisad 4.15.2-4

6 In the previously quoted passage from Chandogya Upanisad (3.14.2) the word 'sarva-gandhah' may also be interpreted to mean "He who is most pleasantly fragrant", or, in other words, He whose attributes are superior to those of all others. In the verse from Shrimad Bhagavatam (8.3.8) quoted previously, the word 'rcchati' (He accepts) should not be interpreted to mean that He accepts a position like the faulty status of the conditioned souls. Such an interpretation would clearly contradict the statements of the Upanisads.

7 At this point someone may object: "First you say the Supreme Personality of Godhead has no birth, activities, name, form, or qualities, and then again you say he has all these. This is certainly a contradictory statement."

Fearing that someone would say this, the Shrimad Bhagavatam (8.3.8) says: "By the power of His original internal potency (sva-maya) the Supreme Personality of Godhead takes birth, even though He is unborn." Without accepting the Lord's all-powerful internal potency, it is indeed illogical to say the Lord simultaneously takes birth and does not take birth. In fact the birth of the Supreme Lord is different from the birth of the conditioned souls. The Lord's birth is a spiritual pastime and cannot be understood from the material frame of reference or described according to material concepts.

8 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead does have birth, name, form, activities, and qualities is confirmed by Sankaracarya in the following words (sariraka-bhasya 1.4.16):

"The word 'sat' (reality) is generally applied to that which has names and forms. Considering that some philosophers might think the Supreme godhead ultimately has neither name nor form, the Sruti-sastra specifically says: 'Before the creation, the Supreme existed as sat (reality). Other things were then non-existent (asat). This means that by using the word 'sat' to describe the Supreme before the creation, the Sruti-sastra affirms that before the creation of the material universes the Supreme Godhead was manifested with both name and form, for the very word 'sat' means to have name and form."

9 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead has spiritual qualities but no material qualities is confirmed by the following seemingly contradictory statements of Vishnu Purana (6.5.83-84):

"O sage, the Supreme Godhead is above all virtues and faults. These things are not present in Him."

"The Supreme Godhead is the possessor of all auspicious qualities."

10 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead has spiritual, not material, qualities is also described in the following words (Vishnu Purana 6.5.79):

"The person that has all knowledge, power, strength, opulence, heroism and splendour, and does not have any inferior material qualities, or faults is known as Bhagavan, or the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

11 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead has spiritual, not material, qualities is again confirmed by the following statement of Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda:

"When the Vedic literatures describe the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the controller of all the universes, as being without qualities (nirguna), this should be understood to mean that He has no inferior material qualities."

12 In Shrimad Bhagavatam 8.3.8 the word 'sva-mayaya' should be interpreted to mean 'The Supreme Personality of Godhead who appears in this material world through the agency of His own transcendental potency.' This phrase should not be interpreted in any other way. That this interpretation is correct is confirmed by the following statement of Narada Muni in Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.37.22), which clearly defines the word 'maya' as 'the Lord's potency':

"My Lord, let me offer my respectful obeisances to Your lotus feet. You are situated completely in the transcendental position of perfect knowledge and bliss. You are complete in Yourself, and are beyond all desires. By exhibiting Your internal potency You have set up the influence of maya. Your unlimited potency cannot be measured by anyone. My dear Lord, You are the Supreme Controller. It is simply vain to think that You are dependent on any of Your creations.”*

13 Any other interpretation of the word ‘sva-mayaya’ should be understood to contradict the intention of Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami in speaking Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.12.69. In this verse and also in Shridhara Svami’s commentary on it, the word ‘sva-mayaya’ is clearly defined to mean ‘the Lord’s transcendental potency.’

14 Someone may object: In this verse the word ‘rcchati’ means ‘accepts’. This means that the Supreme Personality of Godhead sometimes accepts a form, and at other times He does not accept a form.

To this objection Shrimad Bhagavatam replies by using the word ‘anukalam’ (eternally). In other words, Shrimad Bhagavatam states that the Supreme Lord eternally accepts a form. He never abandons the position of having His own transcendental form. In other words, He is never formless. Therefore, it may be understood that the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the origin of His transcendental potencies, and at the same time He manifests His eternal form within the material world by the agency of His transcendental potency.

15 At this point someone may object: “How is it possible that the birth and activities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are eternal. He is not eternally being born, neither is He eternally carrying out any specific action. His expansions appear at a certain point in time, and then after that They are no longer manifest. How is it, then, that you say that the Lord’s birth and activities are eternal?”

To this objection I reply: There is no defect in the statement that the birth and pastimes of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are eternal. He has innumerable forms and each form is manifest in an unlimited number of places. The Lord’s birth and activities are therefore unlimited in number. The original forms and secondary manifestations of the Lord’s various places of pastimes and various pastime-associates in both the spiritual world of Vaikuntha and the material universes are also unlimited in number. Therefore, whenever the birth or pastimes of any original form of the Lord or secondary manifestation of the Lord’s form is completed in a certain place, it is immediately manifested again in another place. In this way the birth and pastimes of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are never interrupted. They are eternally manifest. The original manifestations of the Supreme Personality of Godhead’s births and pastimes are always the same. They never change. The secondary appearances of these original forms, however, sometimes introduce varieties into these pastimes.

16 That the original forms of the Lord can expand into innumerable secondary forms is confirmed by the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.69.2):

“It is astounding that Lord Krishna, who is one without a second, expanded Himself in sixteen thousand similar forms to marry sixteen thousand queens in their respective homes.”*

17 The Supreme Personality of Godhead, therefore, manifests various forms in various circumstances according to His different activities. In this way the varieties of the mellows of His pastimes are manifested.

18 At this point someone may object: “How can you say that simply because He is born and acts in different forms at different times, the birth and activities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are eternal? These births and activities are different, and therefore none of them are eternal. For this reason the form of the Personality of Godhead is also not eternal.”

To this I reply: The forms of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are one. They appear at different times and under different circumstances, but they are still the same eternal forms. That they appear at different times does not mean that they must be different forms.

If something is repeated that does not mean that the repetition is different from the first appearance. This is explained by Sankaracarya in Sariraka-bhasya:

“If the word ‘cow’ is repeated twice that does not mean that there are two cows. There is only one cow, but for emphasis the word has been repeated. In the same way, if the word ‘cooked’ is repeated twice, that does not mean that the food was twice cooked. Simply for emphasis the word was repeated.”

From these explanations we may understand that the birth and activities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are eternal. For this reason the Agama-sastras and other Vedic literatures worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead’s pastimes, which were all performed innumerable times in the past.

19 This is also confirmed in Madhvacaraya’s commentary:

“Because the forms of Lord Trivikrama and the other incarnations are all manifested from the form of the Supersoul (paramatma), therefore these forms are all eternal, just as the Supersoul is eternal."

This is also corroborated by the Sruti-sastra:

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead always existed in the past. He exists at present, and He will continue to exist in the future eternally."

From this it should be known that because the forms of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are all eternal, they are also the supreme objects of our worship.

20 The 'birth' of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is very different from the birth of the conditioned souls. Any similarities of these two births are very superficial. Sometimes the Lord's 'birth' is completely different from the conditioned souls birth and there is not even a superficial resemblance. That the Supreme Lord is unborn although He seems to take birth is described in the Sruti-sastra:

"Although He is unborn, the Supreme Personality of Godhead takes birth again and again."

21 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead's appearance in this material world only superficially resembles the birth of the conditioned souls is confirmed by the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.3.8):

"Then the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Vishnu, who is situated in the core of everyone's heart, appeared from the heart of Devaki in the dense darkness of night, like the full moon rising on the eastern horizon, because Devaki was of the same category as Shri Krishna."*

22 The difference between the Lord's 'birth' and that of the conditioned souls is also seen in the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (7.8.17), where the Lord's appearance as Lord Nrsimadeva is described:

"To prove that the statement of His servant Prahlada Maharaja was substantial - in other words, to prove that the Supreme Lord is present everywhere, even within the pillar of an assembly hall - the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Hari, exhibited a wonderful form never before seen. The form was neither that of a man nor that of a lion. Thus the Lord appeared in His wonderful form in the assembly hall."*

23 The 'birth' of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is again described in Shrimad Bhagavatam (3.24.6):

"After many, many years, the Supreme Personality of Godhead Madhusudana, the killer of the demon Madhu, having entered the semen of Kardama, appeared in Devahuti just as fire comes from wood in a sacrifice."*

In this description of the Lord's 'birth' we may note that, influenced by the pure devotion of Kardama Muni, the Supreme Lord agreed to become his son. We may also note that the word 'viryam' here may be understood to mean 'sonship'. In this way the phrase 'viryam apannah' may mean 'The Supreme Lord accepted the status of Kardama Muni's son.'

24 The activities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are His blissful transcendental pastimes. They are not like the material activities of the conditioned souls. This is described in Vedanta-sutra (2.1.33):

"Although they may superficially resemble the activities of conditioned souls, the actions of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are all His transcendental pastimes."

Shripada Madhvacarya comments on this sutra:

"The transcendental pastimes of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are different from the happy dancing and other activities of the intoxicated and mad conditioned souls, who inhabit this material world."

25 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead is never forced to act is described in the Narayana-samhita:

"Lord Hari is not obliged to create the material universes or do any other thing. He is completely free to do whatever He likes. As a madman or an intoxicated person freely dances without thinking of attaining any specific result to fulfilling any duty, so the Supreme Personality of Godhead, impelled by His own transcendental bliss, acts in any way He pleases.

"How has the idea come that the perfectly blissful Supreme Personality of Godhead is obliged to act in certain ways and is not free to act as He pleases? This idea is a great mistake, for if even the liberated jivas are free to act and have all their desires automatically fulfilled, then certainly the Supreme Lord is completely free. All His desires are automatically fulfilled without His having to endeavour in any way."

26 One should not conclude from this example comparing the Supreme Personality of Godhead to an intoxicated person or a madman that the Supreme Lord is not omniscient or that His knowledge is faulty in any way, as the knowledge of a madman or an intoxicated person is. The example should be understood to mean that there are some similarities between the actions of the Supreme Lord and an intoxicated person, but they are not the same in all respects.

As a madman or an intoxicated person does not consider what is necessary for his personal benefit, but acts irresponsibly, so the Supreme Lord does not consider His own self-interest, for He is already flooded with transcendental bliss. The Supreme Lord's transcendental bliss is automatically established. He need not work to attain it.

Someone may say this is a lack of awareness on the Lord's part: that He does not know how His bliss is established. However, for the Lord this is not a fault. As even the most learned scholar is not considered ignorant because he is not aware how he is inhaling and exhaling in deep sleep or some other unconscious state, so there is no fault on the Lord's part if He is not aware how His transcendental bliss is established. From this we may conclude that the pastimes of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are by nature full of transcendental bliss. This is confirmed by the Sruti-sastra:

"By nature the Supreme Personality of Godhead's desires are automatically fulfilled without His endeavour. If this is so, and He never lacks anything, then how is it possible for Him to desire anything? His desires do not remain for they are all immediately and effortlessly fulfilled."

27 Even when He creates the material world, the Supreme Personality of Godhead performs everything without any effort, all His desires being automatically fulfilled. This is described in Aitareya Upanisad (1.1.1):

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead glanced and thought: 'Let there be creation'. In this way the material world was created."

If the Lord's desires in relation to this material world are automatically fulfilled, then what to speak of His desires in relation to the spiritual world of Vaikuntha? In either spiritual or material worlds, then, the Supreme Lord can perform any action simply by willing it. This is described by the Kaliya serpent's wives (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.16.47):

"Our dear Lord, in the matter of creating the cosmic manifestation, personally You have nothing to exert; by expanding Your different kinds of energy - namely the mode of goodness, the mode of passion, and the mode of ignorance - You can create, maintain and annihilate this cosmic manifestation. As the controller of the entire time force, You can simply glance over the material energy, create this universe, and energise the different forces of material nature, which are acting differently in different creatures. No one can estimate, therefore, how Your activities are going on within this world."*

28 The transcendental nature of the Supreme Lord's appearance and activities is also described in the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.3.35):

"Thus learned men describe the births and activities of the unborn and inactive, which is undiscoverable even in the Vedic literatures. He is the Lord of the heart."*

29 This verse may be understood by studying the two preceding verses, which describe the process by which one becomes able to understand the Supreme Personality of Godhead. These two verses (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.3.33-34) say:

"Whenever a person experiences, by self-realisation, that both the gross and subtle bodies have nothing to do with the pure self, at that time he sees himself as well as the Lord.*

"If the illusory energy subsides and the living entity becomes full enriched with knowledge by the grace of the Lord, then he becomes at once enlightened with self-realisation and thus becomes situated in his own glory."*

The first verse means that becoming free, by full spiritual knowledge, from the ignorance of thinking that the gross and subtle material bodies are the self, is the cause of being able to see the Lord.

The second verse means that when the illusory energy subsides the great treasure of one's own spiritual form becomes manifest.

The third verse (1.3.35) means that the learned men, who take pleasure in the Supreme Self, describe the births and activities of the Supersoul, who is the Lord of the heart.

When material misconceptions subside, then the transcendental treasure of direct perception of the Lord's birth and activities becomes manifest. This is the meaning. From this it may be understood that the Lord's forms and pastimes are filled with transcendental bliss. That is the meaning.

30 In this verse (1.3.35) the phrase 'akartur ajanasya' (the Lord has neither birth nor activities) should be understood to mean 'the Lord has no material birth or activities.' His birth and activities are completely spiritual and different from their material counterparts. The phrase 'veda-guhyani' (undiscoverable even in the Vedic literatures) is explained in Akrura's prayers (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.48.23-24):

"To consider Your Lordship to be one of us, conditioned by the material nature, is a mistake due to our imperfect knowledge. When people deviate from the original knowledge of the Vedas, they try to identify the ordinary living entities with Your Lordship. Your Lordship has appeared on this earth in Your original form in order to re-establish the real knowledge that the living entities are neither one with nor equal to the Supreme God. My dear Lord, You are always situated in uncontaminated goodness (suddha-sattva). Your appearance is necessary to re-establish actual Vedic knowledge, as opposed to the atheistic philosophy that tries to establish that God and the living entities are one and the same. My dear Lord Krishna, this time You have appeared in the home of Vasudeva as his son, along with Your plenary expansion, Shri Balarama. Your mission is to kill all the atheistic royal families along with their huge military strength. You have advented Yourself to minimise the overburden of the world, and in order to fulfil this mission. You have glorified the dynasty of Yadu, appearing in the family as one of its members."*

Shridhara Svami discusses these verses in his commentary:

"Someone may say that the pastimes of the Lord are actually manifestations of material illusion and they only appear to be spiritual under the influence of devotion to the Lord as a glittering oyster-shell may sometimes be mistaken for silver. This is not a fact. The Supreme Lord's pastimes are spiritual. They are not the ordinary activities of conditioned souls, but the Supreme Godhead's sport. This is confirmed by the description given in these two verses of Shrimad Bhagavatam.

31 As the Supreme Lord's form is transcendental, so His names and activities are also transcendental. This is described in Vishnu Purana (5.2.18) where the demigods say to Devaki-devi:

"O Devaki, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Vishnu, whose names, forms, and activities are beyond the limited understanding of the conditioned souls, is now present within your womb."

We may note that some manuscripts contain the reading 'rupa-karma' (forms and activities) in the beginning of this verse. (In this alternate version the translation would read: 'whose forms and activities', omitting the word 'names').

32 The transcendental nature of the Supreme Personality of Godhead's pastimes is also described in Bhagavad-gita (4.9) where the Lord says:

"One who knows the transcendental nature of My appearance and activities does not, upon leaving the body, take birth again in this world, but attains My eternal abode, O Arjuna."*

33 The name of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is perfect and transcendental. It is different from the material nature and it cannot be described in material words or understood by the thinking process of the material mind. This is described in the following statement of the Vasudevadhyatma:

"Because the Supreme Personality of Godhead has limitless qualities, He is known as 'anama', or 'He who has no name'. The Lord is said to have no name because He does not have a single name. In other words, His names are unlimited in number."

34 This is also described in the Brahma Purana:

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is sometimes said to be nameless. This is said because the names of the Lord are unlimited in number. There is no single name of the Lord. In the same way, the Supreme Lord is sometimes said to be formless. This should be understood to mean that the form of the Supreme Lord is spiritual. It is not composed of the five material elements. Therefore the Lord has no material form."

35 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead's names and pastimes are spiritual and not material is also confirmed in the Vishnu Purana (5.18.53-54):

"O unborn Supreme Personality of Godhead, Your names, birth, forms and so forth, are not the product of the vivid imagination of the conditioned souls, but they are all supremely real. You are eternal, the unchanging, supreme spiritual reality. You are the supreme knowledge beyond the feeble speculative powers of the conditioned souls, and therefore You are glorified by a host of holy names, such as Krishna (the all-attractive), Acyuta (the infallible), Ananta (the unlimited), and Vishnu (the all-pervading)."

36 This description of the Lord's holy names does not at all contradict the verse from the Vishnu Purana quoted in text 31. Both passages describe the spiritual nature of the Lord's holy name. The speculative powers of the conditioned souls cannot give certain knowledge, and therefore this verse explains that the Supreme Personality of Godhead's name, birth and pastimes cannot be understood by the speculative process. In this verse the word 'brahma' clearly establishes the spiritual nature of the Lord's holy name.

37 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead is unborn is confirmed in the Svetasvatara Upanisad (4.5):
"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is unborn. He appears in the red, white and black forms of His different incarnations."

Because the names, forms and pastimes of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are all eternal, unborn and supremely worshipable, they cannot be the product of philosophers' imaginations. They are not imaginary. They are real. This is also confirmed in the statement of Vishnu Purana (5.2.18) quoted in text 31.

The Lord's holy names, such as Krishna and other names and His incarnations, where He appears in the forms of demigods, human beings, ksatriyas and others, and His pastimes in these different incarnations are not imaginary. They are all real. All the pastime-incarnations of the Lord are the masters of His eternal spiritual potencies, and they are all perfect in all respects. This is confirmed in Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.37.32):

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is, by nature, perfect in all respects."

38 In the Vishnu Purana passage quoted in Text 35 the word 'yatah' means 'because' and 'tatah' means 'therefore'. 'Sarvasya arthasya' means 'of all visible substance', 'kalpanam rte' means 'beyond conception or imagination', 'adhigamah' means 'material conception', and 'na' means 'is not'. This verse explains that neither the Supreme Personality of Godhead nor His holy name are imaginary, but they are beyond the information gathering abilities of the conditioned souls in the material world. The great sages and the Vedic literatures both glorify the Supreme Personality of Godhead by chanting His supremely perfect transcendental names. These glories of the Lord are not imaginary. They are real. That is the meaning of this verse.

39 In this way the Supreme Personality of Godhead is described in the Vedic literatures. It has already been established that the potencies of the Lord are all self-perfect. Other things may be products of philosophers' imagination, but not the Lord's perfect potencies. In this verse the Vishnu Purana clearly says: "The names, birth, and everything else in relation to the Supreme Personality of Godhead are not imaginary (na vidyante nama-jaty-adi-kalpanah) for they are in relation to You, O Lord (bhavan), the Supreme form of the supreme spirit (paramam brahma)". The use of the word 'avikari' (unchanging) does not mean that the Lord remains static and does not move or act, for He always enjoys various transcendental pastimes. The word 'aja' (O unborn) means that He does not take birth or appear in the world as a conditioned souls does.

Why do some commentators claim that the names, births, etc., of the Supreme Lord are imaginary? Their conclusion cannot be accepted, Material knowledge is attained by the process of mental speculation (kalpanam rte rthasya sarvasyadhigamah). Mental speculation, however, does not help us understand the names, birth, etc. of the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

The verse concludes by saying: 'O Lord, You are glorified (idyase) by Your holy names (namabhih), such as Krishna and other names', which are all chanted by the eternally perfect Vedic literatures, such as the Sruti-sastras and the Puranas. The conclusion is that the Supreme Godhead is not impersonal, and His names, birth, form, etc. are not imaginary. They are all real.

40 The names Krishna, Acyuta, Ananta, and Vishnu in this verse are selected to give some indication of the Lord's innumerable names. In the Vedic literatures the name of Narayana and many other names are also given.

41 The Lord's holy name is described in the Vedic literature:
"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is manifest as the syllables of His name."

The Vedanta-sutra (2.4.16) also says:

"The holy name of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is eternal."

In this way the eternality of the Lord's holy name, which is described in all Vedic literatures, is established.

42 The holy names of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are also described in the Gopala-tapani Upanisad (1.29) where, in the course of describing the 18 syllable Krishna-mantra, the demigod Brahma says:

"When I desired to create the universe the Lord again appeared before me, showing me in these syllables the universe that was to be."

In this way the holy names of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are described as the original cause of the material universe then about to be created. The Lord's holy name is not different from His form. Because the Lord and His name are the same, the Lord's name is different from the universe, although it is also the universe's original cause. Because it is different from the universe, the Lord's name is spiritual and all-perfect. It is without flaw.

43 The Lord's holy name is also described in the Rg Veda (1.156.3):

"O Vishnu, by chanting Your holy name with a little understanding, we attain profound transcendental knowledge."

44 In this verse word 'visno' means 'O Vishnu', 'te' means "Your", 'cit' means 'spiritual by nature', 'mahah' means 'self-manifest', 'asya' means 'of that holy name', and 'a' means 'even slightly'. When it is said, 'with even a small understanding of Your holy name', it is understood that complete understanding of the glories of the Lord's name is the best position. The word 'vivikta' means 'even by simply repeating the syllables', 'sumatim' means 'proper knowledge of the holy name', 'bhajamahe' means 'we obtain', 'tat' means 'therefore', 'om' means 'the sacred syllable om', and 'sat' means 'self-perfect'.

From this we may understand that the chanting of the holy name of the Supreme Personality of Godhead frees the chanter from fear, hatred and other material imperfections. This description is also confirmed by various other statements of the Vedic literatures.

45 That one becomes liberated by the chanting of the holy name of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is also described in the Brahma Purana:

"Even if one's mind is distracted and one does not think of the Lord, and even if one becomes angry, if one continually glorifies Lord Hari, he will become free from the bonds of repeated birth and death and attain liberation as Sisupala, the King of Cedi, did."

46 One becomes liberated by even only once chanting the holy name of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is described in Padma Purana:

"A person who chants the two syllables Ha-ri, even if he chants only a single time, causes his friends and relatives to become liberated from the cycle of repeated birth and death by such chanting."*

47 The sacred syllable om is described in the Sruti-sastra:

"Om is the name of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Because speaking it rescues one from the cycle of repeated birth and death, om is known as 'tara' (the deliverer)."

48 One should not invent a concocted interpretation of the meaning of the holy name. "To concoct a fanciful meaning of the holy name of Lord Hari" is counted among the offenses to the holy name mentioned in the Padma Purana.

Even if one regularly chants the holy name of the Lord, if he commits this or other offenses to the holy name, he will not become liberated as a result of his chanting, but will remain enmeshed in the cycle of repeated birth and death. This is true of one who commits offenses to the Lord's holy name and it is also true of one who commits offenses to the Lord's devotional service. An example of an offense to devotional service is found in the Shri Vishnu-bhakti-candrodaya:

"If one sees the Supreme Personality of Godhead travelling in His Rathayatra festival or some similar festival and does not follow the Lord in His procession, then such a person will find that the results of all his pious activities will become burned by the fire of transcendental knowledge, and he will take his next birth in a family of Brahma-raksasas."

These offenses to the Lord's holy name or devotional service as described in these statements of the Vishnu-bhakti-candrodaya and Padma Purana should be understood to be great obstacles for they who aspire to make progress in spiritual life.

49 As when one sees the Supreme Personality of Godhead present as the witness within the heart, one feels transcendental bliss, in the same way, when one properly chants the holy name of the Lord, one feels transcendental bliss. This is described by Shri Saunaka Rsi in the following words Shrimad Bhagavatam (2.3.24):

"Certainly that heart is steel-framed which, in spite of one's chanting the holy name of the Lord with concentration, does not change when ecstasy takes place, tears fill the eyes and the hairs stand on end."*

50 The holy name of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the mature fruit of all the Vedas and it is the transcendental form of the Supreme Lord. This is described in the following statement of the Prabhasa-khanda:

"The holy name of Lord Krishna is the most auspicious of all auspicious things, and the sweetest of all sweet things. It is completely spiritual, without any touch of matter, and it is the transcendental fruit of the vine of all Vedic literatures. If one chants the holy name of Lord Krishna, even once, either with faith, or even in the spirit of mocking Him, the holy name will deliver the chanter from the bondage of material existence."

51 From this we may understand that the holy name and form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are identical. This is clearly explained in Narada-pancaratra in the description of the eight-syllable mantra Om namo vasudevaya:

"The supremely blissful personality of Godhead, Narayana is personally present in the sound vibration of the eight syllable mantra Om namo vasudevaya."

52

The Supreme Lord's name Om is described in the following statements of the Upanisads:

"This entire cosmic manifestation is actually the syllable Om."

Chandogya Upanisad 2.24.4

"This entire universe is identical with the sacred syllable Om."

Mandukya Upanisad 1.1

53 The sacred syllable Om is further described in the Agama-sastra:

"The sacred syllable om is identical with the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Om is the Supreme. Om has no front, no inside, and no outside. Nothing is superior to the changeless om. Om is the beginning, middle and end of everything. One who is able to understand the true nature of om eventually attains direct association of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. One should understand that the syllable om is identical with the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is situated in the hearts of all living beings. A thoughtful person who understands that the syllable om is actually the all-pervading Personality of Godhead, never laments for anything. Om is immeasurable and unlimited. Om is supremely auspicious for it eradicates the misconception of thinking that the material cosmos is independent of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. One who understands this true nature of the sacred syllable om is actually a learned philosopher. One who does not understand om is not a philosopher, but only an ignorant fool."

54 Someone may claim that the syllable om and the other names of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are not actually the Lord Himself, but are merely words, although occasionally in prayers we find some exaggerated statements glorifying them. This is not the truth. In truth the names of the Supreme Lord are considered His incarnations in the form of words, and they are not different from the Original Personality of Godhead Himself. This is confirmed by the Sruti-sastra. The name of the Personality of Godhead is therefore not different from the Personality of Godhead Himself. This is described in the Padma Purana:

55 "The holy name of Krishna is transcendently blissful. It bestows all spiritual bendictions; for it is Krishna Himself, the reservoir of all pleasure. Krishna's name is complete, and it is the form of all transcendental mellows. It is not a material name under any condition, and it is no less powerful than Krishna Himself. Since Krishna's name is not contaminated by the material qualities, there is no question of its being involved with maya. Krishna's name is always liberated and spiritual; it is never conditioned by the laws of material nature. This is because the name of Krishna and Krishna Himself are identical."

56 In this verse the holy name of Krishna is described as 'cintamani' (a transcendental gem) because the holy name grants all benedictions. Not only that, but the holy name is the 'form of all transcendental mellows', and it is liberated and spiritual. The holy name of Krishna manifests these qualities because it is non different from Krishna Himself (abhinnatvat).

57 At this point someone may object: "If the holy name of Krishna is liberated and spiritual, as you say, then how is it possible for the liberated name of the Lord to appear before the material senses of the conditioned souls?"

To this objection I reply: In truth, the holy name of Supreme Lord can be perceived by the senses of the conditioned souls. The Personality of Godhead has Himself explained this in Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.21.36-37):

58 "The transcendental sound of the Vedas is very difficult to comprehend and manifests on different levels within the prana, senses and mind. This Vedic sound is unlimited, very deep and unfathomable, just like the ocean.

"As the unlimited, unchanging and omnipotent Personality of Godhead dwelling within all living beings. I personally establish the Vedic sound vibration in the form of omkara within all living entities. It is thus perceived subtly, just like a single strand of fibre on a lotus stalk."

59 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead may appear before the residents of the material universe is also described in the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (12.6.47), where the division of the Vedas into its various parts is described in the following words:

"Seeing that by the influence of time the living entities were becoming short-lived, weak, and unintelligent, the sages divided the Veda into its various parts, so it would be more easily understood. The sages did this because of the order of the infallible Supreme Personality of Godhead who was situated within their hearts."

Shridhara Svami comments:

"Fearing that the intelligence of the human beings was becoming weak, the Personality of Godhead, situated within the hearts of the sages, ordered them to divide the Veda into its constituent parts."

In other words, the Supreme Lord appeared to the sages, from within their hearts. In this way He was directly perceived by them.

60 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead sometimes appears before the residents of the material world is also described in the following verse of Shrimad Bhagavatam (12.13.50):

"Let us meditate on the Supreme Truth, who is eternal, full of nectar, free from all lamentation, spotless and pure. Out of His own causeless mercy this Supreme truth, the Personality of Godhead formerly enlightened Brahma, Narada, Vyasa, Sukadeva Gosvami and Maharaja Pariksit, by presenting before them the light of transcendental knowledge."

61 The Supreme Personality of godhead's appearance before the residents of the material world is also described in the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.2.36), where the demigods pray to Lord Krishna, who is situated within the womb of Devaki:

"O Lord, Your transcendental name and form are not ascertained by those who merely speculate on the path of imagination. Your name, form and attributes can be ascertained only through devotional service."*

62 The special feature of the Supreme Personality of Godhead's appearance in the material world is that He appears here by the agency of His own internal potency, and He is not forced to appear in the material world, but does so only by His own wish. These points have been clearly demonstrated in the previous portions of this book, and they are further corroborated by the following statement of Shrimad-Bhagavatam (2.9.4):

63 "O King, the Personality of Godhead, being very much pleased with Lord brahma because of his non deceptively penance in bhakti yoga, presented His eternal and transcendental form before Brahma. And that is the objective goal for purifying the conditioned soul."*

64 Shridhara Svami comments on this verse in the following words:

"In the eight chapter of this Canto, Maharaja Pariksit asked: 'If the Supreme Lord has a material body, then how is it that the devotees become liberated by simply serving and worshipping the material body of the Supreme Lord?' Maharaja Pariksit also asked if there was any difference between the Lord's body and the bodies of the conditioned souls. He said (2.8.8):

"If the Supreme Personality of Godhead, from whose abdomen the lotus stem sprouted, is possessed of a gigantic body according to His own calibre and measurement, then what is the specific difference between the body of the Lord and those of common living entities?"

"This question is answered in this (2.9.4) verse. In this verse the phrase 'atma-tattva-visuddhyartham' means: 'The form of the Lord purifies the conditioned souls and bestows transcendental knowledge on them.' One may ask: 'What transcendental knowledge did the Lord teach Brahma?' The answer is: 'The Lord spoke to Brahma (bhagavan brahmane aha) the science of devotional service, which consists of austerities and other spiritual practices.' One may ask: 'What did the Lord then do?' The answer is found in the phrase 'rtam rupam darsayan' (The Personality of Godhead presented His eternal and transcendental form before Brahma).

One may ask: 'Why did the Lord reveal His transcendental form?' The answer is found in the phrase 'avyalika-vratadrtaḥ' (the Personality of Godhead was very much pleased with Lord Brahma because of his non-deceptive penance in bhakti-yoga).

"From all this we may conclude that the external form of the conditioned living entity is a manifestation of the Supreme Lord's material illusory potency. The form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, however, is different, for it is spiritual. It is not manifested by the material potency but by the Lord's own spiritual potency known as yogamaya. In this way, because the form of the Personality of Godhead is spiritual in nature, by worshipping that spiritual form, the devotees attain liberation."

65 Maharaja Vasudeva also describes the spiritual nature of the Supreme Personality of Godhead's form in the following words Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.3.20-21):

"My Lord, Your form is transcendental to the three material modes, yet for the maintenance of the three worlds, You assume the white colour of Vishnu in goodness, for creation, which is surrounded by the quality of passion, You appear reddish, and at the end, when there is a need for annihilation, which is surrounded by ignorance, You appear blackish."*

O my Lord, proprietor of all creation, You have now appeared in my house, desiring to protect this world. I am sure that You will kill all the armies that are moving all over the world under the leadership of politicians who are dressed as ksatriya rulers but who are factually demons. They must be killed by You for the protection of the innocent public."*

66 This verse may be interpreted in the following way: "My Lord, You are the creator, maintainer and destroyer of the material worlds. When You desire to maintain the worlds, by manifesting Your own potency (sva-mayaya) You manifest the mode of goodness (atmanah suklam varnam). By doing this You protect the brahmanas and the other members of society also. When You desire to create you manifest the mode of passion (rajasopabrmhitam raktam). In this way You fulfil the passionate desires of the various classes of society, beginning with the brahmanas. When You desire to annihilate the universe You arrange for those things that are sinful and impure (krishnam)."

This verse may also be interpreted: "O Lord, You appear in the pure (suklam) form of Vishnu, which is free from all contact of the material modes of nature, and You also appear in a reddish (Brahma) and blackish (Siva) form for material creation and annihilation."

We may note here that as Lord Vishnu remains untouched by the three modes of material nature, so Brahma and Siva also remain untouched by the three modes of material nature.

67 That Vishnu, Brahma and Siva are above the three modes of material nature is the conclusion of Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami, who said:

"Siva appears to display the qualities of all three modes of nature, although He is actually free from their influence. He is full of all potencies, and His real transcendental nature remains hidden from the perception of ordinary men."

Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.88.3)

"Lord Hari is the Supreme Personality of Godhead. He is beyond the material nature and He remains always untouched by the three modes of nature."

Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.88.5)

68 The Supreme Lord remains always free from the modes of nature, even though He may sometimes appear to be under their influence. This is described in Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.3.50):

"Those Vishnu forms, by Their pure smiling, which resembled the increasing light of the moon, and by the sidelong glances of Their reddish eyes, created and protected the desires of Their own devotees, as if by the modes of passion and goodness."*

69 This verse clearly explains that although the Lord may sometimes appear to be acting under the influence of the modes of passion and goodness, this is appearance only, and the Lord remains always free from the influence of the modes of nature.

The previously quoted verse (Bhagavatam 10.3.20) explained that Vishnu appears in the colour white, Brahma in red, and Siva in black. These colours are intended here as symbolic names for the three modes of nature. It should not be taken literally that these three deities manifest forms in these colours. For example, the guna-avatara of Lord Vishnu who appears in the material world as Ksirodakasayi Vishnu in order to protect the universe (as we will describe later in the Paramatma-sandarbha), is famous for manifesting a black form. In the same way Lord Siva, who destroys the universe, is famous for often appearing in a white form. These points are explained in the description of devotional service spoken by Gobhila Muni. In the same way, Lord Brahma does not manifest a red form. From this we may conclude that the colours of various personalities does not necessarily connect them to a specific mode of nature. Further examples are ducks and other animals, who although manifesting a white colour, are certainly not in the mode of goodness, and Shrila Vyasadeva, Sukadeva Gosvami and others, who are worshipable for those in the mode of goodness, but who nevertheless manifest black forms according to the description of them found in the Puranas.

This verse (Bhagavatam 10.3.20) continues: "O Lord, you show Your mercy to Your devotees by maintaining them and by appearing among them." Here the word 'raktam' means the modes of passion which inspires the desire to create, and a host of other desires as well. The word 'krishnam' in this verse means the mode of ignorance, which conceals the real spiritual identities of the individual souls.

70 The qualities of the three modes of nature are described in Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.2.24):

"Firewood is a transformation of earth, but smoke is better than the raw wood. And fire is still better, for by fire we can derive the benefits of superior knowledge (through Vedic sacrifices). Similarly, passion (rajas) is better than ignorance (tamas), but goodness (sattva) is best because by goodness one can come to realise the Absolute Truth."*

71 At this point someone may object: "By explaining that the black form of the Lord does not necessarily engage in the activities of universal destruction, the red form of the Lord does not necessarily engage in universal creation, and the white form of the Lord does not necessarily engage in maintaining the universe, you have certainly misled the people who read your book. Why do you speak in this way?"

Fearing that someone would speak this objection, and fearing that someone would think that Lord Krishna might have said "I have now assumed this black form of the mode of ignorance in order to destroy the universe", Maharaja Vasudeva spoke the following verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.3.21) in order to affirm that Lord Krishna's mission in the world is for its protection, and not its annihilation:

"O my Lord, proprietor of all creation, You have now appeared in my house, desiring to protect this world. I am sure that you will kill all the armies that are moving all over the world under the leadership of politicians who are dressed as ksatriya rulers but who are factually demons. They must be killed by You for the protection of the innocent public."*

72 This verse should be understood in the following way: Although the Personality of Godhead may assume forms that seem to correspond to certain modes of material nature, these forms are all spiritual and situated in pure goodness, beyond the modes of nature. At the time of cosmic annihilation, because the Lord gives only suffering to the living entities, He remains in a position of deep sleep. This description of the Lord does not apply to this case of Lord Krishna. Lord Krishna does not remain permanently asleep, and neither is He a source of constant suffering for the living entities, but rather He gives transcendental bliss to the entire world. It is true, of course, that He does kill the demons, however, is only the pretext that the Lord uses to grant them His mercy and grant them liberation, elevating them beyond the modes of material nature. From this we may conclude that the black form of Krishna does not exclusively engage in destruction, and therefore it is not appropriate to consider Lord Krishna the incarnation that engages in the activities of the mode of ignorance. It is true that one meaning of the word 'Krishna' is 'darkness', but that meaning is not appropriate in this context. A word should be understood according to the context in which it is used, just as if I say 'Please bring the saindhava', because the word 'saindhava' means 'both 'salt' and 'horse', the proper meaning of the word 'saindhava' must be determined according to the context. In this same way the word 'krishna' in this verse should be understood according to the context. Here the word 'krishna' clearly does not mean 'darkness'.

73 Because Lord Shri Krishna does not perform the activities of the mode of darkness, He should not be understood as the incarnation representing darkness. The actions of the different modes of nature are described in Shrimad Bhagavatam (7.1.8):

"When the quality of goodness is prominent, the sages and demigods flourish with the help of that quality, with which they are infused and surcharged by the Supreme Lord. Similarly, when the mode of passion is prominent the demons flourish, and when ignorance is prominent the Yaksas and Raksasas flourish.

The Supreme Personality of Godhead is present in everyone's heart, fostering the reactions of sattva-guna, rajo-guna and tamo-guna."*

74 The black form of Lord Krishna is therefore not a manifestation of the mode of darkness. In the same way the red and white forms of the Lord are not manifestations of the modes of passion and ignorance, as some would have it. The evidence offered by the Vedic literatures is, therefore, that all the forms of the Lord are transcendental and beyond the modes, and the colour a specific form of the Lord does not indicate the influence of a particular mode of material nature.

75 The transcendental nature of the form of the Personality of Godhead was also described by Devaki-devi, who respectfully said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.3.24):

"My dear Lord, there are different Vedas, some of which describe You as unperceivable through words and the mind. Yet You are the origin of the entire cosmic manifestation. You are Brahman, the greatest of everything, full of effulgence like the sun. You have no material cause, You are free from change and deviation, and You have no material desires. Thus the Vedas say that You are the substance. Therefore, my Lord, You are directly the origin of all Vedic statements, and by understanding You, one gradually understands everything. You are different from the light of Brahman and Paramatma, yet You are not different from them. Everything emanates from You. Indeed, You are the cause of all causes, Lord Vishnu, the light of all transcendental knowledge."*

76 The form of the Personality of Godhead is not material, nor is it a product of the material modes of nature, nor does it have any material attributes. Because the wonderful form of the Supreme Lord attracts the self-realised liberated souls, it should be understood that the Lord's form is completely spiritual. The liberated soul's attraction to the Lord's form is described by Shrila Suta Gosvami (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.7.10-11):

"All different varieties of atmaramas (those who take pleasure in atma, or spirit self), especially those established on the path of self-realisation, though freed from all kinds of material bondage, desire to render unalloyed devotional service unto the Personality of Godhead. This means that the Lord possesses transcendental qualities and therefore can attract everyone, including liberated souls.*

"Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami, son of Shrila Vyasadeva, was not only transcendently powerful. He was also very dear to the devotees of the Lord. Thus he underwent the study of this great narration (Shrimad Bhagavatam)."

77-78 The spiritual nature of the Personality of Godhead is also described in the following statement of the Vishnu-dharma Purana, Uttara-khanda:

"Because the Supreme Personality of Godhead is full of all opulences, it should be understood that within Him are all transcendental qualities, and He is completely free of any faults or defects although, under the influence of the illusory energy (maya), some foolish persons falsely claim that the Supreme Lord has both good qualities and faults. It should be understood that neither the illusory material energy, nor its illusory by-products exist within the Supreme Lord. How, indeed, could they enter within Him? It should, therefore, be understood that all the qualities of the Supreme Lord are the manifestations of His transcendental opulence. They are not produced by the illusory material energy (maya). Because the Lord is completely free from the influence of the material energy, He is known as Paramatma, or the Supreme."

79 We shall now present the final part of the explanation of the Shrimad Bhagavatam verse (8.3.8) first discussed at the beginning of this anuccheda.

Now that it has been clearly established that the forms and qualities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are spiritual and completely different from the material energy, someone may object: 'If the pastimes and forms of the Supreme Lord are spiritual, perfect and complete, then why does the Lord descend to this material world at all?'

Fearing that someone might say this, the Shrimad-Bhagavatam explains: 'lokapyaya-sambhavaya' (The Supreme Lord descends to the material world in order to rescue the devotees from the cycle of repeated birth and death) and 'bhu-praptau' (The Lord appears in order to give transcendental happiness to His eternal associates)."

80 These transcendental purposes of the Lord's advent are also described in the following verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.7.25) where Arjuna says:

"Thus You have descended as an incarnation to remove the burden of the world and to benefit Your friends, especially those who are Your exclusive devotees and are rapt in meditation upon You.”*

81 This verse means: “O Lord, just as You have formerly appeared as the purusa-avatars and other incarnations, You have now appeared (tathayam avatarah) in Your original form as Shri Krishna, the Supreme Personality of Godhead. You have appeared in order to remove the burden of the earth planet (bhuvo bhara-jihirsaya) who is Your great devotee, and enable Your devotees to constantly relish the happiness of worshipping You and meditating on You (anudhyanaya).”

82 At this point someone may say: “Krishna must take birth in this material world in order to give happiness to His devotees. He cannot avoid coming here.”

To this statement I reply: This is not a fact. Krishna is not forced to do anything. He is free and independent. His independence is described in the Narayana-samhita:

“The independent Personality of Godhead is full of all transcendental bliss. How is it possible to say that He needs anything or is forced to do anything? It is not possible.”

As far as His appearing in this world to give happiness to the pure devotees (ananya-bhavanam) is concerned, that does not detract from His independence. He comes because He is merciful to His devotees. He is free from all faults, and because lack of mercy is a fault, He is free from all mercilessness also. Free from that fault, He is very merciful to His pure devotees and He voluntarily appears before them to give them transcendental happiness. One may say that His supreme independence and His mercy contradict each other and His mercy detracts somewhat from His independence. Actually He is both independent and merciful. Both qualities exist in the Lord even though they may sometimes contradict each other. The Kurma Purana explains the mutually contradictory qualities of the Lord in the following words:

“The Supreme Personality of Godhead possesses mutually contradictory qualities.”

That the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the reservoir of all wonderful qualities is also emphatically declared by the Sruti-sastra and other Vedic literatures and because He is full of these wonderful qualities He attracts all living entities from the demigod Brahma down to the most insignificant creature.

83 Lord Krishna personally confirmed His own supreme independence in these words to the gopis (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.32.19-20):

“My dear friends, persons who simply reciprocate the loving dealings of the other part are just like merchants. They give in loving affairs as much as they get from the other party. Practically there is no question of love. It is simply business dealing, and it is self-interested or self-centred. Better the second class of men, who love in spite of the opposite party’s contrariness; even those without a tinge of loving affairs are better than the merchants. Sincere love can be seen when the father and mother love their children in spite of their children’s neglect. The third class neither reciprocates nor neglects. They can be further divided into two classes. One is the self-satisfied, who do not require anyone’s love. They are called atmarama, which means they are absorbed in the thought of the Supreme Personality of Godhead and so do not care whether one loves them or not. But another class are ungrateful men. They are called callous. The men in this group revolt against superior persons. For instance, a son, in spite of receiving all kinds of things from loving parents, may be callous and not reciprocate. Those in this class are generally known as gurudruha, which means they receive favours from the parents or the spiritual master and yet neglect them.*

“My dear friends, you might be aggrieved by My words and acts, but you must know that sometimes I do not reciprocate my devotees’ dealings with Me. It appears that my devotees are very much attached to Me, but sometimes I do not reciprocate their feelings properly in order to increase their love for Me more and more. If I can very easily be approached by them, they might think, ‘Krishna is so easily available’. So sometimes I do not respond. If a person has no money but after some time accumulates some wealth and then loses it, he will think of the lost property twenty-four hours a day. Similarly, in order to increase the love of My devotees, sometimes I appear to be lost to them, and instead of forgetting Me, they feel their loving sentiments for Me increase.”*

84 Therefore we may conclude that the Supreme Personality of Godhead is omnipotent, and although He is never forced to do anything, He voluntarily performs wonderful, blissful transcendental pastimes and in this way delights His devotees. This is also described in Shrimad Bhagavatam 8.3.8 the verse quoted at the beginning of this anuccheda.

85 Because the Supreme Personality of Godhead is all-powerful, His mercy brings happiness in its wake.

This is described in the following saying:

"The mercy of an incompetent fool brings suffering to those who receive it, whereas the mercy of a powerful and intelligent person brings happiness."

Anuccheda 48

1 The statement of the Sruti-sastra that the Supreme has neither hands nor feet means that the eternal, spiritual, limitless, blissful form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, has spiritual and not material limbs. This statement of the Vedas does not mean anything else. That this is so is confirmed by the following statement of the Personified Vedas (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.87.28):

"O Lord, You are independent. Although You have no material senses, Your potency maintains the senses of everyone. The demigods and the goddess Maya worship You with offerings. As small kings carry others' offerings to the great emperor, so the awe-struck demigods carry the living entities' offerings to You, the creator of the worlds."

2 This verse should be understood in the following way: The material external senses of the conditioned souls are different from the conditioned souls themselves just as the doer is different from the activities he performs, or, in one sense, a fire is different from its activity of burning. The external senses of the conditioned soul are material in nature and different from the spiritual form of the soul itself. In this way it is said that the conditioned soul 'has senses', which is equivalent to saying 'has external material senses different from himself'. The Supreme Personality of Godhead never has external material senses attached to His original spiritual form. His spiritual senses are an integral part of his spiritual form, and are, therefore, not different from His self. In this verse the word 'svarat' is used to mean 'self-manifest.' This word is used to describe the Supreme Lord's senses which are a 'self-manifest' part of His spiritual form, and not an external imposition as they are for the conditioned souls. In this way it should be understood that the Personality of Godhead does not 'have' senses in the same way the conditioned soul does. The conditioned soul is encased in a material body and attached to a set of material senses. The Lord, however, although present within the conditioned soul's heart as the Supersoul, is free from the encumbrance of a set of external material senses. In this way the Lord does not 'have' senses.

3 The Supreme Lord's lotus feet, which imply the existence of His spiritual limbs and senses, are described in the following prayer, where the Personified Vedas say at the time of universal annihilation (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.87.23):

"Women such as the gopis were attached to Krishna and wanted to be embraced by the arms of Krishna, which resemble the beautiful round shape of a snake. Similarly there are the Vedic hymns, and we also concentrate upon Your lotus feet to go back home, back to Godhead."*

4 This verse should be understood in the following way: "O Supreme Lord, We, who are the spiritual masters of the greatest learned scholars, are engaged in glorifying Your wonderful transcendental senses. Why, then, is it sometimes said in the Vedic literatures that You are without senses? You are said to be without senses because You have no material senses. All Your senses are an integral part (svarat) of Your spiritual form, and they are not material."

5 At this point someone may object: "The Personality of Godhead is manifested in the many forms of His various incarnations. How is it possible that these different forms have senses that are an integral part of the Supreme Lord's original spiritual form. Clearly, the bodies of the Lord's various incarnations as well as the sets of senses attached to those bodies must be impositions on the original identity of the Lord. Such senses cannot be self-manifested non imposed senses as you have described."

To this objection I reply: The spiritual form of the Personality of Godhead is actually one, although He may appear in many different features in many places. In this way His senses are not different from His self regardless of the feature He is inclined to manifest at any particular moment. That the spiritual form of the Supreme Lord is none, although manifested variously, is confirmed by the following statements of Vedic literature:

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is blissful and eternal. Although He is the oldest is completely free from the infirmities of old-age. Although He manifests Himself in many different forms, all these actually form a single transcendental form."

Brhad-aranyaka Upanisad 4.4.19

"Although the Supreme Personality of Godhead may appear to be different forms, the forms are actually one single transcendental form. These forms are not at all different from each other."

Katha Upanisad 2.1.11

"The hands, feet, face, abdomen, and other parts of the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are completely spiritual in nature. These limbs of the Lord are all full of transcendental bliss."

Smṛti-sastra

6 At this point Lord Krishna, taking the part of the devil's advocate, might raise the following objection: "My friend, what evidence do you have that the potency of such transcendental senses is present within Me?":

To this objection I reply: O Lord, the Personified Vedas address You saying (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.87.28): 'akhila-karaka-sakti-dharah' (O Lord, it is You who enable the eyes and other senses of the living entities to act). Therefore, because the powers of the conditioned souls' senses comes from You, we must conclude that all powers of all senses are originally present within You in perfection and completeness.

7 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the original source of all the powers of the senses is also confirmed by the following statements of the Upanisads:

"The power of the living force present in the individual living entities is manifested from the living force of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and the powers of the eyes and other senses are similarly manifested from the eyes and senses of the Supreme Personality."

Brhad-aranyaka Upanisad 4.4.18

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead naturally has all powers to acquire knowledge (jnana-sakti) and do whatever He wishes (sandhini-sakti and kriya-sakti)."

Svetasvatara Upanisad 6.8

8 This is also explained in the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.4.4):

"From the senses of the Supreme Personality of Godhead the working and knowledge acquiring senses of the embodied conditioned souls gain their power. From the Lord's breath the conditioned souls attain knowledge, bodily power, sensory power, and the power to act."

9 The Vedic literatures say the Supreme Lord has senses, and at other times the Vedas say the Supreme Lord has no senses. Some examples follow:

"Because the Supreme Godhead has no senses, therefore He cannot be described."

Vedanta-sutra 2.1.31

"Because the Supreme Godhead is the origin of the sense of hearing and all other senses, it should be understood that He has His own sense of hearing and His own set of all other senses as well."

Vedanta-sutra 2.1.27

"The Supreme Lord has no senses and no duty He is obliged to perform."

Svetasvatara Upanisad 6.8

"From You, O Supreme Lord, the powers of the conditioned souls' senses are manifested. For this reason the powers of the senses are originally present in You."

Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.87.28

These statements may appear contradictory and illogical, but the fact is they all explain the same truth: that the Supreme Lord does not have material senses, for His senses are spiritual.

10 The explanation of Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.87.28 continues:

This verse explains that Indra and the other demigods (animisah), whose glory is inferior to that of the Supreme Lord, along with the Brahmas and other universal creators (visva-srjah), who are worshipable for the Indras and other demigods, make offerings (balim vahanti) to You (tava) O Lord, with respectfully raised heads (ut). These demigods are accompanied by the illusory potency Maya-devi, who is their supervisor and controller. In order to obtain auspiciousness for herself, whose power is simply a pale reflection of that of the Lord, who is full of all transcendental power and bliss, Maya-devi also brings offerings to the Supreme Lord. Human beings also make offerings to the Lord (Samadanti) in the forms of various Vedic sacrifices, and after the offerings are complete, they eat the sacred remnants.

11 Here the example is given of the earthly kings. As small kings being tribute to the emperor, so the demigods and other living entities make offerings to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Why do they make these offerings? Because the Supreme Lord has commanded them.

12 That the various demigods are obedient to the commands of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is confirmed by the following statement of Taittiriya Upanisad (2.8.1):

“Out of fear of the Supreme Personality of Godhead the wind blows. Out of fear of the Supreme Personality of Godhead the sun rises. Out of fear of the Supreme Personality of Godhead fire burns, the moon shines, and death moves about, taking its toll.”

13 At this point the Supreme Personality of Godhead might object: “Please speak whatever evidence you have, if indeed you have some evidence, to prove that My hands and other limbs and senses are an integral part of My transcendental personality and not an external imposition as is the case with the conditioned souls.”

To the Lord’s objection I reply: In Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.87.28 the Personified Vedas declare that the various demigods (animisah) who are predominating deities of the various senses and creators of the various universal ingredients (visva-srjah), as Brahma and the prajapatis are, all bring presentations (balim udvahanti) as offerings to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. From this we may understand that the presiding deities of the various senses consider themselves subordinate to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and because they take shelter of Him they are able to discharge their duties as controllers of the senses. Because the Personality of Godhead, therefore, is the supreme among all presiding deities of the senses, and there is no one superior to Him in this respect, it may be concluded that His senses are not a gift from someone else, but they are an integral part of His original transcendental form. Someone may object to this, saying that the illusory potency Maya-devi is the supreme among the presiding deities of the senses and not the Personality of Godhead. This objection is refuted by the use of the word ‘mayaya’ in this verse. The word ‘mayaya’ here indicates that Maya-devi also brings presentations to the Personality of Godhead and considers herself His servant.

14 At this point the Supreme Personality of Godhead may raise the following objection: “All right, if the demigods are not the ultimate predominating deities of the senses, then certainly the individual living entities themselves are:”

To this objection I reply: This verse from Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.87.28) explains that the individual living entities also present offerings to the Supreme Personality of Godhead and thus accept a position subordinate to Him. O Lord, it is You who grant the demigods jurisdiction over the sense-organs by which the living entities are able to perceive the various interactions of material nature. By comparison the individual living entities have only a small jurisdiction over the sense-instruments. They are certainly not the ultimate presiding deities over all the senses. That Supreme predominating deity over the actions of the senses is none other than Yourself.

1 The limbs and senses of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are spiritual and therefore different from the material senses which cover the conditioned living entities, for this reason the Vedas declare ‘apani-padam’ (the Supreme has no hands or feet). That the form and senses of the Personality of Godhead are not material is also confirmed in the following words spoken by Shrimati Rukmini-devi to Lord Krishna (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.60.45):

“A man within this material world is just a dead body. In fact, superficially, the living entity is covered by this body, which is nothing but a bag of skin decorated with beards and moustaches, hairs on the body, nails on the fingers, and hairs on the head. Within this decorated bag there are bunches of muscles, bundles of bones, amid pools of blood, always mixed up with stool, urine, mucus, bile and polluted air, and enjoyed by different kinds of insects and germs. A foolish woman accepts such a dead body as her husband, and in sheer misunderstanding loves him as her dear companion. This is only possible because such a woman has never tasted the ever-blissful flavour of Your lotus feet.”*

2 This statement of Shrimati Rukmini-devi describes the spiritual, blissful nature of the Supreme Personality of Godhead’s hair and other limbs and senses, which are different from the material limbs and senses of the embodied souls. When the demigod Brahma blessed Hiranyakasipu that he would not be killed by different varieties of living entities (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.3.37), Brahma said that no one alive or dead would kill Hiranyakasipu. This means both that Hiranyakasipu could be killed by the claws of Lord Nrsimhadeva (claws being neither alive nor dead), and also that Hiranyakasipu could be killed by the spiritual form of Lord Nrsimhadeva, which is neither alive in the same way material bodies are alive, nor dead. That the spiritual form of the Lord is not materially alive or dead is confirmed in the following statements of the Upanisads, which negate firstly material life, and secondly inert lifelessness:

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead does not have a material mind as the conditioned souls do. He does not have a body that is alive in the material sense, and at the same time, in the spiritual sense He is eternally alive and can never be killed. In other words His form is completely spiritual and not at all material."

Mundaka Upanisad 2.1.2

"The Vedic literatures are manifested from the breathing of the living Supreme Personality of Godhead."

Brhad-aranyaka Upanisad 4.5.11

3 The spiritual nature of the Supreme Lord's form is also described in the following statement of Varaha Purana:

"The form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is not a material production of fat, marrow, bones and similar substances and neither is His form a magical production of mystic illusion produced by yogic power. Because the Lord is the Supreme Controller of everything His form is eternal, spiritual, infallible, unvanquishable and all-powerful."

4 This verse confirms that the Lord's form is neither material nor a production of yoga magic. Because the Personality of Godhead is the supreme master of everything that exists, His form is eternal. This verse also confirmed that the Lord's eternal spiritual form is omniscient and omnipotent, able to perform anything the Lord desires. The Lord's form is different from the forms of the conditioned souls in the sense that the conditioned souls have an external material body made of inert and lifeless material elements. The material body of the conditioned soul is like a corpse covering the living spirit souls (jiva cchavam). The Supreme Personality of Godhead, however, does not have such a covering of inert matter. His form is spiritual and alive. It is not different from Himself. This is the difference between the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead and the external material bodies of the conditioned souls. The Supreme Personality of Godhead's form is unchanging and lives forever. It is spiritual, eternal, full of bliss, and supremely worshipable. This is the difference between the spiritual form of the Personality of Godhead and the external material bodies of the conditioned souls.

1 The Vedas sometimes say the Supreme Personality of Godhead has neither name nor form, and other times say He does have a name and form. In this dispute the following conclusion is given (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.4.31):

"The two parties - namely the theists and the atheists. The theist, who accepts the Supersoul, finds the spiritual cause through mystic yoga. The Sankhyite, however, who merely analyses the material elements, comes to a conclusion of impersonalism and does not accept a supreme cause - whether Bhagavan, Paramatma or even Brahma. Instead, he is preoccupied with the superfluous, external activities of material nature. Ultimately, however, both parties demonstrate the Absolute Truth because although they offer opposing statements, their object is the same ultimate cause. They are both approaching the same Supreme Brahman, to whom I offer my respectful obeisances."*

2 This verse says there are two parties of philosophers. Some Vedic literatures recommend worship of the gigantic Universal Form of the Personality of Godhead. In this view the entire universe is the form of the Lord. The lower planetary system is His lotus feet, and various other parts of the universe correspond to various parts of the gigantic body of the Lord. In this conception the names of various objects, such as a pitcher, a piece of cloth, etc. may be considered names of the Supreme Lord because the entire universe is nothing but the Lord's gigantic body. This view, which accepts that the Lord has a form and name, is referred to in this verse as the party that says 'asti' (there is a form and name of the Lord).

The second party follows the speculative scriptures of sankhya philosophy, which asserts that the Lord has neither name nor form. According to these sankhyites, the Universal Form is an imagination, for the Supreme Personality of Godhead does not have a material form or name. This second party is identified by the phrase 'nasti' (there is no form or name of the Lord.)

3 Although these views seem to contradict each other, both are supported by the preceding statements of Shrimad Bhagavatam. Examples of quotations supporting each view follow:

"The Personality of Godhead manifests the entire universe as His form. He may be addressed by various spiritual names, which are inconceivable to the material senses. When will that Supreme Personality of Godhead be pleased with me?"*

Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.4.28

"Anything expressed by material vibrations, anything ascertained by material intelligence and anything experienced by the material senses or concocted within the material mind is but an effect of the modes of nature and therefore has nothing to do with the real nature of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The Supreme Lord is beyond the creation of this material world, for He is the source of the material qualities and creation. As the cause of all causes, He exists before the creation. I wish to offer my respectful obeisances unto Him."*

Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.4.29

4 Someone may object: "In this verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.4.31) the different views of the theists and atheistic sankhyites are described. Do these two parties not perceive two different objects? I think that is the proper way to understand their disagreement."

To this objection I reply: This verse clearly explains that these two parties perceive the same object (eka-sthayoh).

The Supreme has no material form, and therefore one party proclaims that the Supreme has no form or name. At the same time the Supreme does have a spiritual form and name, and therefore another party proclaims that the Supreme has a form and name. In this way there is no real difference of opinion among the transcendentalists in this matter, and there is no real contradiction in what at first may appear contradictory statements of the Vedas.

5 This seeming difference of opinion about the nature of the Supreme is also resolved by the following statement of Maharaja Dhruva, who describes the non-material nature of the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.9.13):

"My dear Lord, O Supreme Unborn, I know that the different varieties of living entities, such as animals, trees, birds, reptiles, demigods and human beings, are spread throughout the universe, which is caused by the total material energy, and I know that they are sometimes manifest and sometimes unmanifest; but I have never experienced the supreme form I behold as I see You now. Now all kinds of methods of theorising have come to an end."*

6 The word 'rupam' (form) and its relation to the two views of the nature of the Lord (as with and without name and form), is described in Vishnu Purana:

"O King, the Supreme Godhead has a form , and at the same time He has no form. He is simultaneously immanent and transcendent."

In the previously quoted statement of Dhruva Maharaja the words 'atah param' refer to the four-armed forms of Lord Narayana and other forms of the Supreme Lord. The words 'na vedmi' mean 'I have never experienced the supreme form I behold as I see You now.'

7 That the Personality of Godhead has no material names and forms because all His names and forms are spiritual is also described in the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (6.4.33):

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is inconceivably opulent, who is devoid of all material names, forms and pastimes, and who is all-pervading, is especially merciful to the devotees who worship His lotus feet. Thus He exhibits transcendental forms and names with His different pastimes. May that Supreme Personality of Godhead, whose form is eternal and full of knowledge and bliss, be merciful to me."*

8 This verse explains that the Supreme Personality of Godhead, although He is devoid of all material names, forms, and pastimes, nevertheless exhibits transcendental forms and names (namani rupani ca bheje) with His transcendental birth (janma) and different pastimes (karmabhih). The faulty reasoning of they who insist that the Supreme has no names or forms at all is refuted in this verse by the use of the word 'ananta' (unlimited), for if the Supreme Godhead has no form, names, qualities, or pastimes then His power to act is certainly sharply curtailed. Because His power is unlimited (ananta), He is the full possessor of innumerable transcendental forms, names, qualities and pastimes.

9 The unlimited forms, names and opulences of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are described by the Pracetas in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.30.31):

"Dear Lord, we shall therefore pray for Your benediction because You are the Supreme beyond all transcendence and because there is no end to Your opulences. Consequently You are celebrated by the name Ananta."*

10 Because the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the origin of innumerable transcendental forms, names, qualities and pastimes, He is known as 'Bhagavan', the possessor (van) of the opulences (bhaga) that are His potencies. His potencies are not an illusion (maya). They are described by the word 'parama', which means 'the supreme (para) opulence (ma)'. Any other interpretation of these words would contradict the truth that the Lord is transcendental and supreme.

11 That the form and attributes of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are not a product of the illusory material energy maya is confirmed by the Vedic literatures:

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is full of all powers and opulences. Because He is beyond the influence of the material energy maya, the saintly devotees know that He is the Supreme."

12 At this point someone may object: "The devotees argue that the Supreme has spiritual but not material forms and names. Why should we take these devotees as authorities? Why should the opinion of the devotees be taken with such seriousness?"

Considering that someone might raise such an objection, the Shrimad Bhagavatam glorifies the devotees in the following words (6.4.33, quoted previously):

"Supreme Personality of Godhead is especially merciful to the devotees who worship His lotus feet."*

The conclusion should be that the Supreme Personality of Godhead does not reveal Himself as fully to the yogis and sankhya philosophers as He does to the devotees. This is also confirmed by the following statement of the Mathara-sruti (as quoted in Shripada Madhvacarya's commentary on Vedanta-sutra 3.3.54):

"Devotional service enables one to see the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

In this way we may understand that the debate over whether the Supreme has a form, name and senses does not have any real meaning.

That the Supreme Personality of Godhead is very affectionate to His devotees is also confirmed by the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (6.4.35-36):

13 "The Supreme Personality of Godhead, Hari, who is extremely affectionate to His devotees, was very pleased by the prayers offered by Daksa, and thus He appeared at that holy place known as Aghamarsana. O Maharaja Pariksit, best of the Kuru dynasty, the Lord's lotus feet rested on the shoulders of His carrier Garuda, and He appeared with eight long mighty, very beautiful arms."*

14 By saying "The Supreme Personality of Godhead exhibits (bheje) transcendental names and forms with His different pastimes", this verse (6.4.33) confirms the fact that the Supreme Godhead has innumerable forms, names, and qualities. That the Lord's form is eternal is confirmed by the following statement of Maha-Narayana Upanisad (5.10):

"The supremely pure lotus feet of the Lord are eternal and have existed since time immemorial."

Because the Supreme Lord is identified as 'ananta' (unlimited) in this verse (6.4.33), it should be understood that His names and forms are also unlimited. That the Lord has spiritual but not material senses is also confirmed by Shridhara Svami who comments:

"The statement in this verse that the Supreme Godhead has neither names nor forms should be taken to mean that He does not have material names or forms."

Anuccheda 51

1 The form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead should be considered fully transcendental and spiritual because it is eternal, all-powerful, all-pervading, the shelter of everything, transcendental to all gross and subtle forms of material energy, manifested in the hearts of all conditioned souls, manifest only by the Lord's own wish, and clearly described in all Vedic literatures. The supreme philosopher, Brahma, has described the Lord's form in the following three verses of Shrimad Bhagavatam (3.9.2-4):

2 "The form which I see is eternally freed from material contamination and has advented to show mercy to the devotees as a manifestation of internal potency. This incarnation is the origin of many other incarnations, and I am born from the lotus flower grown from Your navel home."*

3 "O Lord, I do not see a form superior to Your present form of eternal bliss and knowledge. In Your impersonal Brahman effulgence in the spiritual sky, there is no occasional change and no deterioration of internal potency. I surrender unto You because whereas I am proud of my material body and senses, Your Lordship is the cause of the cosmic manifestation and yet You are untouched by matter.*

4 "The present form, or any transcendental form expanded by the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Shri Krishna, is equally auspicious for all the universes. Since You have manifested this eternal personal form upon whom Your devotees meditate, I therefore offer my respectful obeisances unto You. Those who are destined to be dispatched to the path of hell neglect Your personal form because of speculating on material topics."*

5 Shridhara Svami comments on these verses in the following words:

"Someone may object: Is it not true that you have not actually seen the transcendental Supreme Godhead? You may have seen some form, but that form is simply a production of the three modes of material nature. It is not at all transcendental, for the transcendental Supreme Godhead is devoid of all form and qualities.

"Thinking someone might argue in this way, Lord Brahma spoke the first two of these verses.

6 "In the first of these verses Brahma says: 'The form which I see is eternally freed from material contamination (avabodha-rasodayena sasvan-nivrtta-tamah) and has voluntarily advented to show mercy to the devotees (sad-anugrahaya grhitam). This incarnation is the origin of many other incarnations (avatara-sataika-bijam), who are all situated in the platform of transcendental goodness. I, who am the rajo-guna-avatara, are born from the lotus flower grown from Your navel home (yan-nabhi-padma-bhavanat).'

"In the second of these verses Brahma says: 'O my Lord (parama), I do not see (na pasyami) a form superior (param) to Your present form (bhavatah svarupam) of eternal bliss and knowledge. In your impersonal Brahman effulgence in the spiritual sky (ananda-matram), there is no occasional change (avikalpam) and no deterioration of internal potency (avidha-varcah). I surrender unto You (ashrito smi) because, whereas I am proud of my material body and senses (bhutendriyatmaka-madah), Your Lordship is the cause of the cosmic manifestation (visva-srjam), and yet You are untouched by matter (avisvam). You are the original creator of the material bodies and senses of the conditioned souls, and You are the ultimate object of worship.'

7 "Thinking someone might consider the Supreme Lord's form to be only recently, and not eternally, manifested, Brahma spoke the third verse, saying 'This present form, or any transcendental form expanded by the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Shri Krishna, is equally auspicious for all the universes (bhuvana-mangala). Since You have manifested this eternal personal form upon whom we, Your devotees meditate (upasakanam mangalaya dhyane darsitam), I therefore offer my respectful obeisances unto You (tubhyam name nuvidhema). You do not reveal this transcendental form to those of us whose minds are attached to the path of impersonalist speculation.'

"At this point Shri Krishna might object: 'If this is true, then why is it that some people decline to worship Me?'"

"To answer this question Brahma says: 'Those who are destined to be dispatched to the path of hell neglect Your personal form (yo nadrtah) because of speculating on material topics (asat-prasangaih) and accepting the faulty logic of atheistic philosophers.'"

8 Because Brahma is the spiritual master of the greatest philosophers, he never accepts any view in opposition to that expressed in these verses. The impersonalists and atheists, however, do not accept these statements of Lord Brahma. The impersonalists had previously been described by Brahma in the words 'avyakta-vartmabhinivesitatma' (those absorbed in meditation on the impersonal feature of the Supreme). The atheists were described by Shrila Shridhara Svami at the end of the previous quotation. Although the transcendental form of the Personality of Godhead is clearly established by all authorities, the atheists reject the direct experience of the learned devotees, and insist there is no God.

9 On the other hand, the devotees, who are qualified to properly understand the Supreme Lord's transcendental form are described in the following verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.9.5), where Brahma says:

"O my Lord, persons who smell the aroma of Your lotus feet carried by the air of Vedic sound through the holes of the ears, accept Your devotional service. For them You are never separated from the lotus of their hearts."*

10 In this verse the word 'tut' (but) is used to contrast the devotees of the Lord with the previously described non devotees. Brahma describes the devotees saying: "O Lord, the devotees have faith in the existence of Your transcendental form because they accept the Vedic revelation as the highest source of knowledge. They smell the aroma of Your lotus feet, carried by the air of Vedic sound (sruti-vata-nitam), through the holes of the ears, and they accept the devotional service of Your lotus feet (bhaktya grhita-caranah)."

Anuccheda 52

1 Even in the form of the empowered avesa-avatara, Lord Rsabhadeva is transcendental in nature. This is confirmed by the following verse of Shrimad Bhagavatam (5.5.19) where Lord Rsabhadeva says:

"My transcendental body (sac-cid-ananda-vigraha) looks exactly like a human form, but it is not a material human body. It is inconceivable. I am not forced by nature to accept a particular type of body; I take on a body by My own sweet will. My heart is also spiritual, and I always think of the welfare of My devotees. Therefore within My heart can be found the process of devotional service, which is meant for the devotees. Far from My heart have I abandoned irreligion (adharma) and non devotional activities). They do not appeal to Me. Due to all these transcendental qualities, people generally pray to Me as Rsabhadeva, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the best of all living entities."*

2 In this verse Lord Rsabhadeva says: 'My transcendental body (sac-cid-ananda-vigraha) looks exactly like a human form, but it is not a material human body (sariram). It is inconceivable (durvibhavyam). Within My heart (me hridayam) can be found the process of devotional service (dharmah), which is meant for the devotees. Far from My heart have I abandoned irreligion (adharma) and non devotional activities."

In order to demonstrate the proper mode of action for a self-satisfied transcendentalist, Lord Rsabhadeva, the speaker of this verse, pretended to leave His body at the final stage of His earthly pastimes. The ordinary conditioned souls mistakenly thought that He died or left His body.

3 Lord Rsabhadeva's final pastimes, and His so-called 'death' are described in Shrimad Bhagavatam (5.6.6):

"Lord Rsabhadeva was the head of all kings and emperors within this universe, but assuming the dress and language of an avadhuta, He acted as if dull and materially bound. Consequently no one could observe His divine opulence. He adopted this behaviour just to teach yogis how to give up the body. Nonetheless He maintained His original position as a plenary expansion of Lord Vasudeva, Krishna. Remaining always in that state, He gave up His pastimes as Lord Rsabhadeva within the material world. If, following in the footsteps of Lord Rsabhadeva, one can give up his subtle body, there is no chance that one will accept a material body again."*

4 Lord Rsabhadeva's celebrated abandonment of His body is described in the devotional scripture of Shrimad Bhagavatam (5.6.8): "While He was wandering about, a wild forest fire began. This fire was caused by the friction of bamboos, which were being blown by the wind. In that fire, the entire forest near Kutakacala and the body of Lord Rsabhadeva were burnt to ashes."*

5 We may note in this verse that the words 'tena saha' (with that body) are in the instrumental case, and the subject of the sentence, 'davalanah' (a forest-fire), is in the nominative case. The trees and other residents of the forest who gave up their material bodies in that forest-fire as Lord Rsabhadeva pretended to give up His spiritual form, all attained liberation.

6 The associates of Lord Ramacandra also attained liberation in the same way. This is described in Shrimad Bhagavatam (9.11.22):

"Lord Ramacandra returned to His abode, to which the bhakti-yogis are promoted. This is the place to which all the inhabitants of Ayodhya went after they served the Lord in His manifest pastimes by offering Him obeisances, touching His lotus feet, fully observing Him as a fatherlike King, sitting or lying down with Him like equals, or even just accompanying Him."*

7 In this way, Lord Rsabhadeva's disappearance in the forest fire is described. We may also note that at the end of this chapter in Shrimad Bhagavatam the chapter title is given: "The Appearance of Lord Rsabhadeva". The title clearly does not say 'the Birth of Lord Rsabhadeva', because the Lord was not born in the same way conditioned souls are, but rather He appeared in His transcendental body to perform His pastimes here.

1 If even the empowered incarnation Rsabhadeva had a spiritual body, then certainly the form of the Supreme Personality of godhead, Lord Krishna, is also transcendental and not at all material. The supremely exalted position of the Supreme Lord, Shri Krishna, is described in the following statement of Bhismadeva to Lord Krishna Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.9.41):

"At the Rajasuya-yajna (sacrifice) performed by Maharaja Yudhisthira, there was the greastest assembly of all the elite men of the world, the royal and learned orders, and in that great assembly Lord Shri Krishna was worshipped by one and all as the most exalted Personality of Godhead. This happened during my presence, and I remembered the incident in order to keep my mind upon the Lord."*

2 Shridhara Svami comments:

"In this verse Bhismadeva says: 'Lord Krishna, who is the soul (atma) of all the universes, was personally present (avih) before my eyes (mama drsi gocarah). How fortunate I am.'"

Anuccheda 54

1 The exalted position of Shri Krishna, the original Supreme Personality of Godhead, is also described in the following prayer spoken by Devaki-devi to Lord Krishna (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.3.24):

"My dear Lord, there are different Vedas, some which describe You as unperceivable through words and the mind. Yet You are the origin of the entire cosmic manifestation. You are Brahman, the greatest of everything, full of effulgence like the sun. You have no material cause, You are free from change and deviation, and You have no material desires. Thus the Vedas say that You are the substance. Therefore, my Lord, You are directly the origin of all Vedic statements, and by understanding You, one gradually understands everything. You are different from the light of Brahman and Paramatma, yet You are not different from them. Everything emanates from You. Indeed, You are the cause of all causes, Lord Vishnu, the light of all transcendental knowledge."*

2 In this verse Devaki-devi says: 'O Lord, the various Vedic literatures describe (prahuh) Your transcendental nature (rupam).' What is this nature of the Lord? Devaki says: 'O Lord, You are not perceivable to the words, mind and senses (avyaktam).' Although the Lord cannot be perceived in these ways, nevertheless Devaki says: 'You are Lord Vishnu, the Supreme, and You are now directly present before my eyes (saksat tvam visnuh)."

3 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead can be seen by the devotees is described in the Padma Purana, Nirmana-khanda, where Veda-vyasa prays to Lord Krishna:

"O Lord Madhusudana, the best of Vedic literatures proclaim that You are the eternally transcendental Supreme Brahman, the creator and master of all universes. O Lord, I wish to see You with my own eyes. Please grant me the power to see You."

4 In this verse Devaki addresses Lord Krishna as 'adhyatma-dipah' (the light of all transcendental knowledge). This means that Shri Krishna illuminates the truth about all causes and effects and about the real nature of all the living entities encased in various material bodies. Because Shri Krishna is thus adhyatma-dipa, there is no need for Devaki to fear that King Kamsa may harm Him, and this truth is clearly corroborated by Shridhara Svami in his commentary.

Anuccheda 55

1 The forms of the plenary expansions of Lord Krishna are also spiritual and transcendental. This is confirmed by Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.13.54):

"The visnu-murtis all had eternal, unlimited forms, full of knowledge and bliss and existing beyond the influence of time. Their great glory was not even to be touched by the jnanis engaged in studying the Upanisads."*

2 Shridhara Svami comments:

"In this verse the forms of the plenary expansions of Lord Krishna are described as being identical in their transcendental features. The word 'eka-rasah' here may be interpreted to mean either 'always the same', or 'always eternal (satya), full of knowledge (jnana), unlimited (ananta), and full of bliss (ananda).' The glory of these transcendental forms was not even to be touched (asprsta-bhuri-mahatmyah) by the jnanis engaged in studying the Upanisads (upanisad-drsam)."

3 In this verse the word 'matra' should be interpreted to mean that the various Vishnu expansions described in this verse had the same external features and the same internal identity, for they were all Lord Vishnu. This word should not be interpreted to mean that the various expansions were actually the impersonal featureless Brahman. Such a laboured and inappropriate interpretation clearly contradicts the statements of Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami in the Bhagavatam and Shrila Shridhara Svami in his commentary on the Bhagavatam. This impersonal interpretation is also refuted by the fourth line of this stanza, which states: "The great glory of these transcendental forms was not even to be touched by the impersonalist jnanis engaged in studying the Upanisads' (asprsta-bhuri-mahatmya appi hy upanisad-drsam). Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami refutes this impersonal interpretation by describing the transcendental reality of the Supreme Lord's form in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.15.38):

"The sages, headed by Sanaka Rsi, saw that the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Vishnu, who was formerly visible only within their hearts in ecstatic trance, had now actually become visible to their eyes. As He came forward, accompanied by His own associates bearing all paraphernalia, such as an umbrella and a camara fan, the white bunches of hair moved very gently, like two swans, and due to their favourable breeze the pearls garlanding the umbrella also moved, like drops of nectar falling from the white full moon or ice melting due to a gust of wind."*

The impersonal interpretation of the word 'matram' in this verse (10.13.54) cannot be accepted because Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami, the speaker of Shrimad Bhagavatam was not an impersonalist, but a great devotee of the Lord. That Sukadeva Gosvami was not an impersonalist, and that Shrimad Bhagavatam does not represent the impersonalist view is confirmed by the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (12.12.69):

"Let me offer my respectful obeisances unto my spiritual master, the son of Vyasadeva, Sukadeva Gosvami. It is he who defeats all inauspicious things within this universe. Although in the beginning he was absorbed in the happiness of Brahman realisation and was living in a secluded place, giving up all other types of consciousness, he became attracted by the most melodious pastimes of Lord Shri Krishna. He therefore mercifully spoke the supreme Purana, known as Shrimad Bhagavatam, which is the bright light of the Absolute Truth and which describes the activities of Lord Krishna."*

4 That the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are spiritual, eternal, and full of bliss and knowledge and not simply illusory representations of an impersonal reality, is also confirmed by the following statements of Shrimad Bhagavatam:

"The form of the Supreme Lord is full of supremely pure transcendental knowledge."

10.37.22

"I offer my respectful obeisances to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, whose transcendental form is full of the purest knowledge."

10.27.11

"O Lord, Your transcendental form is eternal and full of bliss and knowledge."

10.14.22

These statements of the Bhagavatam should be taken literally. No one should try to change their obvious meaning by word jugglery and try to make them mean something other than what they clearly say.

5 That the form of the Personality of Godhead is full of all transcendental bliss is also confirmed by the following statements of Shrimad Bhagavatam:

"When the ladies of Mathura saw the blissful forms of Krishna and Balarama with their eyes, they took them within their hearts and began to embrace Them to their fullest desire."*

10.41.28

"Kubja then took Krishna's lotus feet and placed them on her breasts, which were burning with the blazing fire of lust. By smelling the fragrance of Krishna's lotus feet, she immediately became relieved of all lusty desires. She was thus allowed to embrace Krishna, whose transcendental form is full of bliss. She was allowed to embrace Krishna with her two arms and thus mitigate her long cherished desire to have Krishna as a visitor in her house."*

10.48.7

6 That the forms of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are all full of knowledge and bliss is also confirmed by the Maha-Varaha Purana:

"The transcendental forms of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are eternal and imperishable. They were not created at a certain point, and they are never to be destroyed. They are not products of the material energy.

7 "All the forms of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are completely filled with transcendental bliss, knowledge, and all auspicious qualities. These spiritual forms of the Lord are free from all material defects." Anuccheda 56

1 This spiritual nature of Lord Krishna's form is also affirmed by Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.55):

"You should know Krishna as the original soul of all atmās (living entities). For the benefit of the whole universe, He has, out of His causeless mercy, appeared as an ordinary human being. He has done this with the strength of His own internal potency."*

2 Lord Brahma describes Shri Krishna's transcendental form in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.1):

"My dear Lord, You are the only worshipful Supreme Lord, Personality of Godhead; therefore I am offering my humble obeisances and prayers just to please You. Your bodily features are of the colour of clouds filled with water. You are glittering with silver electric flashes emanating from Your yellow garments. Let me offer my respectful repeated obeisances unto the son of Maharaja Nanda who is standing before me with conchshell earrings and peacock feather on His head. His face is beautiful; He is wearing a helmet, garlanded by forest flowers, and He stands with a morsel of food in His hand. He is decorated with cane, flute and a bugle made of buffalo horn. He stands before me with small lotus feet."*

3 In this verse (quoted in text 1) Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami says: "Try to become learned in spiritual science and try to understand this transcendental form of Shri Krishna (avehi). Do not try to understand Shri Krishna using material logic or any tool other than devotional service. For the benefit of the whole universe (jagad-dhitaya, and in order to attract the minds of all conditioned souls to His own transcendental form, He has out of His causeless mercy (mayaya), appeared as an ordinary human being (dehivabhati) and performed His own transcendental pastimes." We may note the use of the word 'iva' (like), which indicates a difference between the nature of Lord Krishna's having a form and the conditioned soul's having a form. The difference is that the Supreme, Lord Krishna, does not accept an external material body as the conditioned soul does.

4 That the sight of the Supreme Lord's transcendental form grants the supreme benediction to the devotee is confirmed by Dhruva Maharaja (Shrimad Bhagavatam 49.17):

"My Lord, O Supreme Lord, You are the supreme personified form of all benediction. Therefore, for one who abides in Your devotional service with no other desire, worshipping Your lotus feet is better than becoming king and lording it over a kingdom. That is the benediction of worshipping Your lotus feet."*

5 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"This verse should be understood to mean 'My Lord, O Supreme Lord (bhagavan), You are the blissful, supreme personified form of all benediction (purusartha-murteh). Your lotus feet (tava pada-padman) are a more valuable benediction (satyasih), than the benediction (asisah) of becoming king and lording it over a kingdom.' One may ask: 'for whom is this benediction available?' The answer is given 'This supreme benediction is available to one who abides in Your devotional service with no other desire, worshipping Your lotus feet. (Anubhajatah).'"

Anuccheda 57

1 That the transcendental form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is identical with the Supreme Brahman described in the Vedas is explained by Maitreya Muni (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.21.8):

"Then, in the Satya-yuga, the lotus eyed Supreme Personality of Godhead, being pleased, showed Himself to that Kardama Muni and displayed His transcendental form, which can be understood only through the Vedas."*

2 This verse means: "Then in the Satya-yuga (krte yuge), the Supreme Personality of Godhead (bhagavan) showed Himself (darsayam asa) to that Kardama Muni (tam) and displayed His transcendental form (vapur dadhat), which is the Absolute Truth (brahma) which can be understood only through the Vedas."

In this way we conclude the description of the transcendental nature of the Supreme Lord's form.

Anuccheda 58

1 Now that we have established that the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is different in kind from the material bodies covering the conditioned souls, we may also understand that the Lord's form is not temporary and subject to the destructive influence of time, as are earthen pots and various other objects made of inert matter, that the perfect and complete transcendental form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is eternal and not subject to the six material transformations (birth, growth, maintenance, change, dwindling and destruction) is established by Lord Brahma in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.23):

2 "My conclusion is, therefore, that You are the Supreme Soul, Absolute Truth, and the supreme original person. Although You have expanded Yourself in so many Vishnu forms, or in living entities and energies, by Your inconceivable transcendental potencies, You are the supreme one without a second. You are the source of the original brahmajyoti' indeed, the brahmajyoti is nothing but Your personal bodily effulgence. Your body is eternal, indestructible and full of bliss. You are also niranjana because Your pastimes, as the little son of mother Yasoda or the Lord of the gopis, are never contaminated by the material qualities. You are always complete, one without a second, and You are transcendental to both nescience and knowledge. Thus You are the original amṛta, the indestructible nectar of immortality."*

3 In the beginning of Lord Brahma's prayers (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.1), Brahma explained that the form of Shri Krishna, who has a dark complexion the colour of a rain-cloud, is the most worthy object of praise. We shall now demonstrate that Shri Krishna is the supreme object of praise and, that He is the Supersoul present in all living entities, and the supreme shelter of everyone.

4 That Shri Krishna is the shelter of everyone and everything and the Supersoul present in the hearts of all living entities is confirmed by the following statements of Lord Brahma:

"My dear Lord, leaving aside all other things and just considering today's happenings - what I have seen - are they not all due to Your inconceivable energies? First of all I saw You alone; thereafter You expanded Yourself as Your friends, the calves and all the existence of Vrndavana; then I saw You and all the boys as four-handed Vishnus and They were being worshipped by all the elements and demigods, including myself. Again They were all wound up and You remained alone as You were before. Does this not mean that You are the Supreme Lord, Narayana, the origin of everything, and from you everything emanates, and again everything enters into You, and You remain the same as before?"*

Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.18

"You should know Krishna as the original soul of all atmās (living entities). For the benefit of the whole universe, He has, out of His causeless mercy, appeared as an ordinary human being. He has done this with the strength of His own internal potency."*

Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.55

5 In this verse Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami intends to say: "O Krishna, because You are the Supersoul present in the hearts of all living entities, it should be understood that You are eternal, and because You are the ultimate shelter upon which everything rests, whatever is eternal is so because of Your eternity. You are the original abode of all eternity."

6 That Shri Krishna is the resting place of all immortality is confirmed by the demigods, who offer the following prayer to Lord Krishna (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.2.26):

"O Lord, You never deviate from Your vow, which is always perfect because whatever You decide is perfectly correct and cannot be stopped by anyone. Being present in the three phases of cosmic manifestation - creation, maintenance and annihilation - You are the Supreme Truth. Indeed, unless one is completely truthful, one cannot achieve Your favour, which therefore cannot be achieved by hypocrites. You are the active principle, the real truth, in all the ingredients of creation, and therefore you are known as antaryami, the inner force. You are equal to everyone, and Your instructions apply for everyone, for all time. You are the beginning of all truth. Therefore, offering our obeisances, we surrender unto you. Kindly give us protection."*

7 That Shri Krishna is the original source of all eternity is confirmed by the following statement of Mahabharata (Udyama-parva 70.12):

"All eternity is situated within the Supreme Eternal Lord Krishna. Because all eternity has its source in Him, He is therefore known by the name satya (the eternal)."

8 That Shri Krishna is completely free from the material transformations (birth, growth, maintenance, change, dwindling, and destruction) is confirmed by Lord Brahma (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.23):

"O My Lord, You are the origin of everything (adya)."

Lord Brahma's statement in Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.18 also confirms that Lord Krishna never undergoes the transformation known as birth. That Lord Krishna is never actually born is confirmed by Padma Purana:

"Although Lord Hari appears before the eyes of His devotees, He never undergoes the material transformation known as birth."

9 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Shri Krishna, never undergoes the transformation known as birth is also confirmed by the following statement of Skanda Purana:

"Fools do not understand the truth about the blissful, eternal and unchanging Supreme Personality of Godhead, the cause of all causes. They mistakenly think that the Supreme Lord has taken birth in a material body composed of the five elements. He actually never takes birth."

10 That Shri Krishna is the origin of everything and the oldest is confirmed by Lord Brahma (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.23):

"O Lord, You are the oldest, the original person (purusah puranah)."

From this we may understand that Lord Krishna always existed. He existed before the creation of the material world in an eternally youthful body. Although He is the oldest, He remains eternally youthful.

11 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead existed before the creation of the material universes is confirmed in Brhad-aranyaka Upanisad (1.4.1):

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead existed before the creation of the material universes."

12 In this way it may be seen that Shri Krishna is free from the material transformations of birth. The second material transformation is maintenance. That Shri Krishna is free from any consideration of maintenance is confirmed by Brahma in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.23):

"O Lord Krishna, You are always perfect and complete (purna)."

Because Lord Krishna is always perfect, he never grows (the third transformation).

"The fourth material transformation is change. Brahma confirms that Shri Krishna is free from change in the following words (from the same Bhagavatam verse):

"O Lord Krishna, You are eternally full of all transcendental bliss (ajasra-sukha)."

Because Lord Krishna is always blissful His condition of life never changes.

13 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead is full of bliss is also confirmed by the following statement of Brhad-aranyaka Upanisad (3.9.28):

"The Supreme Godhead is full of all knowledge and bliss."

We may note that in this statement the neuter word 'ananda' is used instead of the masculine word 'sukha'.

14 The fifth material transformation is dwindling. Brahma confirms that Shri Krishna is free from dwindling in these words (from the same Bhagavatam verse):

"O Lord Krishna, You are eternally free from decay and diminution (aksaya)."

The sixth material transformation is destruction. Brahma confirms that Shri Krishna is free from destruction in the following words (from the same Bhagavatam verse):

"O Lord Krishna, You are never to be destroyed. You are eternal (amrta)."

15 Lord Krishna's perfection and completeness are described by Brahma in the following words (from the same Bhagavatam verse):

"O Lord Krishna, You are unlimited and one without a second (ananta and advaya)."

This means that Shri Krishna is beyond all limitations of time, space and size and nothing can exist without the manifestation of His potencies.

In order to prove that Shri Krishna is eternal, Brahma explains that Shri Krishna is beyond the four kinds of result (birth, attainment of ends, change, and purification) which follow the actions of the conditioned souls. That Shri Krishna is not born (the first result), Brahma explains by the statement:

"O Lord Krishna, You are the origin of everything (adyah)."

The second result of work is the attainment of some end, which may be done either with physical endeavour, or as a result of knowledge. Shri Krishna does not need to endeavour physically to attain any end, for as Brahma says, He is the 'all pervading Supersoul (atma)', and at the same time Krishna does not need to undergo meditation or mental speculation to obtain some end, as the impersonalist philosophers do, because

He is Himself the 'origin of the Brahmajyoti (svayam-jyoti)', as Brahma says. The third result of work is change. Shri Krishna is free from change because, as Brahma says here, 'He never accepts a changing material body (upadhito mukta).' The fourth result of work is purification. Shri Krishna is never in need of purification because, as Brahma says 'He is always free from all contamination (niranjana).' In this way Shri Krishna remains aloof from the four kinds of results of work.

16 That Shri Krishna and His transcendental abode may be directly perceived by the devotees is explained in the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (2.9.22), where the Supreme Personality of Godhead says to Lord Brahma:

"The highest perfectional ingenuity is the personal perception of My abodes, and this has been possible because of your submissive attitude in the performance of severe penance according to My order."*

17 Shridhara Svami comments:

"In this verse Lord Krishna says to Brahma: 'By My mercy you are able to see this. Because I wish it, You may now directly perceive this (manisita).' One may ask: 'What is it that Brahma is able to see by the Lord's mercy?' The answer is given: 'You are now able to see My own abode (mama lokavalokanam yat).'"

18 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead reveals Himself to his devotees is also confirmed in the Narayanadhyatmya:

"Although the Supreme Personality of Godhead generally remains invisible, He may nevertheless be seen through the agency of His own transcendental potency."

19 At this point someone may object: "Is it not so that in the description of His opulences in Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.16.29) the Personality of Godhead said: 'among exalted persons (bhagavan) I appear as the son of Maharaja Vasudeva?' Is it not also so that at the end of this description of His opulences, the Supreme Lord said: 'These opulences of Mine are all transformations of the mind?' Clearly, from this we may understand that the form of Lord Krishna, the son of Vasudeva, is not the original Personality of Godhead, but rather the expansion of one of His opulences. Furthermore, does not the second quote establish the truth that the form of Lord Krishna and the other opulences of the Absolute Truth described in this passage, are not transcendental forms, but merely transformations of the material thinking process?"

To this objection I reply: My dear friend, these quotes are very nice, of course, but just as the sentence 'chatrino gacchanti' is ambiguous and requires some explanation before it is properly understood, in the same way, these verse Shrimad Bhagavatam require an elaborate explanation before they are properly understood.

20 In this connection we may note the use of the word 'param' in the following verse from the same section of Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.16.37), where Lord Krishna says:

"I am form, taste, aroma, touch and sound; false ego; the mahat-tattva; earth, water, fire, air and sky; the living entity; material nature; the modes of goodness, passion and ignorance. All these items, along with knowledge of their individual symptoms and the steady conviction that results from this knowledge, represents me."

21 We may note that in this verse the word 'param' refers to the Supreme Absolute Truth, According to this interpretation, then, the Supreme Brahman is counted among the opulences of the Lord, which are further described as (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.16.41) 'transformations of the mind'. Such an explanation of the nature of Brahman will clearly not satisfy those who are aware of the actual meaning of Vedic literatures. Brahman is not a material transformation. Brahman is free from any material covering or material external form, just as a threshed grain of rice is free from the external husk. This transcendental nature of Brahman is explained by the following statements of Shrimad Bhagavatam:

"O Supreme Lord, You are free from material coverings."

10.14.23

"I offer my respectful obeisances to the Supreme Lord, whose form is full of the purest transcendental knowledge."

10.37.22

22 Because this passage from the Eleventh Canto of Shrimad Bhagavatam appears to explain that the Supreme Brahman, and Lord Krishna, the son of Vasudeva are opulences of the Supreme and are simply material transformations of the mind, it should be understood that these statements (for at least this interpretation of them) contradict the description of the Supreme Brahman and Lord Krishna in the other passages of Vedic literature. Therefore, I say that these statement are not exactly true. There are some examples of passages in Vedic literatures that are not exactly true. One such statement is the following verse spoken by Bhismadeva (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.9.34):

“On the battlefield (where Shri Krishna attended Arjuna out of friendship), the flowing hair of Lord Krishna turned ashen due to the dust raised by the hoofs of the horses. And because of His labour, beads of sweat wetted His face. All these descriptions intensified by the wounds dealt by my sharp arrows, were enjoyed by Him let my mind thus go unto Shri Krishna.”*

Because the transcendental body of Lord Krishna can never be hurt or pierced by any weapon, it should be understood that the description of this pastime should not be taken as truth but is a specific illusion arranged by the Lord.

23 An example of a statement contrary to the truth, but yet given in Shrimad Bhagavatam, is mentioned in the following statement of Sukadeva Gosvami (in connection with Krishna’s lamentation during His battle with Salva) Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.77.30):

“O King Pariksit, although Krishna lamented when Salva attempted to trick Him into thinking that His father, Vasudeva, was killed, we should understand that in actuality, Lord Krishna was not at all fooled, and he did not lament. Although some sages may say that the Lord lamented, such statements are not fit to be accepted as truth.”*

24 That the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is spiritual and free from all material defects is also confirmed by the following statement of Skanda Purana:

“Lord Vishnu is completely aloof from the influence of the material energy. He is eternal, imperishable, unbreakable, undefeatable, and undecaying. He appears in this world and enjoys pastimes with His devotees. He pretends to be an ordinary human being, and in this role He may sometimes appear to be bound with ropes, or to bleed when wounded. Although these activities bewilder the demons, the liberated souls do not become bewildered. They always understand the actual nature of the Lord.”

25 As he was fighting with Krishna, Bhismadeva became momentarily overwhelmed by a demonic thought of harming Krishna, and in this way he became bewildered into thinking that Krishna has become wounded. Later Bhishma remembered that bewilderment as one remembers a painful nightmare, and He expressed that memory in the verse quoted previously (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.9.34).

26 Someone may ask: “How is it that Lord Krishna became so pure and free from material contamination that He could not be wounded or bleed? Did He come under the influence of some wonderfully purifying substance, or did He assiduously rid Himself of all impurities?”

In answer to this question I explain: Shri Krishna is eternally pure and does not require to do something to become free from contamination. He did not require to come under the influence of some purifying agent because He is Himself perfect and complete, and therefore everything that purifies is already present within Him. In this the same way He does not require to rid Himself of impurities, since impurities can never enter Him, as Lord Brahma explains (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.23): ‘O Lord Krishna, You are always free from all kinds of material contamination (niranjana).’ In this way it may be understood that the form of Shri Krishna is always uncontaminated and full of pure transcendental knowledge.

Anuccheda 59

In this way we have explained that the Supreme Personality of Godhead is naturally endowed with innumerable powers and opulences. Just as light has certain natural qualities opposite to the nature of darkness, in the same way the Personality of Godhead has a host of transcendental qualities different from the qualities of matter. We have also established that the Personality of Godhead is supremely perfect and complete because He is the master of all potencies. All of His qualities are eternal and He is full of all transcendental bliss. Because He is the reservoir in which all transcendental qualities, powers and opulences rest, He is known as the Supreme Personality of Godhead (bhagavan). Just as laddu candy is by nature aromatic and has certain natural attributes that cannot be separated from it, in the same way the Supreme Personality of Godhead possesses a host of wonderful transcendental attributes. The form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is accepted by the most learned transcendentalists as the highest manifestation of the Absolute Truth. This is confirmed by the following prayer of Lord Brahma to Shri Krishna Shrimad Bhagavatam

(3.9.2):

"The form which I see is eternally freed from material contamination and has advented to show mercy to the devotees as manifestation of internal potency. This incarnation is the origin of many other incarnations, and I am born from the lotus flower grown from Your navel home."*

Anuccheda 60

1 In this way we have proven that the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is perfect and complete in all respects. However, in order to even more firmly establish this fact, we shall now describe the Lord's ornaments and paraphernalia. In the following statement Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami describes the Supreme Lord appearance in this world along with His own transcendental ornaments and paraphernalia (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.3.9):

"Vasudeva then saw the newborn child, who had very wonderful lotus like eyes and who bore in His four hands the four weapons sankha, cakra, gada and padma. On His chest was the mark of Shrivatsa and so His neck the brilliant Kaustubha gem. Dressed in yellow, His body blackish like a dense cloud, His scattered hair fully grown, and His helmet and earrings sparkling uncommonly with the valuable gem Vaidurya, the child, decorated with a brilliant belt, armlets, bangles and other ornaments, appeared very wonderful."*

2 The ornaments and paraphernalia of the Lord are in one sense non different from His transcendental form. Visvarupa explains this to Maharaja Indra in the following words Shrimad Bhagavatam (8.8.32-33):

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead, the living entities, the material energy, the spiritual energy and the entire creation are all individual substances. In the ultimate analysis, however, together they constitute the supreme one, the Personality of Godhead. Therefore those who are advanced in spiritual knowledge see unity in diversity. For such advanced persons, the Lord's bodily decorations, His name, His fame, His attributes and forms and the weapons in His hand are manifestations of the strength of His potency. According to their elevated spiritual understanding, the omniscient Lord, who manifests various forms, is present everywhere. May He always protect us everywhere from all calamities."*

3 In this verse Visvarupa says: "Those who are advanced in spiritual knowledge see unity in diversity (aikatmyanubhavanam). The Supreme Personality of Godhead appears before these advanced transcendentalists in His form full of the nectar of (mayaya) appears before His devotees in His own transcendental form full of all wonderful potencies, so He also displays to them His bodily decorations (bhusana), His name, His fame, His attributes, and forms and weapons in His hand, which are all the manifestations of the strength of His potency (saktih). These great transcendentalists directly perceive the true nature of the Lord and His paraphernalia (satya-manena). The Lord, who manifest as various wonderful forms (sarvaih svarupaih) is present everywhere. May He always protect (patu) us (nah) everywhere from all calamities."

4 In the following verses of the Vishnu-dharma Purana, Maharaja Bali offers prayers to the Lord's Sudarsana Cakra:

"Even the greatest of yogis cannot completely or properly glorify the Lord's Sudarsana Cakra. Because of the illumination of this whirling Cakra, this demon Bali has been able to see the entire universe with its three planetary systems of Bhur, Bhuvar and Svar-lokas."

5 Maharaja Ambarisa's prayers to the Sudarsana Cakra are recorded in the Ninth Canto of Shrimad Bhagavatam, and the reader is referred to them for a more elaborate description. In various places in the Vedic literatures, the Sudarsana Cakra, flag of Garuda, and other paraphernalia of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, are described as 'causeless'. This means that the Lord's paraphernalia is transcendental and has no material origin, just as the Lord Himself has no origin.

6 Lord Kapiladeva describes some of the Lord's ornaments and paraphernalia (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.28.28): 'The yogi should meditate upon His club which is named Kaumodaki and is very dear to him. This club smashes the demons, who are always inimical soldiers, and is smeared with their blood. One should concentrate on the nice garland on the neck of the Lord, which is always surrounded by bumblebees, with their nice buzzing sound, and one should meditate upon the pearl necklace on the Lord's neck, which is considered to represent the pure living entities who are always engaged in His service.'*

7 The Lord's Kaustubha gem is described in the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (12.13.10):

"The unborn Supreme Personality of godhead wears His own Brahman effulgence in the form of the Kaustubha jewel on His chest.”*

8 As the Supreme Personality of Godhead is willing to be considered non different from the universe in order to facilitate the conditioned souls’ worship of Him, so the Kaustubha gem is considered non different from the transcendental form of the Personality of Godhead.

9 That the Kaustubha gem is non different from the transcendental form of the Personality of Godhead is also confirmed by Vishnu Purana:

“The Supreme Personality of Godhead, Hari, personally appears as the Kaustubha gem, which is pure, free from all contamination of this material world, and untouched by the modes of material nature.”

Anuccheda 61

1 The spiritual world of Vaikunthaloka is non different from the Lord in the same way, and it is repeatedly described in the Vedic literatures so the slow witted conditioned souls may become aware of its existence. For example, Vaikunthaloka is described in the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (2.9.9):

“The Personality of Godhead, being thus very much satisfied with the penance of Lord Brahma was pleased to manifest His personal abode, Vaikuntha, the supreme planet above all others. This transcendental abode of the Lord is adored by all self-realised persons freed from all kinds of miseries and fear of illusory existence.”*

2 Because the spiritual world of Vaikuntha cannot be reached by ordinary materially pious activities, because the Vedic literatures explain that it is beyond the limits of the material creation, because it is glorified as that place in which the residents do not fall into the illusion of maya, because it is reached when one become unaffected by the three modes of material nature, because by entering a temple of Lord Vishnu even in this material world, one actually enters the spiritual world, and consequently becomes free from the touch of the three modes of material nature, therefore it should be understood that the spiritual world of Vaikuntha is actually a manifestation of the spiritual form of the Personality of Godhead, that the material energy, that it is eternal, that it may be obtained only by devotional service which eclipses the so-called happiness of liberation, and that it is full of eternity, knowledge and bliss.

3 That the realm of Vaikuntha cannot be obtained by material activities, pious or otherwise, is confirmed by the Supreme Lord in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.24.12-14):

“Heaven was established as the residence of the demigods. Bhuvarloka as that of the ghostly spirits and the earth system as the place of human beings and other mortal creatures. Those mystics who strive for liberation are promoted beyond these three divisions.”

4 “Lord Brahma created the region below the earth for the demons and the Naga snakes. Thus the destinations of the three worlds were all arranged as the corresponding reactions for different kinds of work performed within the three modes of material nature.”

5 “By mystic yoga, great austerities and the renounced order of life, the pure destinations of Maharloka, Janoloka, Tapoloka and Satyaloka are attained. But by devotional yoga, one achieves My transcendental abode.”

6 In these verses the Lord says: “Those mystics who strive for liberation (siddhanam) by performance of mystic yoga and other spiritual activities are promoted beyond (param) these three divisions (trtayata) of planetary systems (Bhurloka, Bhuvarloka, and Svarloka). Thus the destinations of the three worlds (trilokyam) were all arranged as the corresponding reactions for different kinds of work (karmanam) performed by those attached to household life. By practicing upakurvana-brahmacarya one attains Maharloka, by naisthika-brahmacarya one attains Janaloka, by vanaprastha life one attains Tapoloka and by sannyasa one attains Satyaloka. In this way the various results of yoga-practice are calculated.”

7 That the Personality of Godhead’s own abode (mad-gatih), known as Vaikunthaloka, can only be attained by the devotional activities of bhakti-yoga (such as hearing and chanting the glories of Vaikuntha and the master of Vaikuntha), and by no other means, is explained in Shrimad Bhagavatam (3.15.23):

“It is very much regrettable that unfortunate people do not discuss the description of the Vaikuntha planets but engage in topics which are unworthy to hear and which bewilder one’s intelligence. Those who give up topics of Vaikuntha and take to talk of the material world are thrown into the darkest region of ignorance.”*

8 A further description of Vaikunthaloka is found in Shrimad Bhagavatam (3.15.20), where Lord Brahma says to the demigods:

"The inhabitants of Vaikuntha travel in their airplanes made of lapis lazuli, emerald and gold. Although crowded by their consorts, who have large hips and beautiful smiling faces, they cannot be stimulated to passion by their mirth and beautiful charms."*

9 Shridhara Svami comments on this verse in the following words:

"This verse explains: 'The inhabitants of Vaikuntha travel in their airplanes (vimanaih) which they obtained simply by offering obeisances to the lotus feet of Lord Hari, the Supreme Personality of Godhead (hari-padanati-matra-drstaih).' Thus they are able to travel in Vaikuntha by means of their devotional activities, and not by any kind of material fruitive activity."

10 The realm of Vaikuntha is also described in Mundaka Upanisad (1.2.12):

"When a person aspiring to advance in spiritual life examines the temporary benefits obtained by performing pious deeds and earning a temporary residence in the upper material planets, he understands that one cannot attain the Personality of Godhead by performing materially pious deeds, and He becomes disinterested in both fruitive Vedic sacrifices and material welfare work."

11 That the spiritual world of Vaikuntha can be obtained only by devotional service to the Personality of Godhead is also personally confirmed by Lord Krishna in the following words (Bhagavad-gita 18.61-62):

"The Supreme Lord is situated in everyone's heart, O Arjuna, and is directing the wanderings of all living entities, who are seated as on a machine made of the material energy."*

12 "O scion of Bharata, surrender unto Him utterly. By His grace you will attain transcendental peace and the supreme eternal abode."*

Anuccheda 62

1 That the spiritual Vaikuntha planets are situated beyond the material world is confirmed by Lord Siva in the following words spoken to the Pracetas (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.24.29):

"A person who executes his occupational duty properly for one hundred births becomes qualified to occupy the post of Brahma, and if he becomes more qualified, he can approach Lord Siva. A person who is directly surrendered to Lord Krishna, or Vishnu, in unalloyed devotional service is immediately promoted to the spiritual planets. Lord Siva and other demigods attain these planets after the destruction of this material world."*

2 Shridhara Svami comments on this verse in the following words:

"In this verse Lord Siva says: 'One who has accumulated the results of many pious actions may attain My association (mam eti) after he gives up the present body. A devotee of Krishna, however, is immediately promoted to the spiritual planets (vaishnavam padam), which are beyond the boundaries of this material world.'

"That the Supreme Lord and His name, form, attributes and abode are all beyond the boundaries of the matter is confirmed by the Supreme Lord Himself in the following words (Chandogya Upanisad 6.3.32):

"Although My name and form are generally not visible in this material world, I shall now reveal them."

"In the Bhagavatam verse, Lord Siva continues: (Lord Siva), and the other administrative demigods (vibudhah) attain these spiritual planets after the destruction of this material world (kalatyaye).' This last point is confirmed by the following statement of Vedanta-sutra (3.3.33):

"The administrative demigods are appointed to certain terms of office, and they remain in this material world for the duration of those terms. When their terms expire they may enter the spiritual world."

Anuccheda 63

1 That the residents of Vaikunthaloka do not fall down into the material world is described by Lord Kapila (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.25.37-38):

"Thus because he is completely absorbed in thought of Me, the devotee does not desire even the highest benediction obtainable in the upper planetary systems, including Satyaloka. He does not desire the eight material perfections obtained from mystic yoga, nor does he desire to be elevated to the kingdom of God. Yet even without desiring them, the devotee enjoys, even in this life, all the offered benedictions.*

2 "The Lord continued: My dear mother, devotees who receive such transcendental opulences are never bereft of them; neither weapons nor the change of time can destroy such opulences. Because the devotees accept Me as their friend, their relative, their son, preceptor, benefactor and Supreme Deity, they cannot be deprived of their possessions at any time.”*

3 In this verse Lord Kapiladeva says: “Those devotees, who, by My mercy have become free from ignorance, do not desire the greatest opulences and enjoyments available in the material world (vibhutim). They do not desire the eight material perfections (beginning with anima-siddhi) obtained from mystic yoga (aisvaryam astangam anupravrttam). They do not desire opulence equal (sarsti) to that of the Supreme Lord (bhagavatim shriyam). Although the devotees only desire the happiness of devotional service, nevertheless they attain (asnuvate) all these benedictions in the spiritual world of Vaikuntha (me loke).” This statement shows the Supreme Lord’s great affection for His devotees.

4 That although the devotee never prays for material opulence the Supreme Lord nevertheless showers all benedictions on him is seen in the following description of the benedictions granted to Sudama the florist (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.41.51-52):

“When the florist was offered benediction, he begged from the Lord that he might remain His servant in devotional service and by such service do good to all living creatures. Being satisfied with the florist, Lord Krishna not only gave him benediction for whatever he wanted, but over and above that, He offered him all material opulences, family prosperity, long duration of life, and whatever else his heart desired within the material world.”*

5 The devotees of the Lord are always unattached to all kinds of opulences. As has already been explained, the devotees do not wish for any spiritual opulence that may be granted by the Lord’s mercy, or any material opulences, up to the opulences Brahmaloka, which may be granted by the Lord’s illusory potency maya. Even though the devotees are granted all kinds of opulence they do not try to enjoy or exploit them, for they consider them very insignificant and not worth their attention.

6 The desirelessness of the devotees is described in Chandogya Upanisad (8.1.6):

“The auspicious situation pious deeds grant in this life will eventually be destroyed, and in the same way the auspicious situation pious deeds grant in the next life will also eventually be destroyed. Understanding the temporary nature of these material benedictions, and also understanding the truth about the all-pervading Supersoul, the devotees only desire eternal benefits in relation to the Personality of Godhead. They pass through all kinds of material situations free from all material desires.”

7 At this point someone may object: “Is it not so that in Svargaloka or any other planet both the objects of enjoyment and the enjoyers of those objects will eventually be destroyed? Is this not true also for the devotees and their object of enjoyment?

Lord Kapila answers this objection when He says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.25.38):

“In the changeless (santa-rupe) spiritual world of Vaikuntha My devotees are never bereft (na nanksyanti) of transcendental opulences. My personal weapon (me hetih) the wheel of time (animisah), cannot swallow up (no ledhi) their opulences.”

That the residents of Vaikunthaloka are never deprived of their opulences and auspicious condition of life is also confirmed by the following statement of Chandogya Upanisad (8.15.1):

“Once having entered the spiritual world of Vaikuntha one never returns to the material world.”

8 That the residents of Vaikunthaloka never return to the material world is confirmed by Lord Krishna Himself in Bhagavad-gita (8.16):

“From the highest planet in the material world down to the lowest, all are places of misery wherein repeated birth and death take place. But one who attains My abode, O son of Kunti, never takes birth again.”*

9 This is also described by Shripada Sankaracarya in these words (Shri-Vishnu-sahasra-nama-bhasya, text 75):

“In the Supreme (param) abode (ayanam), there is no fear of returning to the material world. The word used here is a bahuvrihi-samasa in the masculine gender.”

10 Lord Kapiladeva’s glorification of the devotee residents of Vaikuntha does not stop here, however, but the Lord continues by explaining that the devotees love only the Supreme Personality of Godhead. He is their sole object of love. This explanation does not only apply to the residents of Vaikunthaloka, but it may also be taken to describe the eternal cowherd residents of Goloka Vrndavana, who also consider Lord Krishna to be the sole object of their love.

11 At this point someone may ask: "When the living entities become free from the ignorance of materialism what different varieties of love for the Personality of Godhead do they manifest?"

To answer this question Lord Kapila says: "Some devotees (yesam), such as the sages described in Padma Purana Uttara-khanda, desire to approach Me as their dear master, and as a result they meditate on Me as their dear (priya) master. Some devotees, such as the Four Kumaras and others, desire to see Me as the Supreme Brahman (atma), and they meditate on Me in that way. In whatever way the devotee wish to love Me, they may approach Me in that way."

We may note that in this verse the word 'suhrdah' (friend and benefactor) is in the plural. This means that there are many different kinds of friends and the Lord is willing to become any one of many different kinds of friends for His devotee. The exchange of friendship between the Lord and the devotees is described by Narada Muni in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam (4.12.37):

12 "Persons who are peaceful, equipoised, cleansed and purified, and who know the art of pleasing all other living entities, keep friendship only with the Lord and His devotees; they alone can very easily achieve the perfection of going back home, back to Godhead."*

Anuccheda 64

That Vaikunthaloka is beyond the material cosmos, and that no one falls from Vaikuntha to the material world, are both described by Shrila Suta Gosvami in Shrimad Bhagavatam (12.11.19):

"O Brahmanas, the realm of Vaikuntha is a great umbrella that gives protection from all kinds of fear."

Anuccheda 65

By becoming free from the influence of the three modes of material nature only may enter the spiritual world of Vaikuntha. The Supreme Personality of Godhead confirms this by saying (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.25.22):

"Those immersed in the mode of goodness go to the higher planets known as Svarloka, those immersed in the mode of passion enter human society in the middle planetary systems, those immersed in the mode of ignorance go to the hellish worlds, and those who are free from the grip of the three modes attain Me."

We may note that instead of saying 'they attain My planet', the Lord says 'they attain Me'. The Lord speaks in this way in order to proclaim that He is not different from His transcendental abode.

Anuccheda 66

1 That the spiritual world of Vaikuntha is beyond the touch of the three modes of material nature is confirmed by Lord Krishna Himself in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.25.25):

"Residential quarters within the forest are in the mode of goodness, residential quarters in big cities, towns and villages are in the mode of passion, and residential quarters in an atmosphere wherein indulgence in the four sinful activities of illicit sex, intoxication, meat-eating, and gambling predominate are in the mode of ignorance, but My abode is free from the material modes."*

2 That the spiritual world of Vaikuntha is superior to the material world is confirmed by Lord Krishna in Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.88.25-26):

"Lord Siva finally entered the splendid world of Svetadvipa Vaikuntha, where Lord Narayana personally resides, and which is beyond the darkness of matter. In Svetadvipa there are great saintly persons who are completely freed from the envious nature of the material world and are beyond the jurisdiction of the four principles of material activities, namely religiousness, economic development, sense-gratification and liberation. Anyone who enters into that Vaikuntha planet never comes back again to this material world."*

Anuccheda 67

1 Speaking to Narada, Lord brahma describes the eternity of Vaikunthaloka in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.5.39):

"From the forefront of the chest up to the neck of the universal form of the Lord are situated the planetary systems named Janaloka and Tapoloka, whereas Satyaloka, the topmost planetary system is, situated on the head of the form. The spiritual planets, however, are eternal."*

2 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments on this verse:

"In this verse the word 'brahmaloka' refers to the eternal (sanatana) Vaikuntha planets. Here the word

'brahmaloka; does not refer to any planet within the created material universe'. Here the word 'brahmaloka' means 'spiritual (brahma) planet (loka)'.

Anuccheda 68

1 That Vaikunthaloka may be obtained only by the practice of intense devotional service, which makes the happiness of liberation seem insignificant in comparison, is explained by the Four Kumaras in Shrimad Bhagavatam (3.15.23 and 25):

"It is very much regrettable that unfortunate people do not discuss the description of the Vaikuntha planets but engage in topics which are unworthy to hear and which bewilder one's intelligence. Those who give up the topics of Vaikuntha and take to talk of the material world are thrown into the darkest region of ignorance.*

2 "Persons whose bodily features change in ecstasy and who breathe heavily and perspire due to hearing the glories of the Lord are promoted to the kingdom of God, even though they do not care for meditation and other austerities. The kingdom of God is above the material universes, and it is desired by Brahma and other demigods."*

3 The first part of this verse may be interpreted 'yac ca nah' (Vaikunthaloka is situated above us), or 'nah sprhaniya-silah' (we desire to attain the good qualities possessed by the great devotees). The great devotees are described in the following words: 'dure yamah' (Because they have already attained all spiritual perfection, these great devotees do not care for meditation and other austerities), and 'bhartu mithah su-yasasah' (These great devotees are constantly engaged in hearing the glories of the Lord). These great devotees are promoted (vrajanti) to the kingdom of God on the strength of their intense devotional service, which makes even the happiness of liberation seem insignificant by comparison.

4 That devotional service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead makes the happiness of liberation seem insignificant is also confirmed by the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (3.15.48):

"Persons who are very expert and most intelligent in understanding things as they are engage in hearing narrations of the auspicious activities and pastimes of the Lord, which are worth chanting and worth hearing. Such persons do not care even for the highest material benediction, namely liberation, to say nothing of other less important benedictions like the material happiness of the heavenly kingdom."*

Anuccheda 69

1 That the spiritual world of Vaikuntha is eternal, full of knowledge and full of bliss is confirmed by the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.20.37):

"Those who seriously follow the methods of achieving Me that I have personally taught attain freedom from illusion and upon reaching My personal abode can at last perfectly understand the Absolute Truth."

2 "Jnana-yoga, karma-yoga and bhakti-yoga are the spiritual paths (me pathah) mentioned here by the Lord. Because it is the most practical and effective at all times, places and circumstances, the devotees consider bhakti-yoga the best of all spiritual paths. The word 'ksemam' in this verse indicates that the Vaikunthaslokas are filled with the supreme auspiciousness of pure devotional service, and the words 'mat-sthanam paramam brahma viduh' indicate that the great sages understand that the spiritual abode of the Lord is non different from the Lord Himself.

3 The spiritual world of Vaikunthaloka is described in the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.28.15-16):

"Reflecting in this way, the merciful and all-powerful Personality of Godhead showed His own planet, which is above the darkness of material existence, to the cowherd men of Vrndavana.*

4 "Thus Krishna showed them the effulgent, eternal, ever-existing spiritual sky, which is unlimited and full of knowledge. Great sages and saintly persons who have already surpassed the influence of the three material modes of nature are able to directly see that spiritual world."*

5 Both these quotations (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.20.37 and 10.28.14-15) clearly explain that the spiritual abode of Lord Krishna is beyond the influence of the material energy. The supposition that the word 'ca' (also) is understood, although not expressed in these verses, and that therefore these verses mean 'the abode of Lord Krishna and the spiritual world', and that therefore the abode of Lord Krishna is different from the eternal spiritual world, is an extremely forced and illogical misinterpretation of what is clearly said in these verses. That this abode of Lord Krishna is non different from the spiritual world of Vaikuntha is also confirmed by Shrila Shridhara Svami, who explains in his commentary on this verse:

"The words 'tamasah param' in this verse indicate that the abode of Lord Krishna is beyond the darkness of material existence."

Anuccheda 70

1 The spiritual abode of Lord Krishna is further described by Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.2.17-18):

"In that transcendental state of labdopasanti, there is no supremacy of devastating time, which controls even the celestial demigods who are empowered to rule over mundane creatures. (And what to speak of the demigods themselves?) Nor is there the mode of material goodness, nor passion, nor ignorance, nor even the false ego, nor the material Causal Ocean, nor the material nature.*

2 "The transcendentalists desire to avoid everything godless, for they know that supreme situation in which everything is related with the Supreme Lord Vishnu. Therefore a pure devotee who is in absolute harmony with the Lord does not create perplexities, but worships the lotus feet of the Lord at every moment, taking them into His heart."*

3 In this verse Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami says: 'The transcendentalists desire to avoid (icchavah) everything godless (atat, dauratmyam), such as the useless speculations of the nyaya-logicians (neti neti), and the impersonalist fallacy that the Supreme Personality of Godhead and the individual jiva living entities are identical in all respects. Abandoning all these misconceptions, they embrace (upaguhya) the lotus feet (padam) of the supremely worshipable (arha) Personality of Godhead within their hearts (hrda) at every moment (pade pade). In this way the saintly devotees repose all their love in the Supreme Personality of Godhead and in no one else. Such devotees understand (amananti) the truth about the spiritual abode of the Supreme Lord Vishnu (yat tad vaishnavam padam)".

By explaining that the devotees repose all their love in the Supreme Lord, this verse clearly refutes the misconception that the Absolute Truth is formless and impersonal, for it is not possible to love a formless non person.

4 The impersonalists' idea that God is formless is clearly rejected by the author of the Mukta-phala-tika in his explanation of this verse, where he explains the relation between the demigods and the Supreme Personality of Godhead in the following words:

"As a king establishes places of residence for his different subjects, while He reserves the best residence for himself, so the Supreme Personality of Godhead establishes the residence of Brahma and all the other living entities within the universe, while His own residence is the best, for it is above (param) the influence of the material energy."

5 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead remains in His own glorious realm, the world of Vaikuntha, is confirmed by the following statements of the Sruti-sastra:

"Where does the Supreme Personality of Godhead reside? He resides in His own glorious abode."

Chandogya Upanisad 7.24.1

"Who can properly understand the Supreme Personality of Godhead who resides in His own transcendental abode?"

Katha Upanisad 1.2.25

Anuccheda 71

1 The rhetorical question "Who can properly understand the Supreme Personality of Godhead who resides in His own transcendental abode?" is answered in the following statement of Narada Muni to Maharaja Pracinabarhi (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.29.48):

"Those who are less intelligent accept the Vedic ritualistic ceremonies as all in all. They do not know that the purpose of the Vedas is to understand one's own home, where the Supreme Personality of Godhead lives. Not being interested in their real home, they are illusioned and search after other homes."*

2 In this verse Narada says: "Those who are less intelligent (dhumra-dhiyah) accept (ahuh) the Vedic ritualistic ceremonies (vedam sa-karmakam) as all in all. They know of Svargaloka and the other planets of the material universe, but they do not know that the purpose of the Vedas is to understand one's own home (svam lokam) where (yatra) the Supreme Personality of Godhead (janardanah) lives."

1 The presence of the Personality of Godhead in the spiritual world is also described in the following prayer spoken by the demigods to Lord Hari (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.9.32):

"O Supreme Personality of Godhead, O Narayana, O Vasudeva, original person! O most exalted person, supreme experience, welfare personified! O supreme benediction, supremely merciful and changeless! O support of the cosmic manifestation, sole proprietor of all planetary systems, master of everything and husband of the goddess of fortune! Your Lordship is realised by the topmost sannyasis, who wander about the world to preach Krishna consciousness, fully absorbed in samadhi through bhakti-yoga. Because their minds are concentrated upon You, they can receive the conception of Your personality in their fully purified hearts. When the darkness in their hearts is completely eradicated and You are revealed to them, the transcendental bliss they enjoy is the transcendental form of Your Lordship present in the spiritual world. No one but such persons can realise You. Therefore we simply offer You our respectful obeisances."

2 In this passage of Shrimad Bhagavatam the word 'tamah' may be interpreted to mean either 'material energy' or 'ignorance'. The word 'atma-loke' means 'the personal abode of the Supreme Lord'. That the Supreme Personality of Godhead resides in His own spiritual realm is again confirmed by the following statements of the Sruti-sastra:

"The spiritual world is the personal abode of the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

Brhad-aranyaka Upanisad 4.3.32

3 The spiritual realm of the Personality of Godhead is also described in the Pippalada-sakha:

"The subtle, transcendental, eternal abode of Lord Vishnu is the best of all planets, and although everyone should know about it, it is generally not properly understood. Only the greatest yogi-philosophers understand the true nature of this abode of Lord Vishnu."

4 The spiritual realm of Vaikuntha is also described in the Maha Narayana Upanisad (8.14):

"They who have renounced the material world enter the spiritual sky, which the Supreme Personality of Godhead has hidden from the gaze of the conditioned souls."

5 The transcendental abode of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is also described in the Nrsimha-tapani Upanisad (5.10):

"In the transcendental abode of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the original author of the Vedic mantras, there is no suffering of any kind. In that abode neither the sun, moon or stars shine, the wind does not blow, death cannot enter, and there are no defects of any kind. That abode is blissful, eternal, peaceful and always full of all auspiciousness. The yogis meditate on that supreme abode, and the demigods headed by Brahma offer obeisances and prayers to that supreme abode. The yogis who travel to that supreme abode of the Lord never return to this material world."

6 The spiritual abode of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is also described in the following mantra of the Rg Veda:

"The saintly demigods continually gaze at Lord Vishnu's transcendental abode, which is like a brilliant sun in the spiritual sky. The residents of that abode of the Lord are free from any defect, effulgent and always awake with all spiritual knowledge."

7 These Vedic passages describe the spiritual realm as the object of Lord Brahma's prayers, and they also say that once having entered that spiritual realm one never returns to the material world. This is a clear description of the planet of Lord Vishnu. These descriptions do not apply to the impersonal Brahman effulgence, and therefore no one should interpret that these statements describe that impersonal Brahman. The Rg Veda's description of the planet of Lord Vishnu is also corroborated by the following explanation of Vishnu Purana (2.8.93-98):

8 "Above the planets of the seven sages, the Dhruvaloka planet is situated. Dhruvaloka is the splendid, transcendental abode of Lord Vishnu. It is situated in the spiritual sky, above both the upper and lower material planets."

9 "O brahmana, they who have renounced this material world, who control the mind and senses, and have become free from all material impurities and all past sinful and pious karmic reactions, reside in that transcendental abode."

10 "In that place there are no pious or impious karmic reactions, and nothing causes pain. Having gone to that place one never laments. That is Lord Vishnu's supreme abode."

11 "Yamaraja, Dhruva Maharaja, and other demigod administrators of universal affairs, whose opulence is equal to that of the Lord Himself, reside in that spiritual realm. This is Lord Vishnu's supreme abode.

12 "Whatever has been and whatever will be in the future, the entire material creation as well as all moving and non moving living entities are manifested from this spiritual world, just as the warp and woof of a loom creates a cloth. O Maitreya, this spiritual realm is the supreme abode of Lord Vishnu.

13 "Thus unlimitedly expanded spiritual realm is like a great eye in the spiritual sky. It gives transcendental knowledge to the devotees. This is Lord Vishnu's supreme abode."

14 The previously quoted statement of the Nrsimha-tapani Upanisad that "In the spiritual world the wind does not blow, the sun, moon and stars do not shine" means that there are no material wind, sun, moon or stars in the spiritual world. Spiritual sun, moon, stars and winds do, however, exist in the spiritual world, and this fact is supported by many statements of Smṛti-sastra.

15 (The story of Maharaja Dhruva narrated in the Shrimad Bhagavatam contains a very clear description of the Vaikuntha realm of Lord Vishnu. We shall quote some of these verses to gain some understanding of that Vaikunthaloka. The first quotation explains why it was that Maharaja Dhruva, even though he had just directly seen the Supreme Personality of Godhead, nevertheless remained morose at heart.) Shrimad Bhagavatam (4.2.29) explains:

"Maitreya Muni answered: Dhruva Maharaja's heart, which was pierced by the arrows of the harsh words of his stepmother, was greatly aggrieved and thus when he fixed upon his goal of life he did not forget her misbehaviour. He did not demand actual liberation from this material world, but at the end of his devotional service, when the Supreme Personality of Godhead appeared before him, he was simply ashamed of the material demands he had in his mind."*

16 Maharaja Dhruva laments in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.9.31):

"Alas, just look at me! I am so unfortunate. I approached the lotus feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who can immediately cut the chain of the repetition of birth and death, but still, out of my foolishness, I prayed for things which are perishable."*

17 This verse records Dhruva Maharaja's dissatisfaction. He prayed for a very exalted position, and he received a benediction far excelling this original desire.

18 The exalted position attained by Maharaja Dhruva is described by Mahatma Vidura in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.9.28):

"Shri Vidura inquired: My dear brahmana, the abode of the Lord is very difficult to attain. It can be attained only by pure devotional service, which alone pleases the most affectionate, merciful Lord. Dhruva Maharaja achieved this position even in one life, and he was very wise and conscientious. Why, then, was he not very pleased?"*

19 The exalted position attained by Maharaja Dhruva is described by the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.9.25):

"The Personality of Godhead continued: My dear Dhruva, after your material life in this body, you will go to My planet, which is always offered obeisances by the residents of all other planetary systems. It is situated above the planets of the seven rsis, and having gone there you will never have to come back again to this material world."*

20 This great benediction, Dhruva's liberation in the planet of Lord Vishnu, is described by two associates of the Lord in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.12.26):

"Dear King Dhruva, neither your forefathers nor anyone else before you ever achieved such a transcendental planet. The planet known as Vishnuloka, where Lord Vishnu personally resides, is the highest of all. It is worshipable by the inhabitants of all other planets within the universe. Please come with us and live there eternally."*

21 Maharaja Dhruva's good fortune is also described by Shrila Suta Gosvami in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.13.1):

"Suta Gosvami, continuing to speak to all the rsis, headed by Saunaka, said: After hearing Maitreya Rsi describe Dhruva Maharaja's ascent to Lord Vishnu's abode, Vidura became very much enlightened in devotional emotion, and he inquired from Maitreya as follows:

22 The the planet ruled by Dhruva Maharaja is an eternal Vaikuntha planet is confirmed by the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (5.22.17):

"Situating 8 800 000 miles above Saturn, or 20 800 000 miles above earth, are the seven saintly sages, who are always thinking of the well-being of the inhabitants of the universe. They circumambulate the supreme abode of Lord Vishnu, known as Dhruvaloka, the polestar."*

23 This is also confirmed by the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (5.23.1):

"Sukadeva Gosvami continued: My dear King 1 300 000 yojanas (10 400 000 miles) above the planets of the seven sages is the place that learned scholars describe as the abode of Lord Vishnu. The son of Maharaja Uttanapada, the great devotee Maharaja Dhruva, still resides as the life source of all the living entities who live until the end of creation. Agni, Indra, Prajapati, Kasyapa and Dharma all assemble there to offer him honour and respectful obeisances. They circumambulate him with their right sides toward him. I have already described the glorious activities of Maharaja Dhruva (in the Fourth Canto of Shrimad Bhagavatam)."

24 These quotations from Shrimad Bhagavatam show that the Dhruvaloka planet is an eternal Vaikuntha planet, even though it is apparently situated within the jurisdiction of the material world. The situation of a liberated soul who lives within the material world is similar, as described in the Vedanta-sutra (4.4.19):

"Although situated within a material body, which goes through the six material transformations, a liberated soul is actually situated on the transcendental platform. He has nothing to do with the changing material world."

25 At the time of annihilation of the material universe, when all the material planets perish, the Dhruvaloka planet is not destroyed, but merely becomes no longer visible to the eyes of the conditioned souls. That Dhruvaloka is not destroyed at the time of cosmic annihilation is confirmed by Hiranyakasipu in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.3.11):

"By dint of my severe austerities, I shall reverse the results of pious and impious activities. I shall overturn all the established practices within this world. Even Dhruvaloka will be vanquished at the end of the millennium. Therefore, what is the use of it? I shall prefer to remain in the position of Brahma."*

26 In this way it may be understood that Dhruvaloka is an eternal Vaikuntha planet, even though it is manifested within the boundaries of the material world. This nature of Dhruvaloka is described in many different passages of the Sruti-sastra, and it is also described by Lord Siva in the following words (Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda 91.54.77):

27 "O Parvati, please listen to this description of the opulences of the material world and the opulences of the spiritual world, which is three fourths of the entire creation.

28 "The auspicious Viraja river flows between the material and spiritual worlds. This river is produced from the perspiration of the Personified Vedas.

29 "On the far shore of that Viraja river is the eternal, deathless, imperishable, unlimited, nectarean spiritual sky, which consists of three fourths of the entire creation.

30 "That imperishable spiritual realm is the abode of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. That realm is made of the transcendental mode of pure goodness, and it is more splendid than many millions of blazing suns.

31 "This spiritual world is full of all knowledge and free from all forms of destruction. It is limitless, eternal, effulgent, free from old age, and free from the various forms of material consciousness, including the states of material wakefulness and material sleep.

32 "This spiritual world is the abode of liberation, and it is full of all spiritual bliss. Nothing is equal or superior to it, and it is without beginning or end. It is supremely auspicious, and it glows with a golden effulgence.

33 "This spiritual world is wonderfully splendid, delightful and eternal. It is like a great ocean of transcendental bliss, and it is full of all transcendental attributes. This place is the supreme transcendental abode of Lord Vishnu.

34 "That abode of Lord Hari is not illumined by the sun or moon, nor by electricity. One who reaches it never returns to this material world.*

35 "This transcendental abode of Lord Vishnu is perfect, eternal, and imperishable. No one can properly describe it, even if he had hundreds of millions of kalpas in which to speak.

36 "Neither brahma, the great sages, nor I have the power to describe the abode of Lord Hari. If one thinks he completely understands the abode where the infallible Supreme Personality of Godhead resides, then that person does not know the first thing about the Lord's abode.

37 "This abode of the Lord is very confidential and cannot be understood merely by studying the Vedas. Even the demigods who control the universe cannot properly understand it. If one does not understand this abode of the Lord, then what is the use of his chanting the Vedic hymns? If one does understand the abode of the Lord, then all the Vedic hymns become automatically manifest to him.

38 "The demigods continually fix their gaze upon Lord Vishnu's infallible, imperishable, eternal, transcendental abode, which is like a brilliant sun shining in the spiritual sky.

39 "Although neither Brahma, Siva or any of the other demigods can enter this transcendental abode, the best of the yogis can at least see it by means of transcendental knowledge obtained from the Vedic literatures.

40 "Neither Brahma, the demigods, the great sages, nor I myself can completely understand this transcendental abode of the Lord. However, what little I have been able to understand by studying all the Upanisads, O saintly Parvati, I shall now relate to You.

41 "In the centre of Lord Vishnu's transcendental abode is a nectarean fountain named Subha. At this place are many long horned surabhi cows with their calves.

42 "In that splendid abode of Lord Vishnu, who carries the Sarnga bow, and who is glorified by the devotees, are many glorious and auspicious surabhi cows.

43 "That eternal, pure realm of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is splendid as the sun. It is supremely effulgent and it exists beyond the darkness of the material world.

44 This eternal transcendental abode is always awake with spiritual awareness. In the topmost part of this spiritual abode eternal Lord Vishnu and His consort Shrimati Laksmi-devi reside.

45 Near Shri Shri Laksmi-Vishnu, the two youthful sisters Bhu-sakti and Lila-sakti, who are very dear to the Lord, stay. Before them are the eternal Sadhyas and Visvedevas.

46 "Learned brahmanas awake with spiritual knowledge, even seeing whom brings all auspiciousness, glorify that splendid transcendental abode.

47 "The supreme abode of Lord Vishnu is known by the name Moksa (liberation). They who become free from the bonds of repeated birth and death attain transcendental bliss in that supreme abode.

48 "Lord Vishnu's supreme abode is known as Moksa (liberation), because they who enter it never return to repeated birth and death in the material world. That supreme abode is also known by the names Param padam (Supreme Abode), Lingam (the form of the Lord), Amrta (The Immortal Nectar) and Vishnu-mandira (the temple of Lord Vishnu).

49 "Lord Vishnu's supreme abode is also known as Aksara (The Imperishable Abode), Paramam dhama (the Supreme Abode), Vaikuntha (the place where there is no anxiety), Sasvatam padam (The Eternal Abode), Nitya (The Eternal Abode), Parama-vyoma (the Spiritual sky), Sarvotkrsta (The Supreme Abode), and Sanatana (The Eternal Abode).

50 "The Supreme abode of the infallible Personality of Godhead has many other names also. I shall now describe in detail the nature of this supreme abode, which is three fourths of the entire potency of the Lord."

51 Although many passages of Sruti and Smṛti-saṣtra describe the Lord's abode, they will not all be quoted here. The next quote will be from a conversation of Brahma and Narada recorded in the Jitanta-stotra of the Narada-pancaratra:

52 "The six planetary system named Vaikunthaloka is full of six transcendental opulences. They who are not devotees of Lord Vishnu are not able to enter that transcendental realm, which remains always untouched by the three modes of material nature.

53 "The Vaikuntha realm is full of eternally perfect liberated devotees of the Lord. That realm is very auspicious and beautiful, endowed with many assembly buildings, palaces, forests and gardens.

54 "The Vaikuntha realm is beautifully decorated with many trees, wells, lakes, and ponds. That non material realm is worshipped and glorified by the demigods. It is splendid as millions of suns.

55 The realm of Vaikuntha is further described in the following statement of Brahmāṇḍa Purāṇa:

"The Vaikuntha realm is full of unlimited spiritual attributes.. It is full of supreme effulgence and it is very difficult to attain. It is incomparable and full of transcendental bliss. It remains invisible to the material senses of the conditioned souls.”

56 The Vaikuntha realm is also described in the following verses from the story of Mudgala related in the Itihasa-samuccaya:

“Above the planet of Brahma lies the eternal, effulgent, pure abode of Lord Vishnu. Great sages know that abode as the Supreme Brahman.”

57 “Saintly devotees who devotedly engage in meditation and yoga, who have controlled the senses, and who are free from false-ego, material possessiveness, and material duality, attain that supreme abode.

58-59 “The who worship, remember and meditate on the infallible transcendental Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is known as Hari, Vishnu, Krishna, Jisnu, Sanatana, Narayana, Aja, Deva, Visvakshena, and Caturbhuj, attain the Supreme Lord’s abode. This is the conclusion of the eternal Vedic literatures.”

60 Vaikunthaloka is described in the Skanda Purana in a conversation between Sanat-kumara and Markandeya Rsi in these words:

“O best of the brahmanas, one who is a devotee of Lord Vishnu, and who decorates his body with the marks of the conchshell, disc, and other signs of the Lord, goes to Lord Vishnu’s planet, which is not destroyed when the entire universe is consumed by flames.”

61 Someone may argue that the words ‘para-dhama’ and ‘sthana’ used in these quotations may be interpreted to mean the transcendental form of the Lord and the Lord’s abode. If we examine these verses in context we shall see this argument to be patently false. For example, when the Lord says: “The devotees attain My abode (sthana), which the sages know as the Supreme Brahman,” the ‘sthana’ must be taken to mean the Lord’s abode. Any other interpretation will be rejected by the intelligent reader.

62 If one were to argue that the word ‘ca’ (and) although not directly expressed in the statement param brahmeti yad viduh’ (The great sages know that abode as the Supreme Brahman) from the Itihasa-samuccaya, should be understood, and therefore the words ‘param brahma’ should not be taken as adjectives modifying the Lord’s abode, but as nouns referring the Supreme Godhead, then to this argument I reply that the word ‘loka’ (planet) is used in many places where it is clearly modified by the word ‘param brahma’, and that therefore in this instance it should also be understood in the same way. The words ‘pada’, ‘dhama’, ‘sthana’ and ‘loka’ all refer to the same thing; the abode of the Lord. When they are jointly used, as they are in the passages just quoted, they cast far away any other possible explanation of what they actually mean. As the words ‘bhagavan’, ‘hari’ and ‘visnu’ refer only to the form of the Lord, and not to anything else in the same way these statements of the Padma Purana, Vishnu Purana, and other Vedic literatures should be taken to describe only the abode of the Lord. They cannot be understood to describe the Lord’s form. These passages of Vedic literature can be considered to appropriately describe only the Lord’s abode for they say the object of their description is not attained by fruitive or non devotional work. In many other ways also the description presented in these passages can be considered to appropriately describe only the Lord’s abode. On the other hand, the Lord’s form is appropriately described in a particular way (for example; as holding a rod in His hand, etc.), radically different from the descriptions in these passages. An example of an appropriate description of the Lord’s form may be found in Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.9.32 quoted in Anuccheda 72. In this way, therefore, we may conclude that the passages quoted clearly describe the transcendental abode of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. They cannot be taken to describe His form.

Anuccheda 73

1 In this the Vaikuntha world is described. As the Supreme Personality of Godhead appears in many different forms, sometimes manifesting His opulences in full, and sometimes only manifesting part of His opulence, in the same way for each form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead there is a corresponding Vaikuntha planet. This is described in the Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda, and also in the following statement of Maitreya Rsi (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.19.31):

After thus killing the most formidable demon Hiranyaksa, the Supreme Lord Hari, the origin of the boar species, returned to His own abode, where there is always an uninterrupted festival. The Lord was praised by all the demigods, headed by Brahma.”*

The word ‘sadayitva’ in this verse means ‘after killing.’

2 That each form of the Lord has His own Vaikuntha planet is also confirmed in the Bodhayana-sastra, in the discussion of the Pavitraropa festival:

"One who worships Lord Nrsimhadeva by faithfully performing the Pavitraropa festival every year will become liberated. He will enter the transcendental planet where Lord Nrsimhadeva resides."

3 The planet of Lord Siva is described in the same way in the Vayu Purana:

"At the time of cosmic dissolution all the universes will be completely flooded by a great ocean.

4 "Waters of devastation will violently flood all the universes up, down, and in all directions.

5 "Great fires will then reduce all the planets into iron spheres, and then great hurricane winds will tear through all the universes.

6 "The unlimited unmanifested avyakta will first absorb the hurricane winds, and then it will absorb, one after another, the ether element, the five gross elements, and the mahat-tattva.

7 "The avyakta is an unlimited, unmanifested darkness. It is beginningless, endless, invisible, without any boundary, and free from any designation.

8 "Beyond this darkness, beyond the ether element, and beyond the boundary of the material universes is the Lord Siva's great transcendental abode, which even the great demigods cannot approach. This is clearly described in the Sruti-sastra."

Anuccheda 74

1 As the Supreme Personality of Godhead sometimes manifests His transcendental form within the material world, so He sometimes manifests some of His transcendental abodes within the boundaries of the material realm. One instance of this is described by Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 8.5.4-5):

"From the combination of Subhra and his wife, Vaikuntha, there appeared the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Vaikuntha, along with demigods who were His personal plenary expansions.*

2 "Just to please the goddess of fortune, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Vaikuntha, at her request, created another Vaikuntha planet, which is worshipped by everyone."*

3 As the transcendental form of the Personality of Godhead is eternal and only enters the material world, although it is said to be 'born', so the Lord's eternal spiritual realm only enters the material world, although in this verse the word 'born' (jajne) is used. In these verses the word 'vaikuntha' means 'the son of Vaikuntha-devi' as well as 'the spiritual planets Brahma saw before the creation of the material universe (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.9.9-16).

4 That Vaikunthaloka is situated beyond the boundaries of the material universes filled with Svarga and other planets is confirmed by the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (8.19.11):

"Upon seeing that the residence of Lord Vishnu was vacant, Hiranyakasipu began searching for Lord Vishnu everywhere. Angry at not seeing Him, Hiranyakasipu screamed loudly and searched the entire universe, including the surface of the earth, the higher planetary systems, all directions and all the caves and oceans. But Hiranyakasipu, the greatest hero, did not see Vishnu anywhere."*

Anuccheda 75

The devotees who serve Lord Vaikuntha as His direct associates are on the same transcendental platform as the Lord Himself, for without being equally transcendental they could not directly serve Him. This is confirmed by Vedic literature in these words:

"One who is not like the Supreme Lord cannot worship or serve Him."

That the eternal associates of the Lord do not have material bodies, senses, and life-air, as the conditioned souls born in the cycle of samsara do, but instead have spiritual forms made of pure transcendental goodness, is confirmed by the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (7.1.35):

"The bodies of the inhabitants of Vaikuntha are completely spiritual, having nothing to do with the material body, senses or life air."*

Anuccheda 76

That the personal associates of the Lord are like their master is confirmed by the following statement of Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.9.28):

"Surrounding and serving the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Narayana, were sixteen personal attendants, decorated with ornaments and appearing exactly like Him but without the mark of Shrivatsa and the Kaustubha jewel. O King, when all the demigods saw the Supreme Lord in that posture, smiling with eyes like the petals of lotuses grown in autumn, they were overwhelmed with happiness and immediately fell down like rods, offering dandavats. Then they slowly rose and pleased the Lord by offering Him prayers.”*

Anuccheda 77

The great devotees of the Lord obtain transcendental benefits that cannot be destroyed by time. This is described by Prahlada Maharaja in a prayer to Lord Nrsimhadeva (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.9.24):

“My dear Lord, now I have complete experience concerning the worldly opulence, mystic power, longevity and other material pleasures enjoyed by all living entities, from Lord Brahma down to the ant. As powerful time, You destroy them all. Therefore, because of my experience, I do not wish to possess them. My dear Lord, I request You to place me in touch with Your pure devotee and let me serve him as a sincere servant.”*

Anuccheda 78

1 The Vaikuntha planets and the liberated devotees who reside there are described in Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda:

“Countless bliss spiritual planets are in the spiritual sky, which is three fourths of the entire creation.

2 “All these spiritual planets are eternal, changeless, and free from the abominable material mode of passion. They are pure, and they have a golden effulgence bright as millions of suns.

3 “All these transcendental planets are all filled with Vedic knowledge and free from lust, anger, and other vices. On these planets reside great devotees whose only joy is the pure devotional service of Lord Narayana’s lotus feet.”

4 In these verses the word ‘tri-pad-vibhuti’ indicates the spiritual world beyond the material universes, and the word ‘pada-vibhuti’ indicates the material universes.

5 This is described in the Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda:

“The eternal spiritual world is three fourths of existence, whereas the temporary material world is only one fourth of existence.

6 “The Supreme Personality of godhead, whose form is eternal, auspicious, transcendental, infallible, delightful, and always youthful, resides in that supreme abode accompanied by His potencies Isvari-devi, Shri-devi and Bhumi-devi.

7 The Vaikuntha planets and material world are both described in Shrimad Bhagavatam (2.6.18):

“The Supreme Personality of Godhead is the controller of immortality and fearlessness, and He is transcendental to death and the fruitive actions of the material world. O Narada, O brahmana, it is therefore difficult to measure the glories of the Supreme Person.”*

8 This verse from Shrimad Bhagavatam directly mentions the Lord’s immortality and fearlessness, and the Lord’s position of being always liberated from material influence is implied although not directly and the other two qualities only implied in the following statement of the Sruti-sastra (Svetasvatara Upanisad 3.15):

“The Supreme Personality of Godhead is the original master of all immortality.”

The passage of Shrimad Bhagavatam describes the Lord, the possessor of these qualities, (immortality, fearlessness, and liberation) whereas the passage from Sruti-sastra describes the qualities the Lord possesses.

9 Vaikunthaloka’s immortality is hinted in these words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (2.9.9.):

“Vaikuntha is adored by all self-realised persons freed from all kinds of miseries and fear of illusory existence.”*

Vaikunthaloka’s blissfulness is hinted in these words of Shrimad Bhagavatam (2.9.9):

“Vaikuntha is the supreme planet above all others.”*

10 That the Vaikunthaloka is eternal is also described in the following statement of Padma Purana (Uttara-khanda 255.77):

“The residence of Lord Vishnu is eternal.”

11 That the Vaikuntha planets are completely free from all fear is hinted by the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (2.9.10):

“In the personal abode of the Lord there is no predominance of the influence of time.”*

12 This is also confirmed by the following statement of Shrimad Bhagavatam (12.11.19):

“O brahmanas, the transcendental abode of the Lord is always free from all fear.”

13 That the abode of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is auspicious is hinted by Shrimad Bhagavatam

(2.9.10):

"The illusory external energy (maya) cannot enter the personal abode of the Lord."*

Because it is completely free from the material modes, which turn one from the Lord, Vaikunthaloka should be understood to be a great reservoir of the auspiciousness of pure devotional service to the Supreme Lord.

14 That devotional service is the abode of all auspiciousness is confirmed by the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself in the following words (Naradiya Purana):

"O best of the brahmanas, I grant to you unwavering pure devotional service unto Me. This devotional service is full of perfect transcendental bliss, and it is the reservoir of all auspiciousness."

15 That the abode of the Lord is always liberated from material contact is confirmed by the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.20.37):

"My pure devotees attain liberation from matter by entering My transcendental abode."

16 Taking shelter of secondary meanings of the words 'amṛta' and 'bhaya' one may interpret them to mean 'Janaloka and the other material planetary systems.' This laboured misinterpretation is refuted by the use of the word 'martyam' (dying), which clearly indicates that these two words should be interpreted according to their primary meanings. This word (martyam) is explained by the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.10.30):

"Even Brahma who possesses the supreme life-span of 311 040 000 000 000 years, is also afraid of Me."

17 In this verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.6.18), the word 'annam' means 'the results of fruitive actions', and the word 'atyagat' means 'Transcending the three material planetary systems, the Lord is present in the spiritual world.'

18 The word 'esah' means 'The Supreme Lord whose form is full of immortality and all other opulences', and the word 'duratyayah' means 'He whom the brahmacaris and other transcendentalists cannot understand or measure by the speculative powers of the mind.'

19 In this way we have describe the eternal spiritual world, which is three quarters of all existence, and the material world, which is subject of destruction, and which is one quarter of all existence.

20 Lord Brahma again describes the opulence of the spiritual world, which is three quarters of all existence (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.6.19):

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is to be known as the supreme reservoir of all material opulences by the one fourth of His energy in which all the living entities exist. Deathlessness, fearlessness and freedom from the anxieties of old age and disease exist in the kingdom of God, which is beyond the three higher planetary systems and beyond the material coverings."*

21 In this verse Brahma says: "The living entities, as well as death and other material qualities, exist within the material world which is one quarter of all existence (sthiti-padah). All the opulences of the Lord are distributed throughout the four quarters (padesu) of existence, including both spiritual and material worlds. The living entities (sarva-bhutani) including the personal associates of the Lord reside in all four quarters of creation (including both spiritual and material worlds)."

22 In this verse Lord Brahma describes the spiritual world which is three quarters of the creation. He says: "Deathlessness (amṛtam), fearlessness (abhayam), and freedom from the anxiety of old-age and disease (ksemam) eternally exist (adhayi) in the kingdom of God, which is beyond (murdhasu) the three higher planetary systems, the material coverings and the three modes of material nature."

The material world is the creation's single-quarter part where death and various fruitive actions exist and above that is the three-quarters part, or the spiritual world, where there are deathlessness and other auspicious conditions. The spiritual and material worlds are described by the Rg Veda (10.90.3):

"Three quarters of existence is the eternal and perfectly opulent spiritual world."

The word 'divi', which means 'Vaikuntha', is the realm where all opulences, eternality, and other auspicious conditions exist. The auspiciousness described here refers to both Vaikuntha and its residents.

23 Brahma describes the other part of the four quarters of existence, the realm of the three material planetary systems, in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.6.20):

"The spiritual world, which consists of three fourths of the Lord's energy, is situated beyond this material world, and it is especially meant for those who will never be reborn. Others, who are attached to family life and who do not strictly follow celibacy vows, must live within the three material worlds.”*

24 The word ‘ca’ (and) here means ‘and for all those’. In this verse Brahma says: ‘The spiritual world, which consists of three fourths (padas trayah) of the Lord’s energy, is situated beyond (bahih) the material world (tri-lokyah).’

This is also explained in the Purusa-sukta (Rg Veda):

“The spiritual world is three fourths of the Lord’s energy.”

One may ask “Who resides in that spiritual world?” Brahma answers by saying: “The spiritual world is meant to be the residence of those who will never be reborn (aprajanam asramah).” This means the sannyasis, vanaprasthas and brahmacaris, or in other words, those who follow the vow of celibacy. Brahma describes the residents of the material world in these words: “Others (aparah), who are attached to family life (grha-medhah) and who do not strictly follow celibacy vows (abhrad-vratah), must live within (antah) the three material worlds (tri-lokyah).”

25 The Supreme Personality of Godhead is the master of both spiritual and material worlds, as Brahma explains to Narada (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.6.21):

“By His energies, the all-pervading Personality of Godhead is thus comprehensively the master in the activities of controlling and in devotional service. He is the ultimate masters of both nescience and factual knowledge of all situations.”*

62 In this verse Brahma says: “The all-pervading (visvak) Personality of Godhead (purusah) is thus comprehensively the master (vicakrame) of the two destinations (srti) attained by the living entities.”

One may ask: “What are these two destinations?” Brahma answers this question by saying: “These two destinations are the enjoyment of the fruits of karma (sasana) and transcending those fruits (anasane). Then he describes the method of overcoming the fruits of karma. The word ‘avidya’ here means ‘the illusory potency maya’ and ‘vidya’ means ‘the spiritual potency’. The Lord is then described as the shelter (asrayah) of both potencies. It is said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.6.22):

“From that Personality of Godhead, all the universal globes and the universal form with all material elements, qualities and senses are generated. Yet He is aloof from such material manifestations, like the sun, which is separated from its rays and heat.”*

In this way creation may be divided into fourths, (three-fourths) possessing all opulence, and (one fourth), possessing partial opulence. (The verse quoted from Shrimad Bhagavatam was spoken by) Brahma to Narada.

Anuccheda 79

1 The form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is the master of the internal spiritual potencies, is manifest by the Lord’s own potency. By a specific potency the wonderful variety of the Lord’s many forms is manifested. Our evidence (for the description of the Lord’s form) is given by the Four Kumaras in the next fourteen verses (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.15.37-50):

2 “At that very moment, the Lord, who is called Padmanabha because of the lotus grown from His navel and who is the delight of the righteous, learned about the insult offered by His own servants to the saints. Accompanied by His spouse, the goddess of fortune, He went to the spot on those very feet sought for by recluses and great sages.*

3 “The sages, headed by Sanaka Rsi, saw that the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Vishnu, who was formerly visible only within their hearts in ecstatic trance, had now actually become visible to their eyes. As He came forward, accompanied by His own associates bearing all paraphernalia, such as an umbrella and a camara fan, the white bunches of hair moved very gently, like two swans, and due to their favourable breeze the pearls garlanding the umbrella also moved, like drops of nectar falling from the white full moon of ice melting due to a gust of wind.*

4 “The Lord is the reservoir of all pleasure. His auspicious presence is meant for everyone’s benediction, and His affectionate smiling and glancing touch the core of the heart. The Lord’s beautiful bodily colour is blackish, and His broad chest is the resting place of the goddess of fortune, who glorifies the entire spiritual world, the summit of all heavenly planets. Thus it appeared that the Lord was personally spreading the beauty and good fortune of the spiritual world.*

5 "He was adorned with a girdle that shone brightly on the yellow cloth covering His large hips, and He wore a garland of fresh flowers which was distinguished by humming bees. His lovely wrist were graced with bracelets, and He rested one of His hands on the shoulder of Garuda, His carrier, and twirled a lotus with another hand.*

6 "His countenance was distinguished by cheeks that enhanced the beauty of His alligator-shaped pendants, which outshone lightning. His nose was prominent, and His head was covered with a gem-studded crown. A charming necklace hung between His stout arms, and His neck was adorned with the gem known by the name Kaustubha.*

7 "The exquisite beauty of Narayana, being many times magnified by the intelligence of His devotees, was so attractive that it defeated the pride of the goddess of fortune in being the most beautiful. My dear demigods, the Lord who thus manifested Himself is worshipable by me, by Lord Siva and by all of you. The sages regarded Him with unsated eyes and joyously bowed their heads at His lotus feet.*

8 "When the breeze carrying the aroma of tulasi leaves from the toes of the lotus feet of the Personality of Godhead entered the nostrils of those sages, they experienced a change both in body and in mind, even though they were attached to the impersonal Brahman understanding.*

9 "The Lord's beautiful face appeared to them like the inside of a blue lotus, and the Lord's smile appeared to be a blossoming jasmine flower. After seeing the face of the Lord, the sages were fully satisfied, and when they wanted to see Him further, they looked upon the nails of His lotus feet, which resembled rubies. Thus they viewed the Lord's transcendental body again and again, and so they finally achieved meditation on the Lord's personal feature.*

10 "This is the form of the Lord which is meditated upon by the followers of the yoga process, and it is pleasing to the yogis in meditation. It is not imaginary but factual, as proved by great yogis. The Lord is full in eight kinds of achievement, but for others these achievements are not possible in full perfection.*

11 "The Kumaras said: Our dear Lord, You are not manifested to rascals, even though You are seated within the heart of everyone. But as far as we are concerned, we see You face to face, although You are unlimited. The statements we have heard about You from our father, Brahma, through the ears have now been actually realised by Your kind appearance.*

12 "We known that You are the Supreme Absolute Truth, the Personality of Godhead, who manifests His transcendental form in the uncontaminated mode of pure goodness. This transcendental, eternal form of Your personality can be understood only by Your mercy, through unflinching devotional service, by great sages whose hearts have been purified in the devotional way.*

13 "Persons who are very expert and most intelligent in understand things as they are engage in hearing narrations of the auspicious activities and pastimes of the Lord, which are worth chanting and worth hearing. Such persons do not care even for the highest material benediction, namely liberation, to say nothing of less important benedictions like the material happiness of the heavenly kingdom.*

14 "O Lord, we pray that You let us be born in any hellish condition of life, just as long as our hearts and minds are always engaged in the service of Your lotus feet, our words are made beautiful (by speaking of Your activities) just as tulasi leaves are beautified when offered unto Your feet, and long as our ears are always filled with the chanting of Your transcendental qualities.*

15 "O Lord, we therefore offer our respectful obeisances unto Your eternal form as the Personality of Godhead, which You have so kindly manifested before us. Your supreme, eternal form cannot be seen by unfortunate, less intelligent persons, but we are so much satisfied in our minds and vision to see it."*

16 Now these verses will be discussed. Shridhara Svami explains the first of these verses (Text 2):

"This verse should be understood to mean: "The Supreme Lord, who is the delight of the righteous (arya-hrdyah), learned (vibudhya) about the insult (atikramam) offered by His own servants (svanam) who had checked the movements of the Four Kumaras, headed by Sanaka Kumara. Accompanied by the goddess of fortune, He went (yayau) to the spot (tasmin), quickly walking there (calayan) with His own feet (caranau)."

"The Supreme Lord thought: 'I will show My anger to these two gatekeepers because they have offended the sages who came to see My lotus feet. Laksmi-devi and I will both pacify the desireless sages by granting them many opulences.'"

17 In order to grant spiritual bliss to the Four Kumaras, whose pleasure was self-realisation, the Lord granted them the sight of His lotus feet. The Lord, whose superexcellent transcendental form is the abode of all eternity, knowledge and bliss, along with His pastimes-potency, the goddess of fortune, personally went to those sages. The word 'svanam' is used in the plural (and not the dual) in this verse, although it refers only to the two gatekeepers. It may be that the Lord took it that all His personal associates were responsible for the offense of these two, or it may be that the plural is used out of respect for the exalted gatekeepers. It should not be understood that the word 'svanam' is used here to refer to the four (Kumaras) sages. These sages were not intimate devotees of the Lord, as the gatekeepers of Vaikuntha were, and therefore the word "svanam" (His own servants) cannot appropriately refer to them.

18 The next five verses (Texts 3-7), describe the Supreme Personality of Godhead as He was seen by the Four Kumaras. They say: "The sages (te) headed by Sanaka Rsi saw the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Vishnu, who was formerly visible only within their hearts in ecstatic trance (sva-samadhi-bhagya), had now actually become visible to their eyes (aksa-visaya)." This passage may also be interpreted to mean: "As a result of their previous meditation on the Lord in ecstatic trance (sva-samadhi), the four Kumaras (te) now obtained the opportunity to directly see the Supreme Lord with their own eyes. The Lord's own transcendental potency, which reveals the Lord's form to the intelligence and senses of His devotees, revealed the Lord's form to the four Kumaras. As the Kumaras had previously perceived the Lord in ecstatic meditation, in the same way they were now able to directly perceive the Lord, the sound of whose voice, and the touch, sight, taste and aroma of whose body are all full of complete eternity, knowledge and bliss. The Kumaras saw the Personality of Godhead as He is eternally manifested. As a result of their meditation on Him, the Kumaras were able to see the Personality of Godhead, who in various circumstances at various times is served with various articles of worship by His own personal associates filled with the intense bliss of pure love rising from directly seeing the great wonder of the charming sweetness of the Lord's form. In this way the Supreme Lord's potency of transcendental bliss reveals the role in the Lord's pastimes of the residents of Vaikuntha, who have attained the most desirable condition of life. The Lord's handsomeness which arouses great attraction and love in the hearts and minds of the Lord's associates is described in the three and a half verses (Texts 4-7) beginning with the word 'hamsa'. We may also note that the word 'kesara' used in this Text 3 means 'a necklace of pearls.'

19 The next verse (Text 4) says: "The Lord's affectionate and playful glancing (sneha-valoka) and smiling (sumukha) granted benediction (prasada) to everyone (krtsna), including the two doorkeepers and the four Kumaras. The Lord is the abode (dhama) of all desirable (sphaṇḍya) qualities. The Lord's spiritual abode (atma-dhanyam) of Vaikuntha, the abode of eternal, limitless, bliss, is the summit (cūḍa-maṇi) of all heavenly planets (svaḥ). The Lord's broad chest (urasi) is the resting place of the goddess of fortune (sobhitaya śrīya). The word 'subhagayantam iva' may also be interpreted to mean "The goddess of fortune rested on the Lord's chest as if she were a subhaga-ornament." The word 'iva' (like) is used to express the analogy in this statement.

20 The Vaikuntha realm is again described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.15.26):

"Thus the great sages, Sanaka, Sanatana, Sananda and Sanat-kumara, upon reaching the abovementioned Vaikuntha in the spiritual world by dint of their mystic yoga performance, perceived unprecedented happiness. They found that the spiritual sky was illuminated by highly decorated airplanes piloted by the best devotees of Vaikuntha and was predominated by the Supreme Personality of Godhead."*

21 The four Kumaras' departure from Vaikuntha is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.16.27-28):

"After seeing the Lord of Vaikuntha, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, in the self-illuminated Vaikuntha planet, the sages left that transcendental abode.*

22 "The sages circumambulated the Supreme Lord, offered their obeisances and returned, extremely delighted at learning of the divine opulences of the Vaishnava."*

23 In the next verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.15.40 quoted in text 5) the words 'kancya' and 'vana-malaya' are in the instrumental case. In the verse after that (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.15.41, quoted in text 6) the word 'harata' means 'charming'. Having described the beauty of the Lord's garments and ornaments, Shrimad Bhagavatam next describes the beauty of the Lord's form in the next verse (3.15.42, quoted in text 7). This verse says: "The exquisite beauty (bahu-sausthavadhyam) of Narayana was so attractive that it defeated

(upasrstam) the pride (utsmitam) of the goddess of fortune (indirayah) in being the most beautiful. The Lord's great beauty was many times magnified by the intelligence (dhiya) of His devotees. The Lord was thus glorified by the devotees because His transcendental form was full of unlimited beauty, opulence, and charming qualities (bahu-sausthavadhyam)."

24 At this point someone may ask: "How is it possible that the confidential treasure of the Lord's transcendental beauty is so great that it exceeds the beauty of Laksmi-devi, the goddess of fortune. Is it not true that there is no beauty greater than Laksmi's?"

Brahma answered this question by describing the unequalled supremacy of the Lord's beauty. Brahma says: "The Supreme Lord who thus manifested His transcendental form is worshipable (angam bhajantam) by me (mahyam), by Lord Siva, and by all of you."

25 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead's beauty and opulences are unequalled in all circumstances is confirmed by Shripada Yamunacarya in the following words (Stotra-ratna 13):

"O my Lord, everything within material nature is limited by time, space and thought. Your characteristics, however, being unequalled and unsurpassed are always transcendental to such limitations. You sometimes cover such characteristics by Your own energy, but nevertheless Your unalloyed devotees are always able to see You under all circumstances."*

26 That the Supreme Lord may be seen by pure devotional service is described in the Sruti-sastra:

"Pure devotional service leads one to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Pure devotional service enables one to see the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

In this verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.15.42, quoted in text 7) it is said: "The four Kumaras regarded (niriksyā) the Supreme Personality of Godhead with unsated (na vitrpta) eyes (drsah) and joyously (muda) bowed (nemuh) their heads (kaih) at His lotus feet."

27 Shripada Shridhara Svami comments on the next verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.15.43, quoted in Text 8):

"The bliss of devotional service to the Lord is greater even than the bliss of directly seeing the Lord. This is described in this verse, where Lord Brahma says: "When the breeze (vayuh) carrying the aroma (makaranda) of tulasi leaves (tulasi) from the toes of the lotus feet (padaravinda-kinjalka) of the Personality of Godhead (tasya) entered the nostrils (sva-vivarena) of those sages, they experienced a change (sanksobham) both in body (tanvoh) and mind (citta), even though they were attached to the impersonal Brahman understanding (aksara-jusam)." The change of body experienced by the four Kumaras was the ecstatic symptom of hairs on the body standing up, and the change of mind they experienced was intense happiness in the mind."

28 The phrase 'padaravinda-kinkajalka-misra-tulasi' in this verse may be interpreted to mean 'the aroma of the tulasi leaves and the aroma of the toes of the lotus feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead', or again it may also be interpreted to mean 'the aroma of the Lord's feet, and the aroma of the lotus flowers and tulasi leaves from His garland.' The breeze carried these aromas, mixed with the aroma of the Lord's transcendental limbs. Carried by the breeze, these combined aromas agitated the minds and bodies of the four Kumaras.

29 In the next verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.15.44, quoted in text 9, Lord Brahma respectfully describes the reason the four Kumaras felt transcendental ecstasy. Brahma says: "The Lord's beautiful face (vadana) appeared to them (te vai) like the inside (kosam) of a slightly blossomed blue (asita) lotus (padma). After seeing (udviksyā) the face of the Lord, the sages were fully satisfied (labdhasisah), and when they wanted to see Him further, they looked down the nails (nakha) of His lotus feet (anghri-dvanvam) which resembled rubies (aruna-mani-srayanam). Thus they viewed (aveksyā) the Lord's transcendental body again and again (punah)."

Because the four Kumaras were not able to see the beautiful features of all the Lord's transcendental limbs at the same time, they meditated on the Lord's form, and in that meditation they were able to see all the Lord's transcendental limbs simultaneously. The four Kumaras thought: "How will we be able to see all the beautiful features of the Lord simultaneously?" Longing to see the Lord in this way they meditated on Him. This meditation on the Lord increased their ecstatic love for Him. By this meditation the four Kumaras attained ecstatic love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

30 In the next verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.15.45 quoted in text 10) Lord Brahma says: "This human-like (pumsam) form (vapuh) displayed (darsayanam) by the Lord is respectfully meditated upon (matam) by Brahma and all the great demigods (bahu)."

The form mentioned here is the guna-avatara Vishnu, who is manifested from the purusa-avatara Garbhodakasayi Vishnu. Lord Vishnu is no different from His transcendental form, unlike Brahma and the other demigods who have external material forms different from their spiritual identities.

Lord Brahma continues: "The Lord is full of His own beginningless, self-manifested, eternal (autpattikaih) opulences (siddhaih) such as the eight opulences (beginning with anima-siddhi) achieved by yoga-practice (asta-bhogaih). Because the Lord is full of these transcendental opulences, the four Kumaras glorified (samagnan) Him with many prayers."

31 In the next verses (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.15.46-50 quoted in texts 11-15) the four Kumaras offer prayers to the Lord, expressing their heart-felt feelings of love for Him. The phrase 'aksara-jusam' (the four Kumaras had previously been attached to the impersonal Brahman understanding) is explained by the Kumaras in the following words:

"O Lord, that You are eternally manifest as the impersonal Brahma is neither very wonderful nor very significant. Your actually important feature is Your personal form, which Your own transcendental potency is now enabling us to see. How fortunate we have become now to be able to see You face to face (naya-mulam). O Lord, You are not manifested (antarhitah) to the rascals (duratmanam), even though You are seated (gatah) within the heart (hrdi) of everyone. But as far as we are concerned (nah), we see You face to face (nayana-mulam raddhah), although You are unlimited (ananta)."

That one may see the Supreme Lord face to face by engaging in His devotional service is also confirmed in Vedanta-sutra (3.2.24):

"By engaging in devotional service one may become eligible to directly see the Supreme Personality of Godhead face to face, and one may be able to understand Him with the mind and perceive Him within the heart by the process of meditation."

This is also confirmed in Katha Upanisad (2.1.1):

32 "Generally speaking, no one can see the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is beyond the grasp of the material senses. However, one who is intelligent and saintly, and who aspires for liberation, can turn his eyes from matter and become able to see the Supreme Personality of Godhead residing within his heart as the Supersoul."

33 Because the Kumaras had heard about the Supreme Personality of Godhead from their father, Lord Brahma, they became eligible to see the Lord face to face. This is confirmed by the Kumaras in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.15.46, quoted in text 11):

"The first statements we have heard about You (anuvarnita-rahah) from our father Brahma (pitra) through the ears (karna-vivarena) have now been actually realised by Your kind appearance (guham gato nah...bhavad-udbhavena)."

34 At this point Lord Narayana may object: "Is it not so that because your father taught you the Absolute Truth is invisible and very secret, and because I am now openly visible before your eyes, therefore I cannot be that Absolute Truth but must be something else.?"

The four Kumaras reject the idea that Lord Narayana is different from the Absolute Truth. They say (in the next verse, text 12): "We know that You are the Supreme Absolute truth, the Personality of Godhead."

35 The Kumaras says: "O Supreme Personality of godhead (bhagavan), we know (vidama) that You are the Supreme Absolute Truth (param atma-tattvam), whose form is spiritual."

Lord Narayana then may ask: 'How do you know?' The Kumaras then reply: "We know because You have now (samprati) manifested before us Your transcendental form in the uncontaminated mode of pure goodness (sattvena). Until this moment we did not understand You, but now that we can directly see You, we have concluded that You are the Supreme. You appear before the spiritual eyes of us who are pure in heart. You are not visible to ordinary material eyes."

The Kumaras continue: "You are not known by transcendental knowledge (if it is devoid of love for You). You have created (racayantam) our love (ratim) for You, for otherwise we would not be able to love You. To the self-realised sages who are free from pride and false-ego, but who have no love for You, You appear as the splendid Brahman effulgence. There is a specific spiritual path by which one attains love for

You.”

The Kumaras then describe that specific path. They say: “Your mercy is the spiritual practice by which Your spiritual form becomes manifest. By Your mercy (anutapa-viditaih) and by unflinching devotional service (drdha-bhakti-yogaih), one understands You. This spiritual practice is also genuine humbleness, by which one understands unflinching pure devotional service.

Lord Narayana may ask: “What are the people who understand Me like?”

The Kumaras then answer: “They are without attachment and are free from material bondage (udgranthayah). They are not interested in material life (viragah).”

In this way these four verses (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.15.47-50) describe pure devotion and love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

36 Although previously the Kumaras thought themselves non different from the Supreme, now, influenced by the pastimes of the bliss potency of the Lord’s transcendental form, they understand they are different from the Supreme and they pray for pure devotional service. In the next verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.15.48, quoted in text 13), they describe the intense happiness of the devotees of the Lord. The phrase ‘atyantikam prasadam’ means ‘the benediction of impersonal liberation’ and the phrase ‘kimv anyat’ means ‘to say nothing of the material happiness of Indra and the other demigods.”

37 In the next verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.15.49, quoted in text 14) the Kumaras confess their own offense and pray for pure devotional service. They say: “O Supreme Personality of Godhead, before now we did not commit any sin, but now that two of Your devotees are cursed on our account, we have committed all sins. Therefore, let us (nah) be born (bhavah) in any hellish condition of life (nirayesu).”

38 They who understand the Supreme Personality of Godhead, however, never suffer a hellish life. This is described in Vedanta-sutra (4.1.13): “When one understands the Supreme Personality of Godhead the sins of both past and present are all destroyed. This is so because it is described in the Upanisads.” In this way they who understand the Supreme Personality of Godhead becomes excused from many great sins that would otherwise have cast them into a hellish condition of life. This fact shows the all-wonderful glory of the Supreme Lord, which Shrimad Bhagavatam describes in the words (1.17.10): “The Lord possesses transcendental qualities.”

39 The Kumaras plead: “Let us be born in hell. We do not mind. We are not afraid of hell. (Our only request is that) we may never have the misfortune of becoming averse to You. (We are not afraid) if our hearts and minds (cetah) are always engaged in the service (rameta) of You lotus feet (padayoh). We will be like bumblebees that taste only the sweetness of Your lotus feet and our words will be engaged in describing our direct perception of You, the Supreme Personality of Godhead.” Hearing their heart-felt plea, the Supreme Lord forgave their offense to His devotees. By His wish their offense faded into non existence. In this way the passage should be understood.

40 In these two verses (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.15.49-50, quoted in text 14 and 15) the Kumaras say: “Because it is not impossible to serve You in hell, for us, who desire only devotional service, hell is better than impersonal liberation (where it is not possible to serve You). Our devotional service to You is the very wonderful success of our lives.

In the next verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.15.50, quoted in text 15) the Kumaras says: “You do not appear before less intelligent persons (anatmanam), who do not have unalloyed devotion for You, although You have appeared before us (it pratitah). We offer (vidhema) our respectful obeisances (namah) to You (tasmai).

41 The four Kumaras are the spiritual masters of all other spiritual masters perfect in knowledge. They are the spiritual masters of the great paramahansa sages. This is described by Shri Amsuman in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 9.8.23):

“O my Lord, sages freed from the influence of the three modes of material nature - sages such as the four Kumaras (Sanat, Sanaka, Sanandana and Sanatana) - are able to think of You, who are concentrated knowledge. But how can an ignorant person like me think of You?”

42 The exalted position of the four Kumaras is also described by Lord Brahma in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.7.5):

“To create different planetary systems I had to undergo austerities and penance, and the Lord, thus being pleased with me, incarnated in four sanas (Sanaka, Sanatkumara, Sanandana, and Sanatana). In the previous creation the spiritual truth was devastated, but the four sanas explained it so nicely that the truth at once became clearly perceived by the sages.”*

43 The Kumaras are also glorified in Chandogya Upanisad (7.26.2):

“To a person whose heart is cleansed of all impurity Lord Sanat-kumara reveals the Absolute Truth, who is beyond the darkness of ignorance.”

44 For a transcendentalist who has not yet attained the perfectional stage of spiritual realisation, anima-siddhi and the other mystic powers are obstacles to his progress. For the transcendentalist who has already attained perfection of spiritual realisation, however, they are not obstacles. This is explained by Lord Kapiladeva in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.28.38):

“The body of such a liberated yogi, along with the senses, is taken charge of by the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and its functions until its destined activities are finished. The liberated devotee, being awake to his constitutional position and thus situated in samadhi, the highest perfectional stage of yoga, does not accept the by-products of his body as his own. Thus he considers his bodily activities to be like the activities of a body in a dream.”*

45 Although they were transcendentalists free the illusion of duality created by the modes of material nature, (because they were impersonalists) by the Supreme Personality of Godhead’s desire, which can do any impossible thing, the Kumaras were still filled with anger and other vices (as was seen in their anger directed to the gatekeepers of Vaikuntha). Although they were impersonalists always plunged in the bliss of impersonal Brahma, (they became personalists, devotees by contact with the Lord Himself) as is described in Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.15.43-45 (quoted in texts 8-10).

46 In other places also it is said that the hearts of those who are actually advanced in spiritual life (the devotees) are not disturbed by material imperfections. In Shrimad Bhagavatam (7.15.35) Narada Muni says:

“When one’s consciousness is uncontaminated by material lusty desires, it becomes calm and peaceful in all activities, for one is situated in eternal blissful life. Once situated on that platform, one does not return to materialistic activities.”*

47 In this way the impersonalist Kumaras became attracted to the bliss of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Other impersonalist atmaramas also became attracted to the Lord and became devotees. In the scriptures is the example of Shрила Sukadeva Gosvami (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.12.69):

“Let me offer my respectful obeisances unto my spiritual master, the son of Vyasadeva, Sukadeva Gosvami. It is he who defeats all inauspicious things within this universe. Although in the beginning he was absorbed in the happiness of Brahman realisation and was living in a secluded place, giving up all other kinds of consciousness, he became attracted by the most melodious pastimes of Lord Krishna. He therefore mercifully spoke the supreme Purana, known as Shrimad Bhagavatam, which is the light of the Absolute Truth and which describes the activities of Lord Krishna.”*

48 At this point someone may ask: “Do the activities of devotional service follow popular custom or the ancient samskara rituals?” The answer is given: Neither of them. Devotional service is beyond the material sphere. Here the example of an intoxicated person who cannot understand whether he is wearing clothing is given in Shrimad Bhagavatam (3.28.37):

“Because he has achieved his real identity, the perfectly realised soul has no conception of how the material body is moving or acting, just as an intoxicated person cannot understand whether or not he has clothing on his body.”*

49 Another example of the devotees’ aloofness from material desire is seen in the following statement (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.15.12):

“Lord Brahma said: My four sons Sanaka, Sanatana, Sanandana and Sanat-kumara, who were born from my mind, are your predecessors. Sometimes they travel throughout the material and spiritual skies without any definite desire.”*

The Kumaras were absorbed in thought of the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

50 The devotees’ attachment to the Lord is described in Shrimad Bhagavatam (3.15.37):

“The Lord’s feet are sought for by recluses and great sages.”*

The devotees overcome any obstacle fate may place between them and the Lord.

51 The devotees are also described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 5.3.11):

"Dear Lord, all the great sages who are thoughtful and saintly persons incessantly recount Your spiritual qualities. These sages have already burned up all the unlimited dirty things and, by the fire of knowledge, strengthened their detachment from the material world. Thus they have attained Your qualities and are self-satisfied. Yet even for those who feel spiritual bliss in chanting Your attributes, Your personal presence is very rare."*

In this prose passage the devotees' exclusive faith in the Lord is described.

52 The devotees are again described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.12.69):

"The devotees' hearts are attracted to the charming pastimes of the invincible Supreme Personality of Godhead."

53 The sight of the Lord gives great pleasure to the devotees. The Kumaras say (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.15.50):

"O Lord, we therefore offer our respectful obeisances unto Your eternal form as the Personality of Godhead, which You have so kindly manifested before us. Your supreme, eternal form cannot be seen by unfortunate, less intelligent persons, but we are so much satisfied in our mind and vision to see it."*

54 Someone may say that although, as the previous verse said, the Lord brings happiness to the eyes, the Lord himself is aloof and does not love anyone. This is not true, for another verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.15.39) says:

"The Lord's affectionate smiling and glancing touch the core of the heart."*

55 Because the Supreme Personality of Godhead (bhagavan) attracts and delights the impersonalists and other transcendentalists, the spiritual substance named Brahman should be understood to be actually a feature of Lord Bhagavan. The Kumaras are an example of impersonalists who became attracted to Lord Bhagavan (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.15.43):

"When the breeze carrying the aroma of tulasi leaves from the toes of the lotus feet of the Personality of Godhead entered the nostrils of those sages, they experienced a change both in body and in mind, even though they were attached to the impersonal Brahman understanding."*

56 Beyond the bliss of Brahman is a more intense stage of spiritual realisation where one is filled with wonderful bliss by gazing at the wonderful limbs of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. It is not appropriate to say otherwise. This bliss is a manifestation of the Lord's own pastime potency.

57 At this point someone may protest: "Is it not so that because the bliss of Bhagavan is limited to a specific form, therefore the bliss of the formless, and therefore unlimited, Brahman is greater? Brahman appears in the thoughts of a person situated in pure goodness. When Bhagavan is manifested in the most pure form of the mode of goodness, then it becomes one with Brahman. In this way the truth of Bhagavan becomes manifested. In this way it is said that impersonal Brahman and the form of the Bhagavan are one and the same. In whatever form Brahman is manifest, the same formless bliss is present. That bliss does not have the slightest scent of a relationship with any specific form. That bliss is caused by meditation on the impersonal Brahman. Therefore, in the light of this evidence, how can it be said that the Absolute truth has a form?"

58 In your opinion you have said that the impersonal Brahman appears in the thoughts of one who is pure and that by abandoning all partial, imperfect conceptions of God, and by becoming enlightened with genuine spiritual knowledge, the impersonal Brahman, the complete, final aspect of the Absolute Truth, becomes manifest.

It is because of your incomplete knowledge and your attachment to the impersonal idea of God that you do not accept the truth that God has form and qualities. When you say the form and qualities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are manifestations of the mode of pure goodness, what do you mean? Do you mean that they are transformations of the mode of pure goodness or have a large quantity of the mode of pure goodness. The first proposal, that they are transformations of the mode of pure goodness is clearly not true, for it has already been explained that it is not possible for something to be a transformation of the mode of goodness without some mixture of the mode of passion. The second proposal, that they have a large quantity of the mode of pure goodness, is also not true for that statement would imply that some other modes are also present and the goodness is not pure, but mixed with other modes. This idea makes meaningless the word 'visuddha' (pure) in the Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.2.34) statement 'sattvam visuddham srayate bhavan sthitau' (O Lord, You manifest several incarnations, all with transcendental bodies, beyond the material modes of nature).*

At this point our opponent may say: 'All right, the form and qualities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are in the mode of pure goodness, but they are certainly not spiritual. That is not possible. You can forget about thinking that they are different from the material energy.'

To this I reply: If the sages see the spiritual nature present in the mode of perfectly pure goodness, then your argument is refuted because the inference you make is not valid.

59 The four Kumaras affirm that the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is spiritual in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.15.38):

"The sages, headed by Sanaka Rsi, saw that the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Vishnu, who was formerly visible only within their hearts in ecstatic trance, had now actually become visible to their eyes."*

In this quote the direct perception of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is described and the ideas that the Absolute Truth is invisible to all eyes, the pure goodness of the Lord's form is material, the Lord's form is a transformation of the mode of goodness and the Lord's form has a large quantity of the mode of goodness, are all refuted. The truth, as has already been described, is that the Lord's form is self-manifest, that is, manifest by the mode of pure goodness. In this way the ideas that the Lord's form is material or that the Lord has no form, are both refuted and the wonder of the bliss of the direct perception of the Lord's form is clearly established. In this way, by the description of the direct seeing of the Lord's form and by the description of the Lord's handsomeness, the truth that the Lord's form is pure transcendental goodness is clearly proved.

60 In the words 'The sages gazed at the form of the Lord with unsated eyes' Shrimad Bhagavatam (3.15.42) confirms the transcendental nature of the Lord's form by explaining that the sages could never become sated by gazing at the Lord's form.

61 In the passage beginning with the word 'ca' (and) (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.15.41-42) it is seen that the breeze carrying the aroma of the Lord's lotus feet defeats the impersonal Brahman. If this were not so, then in both these passages the formlessness of the happiness of impersonal Brahman would have been described (and not the form of the Lord) and the word 'aksara-jusam' (attached to the impersonal Brahman understanding) would be replaced by the word 'vidya-jusam' (attached to transcendental knowledge). This is so because these two rival conceptions (the personal and impersonal definition of God) are mutually exclusive. In this way it may be understood that, just as Vasistha Muni easily conquered the slightest possibility of grieving over the death of his sons, so the bliss of the slightest glimpse of the personal form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead easily conquers the happiness of perceiving the impersonal Brahman. In this way the arguments of the impersonalists are refuted.

Shrila Shridhara Svami comments here (3.15.43):

"The bliss of serving the Lord is greater even than the bliss of directly seeing Him."

This explanation (by Shridhara Svami) is certainly a source of great wonder.

62 For this reason the Kumaras offer the following wonderful prayer (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.15.49):

"O Lord, we pray that You let us be born in any hellish condition of life, just as long as our hearts and minds are always engaged in the service of Your lotus feet, our words are made beautiful (by speaking of Your activities) just as tulasi leaves are beautified when offered unto Your lotus feet, and as long as our ears are always filled with the chanting of Your transcendental qualities."*

63 The Nyaya-sastra says: "If honey is nearby, why go to a mountain to search for it?" There is no need to search for another, a more complicated, less obvious explanation for all this. The meaning is clear.

64 In these verses it is not stated that the jivas are non-different from the Supreme Personality of Godhead, but rather, the opposing view, that they are different, is clearly given. For example, in Shrimad Bhagavatam (3.15.42) it is said:

"The sages regarded Him (the Lord) with unsated eyes and joyously bowed their heads at His lotus feet."*

Also, the Kumaras say (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.15.49):

"O Lord, we pray that You let us be born in any hellish condition of life, just as long as our hearts and minds are always engaged in the service of Your lotus feet, our words are made beautiful (by speaking of Your activities) just as tulasi leaves are beautified when offered unto Your lotus feet, and as long as our ears are always filled with the chanting of Your transcendental qualities.”*

In these passages is seen the happiness of pure devotional service, where the devotee offers respectful obeisances to the Lord and knows that he is different from the Lord. All of this, of course is the opposite (of the impersonal view, where one thinks himself one with the Lord). The impersonalists’ view is an illusion of the worst kind and the happiness of impersonal realisation is also an illusion. Because they are filled with knowledge of the truth, the devotees do not misunderstand this illusory happiness, thinking it something other than it is. the spiritual pastimes of the Lord, however, are, manifested from His personal, internal potency, which is perfect and completely different from the happiness of impersonal Brahman.

65 The devotees’ conception of liberation, where one becomes free from all material designations and understands the Supreme Personality of Godhead, is the truth. It is better than the impersonalists’ conception of liberation, where, staying in the material world, one sees everything as a reflection of Brahman. This is confirmed by the four Kumaras in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.15.48):

“Persons who are very expert and most intelligent in understanding things as they are engage in hearing narrations of the auspicious activities and pastimes of the Lord, which are worth chanting and worth hearing. Such persons do not care even for the highest material benediction, namely liberation, to say nothing of other less important benedictions like the material happiness of the heavenly kingdom.”*

From this we may understand that a devotee does not consider one status of material life better than another.

66 That the wonderful liberation of the devotees is better than the varietyless Brahman liberation of the impersonalists is confirmed by Shrimad Bhagavatam (3.15.48):

“Persons who are very expert and most intelligent in understanding things as they are engage in hearing narrations of the auspicious activities and pastimes of the Lord, which are worth chanting and worth hearing. Such persons do not care even for the highest material benediction, namely liberation, to say nothing of other less important benedictions like the material happiness of the heavenly kingdom.”*

From this we may understand that the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the master of wonderful internal potencies, has a form of transcendental bliss. That the wonder of the pastimes and potencies in His form is more significant than the impersonal Brahman is confirmed by the personal experience of the wise. This is described in Shрила Shridhara Svami’s commentary on Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.87.21):

“Giving up their material bodies, the devotees become liberated and worship the Lord by enjoying transcendental pastimes with Him.”

This is also described in Nrsimha-tapani Upanisad (2.4):

“All the demigods, brahmavadis, and sages who aspire for liberation, meditate on the Supreme Personality of Godhead.”

The word ‘brahmavadi’ here means ‘the spiritual masters of the impersonalists.’

This is also described in Mahabharata:

“Lord Krishna is worshipped by liberated souls free from illusion.”

67 This is also described in Bhagavad-gita (18.54):

“One who is thus transcendently situated at once realises the Supreme Brahman and becomes fully joyful. He never laments or desires to have anything. He is equally disposed toward every living entity. In that state he attains pure devotional service unto Me.”*

68 This is also confirmed by the following statement of Sruti-sastra quoted in Shripada Madhvacarya’s commentary on Mahabharata:

“The devotional service performed by liberated souls is full of eternal bliss.”

This is also confirmed by Vedanta-sutra (4.1.12):

“After liberation the process of devotional service continues.”*

This is also confirmed in the following statement of Suparna-sruti quoted in Shripada Madhvacarya’s commentary:

“One should always worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Even after attaining liberation one should continue to worship Him. The liberated souls worship Him.”

69 This is also confirmed by the following statement, where, discussing Prahlada Maharaja, Bali Maharaja and other great devotees, Shri Vishnu Purana (2.5.7) says:

"Even when placed in hell, what liberated soul does not continue to love the Supreme Personality of Godhead?"

Anuccheda 80

1 All goals of life are situated within the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is described in Shrimad Bhagavatam (5.3.7-8) where the rtvig priests say to Lord Yajna-purusa:

"We have engaged in Your worship with many things and have offered sacrifices unto You, but we think that there is no need for so many arrangements to please Your Lordship. All of life's goal and opulences are directly, self-sufficiently, unceasingly, and unlimitedly increasing in You at every moment. Indeed, You are unlimited enjoyment and blissful existence itself."*

2 Shрила Shridhara Svami comments:

"This verse says 'All of life's goals and opulences (purusartha) are directly (anasa), self-sufficiently (atmanah), increasingly and unlimitedly (asesa) increasing (bobhuyamana) in You (svarupa) at every moment (anusavanam). Indeed, You are unlimited enjoyment and blissful existence itself.'"

3 This is also described in Chandogya Upanisad (3.14.2):

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is all desires, all fragrances, all tastes."

Anuccheda 81

1 Brahman and Bhagavan are both the same Supreme. Although They are considered separately, the descriptions of the experiences of the wise confirm that They are one. They are one truth described in two words. They are not in fact different.

2 Still, the difference between Them is not only in name but also in appearance. The Supreme thus manifests Himself in two ways according to two different views and in these two ways He is worshipped. Because both of these views are true it should not be thought that one of these views is true and the other is an illusion. Because (the scriptures affirm that) They are not partial transformations of the potency of something else, Brahman and Bhagavan are not two different transformations of a single original substance. From this view it is understood that Brahman and Bhagavan are both the same and different. The view that They are only the same is the result of not carefully examining Them both. They are different. The first difference is that Brahman only stays in one place. The second difference is that Brahman is devoid of any variety. A conception of something that cannot describe its qualities is an incomplete conception. The conception of Brahma is like that. A conception of something that describes its many wonderful qualities is a complete conception. The conception of the form of Bhagavan is like that.

3 The meaning of this is that because there are different levels of spiritual realisation, there are also different levels of manifestation of the Supreme. There are two reasons the great Shrimad Bhagavatam was manifested. These two reasons are explained in the following six verses (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.5.4,7,8,12,37,38):

4 Shri Narada said: You have fully delineated the subject of impersonal Brahman as well as the knowledge derived therefrom. Why should you be despondent in spite of all this, thinking that you are undone, my dear prabhu?*

5 "Like the sun, your goodness can travel everywhere in the three worlds and like the air you can penetrate the internal region of everyone. As such, you are as good as the all-pervasive Supersoul. Please, therefore, find out the deficiency in me, despite my being absorbed in transcendence under disciplinary regulations and vows.*

6 Shri Narada said: You have not actually broadcast the sublime and spotless glories of the Personality of Godhead. That philosophy which does not satisfy the transcendental senses of the Lord is considered worthless.*

7 "Knowledge of self-realisation, even though free from all material affinity, does not look well if devoid of a conception of the infallible (God). What, then, is the use of fruitive activities, which are naturally painful from the very beginning and transient by nature, if they are not utilised for the service of the Lord?*

8 "Let us all chant the glories of Vasudeva along with His plenary expansions Pradyumna, Aniruddha and Sankarsana.*

9 "Thus he is the actual seer who worships, in the form of transcendental sound representation, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Vishnu, who has no material form.

10 These many different verses (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.5.4-7, 8, 12, 37, 38 quoted in texts 4-9) have been discussed here only briefly and not at length. Shrila Shridhara Svami comments on the first of these verses:

"This verse means 'You (tvaya) have fully delineated (jijnasitam) the subject of impersonal Brahman (brahma), which is eternal (sanatanam), as well as the knowledge derived therefrom (vicaritam). Why should you be despondent (socasi) in spite of all this (tathapi)?'"

11 Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.5.7 (quoted in text 5) means 'Because you are empowered by Lord Vishnu, like the sun your goodness can travel everywhere in the three worlds, and like the air you can penetrate the internal region of everyone. You are the witness who knows what is inside the hearts of all living beings. You know all that happens both externally and also within the heart. As such you are as good as the all-pervasive Supersoul. I am absorbed in transcendence under disciplinary vows.' This is also described by the sage Yajnavalkya in the following words:

12 "The ultimate result of worship, righteous conduct, mercy, non violence, charity, Vedic study, and pious deeds, is the direct vision of the Supreme Personality of Godhead in yogic trance."

13 The second part of the verse means 'Please, therefore, find out the deficiency in me, despite my being absorbed in transcendence under disciplinary regulations and vows, and in Vedic study to understand the preliminary truth of Brahman described in the scriptures.'

14 The next verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.5.8, quoted in text 6) means 'Without worship of the Lord, which means description of his glories, mere knowledge of dry, impersonal Brahman does not please the Supreme Personality of Godhead. I think that (impersonal) philosophy is worthless. This is made more clear by the next quote (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.5.12, quoted in text 7).

15 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments (on Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.5.12, quoted in text 7): 'In this verse the word 'naiskarmyam' means both 'spiritual realisation' and 'freedom from fruitive work'. And 'niranjanam' means 'free from designations'. This kind of knowledge of self realisation does not look well if it is devoid of love for the infallible Supreme Personality of Godhead. At the time of performing actions and also at the time of obtaining the results of actions, this kind of knowledge is full of pain (abhadram). The word 'ca' (and) here means that this description applies to both fruitive and non fruitive work. If work is not offered to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, how can it be auspicious (sobhate)? It is not auspicious because it has no relation to the Supreme Lord and because it does not purify the heart."

In this way knowledge of self realisation, even though free from all material affinity (does not look well). Because this verse is very important it is repeated verbatim after the Tenth Canto (12.12.52). The conclusion of these two verses is that loving devotional service is the way to directly see the Supreme Lord.

16 In the next verses (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.5.37 and 38, quoted in Texts 8 and 9) the word 'mantra-murtim' means either "He whose form is described in mantras", or 'He whose form is identical with mantras'. The word 'amurtikam' means either 'He who does not have a form described in mantras' or 'He whose form is not material.' This means His form is not material either because He and His form are identical, or because He is not different from His form. Thus the Supreme Personality of Godhead is directly visible (in the form of mantra).

1 In terms of different levels of philosophical understanding and different levels of manifestations of the Supreme, Bhagavan (the Supreme Personality of Godhead) is the best. With His exalted transcendental qualities Bhagavan attracts the self-realised souls (atmaramas). This is confirmed in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.7.10):

2 "All different varieties of atmaramas (those who take pleasure in atma, or spirit self), especially those established on the path of self-realisation, though freed from all kinds of material bondage, desire to render unalloyed devotional service unto the Personality of Godhead. This means that the Lord possesses transcendental qualities and therefore can attract everyone, including liberated souls."*

3 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments: "The word 'nirgrantha' here means 'they who are above the injunctions of the scriptures'. This is described in Bhagavad-gita (2.52):

"When your intelligence has passed out of the dense forest of delusion, you shall become indifferent to all that has been heard and all that is to be heard."*

4 "Or the word 'nirgrantha' may also be interpreted to mean 'they who have cut the knots (of material desire) in the heart'.

"Someone may ask, 'What is the use of devotional service for they who are already liberated?'"

The answer is given that even the liberated souls engage in devotional service to remove all calamities. Also, the Lord is full of wonderful qualities (ittham-bhuta-gunah) (and thus the liberated souls are attracted to serve Him)."

Anuccheda 83

1 That Bhagavan (the Supreme Personality of Godhead) is the supreme form of God is confirmed by the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.24.43-47):

"He fixed his mind upon the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Parabrahman, who is beyond cause and effect, who manifests the three modes of material nature, who is beyond those three modes, and who is perceived only through unfailing devotional service.*

2 "Thus he gradually became unaffected by the false ego of material identity and became free from material affection. Undisturbed, equal to everyone and without duality, he could indeed see himself also. His mind was turned inward and was perfectly calm, like an ocean unagitated by waves.*

3 "He thus became liberated from conditioned life and became self situated in transcendental devotional service to the Personality of Godhead, Vasudeva, the omniscient Supersoul within everyone.*

4 "He began to see that the Supreme Personality of Godhead is seated in everyone's heart, and that everyone is existing on Him, because He is the Supersoul of everyone.*

5 "Freed from all hatred and desire, Kardama Muni, being equal to everyone because of discharging uncontaminated devotional service, ultimately attained the path back to Godhead."*

6 In Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.24.43 (quoted in text 1) the word 'eka-bhaktya' means 'by unfailing sadhana-bhakti (devotional service in practice).' 'Anubhavite' means 'eternally perceived'. Without devotional service the goal of life is not attained. In the next verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.24.44 quoted in text 2) the words 'nirahankrtir nirmanah' means 'Because of being unaffected by the false ego of material identity, he became free from material affection.' Because he was free from false ego and material affection, he also became free from the mind and senses.

7 The word 'sama-drk' means 'seeing equally'. 'Sva-drk' means 'seeing himself as spirit'. 'Pratyak' means 'turned inward'. 'Prasanta' means 'unagitated'. 'Dhih' means 'knowledge'. In the stage of sadhana-bhakti, where devotion is mixed with knowledge of Brahman, he attained perception of Brahman and then later, on the strength of pure bhakti, he developed love for the Supreme and after that he was able to see the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is described in the next verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.24.45, quoted in text 3).

8 In this verse the word 'pratyag-atmani' means 'present within everyone'. 'Parena bhakti-bhavana' means 'by the power of loving devotional service.' In this way He became free from false ego and other material imperfections and attained the Supreme Personality of Godhead. By knowledge of Brahman he became free of material false ego, but when he became purified by the bliss of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, he attained his real ego, his real identity.

9 At this point someone may object: 'Is it not so the liberated devotee will return again to the state of material bondage, for the causes of bondage still remain in him?

To this I reply: No. The verse said 'mukta-bandhanah' (He becomes liberated). This is confirmed by Vedanta-sutra (4.4.22) 'By the sound vibration of the Vedic scriptures one becomes liberated and does not return to the world of birth and death.' This proves that by great devotion one attains the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

10 In the next verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.24.46, quoted in text 4) the word 'atmanam' means 'the independent Supersoul'. The meaning here is that the Supersoul is a manifestation of Lord Bhagavan (the Supreme Personality of Godhead). How one attains the Supreme Personality of Godhead is described in the next verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.24.47 quoted in text 5). There it is said that being free of hatred and desire, which are abominable, and being equal to everyone, he attained the path back to Godhead. This (equanimity and freedom from hatred and desire) is described in Shrimad Bhagavatam (6.17.28) in these words:

11 "Devotees solely engaged in the devotional service of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Narayana, never fear any condition of life. For them the heavenly planets, liberation and the hellish planets are all the same, for such devotees are interested only in the service of the Lord."*

12 The word 'sama' in Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.24.47 (quoted in text 5) may also be interpreted as a name of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is described in the commentary on Shri Vishnu-sahasra-name-stotra: 'The word 'sama' here means 'He who stays with Mother Laksmi'. In this way the word 'sama-cetasa' may mean 'with heart and mind fixed on the Supreme Personality of Godhead'. In this verse the phrase 'prapto bhagavatim gatim' is an alternate reading for the last line. In this reading nominative-case 'praptah' refers to Kardama Muni and the goal he attained is in the accusative case. In these statements the yoga of devotional service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead is clearly described.

13 This is described in Bhagavad-gita (18.51-55):

"Being purified by His intelligence and controlling the mind with determination, giving up the objects of sense gratification, being free from attachment and hatred, one who lives in a secluded place, who eats little, who controls his body, mind and power of speech, who is always in trance and who is detached, free from false ego, false strength, false pride, lust, anger, and acceptance of material things, free from false proprietorship, and peaceful -such a person is certainly elevated to the position of self-realisation.*

14 "One who is thus transcendently situated at once realises the Supreme Brahman and becomes fully joyful. He never laments of desires to have anything. He is equally disposed toward every living entity. In that state he attains pure devotional service unto Me.*

15 "One can understand Me as I am, as the Supreme Personality of Godhead, only by devotional service. And when one is in full consciousness of Me by such devotion, he can enter into the kingdom of God."*

16 In this last verse (Bhagavad-gita 18.55) the word 'visate' means 'enters' in the sense of entering a place in order to meet someone (and not in the sense of merging and becoming one with the place entered), as in the statement 'Leaving Duryodhana, the king entered Yudhishthira's (palace). In his commentary on the Tenth Canto of Shrimad Bhagavatam, Shrila Shridhara Svami says: 'The gopas then saw the world of Vaikuntha, which is above the splendour of the Brahman effulgence.'

Anuccheda 84

1 This is described in Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.19.5), where Lord Krishna says:

"O Uddhava, understanding the truth about the self, and filled with theoretical spiritual knowledge, its practical application, and loving devotion, worship Me."

2 In this verse the word 'svatmanam' means 'the individual spirit soul (jiva)'. The 'jnana and vijñana' here are spiritual. What more need be said? This topic has already been elaborately explained by the four Kumaras, Sukadeva Gosvami and the other great devotees.

Anuccheda 85

1 Touched on the cheek by the Lord's spiritual conchshell, Dhruva, even though only a child spoke eloquent prayers. Hearing in this way of His wonderful and blissful qualities, he described the Lord's perfection in the following words:

2 "My Lord, the transcendental bliss derived from meditating upon Your lotus feet or hearing about Your glories from pure devotees is so unlimited that it is far beyond the stage of brahmananda, wherein one thinks himself merged in the impersonal Brahman as one with the Supreme. Since brahmananda is also defeated by the transcendental bliss derived from devotional service, then what to speak of the temporary blissfulness of elevation oneself to the heavenly planets, which is ended by the separating sword of time? Although one may be elevated to the heavenly planets, he falls down in due course of time."*

3 In this verse 'sva-mahimani' means 'in uncommon magnificence', 'ma bhut' means 'is not', and 'antakasih' means 'time'. This verse is spoken by Dhruva to Lord Dhurvapriya.

Anuccheda 86

1 Devotional service is better than the spiritual perfection of merging into Brahman. Lord Kapiladeva teaches this in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.25.33):

"When that service spirit is engaged in devotional service to the Personality of Godhead, without any motive, that is far better even than salvation."*

2 Shрила Shridhara Svami comments: "Devotional service is better than the perfection of impersonal liberation.' Shri Bhagavan-nama-kaumudi asserts: "Devotional service is better than mystic perfection, transcendental knowledge, or impersonal liberation.' The verse previously quoted was spoken by Lord Kapiladeva.

Anuccheda 87

1 From this it should be understood that the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the ultimate, original Supreme Truth. Because it does not act as the Supreme Person does, and because it is formless and amorphous, the impersonal Brahman is not the Ultimate Truth. Lord Kapiladeva states this in the following two verses (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.32.32-33):

2 "Philosophical research culminates in understanding the Supreme Personality of Godhead. After achieving this understanding, when one becomes free from the material modes of nature, he attains the stage of devotional service. Either by devotional service directly or by philosophical research, one has to find the same destination, which is the Supreme Personality of Godhead.*

3 "A single object is appreciated differently by different senses due to its having different qualities. Similarly, the Supreme Personality of Godhead is one, but according to different scriptural injunctions He appears to be different."*

4 Shрила Shridhara Svami comments:

"This verse states that the Supreme Personality of Godhead is attained by jnana-yoga. The jnana-yoga described here, however, is like bhakti-yoga. The verse says: 'Philosophical research (jnana-yoga) culminates in understanding the Supreme Personality of Godhead. After achieving this understanding, when one becomes free from the material modes of nature, he attains the stage of devotional service. Either by devotional service directly or by philosophical research, one has to find the same destination, which is the Supreme Personality of Godhead.' Why are jnana-yoga and bhakti-yoga the same? The answer is hinted by the phrase 'Either by devotional service directly or by philosophical research, one has to find the same destination, which is the Supreme Personality of Godhead.' This is further described in Bhagavad-gita (12.4) where the Lord says:

"But those who fully worship the unmanifested, that which lies beyond the perception of the senses, the all-pervading, inconceivable, unchanging, fixed and immovable - the impersonal conception of the Absolute Truth - by controlling the various senses and being equally disposed to everyone, such persons, engaged in the welfare of all, at last achieve Me."*

5 "At this point someone may object: 'Is it not understood from the scriptures that the result of practicing jnana-yoga is attainment of the Self and the result of practicing bhakti-yoga is attainment of the worshipable Supreme Personality of Godhead? How, then, are jnana and bhakti the same?'

"Fearing that this objection would be raised, the Lord proved they are the same by giving an example. He said many diverse qualities, such as form and taste, reside in milk and other substances. Although each substance is one, the different senses perceive a single substance differently and believe it to be a different kind of substance. The eyes perceive milk as white, the tongue perceives it as sweet, the touch perceives it as cool, and so forth. In the same way the Supreme Personality of Godhead is one, although he may be perceived differently.'

This is the explanation of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. By the evidence given here in the example of the different senses, the true nature of devotional service should be understood.

Anuccheda 88

1 The scriptures declare that Brahman is a partial expansion of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Lord Sankarsana says to King Citraketu (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.16.51):

"All living entities, moving and non moving, are My expansions and are separate from Me. I am the Supersoul of all living beings, who exist because I manifest them. I am the form of the transcendental vibrations like omkara and Hare Krishna Hare Rama, and I am the Supreme Absolute Truth (Brahman). These two forms of Mine - namely, the transcendental sound and the eternally blissful spiritual form of the Deity, are My eternal forms; they are not material.*

3 Shрила Shridhara Svami comments:

"In this verse the Lord says: "All living entities (sarva-bhutani) are My expansions. I am the Supersoul

(atma) of all living beings (bhuta), and the supreme dictator and enjoyer of them. This world, filled with enjoyers and the objects of their enjoyment, is not separate from Me. I am the cause of all living entities (bhuta-bhavanah). I am the form of the transcendental vibrations (sabda-brahma), and I am the Supreme Absolute Truth (param brahma).'

"At this point someone may object: 'Is it not true that the Supreme impersonal Brahman is the cause of transcendental vibrations (sabda-brahma)?'

"The Lord answers : 'The transcendental sound and the eternally blissful spiritual form of the Deity, are My (mama) eternal (sasvati) forms (tanu); they are not material.'"

In this way it is proved that the Brahman effulgence is a partial expansion of the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Anuccheda 89

1 That the impersonal, featureless Brahman is a partial expansion of the Lord's opulence is confirmed by the following statement of Lord Matsyadeva to Satyavrata (Shrimad Bhagavatam 8.24.38):

"You will be thoroughly advised and favoured by Me, and because of your inquiries everything about My glories, which are known as param brahma, will be manifest within your heart. Thus you will know everything about Me."*

2 In this verse the word 'mahimanam' means 'opulence that has no variety', 'me' means 'My', 'anugrhitam' means 'mercifully', 'vetsyasi hri' means 'you will know what is manifested in the heart', 'samprasnaih' means 'by your questions', and 'vivrtam' means 'revealed by Me.'

Here the Lord says: "Although the perception of impersonal Brahman in the heart is Me, that is, it is not different from Me, nevertheless that impersonal Brahman is not the same as the direct perception of Me, which is had only by devotional service. If you desire to see Me directly you must engage in devotional service.

3 This is also explained by Uddhava (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.46.31):

"Both Balarama and Krishna are the original personalities of Godhead from whom the cosmic manifestation is emanating. They are the chief among all personalities. Both of Them are the effective cause of this material creation. Material nature is conducted by the purusa incarnations, who are all acting under Krishna and Balarama. By Their partial representation They enter in the hearts of all living entities. They are the source of all knowledge and all forgetfulness also."*

The word 'knowledge' here refers to knowledge of Brahman.

Anuccheda 90

1 The Lord describes His opulences again in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.16.37):

"I am earth, air, space, water, fire, false-ego, mahat-tattva, the transformations of matter, the purusa, the unmanifest, passion, goodness, ignorance and the Supreme."

Shrila Shridhara Svami comments: 'The word 'Supreme' here means 'the Supreme Brahman'.

2 The great Vaishnava saint Shri Yamunacarya also explains:

'O Lord, the material universe, everything within the universe, the ten coverings around it, the modes of nature, the unmanifested stage of matter, the purusa-avatara, the supreme spiritual world, and the Supreme Brahman, are all Your opulences.'

Anuccheda 91

1 Because it has none of the variety present in the Lord's form, Brahman is said to be the bodily effulgence of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Devaki-devi explains this in her prayers to the Supreme Personality of Godhead (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.3.24):

"My dear Lord, there are different Vedas, some of which describe You as unperceivable through words and the mind. Yet You are the origin of the entire cosmic manifestation. You are Brahman, the greatest of everything, full of effulgence like the sun. You have no material cause. You are free from change and deviation, and You have no material desires. Thus the Vedas say that You are the substance. Therefore, My Lord, You are directly the origin of all Vedic statements, and by understanding You, one gradually understands everything. You are different from the light of Brahman and Paramatma, yet You are not different from them. Everything emanates from You. Indeed, You are the cause of all causes, Lord Vishnu, the light of all transcendental knowledge."*

In this verse the word 'brahma-jyotih' means (the effulgence of the Supreme Personality of Godhead' and the word 'rupam' means 'the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead.'"

2 This is also explained in Shri Brahma-samhita (40):

"I worship Govinda, the primeval Lord, who is endowed with great power. The glowing effulgence of His transcendental form is the impersonal Brahman, which is absolute, complete, and unlimited, and which displays the varieties of countless planets, with their different opulences, in millions and millions of universes.

Anuccheda 92

1 The Supreme Personality of Godhead is superior to the impersonal Brahman. Lord Siva confirms this in his instructions to the Pracetas (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.24.28):

"Any person who is surrendered to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Krishna, who is above the Brahman effulgence, the material nature, and the living entity, is actually very dear to me."

2 In this verse the word 'rahah' means 'Brahman'. Greater than Brahman (rahah), the unmanifest stage of the three modes of material nature (tri-gunat), and the individual living entities (jiva-samjnitat), is the Supreme Personality of Godhead. One surrenders to Him by hearing about Him, offering the fruits of one's work to Him, and serving Him in other ways.

3 This is also confirmed in the Vishnu-dharma Purana, Naraka-dvadasi-vrata, Shri Vishnu-stava:

"Lord Vasudeva, the all-pervading Supersoul, is present in the sky and other material elements, in sound and other objects of sense-perception, in the ears and the other senses, in the mahat-tattva and other primordial forces, in the material energy, in the individual person, and in the impersonal Brahman splendour. This truth brings to destruction the sins that would make me suffer in hell. This truth gives me every day the glory of transcendental piety."

In this context a different interpretation of the word 'sarvatma' cannot be accepted.

4 This is also confirmed by the following statement of Vishnu-dharma Purana, Uttara-khanda, Ksetabandhupakhyaya:

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is present in the impersonal Brahman. He is present in the unmanifested pradhana. He is present in the manifested material cosmos. I shall become His devotee."

5 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead is superior to the impersonal Brahman is also confirmed in the following statement of Vishnu-dharma Purana, Masarksa-puja:

"O infallible Lord, O Supreme Soul greater than the impersonal Brahman, please grant my desire! O limitless Lord, please remove this danger!"

6 In the Shri Vishnu Purana (1.5.55) also it is said:

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is superior to the impersonal Brahman."

The Sruti-sastra (Mundaka Upanisad 2.1.2) says:

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is superior to the impersonal Brahman."

Anuccheda 93

1 This is also confirmed in the Sruti-sastra (Taittiriya Upanisad 2.1.3-2.5.1) in the passage beginning with 'He, the Supreme Personality of Godhead is realised in His form of anna-rasa), and continuing through the statements 'The Supreme Personality of Godhead is the basis of everything...He is the basis of the earth....He is the basis of the Vedas....He is the basis of light....He is the basis of the impersonal Brahman.'

This is also confirmed in the fifth Veda, the Smṛti-sastra, where, in the Bhagavad-gita (14.27), Lord Krishna says: 'I am the basis of the impersonal Brahman.'"

In this way the statement 'I am the basis of the impersonal Brahman' is spoken in both Sruti and Smṛti, and in Bhagavad-gita it is emphasized by the word 'hi' (certainly).

2 Immediately preceding these words is the following statement (Bhagavad-gita 14.26):

"One who engages in full devotional service, unflinching in all circumstances, at once transcends the modes of material nature and thus comes to the level of Brahman."*

3 This is the verse immediately preceding the statement 'I am the basis of Brahman'. In this verse, by saying that Brahman is 'beyond the modes of material nature' it is clear that the Brahman here is the impersonal Brahman potency and not the demigod Brahma.

4 At this point someone may ask the Lord: "Why is devotional service to You (Bhagavad-gita 14.26, quoted in text 2) the means of attaining impersonal Brahman? One would expect that impersonal Brahman is attained only by meditation on Brahman (and not by devotion to You).’

The Lord answers this question with the words: ‘I am the basis of the impersonal Brahman.’ In the Sruti-sastra (Taittiriya Upanisad 2.2.5.) the answer is also given: ‘The Supreme Personality of Godhead is the basis of the impersonal Brahman’. In this way the Sruti-sastra affirms that the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the ultimate basis of everything. Also, in that same passage of Taittiriya Upanisad, the Supreme Personality of Godhead is described as full of bliss. This is also confirmed by the author of Vedanta-sutra (1.1.12): ‘The Supreme Personality of Godhead is by nature full of joy’. As the sun-globe is full of light, so the blissful Supreme Personality of Godhead is also (full of the light of Brahman). For this reason the Lord says: ‘I am the basis of the impersonal Brahman.’”

The Lord may say: ‘Although there is no difference between the impersonal Brahman and Me, nevertheless I am the origin of the Brahman. I am the ultimate. This is so because I am the origin and impersonal Brahman is My potency. The origin is naturally superior to its potency. This is so also because the Sruti-sastra affirms that the Supreme Personality of Godhead is superior to the impersonal Brahman. Although I, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and the impersonal Brahman, are one, We are also different as the splendid sun is different from the slender crescent moon. Therefore, because the impersonal Brahman is subordinate to Me, a person who, with the desire for impersonal liberation, worships me, will attain the impersonal Brahman.’”

5 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the origin of the impersonal Brahman is also explained in Shri Vishnu Purana (6.7.75):

“The Supreme Personality of Godhead is the basis of the all-pervading Supersoul and the impersonal Brahman.”

Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

“This verse means that the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the basis of the all-pervading Supersoul and the impersonal Brahman. The word ‘asraya’ here means ‘basis’. This is also confirmed in Bhagavad-gita (14.27), where Lord Krishna says, ‘I am the basis of the impersonal Brahman.’”

In his commentary on this verse in Bhagavad-gita, Shrila Shridhara Svami says:

“The Lord here says, ‘I am the basis of the impersonal Brahman.’ This means that the Lord says, ‘As the sun-globe is more important than mere light, so I am more important than the impersonal Brahman.’”

6 The word ghani-bhuta here is a use of the grammatical form cvi-pratyaya. The Supreme Personality of Godhead appears in the hearts of the devotees, but the impersonal Brahman does not appear there. The interpretation that the word ‘pratistha’ in this verse (Bhagavad-gita 14.27) means ‘pratima’ (reflected) is the idea of envious men. This interpretation is not true, for it makes no sense in this context. As the sun planet is not a reflection of the sunshine, so the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is not a reflection of the formless Brahman.

The remaining three lines of this stanza (Bhagavad-gita 14.27) do not describe the liberation of the impersonalists. Neither do the verses we have quoted from Vishnu Purana and Sruti-saili describe it. The interpretation that ‘pratistha’ means ‘pratima’ should not be accepted, or if it is accepted, then ‘pratima’ should be interpreted to mean ‘basis’ and not ‘reflection’. If this second interpretation is accepted, then the word ‘pratima’ is understood to be derived from the preposition ‘prati’ (toward) and the verb ‘ma’ (to create).

7 This is all also explained in the following prayer (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.87.17) spoken by the Personified Vedas to the Supreme Personality of Godhead:

“My dear Lord, it is imperative that the living entities be engaged in Krishna consciousness, always rendering devotional service by prescribed methods such as hearing and chanting and executing Your orders. If a person is not engaged in Krishna consciousness and devotional service, it is useless of him to exhibit the symptoms of life. Generally it is accepted that if a person is breathing he is alive. But a person without Krishna consciousness may be compared to a bellows in a blacksmith’s shop. The big bellows is a bag of skin which exhales and inhales air, and a human being who is simply living within the bag of skin and bones without taking to Krishna consciousness and loving devotional service is no better than the bellows. Similarly a non devotee’s long duration of life is compared to the long existence of a tree, his voracious eating capacity is compared to the eating of dogs and hogs, and his enjoyment in sex life is compared to that of hogs and goats.

The cosmic manifestation has been possible because of the entrance of the Supreme Personality of Godhead as Maha-Vishnu within this material world. The total material energy becomes agitated by the glance of Maha-Vishnu and only then does the interaction of the three material qualities begin. Therefore it should be concluded that whatever material facilities we are trying to enjoy are available only due to the mercy of the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

"Within the body are five different departments of existence, known as annamaya, pranamaya, manomaya, vijñanamaya, and anandamaya. O Lord, You are present in all these five stages."*

8 In this verse the word 'anubhrtah' means 'individual living entities (jivas), whose breathing is like the breathing of a blacksmith's bellows'. The verse says: "If (yadi) the people become Your devotees (anuvīdhaḥ), then their breathing and living is meaningful. We consider that the life passed by Your devotees is the actually meaningful life among the lives of the living entities. Why? You mercifully created the material universe with its many parts such as mahat-tattva and false ego. Therefore they who are averse to You, turning their faces from You, are no better than 'breathing' blacksmith's bellows. You further showed Your mercy when You personally entered the material universe made of mahat-tattva, false-ego and its other parts."

9 The Lord here may ask: "Why is it that these things become possible only when I enter the universe?"

The personified Vedas then reply: "You are the Supreme Brahman, eternal, dear, and known as anandamaya. You are above the stage of annamaya. You are the Brahman, the basis of everything."

This is confirmed in all Vedic literatures. In the Bhagavad-gita the Lord Himself said: "I am the basis of the impersonal Brahman" (14.27). In many other places in Vedic literature this is proven.

10 This is proven in Shrimad Bhagavatam (2.9.4):

"O king, the Personality of Godhead, being very much pleased with Lord Brahma because of his non-deceptive penance in bhakti yoga, presented His eternal and transcendental form before Brahma. And that is the objective goal for purifying the conditioned soul."*

This verse proves, O Lord, that the real nature of the Supreme is You, the form of the Personality of Godhead. Of the puruṣas beginning with the annamaya-puruṣa, You are the ultimate, the anandamaya-puruṣa. O the priya-brahma, mōḍa-brahma, paramōḍa-brahma, and ananda-brahma, You are the supremely blissful ananda-brahma. Because Your form is the origin of all transcendental bliss, Your entrance into the material world makes it possible for the world to function.

This is also confirmed by the Sruti-saṣṭra (Taittirīya Upaniṣad 2.7):

"If the blissful Personality of Godhead is not present in the sky of the heart, who is able to breathe and remain alive?"

11 In this matter the following may be said. Although in the single form of the Supreme many variegated qualities are present, nevertheless, they are only seen with special vision given by the power of the Lord. They cannot be seen in any other way. An example may be given of the sun planet. For material eyes the sun planet is merely a circle of light, although the truth is that within the sun is an assembly of great demigods. From this example may be seen that only by devotional service is the whole truth about the nature of the Supreme understood. By adherence to the philosophy of impersonalism only a portion of the Supreme is understood. That partial manifestation of the Supreme is the impersonal Brahman. By impersonal philosophy only a very general understanding of the Supreme Truth is attained, an understanding unable to see the many diverse qualities present in the Lord. For this reason the impersonal philosophy is situated outside the real truth. The great devotees directly see that the Supreme is filled with a great variety of wonderful transcendental qualities, although the impersonalists mistakenly think He is only a ball of light. In this way it is said that the Supreme has His lesser manifestations, His partial manifestations, and His potencies. The complete understanding of the Supreme is that the Supreme is the Personality of Godhead. His bodily effulgence, which is a vague and generalised manifestation of His form, is the Brahman. Therefore He is the basis of the impersonal Brahman.

12 This is also confirmed by Sruti-saṣṭra:

"There is only one Supreme Personality of Godhead. He is Lord Narayana. He is transcendental, self-manifest, and sinless. The earth is His body. The soul is His body. The unmanifest pradhana is His body. The imperishable Brahman is His body. He is the Supersoul present in all creatures."

13 This statement teaches that the imperishable (akṣara), which here means Brahman, and the Supersoul, are Lord Narayana. That the word 'akṣara' here means 'Brahman' is confirmed by the usage of that word in

Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.15.43.

14 The Supreme Personality of Godhead describes the sankhya philosophy in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.24.27):

"Time merges into the Supreme Lord, present in the form of the omniscient Maha-purusa, the original activator of all living beings. That origin of all life merges into Me, the unborn Supreme Soul, who remains alone, established within Himself. It is from Him that all creation and annihilation are manifested. Only the impersonal Brahman remains and does not merge into Me."

This means that at the time of cosmic annihilation only Brahman remains and the Supreme Personality of Godhead also remains as the witness of Brahman. The Lord then says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.24.29):

15 "Thus, I the perfect seer of everything material and spiritual, have spoken this knowledge of Sankhya, which destroys the illusion of doubt by scientific analysis of creation and annihilation."

16 A discussion of Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.24.29 (quoted in text 15) follows. The word 'sankhya' in this verse means 'the philosophy expounded in the sankhya scriptures.' Considering the specific feature of the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead as described in those scriptures, it is seen that the Lord's form remains unchanged at the time of cosmic annihilation. The impersonal Brahman also remains unchanged, as the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead and the world of Vaikuntha both also remain unchanged at the final stage of cosmic annihilation. That is what is meant to be said here. At that time the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who stays in Vaikuntha and has transcendental potencies, is seen to be different from the impersonal Brahman. However, on the other hand, the impersonal Brahman, which because it has no qualities has neither touch, form, nor any other attribute, is also non different from the Supreme Personality of Godhead because it is His bodily effulgence. This is the explanation. In this way it is proved that the impersonal Brahman is the bodily effulgence of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is filled with the sweetness of His form, touch, and other transcendental attributes.

17 This is also described in the Shri Hari-vamsa, Maha-kala-pura, where the Supreme Personality of Godhead personally says to Shriman Arjuna:

"O best of the Bharatas, I am the great divine Brahman effulgence you have just seen. It is My eternal splendour.

18 "It is My divine potency. It is eternal. To some it is manifest, and to others it is not manifest. The great yogis enter it and become liberated.

19 "O son of Prtha, it is the goal of the sankhya philosophers, the yogis, and the ascetics. It is the great Brahman that pervades the entire world. O Bharata, you should know that it is My great effulgence."

20 The verse quoted in text 18 explains that because the Brahman effulgence is the light of the Lord's body, therefore it is His own transcendental potency. This is also confirmed by the Vishnu Purana passage (quoted in Anuccheda 60) describing the Kaustubha jewel.

In this way the Shrimad Bhagavatam verse (10.87.17) quoted in text 7 is clearly explained.

Anuccheda 94

1 Although it may also be applied to the all-pervading effulgence of the Lord's body, because the word 'brahman' means 'the greatest', it is most properly applied to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is confirmed in the following statement of the Brahma Purana:

2 "The one Supreme Lord, Vishnu, is respectfully called by His many names, such as Ananta, Bhagavan, Brahman and Ananda."

3 In other places it is said that the Supreme Personality of Godhead is called Brahman because His transcendental qualities are limitless. The Padma Purana says:

"Because they are limitless, the transcendental qualities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead cannot be completely described. Because He possesses all transcendental qualities, the Supreme Personality of Godhead is called Brahman (the Great).

4 "For this reason Lord Vishnu is called Brahman. Because His qualities are limitless only He, and no one else, is the Supreme."

5 Now this passage will be explained. Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.2.11) says:

"Learned transcendentalists who know the Absolute Truth call this non dual substance Brahman, Paramatma or Bhagavan."*

The Lord's feature that has no qualities is called Brahman. The Lord's feature that does have qualities is called Bhagavan. As previously explained, the Bhagavan feature has form. It is not formless.

6 Shri Vishnu Purana (6.7.47) says:

"O king, the Supreme Personality of Godhead has form and again He is also formless. He is transcendental, and again He is also material."

In this verse of Vishnu Purana four aspects of the Lord are described. If the formless aspect of the Lord is accepted, then the impersonal Brahman is the appropriate object of meditation.

7 The Supreme Personality of Godhead appears as Lord Syamasundara, Lord Caturbhuja Narayana, or one of His other transcendental forms before a devotee who sincerely loves Him. The Supreme Personality of Godhead appears as His material universal form, where Patalaloka is imagined to be His feet and the other parts of the material world are imagined to be other parts of His body, before a devotee whose love for Him is not sincere. The Supreme Personality of Godhead appears as the transcendental formless Brahman before a person attached to dry philosophical speculation. The Supreme Personality of Godhead appears as material formless fate before a devotee whose love for Him is heavily mixed with philosophical speculation. The Lord's spiritual form and His formless Brahman are not material. This means that neither the formless Brahman nor the Lord's transcendental form are inferior.

8 The Vishnu Purana (6.7.69) explains:

"The form of visva-rupa is Lord Hari's form as the mahat-tattva."

Because the Lord creates the material universe it should be understood that He Himself is both eternal and all-powerful.

The Vishnu Purana (6.7.77) again explains:

"The form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead does not rest on anything outside itself."

This means that the Lord's form has no limitations..

The Vishnu Purana again explains (6.7.82):

"One should meditate on Lord Vishnu, whose form is spiritual."

This means that the Supreme has spiritual qualities.

The Vishnu Purana again explains (6.7.75):

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead cannot be attained by the three kinds of meditation."

Because the Supreme Personality of Godhead cannot be attained by the three kinds of meditation, namely fruitive work, philosophical speculation mixed with fruitive work, and pure philosophical speculation, because He is full of transcendental qualities, and because He appears only in response to devotional service, He is the ultimate, the real feature of the Supreme.

9 The Vishnu Purana again explains (6.7.75):

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is the basis of the impersonal Brahman and the all-pervading Supersoul."

10 This statement affirms that they who worship the form of the Lord are superior and they who worship the formless Brahman are inferior. Vishnu Purana 6.7.69 quoted in text 8, affirms that the form of the Supreme is His ultimate feature.

11 This is confirmed by the next statement of the Vishnu Purana (6.7.70):

"O king, the Supreme Personality of Godhead displays His transcendental forms, which are like those of demigods, men, and animals, and which are endowed with all potencies, and enjoys transcendental pastimes."

12 Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.3.2) explains:

"A part of the purusa lies down within the water of the universe, from the navel lake of His body sprouts a lotus stem, and from the lotus flower atop this stem, Brahma, the master of all engineers in the universe, becomes manifest."*

After describing this form of the Lord, the Bhagavatam proceeds to reveal the origin of the various incarnations of the Lord in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.3.5):

"This form (the second manifestation of the purusa) is the source and indestructible seed of multifarious incarnations within the universe. From the particles and portions of this form, different living entities, like demigods, men and others, are created."*

13 In his commentary on Vishnu Purana 6.7.69 (quoted in text 8) Shripada Ramanujacarya affirms the transcendental nature of the Lord's form. Accepting the reading 'visva-rupa-vairupyam' (instead 'visva-rupa-rupam vai'), he explains that the word 'vairupyam' here means 'filled with variety'. Because the material universe is filled with variety, the Lord's universal form is also filled with variety.

14 The Lord's form is proved by the following words of the Sruti (Svetasvatara Upanisad 3.16):

"Everywhere are His hands and legs, His eyes, heads, and faces, and He has ears everywhere."*

These words do not describe a form different from the previously described all-pervading universal form. This is the universal form.

15 The universal form is described in Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda:

"Youthful Lord Hari accepts the limitless universal form and, the splendour of His body like the nectar moon, enjoys pastimes with Laksmi, the mother of the universes."

16 This verse says the universal form is limitless because it is all-pervading. Lord Hari, whose form is eternally youthful, enjoys pastimes with the goddess of fortune. That is the meaning here. The word 'upeyivan' here means Lord Hari is eternal, as has already been explained in the passage from Sruti sastra quoted in Anuccheda 93, text 12. Because in these passages the eternality of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is proved many times, it should be concluded that the transcendental form of the Lord is the ultimate creator of the spiritual worlds, which comprise three-fourths of His potencies.

17 The Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda also explains:

"Infallible, eternal, transcendental, eternally young Lord Hari eternally enjoys pastimes with the goddesses Isvari-devi, Shri-devi and Bhumi-devi."

18 The conclusion is that the Supreme Personality of Godhead, whose qualities are described here, is the original, primeval nature of the Supreme, whose three aspects are described in Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.2.11.

This is confirmed in Moksa-dharma, Shri Narayaniyopakhya:

19 "The great sages who seek the truth with thorough philosophical analysis have concluded that the Supreme Truth is Lord Narayana, who is known as Hari and is the master of Yogamaya."

20 This is also confirmed in Narayana Upanisad:

"Narayana is the Supreme Brahman. Narayana is the ultimate truth."

21 This is again confirmed by the following passage quoted by Shripada Ramanujacarya from the Sruti-sastra:

"There is only one Supreme Personality of Godhead. He is Lord Narayana. He is transcendental, self-manifest and sinless. The earth is His body. The soul is His body. The unmanifest pradhana is His body. The imperishable Brahman is His body. He is the Supersoul present in all creatures."

In this way many scriptural passages confirm that the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the ultimate aspect of the Supreme.

22 Here it has thus been proven that the Purusa-avatars and other expansions of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are the Supreme Truth and have forms that are eternal. How much more so must it be, therefore, that the original Supreme Personality of Godhead is the Supreme Truth and has a form that is eternal? In the previous portions of this book this has been confirmed by many statements, and in the latter portions of this book it will again be confirmed.

23 Again in the Vishnu Purana (1.22.53-54) the Supreme Personality of Godhead is described in the following words:

"The Supreme Brahman has two features: a feature with form and a feature without form. These two features each have another two features: a material feature and a spiritual feature. The two formless features are both all-pervading. The spiritual formless feature is the impersonal Brahman and the material formless feature is the entire universe itself."

24 After saying this, and after describing Lord Vishnu, Lord Brahma, and Lord Siva in the material world, the Vishnu Purana (1.22.58) says:

"O best of the sages, the Supreme Brahman is eternal, but the material universe is a place of appearance, disappearance, birth and death."

25 Here the word 'aksara' means 'the Supreme Brahman, which is eternal', and 'akhila' means 'the material universe, which is created and destroyed'. The words 'appearance and disappearance' here refer to the plenary expansions of Lord Vishnu, and the words 'birth and death' refer to everyone else. The forms of Lord Vishnu do not actually become part of the material world, really entering it, when They appear within it. That is the meaning.

26 "Eternally staying in its own abode, the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, which is different from both the temporary material world and the eternal impersonal Brahman, is the third and ultimate feature of the Supreme. It is described in these words (Vishnu Purana 1.22.59, 61-62):

27 "Lord Vishnu, the master of all potencies, has form, and is different from the formless Brahman. Since ancient times the yogis have meditated on Him in mystic trance.

28 "He is different from His potencies, but He is not different from the impersonal Brahman. O fortunate one, His form is spiritual. Everything about Lord Hari is spiritual. He is the loom on which the material world is woven."

29 In this passage the words 'yogibhih purvam cintyate' mean 'After realising Brahman, the yogis meditate on the Supreme Personality of Godhead.' Therefore the impersonal Brahman and the Supreme Personality of Godhead are not different. The sequence of worshipping impersonal Brahman and the Supreme Personality of Godhead, where Brahman is manifest first and then the Supreme Personality of Godhead is manifest is described in Bhagavad-gita (18.54) where the Supreme Personality of Godhead says:

"One who is thus transcendently situated at once realises the Supreme Brahman and becomes fully joyful. He never laments or desires to have anything. He is equally disposed toward every living entity. In that state He attains pure devotional service unto Me."*

30 Here the words 'sa parah sarva-saktinam' mean 'The Supreme Personality of Godhead is different from all His potencies, and therefore He is their ultimate shelter.' 'Sarvam brahma-mayah' means 'He whose form is perfectly spiritual'. Because it is not the master of potencies, the impersonal Brahman is not spiritual in perfection. The Supreme Personality of Godhead is the feature of the Lord described in Bhagavad-gita (15.15) as 'known by all the Vedas.' This is the meaning of 'sarvam brahma-mayah'.

31 The Supreme Personality of Godhead describes Himself in these words (Bhagavad-gita 15.18):

"Because I am transcendental, beyond both the fallible and the infallible, and because I am the greatest, I am celebrated both in the world and in the Vedas as that Supreme Person."*

32 Although the word 'aksara' used in Bhagavad-gita 15.16 refers to the pure jiva (individual spirit soul), it also refers to the Supreme Brahman. Therefore the phrase 'aksaram param brahma' (Vishnu Purana 1.22.53) quoted previously (in text 23) can refer to both the Supreme Personality of Godhead and the jiva because both are spiritual in nature.

33 The form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.43.17):

"When Krishna entered the wrestling arena with Balarama and Their friends, He appeared differently to different people according to their different relationships (rasas) with Him. Krishna is the reservoir of all pleasure and all kinds of rasas, both favourable and unfavourable. He appeared to the wrestlers exactly like a thunderbolt. To the people in general He appeared as the most beautiful personality. To the females He appeared to be the most attractive male, Cupid personified, and this increased their lust. The cowherd men who were present there looked upon Krishna as their own kinsman, coming from the same village of Vrndavana. The ksatriya kings who were present there saw Him as the strongest ruler. To the parents of Krishna, Nanda and Yasoda, He appeared to be the most loving child. To Kamsa, the king of the Bhoja dynasty, He appeared to be death personified. To the unintelligent, He appeared to be an incapable personality. To the yogis present, He appeared to be the Supersoul."*

Here it is the yogis who understand Him most directly. The yogis in this verse are the great sages who have the four Kumaras as their leaders.

Anuccheda 95

1 Although Shrimad Bhagavatam, the mature ripened fruit of Vedic literature (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.1.3) is sublime for many reasons, it is most sublime because it teaches the truth about the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is described in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.1.2):

2 "Completely rejecting all religious activities which are materially motivated, this Bhagavata Purana propounds the highest truth, which is understandable by those devotees who are fully pure in heart. The highest truth is reality distinguished from illusion for the welfare of all. Such truth uproots the threefold miseries. This beautiful Bhagavatam, compiled by the great sage Vyasadeva (in his maturity), is sufficient in itself for God realisation. What is the need of any other scripture? As soon as one attentively and submissively hears the message of Bhagavatam, by this culture of knowledge the Supreme Lord is established within his heart.”*

3 Dharma is described in the Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.2.6-12) in these words:

“The supreme occupation (dharma) for all humanity is that by which men can attain to living devotional service unto the transcendental Lord. Such devotional service must be unmotivated and uninterrupted to completely satisfy the self.*

“By rendering devotional service unto the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Shri Krishna, one immediately acquires causeless knowledge and detachment from the world.*

“The occupational duties a man performs according to his own position are only so much useless labour if they do not provoke attraction for the message of the Personality of Godhead.*

“All occupational engagements are certainly meant for ultimate liberation. They should never be performed for material gain. Furthermore, according to sages, one who is engaged in the ultimate occupational service should never use material gain to cultivate sense gratification.*

“Life’s desires should not be directed toward sense gratification. One should desire only a healthy life, or self-preservation, since a human being is meant for inquiry about the Absolute truth. Nothing else should be the goal of one’s works.*

“Learned transcendentalists who know the absolute Truth call this non dual substance Brahman, Paramatma or Bhagavan.*

“The seriously inquisitive student or sage, well equipped with knowledge and detachment, realises that Absolute Truth by rendering devotional service in terms of what he has heard from the Vedanta-sruti.”*

4 Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.2.13) concludes:

“O best among the twice born, it is therefore concluded that the highest perfection one can achieve by discharging the duties prescribed for one’s own occupation according to caste divisions and orders of life is to please the Personality of Godhead.”*

5 These verses explain that pure devotional service alone satisfies the Supreme Personality of Godhead. In Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.1.2 (quoted in text 2) cheating religion, defined as religion motivated by the desire to enjoy the fruits of work, is emphatically (pra) rejected (ujjhita). The word ‘pra’ also means that even salokya-mukti and other kinds of liberated are rejected. The word ‘nirmatsara’ means ‘those who are not envious’. An envious person is one who desires the fruits of his own work and cannot tolerate others’ good fortune. Non-envious persons are kind even to the animals. They are saintly and carefully follow the principles of dharma. In this way devotional service is better than the fruitive works described in the karma-khanda and upasana-khanda parts of the Vedas.

6 The message of these parts of the Vedas is very far from pure devotional service, which begins with chanting the glories of the Lord. The word ‘vedyam’ (the highest truth) here affirms that pure devotional service is better than the jnana-kana part of the Vedas. That pure devotional service is better than the spiritual paths that ignore devotion to the Lord is confirmed in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.14.4):

“My dear Lord, devotional service to You is the only auspicious path. If one gives it up simply for speculative knowledge or the understanding that these living beings are spirit soul and the material world is false, he undergoes a great deal of trouble. He only gains troublesome and inauspicious activities. His actions are like beating a husk that is already devoid of rice. One’s labour becomes fruitless.”*

7 The phrase ‘tapa-trayonmulanam’ here means ‘breaks the ignorance that is the root of suffering’. ‘Siva’ means ‘transcendental bliss’, and ‘dam’ means ‘causes to experience’. Devotional service is different from the philosophy that maintains that without attaining the four purusarthas one cannot attain liberation. Shrimad Bhagavatam does not maintain that it is good to attain the difficult-to-attain results of the purusarthas. The word ‘bhagavate’ here means ‘in the evidence presented in Shrimad Bhagavatam’ and ‘shrimat’ means ‘filled with the Lord’s holy name and His many transcendental potencies. The affix ‘matup’ here adds the possessive affix ‘mat’ to the word ‘shri’. The affix ‘mat’ (possessing) is employed here just as the affix ‘vat’ is employed in the compound word ‘niloypaladi-vat’. If this interpretation is not accepted, then the word has the fault of thoughtlessness (avimrsta-vidheyamsa).

8 Shrimad Bhagavatam is described in the following statement of the Garuda Purana:

"The scripture named Shrimad Bhagavatam has eighteen-thousand verses."

9 Shрила Shridhara Svami comments (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.1.3):

"The desire tree here is Shrimad Bhagavatam."

In some places Shrimad Bhagavatam is referred to as 'Bhagavatam', without the word 'Shrimad'. This is like the use of the shortened form Bhama for the name Satyabhama.

10 The cause of Shrimad Bhagavatam's glory is given in the word 'maha-muni' (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.1.2). because its author is the crest jewel of the greatest of philosophers, Shrimad Bhagavatam is glorious. The Sruti-sastra explains: 'He became a great philosopher and meditated on the truth.' In this way the essence of the revelation of Shrimad Bhagavatam is described in these first four verses of Canto One. This revelation is again described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.13.19): 'The Lord revealed Shrimad Bhagavatam to the demigod Brahma.'

11 Shrimad Bhagavatam is the best of all scriptures. This verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.1.2) says the direct appearance of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, which is the best goal of life and the best of all knowledge described in the Vedic literature, is easily attained in Shrimad Bhagavatam. This verse describes the Shrimad Bhagavatam's superexcellent glory by saying: "What is the need of any other scripture or the spiritual paths described in them? As soon as one attentively and submissively hears the message of Bhagavatam, by this culture of knowledge the Supreme Lord is established within his heart." The word 'va' (or) here is like a momentary sidelong glance. The word 'susrusubhihi' here means 'they who desire to hear'. As soon as one desires to hear, the Lord is established in the heart.

12 At this point someone may object: 'Is it not so that everyone hears Shrimad Bhagavatam?'

The answer is given in this verse (1.1.2) in the word 'krtibhih' which means 'by the pious men'. By they who have not performed pious deeds, but simply desire to hear, the Lord is not established in the heart. That is the meaning. What is the use of spiritual paths not free from material desires, even up to liberation, the path of superficial performance of rituals to worship the Lord, meditation on impersonal Brahman and other spiritual paths mentioned and not mentioned here? How glorious are they? That is the meaning here. For they who engage in sadhana-bhakti (devotional service in practice) the Lord is at once established in the heart. It is they who always desire to hear Shrimad Bhagavatam. Because it attracts the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and thus contains the most confidential secret of the three parts of the Vedas, Shrimad Bhagavatam is the best of all scriptures. In this way three lines of this verse (1.1.2) have been explained. The conclusion is that everyone should hear Shrimad Bhagavatam.

Anuccheda 96

1 Shрила Sukadeva Gosvami met the Supreme Personality of Godhead in his heart. For this reason the Supreme Personality of Godhead is described in the four central verses (1.9.30-33) of Shrimad Bhagavatam. Sukadeva Gosvami taught Shrimad Bhagavatam based on his own personal knowledge and realisation. Because the demigod Brahma was a great devotee, the Supreme Lord personally taught him the four most important verses of His own scripture, which bears the name Shrimad Bhagavatam. The Lord said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.9.30):

2 "Knowledge about Me as described in the scriptures is very confidential, and it has to be realised in conjunction with devotional service. The necessary paraphernalia for that process is being explained by Me. You may take it up very carefully."*

3 In this verse the Lord says: "Please accept this transcendental Vedic knowledge I, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, am speaking to you. Others do not know this knowledge." The word 'parama-guhyam' here means "This knowledge is most confidential than the knowledge of impersonal Brahman." That this is so is confirmed in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.14.5):

"O great sage, among many millions who are liberated and perfect in knowledge of liberation, one may be a devotee of Lord Narayana, or Krishna. Such devotees, who are fully peaceful, are extremely rare."*

4 The Lord says: 'Please accept this spiritual knowledge based on direct perception.' The Lord then says that this knowledge is very confidential. That means this knowledge will eventually reveal prema-bhakti

(devotional service in pure love of God). The Lord then says: 'Please also accept the paraphernalia of this knowledge.' When the obstacles of offenses are present, this confidential knowledge will not be manifest immediately. The Lord therefore says: 'Please accept this paraphernalia to assist in understanding this knowledge.' That paraphernalia is the process of devotional service, which begins with hearing (about Krishna). In this sentence the word 'tad-angam' modifies 'sa-rahasyam'. These words are like two friends that help each other.

5 Next the Lord gives a blessing so this jnana (knowledge) and rahasya (confidential paraphernalia) may be manifested (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.9.31):

"All of Me, namely My actual eternal form and My transcendental existence, colour, qualities and activities - let all be awakened within you by factual realisation, out of My causeless mercy,"*

6 In this verse 'yavan' means 'eternal form' and 'yatha-bhava' means 'transcendental existence'. The Lord here says 'I am like this'. His forms include His dark complexioned form of Syamasundara and His four-armed Vishnu forms. His qualities begin with His love for His devotees. His activities are His transcendental pastimes. This is the meaning of the words 'yad-rupa-guna-karmakam aham'. The Lord here says: 'Let all these be awakened within you by factual realisation, out of My causeless mercy.'

Lord Krishna refers to these four verses (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.9.30-33) in this instruction to Uddhava (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.4.13):

"O Uddhava, in the lotus millennium in the days of yore, at the beginning of the creation, I spoke unto Brahma, who is situated on the lotus that grows out of My navel, about My transcendental glories, which the great sages describe as Shrimad Bhagavatam."*

7 The words 'vijnana' here means 'with the truth of My transcendental forms and qualities.' The Lord here gives a blessing that this knowledge may become manifest. Out of love (for His devotee, the Lord gives the blessing that) the confidential truth of His blissful nature may be directly seen (by Brahma).

8 The first two of these four verses mention jnana and vijnana, which are further described in the next two verses (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.9.32-33). Jnana is described in the following verse, where the Lord says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.9.32):

9 "Brahma, it is I, the Personality of Godhead, who was existing before the creation, when there was nothing but Myself. Nor was there the material nature, the cause of this creation. That which you see now is also I, the Personality of Godhead, and after annihilation what remains will also be I, the Personality of Godhead."*

10 Here the word 'aham' (I) means the form of the Lord, not the featureless Brahman, because Brahman cannot be perceived by the senses. This verse is like the famous statement (Chandogya Upanisad 6.8.7) 'tat tvam asi' (You are that). The Lord here says: 'After the time when the material universe is annihilated, I in My handsome transcendental form, will remain.'

11 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead exists before and after the manifestation of the material universes is confirmed by the following quotes:

"Lord Vasudeva existed before the material world was created, when there was no Brahma and no Siva."

Maha-Narayana Upanisad

"In the beginning was only Narayana. There was no Brahma and no Siva."

Maha-Narayana Upanisad

"The Personality of Godhead, the master of all living entities, existed prior to the creation as one without a second. It is by His will only that creation is made possible and again everything merges in Him. This Supreme Self is symptomised by different names."*

Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.5.23

12 As in the sentence 'The king goes' the word 'king' may also mean 'the king's messenger' or 'the king's soldiers', so the word 'aham' (I) here does not only mean the Lord but also means the Lord's abode of Vaikuntha, the Lord's associates, and everything else in direct relation with the Lord. In this way the meaning should be understood. The Lord is again described in the following question of King Parikshit (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.8.10):

13 "Please also explain the Personality of Godhead, who lies in every heart as the Supersoul and as the Lord of all energies, but is untouched by His external energy.”*

14 Vidura asks a similar question (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.7.37):

“Please describe how many dissolutions there are for the elements of material nature and who survives after the dissolutions to serve the Lord while He is asleep.”*

15 In the Kasi-khanda, Shri Dhruva-carita, it is said:

“Because the Lord’s devotees do not perish when the material cosmos is destroyed, the all-pervading, eternal Supreme Personality of Godhead also never perishes.”

16 In this verse the words ‘aham eva’ refute the idea that the Supreme is formless and impersonal, and the words ‘asam eva’ refute the idea that the Supreme is beyond the power of thought. This is confirmed by the words ‘yad-rupa-guna-karmakah’.

Aside from the activities of material creation, the demigod Brahma and other outsiders know nothing of the Lord’s real activities. They do not know of the Lord’s internal, spiritual pastimes. As a king has nothing that he must perform as his duty, so the Supreme Lord does not have to sleep, eat, or do any other thing.

The verb ‘as’ (asam) may also mean ‘to go’, ‘to shine’, or ‘to accept’. When ‘as’ is interpreted to mean ‘shine’, this verse may mean that the Lord says to Brahma: ‘I am splendidly manifest before you as you gaze on My transcendental features.’ Interpreted in this way, these words refute the idea that the Supreme has no form.

In his discussion of form and formlessness in relation to Lord Vishnu, Shrila Bopadeva Gosvami explains in his Mukta-phala-tika commentary on this verse:

“It is not that the forms of the Lord cannot be all pervading. The Lord’s form does not disappear into nothingness simply because He is simultaneously everywhere.”

The Aitareya Upanisad (1.1.1) also explains:

“Before the material world was created the Supreme Person existed.”

From this it may be understood that because the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead existed before the material creation, the knowledge of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the highest truth.

17 At this point someone may object: ‘Is it not so the Sruti-sastra says that before the material creation the Brahman, which has no qualities, existed?’

To this objection the Lord answers: ‘nanyad yat sat-asat-param’. This means: ‘Before the creation there was nothing but Myself. Nor was there the material nature, the cause of this creation.’ In this statement the word ‘asat’ means ‘effect’ and ‘sat’ means ‘cause’. Because the Lord says that ‘there was nothing but Myself’, He says ‘the impersonal Brahman, which is above the cause and effect of this world, is not different from Me.’ He says: ‘Because some scriptures cannot understand my personal form and qualities, I am reflected in them in my impersonal aspect.’ In the material world, where spiritual variety is not understood, I appear as the undifferentiated Brahman, but in the spiritual world of Vaikuntha I appear as the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. In this way these two aspects of the Supreme are described in the scriptures. The truth about the Supreme Personality of Godhead is described by Lord Krishna in Bhagavad-gita (14.27) in the words: ‘I am the basis of the impersonal Brahma.’ In this way the Lord says that knowledge of Him is ‘very confidential.’

18 At this point someone may object: ‘O Supreme Personality of Godhead, is it not so that when the material universe is no longer manifest, You also no longer exist?’

The Lord answers (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.9.31): ‘After annihilation what remains will also be I, the Personality of Godhead.’*

In the material universes the Supreme Personality of Godhead manifests His form of the Supersoul, and in the spiritual world of Vaikuntha He manifests His forms of the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

That the Lord is not affected by the destruction of the material universes is confirmed in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.3.35):

“The Supreme Personality of Godhead is the cause of the creation, maintenance and destruction of the material universes. No one is the cause of Him.”

19 At this point someone may object: ‘O Lord, the pottery, clothing, and other forms seen in the material universe are not Your forms, for they are not all powerful.’

Thinking someone might raise this objection, the Lord said: ‘I am the material universe. Because it is not different from Me, it is My very self."

It is also said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.7.50):

20 "My dear son, I have not explained in brief the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is the creator of the manifested worlds. Without Him, Hari, the Lord, there are no other causes of the phenomenal and nominal existences."*

21 In this way the truth of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is explained. The Himself says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.9.33): "After annihilation of the material universe what remains will also be I, the Personality of Godhead." About the Supreme Personality of Godhead the scriptures declare: 'O Lord, because You alone remain (sesa) when the material universes are destroyed, You bear the name Sesa.'

The Lord teaches that He is present in all places and at all times. He says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.9.33) 'I, the Personality of Godhead was existing before the creation, when there was nothing but Myself.' He again says (Bhagavad-gita 14.27): 'I am the basis of the impersonal Brahman.'

In Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.9.32 the word 'yad-bhavaḥ' indicates that all forms are limbs of the Lord's own form, and the word 'rupa' in that verse indicates that the Lord has unlimited wonderful transcendental forms different from material forms. The word 'guna' in that verse indicates that the Lord is the shelter of everything and He has unlimited transcendental qualities different from material qualities. The word 'karmakāḥ' in that verse indicates that the Lord is the shelter of many extraordinary activities, such as His creation, maintenance, and destruction of the material universes.

22 In the next verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.9.34), in order to teach the truth that His forms and qualities are different from matter, the Lord describes the qualities of the illusory energy (maya). He says:

"O Brahma, whatever appears to be of any value, if it is without relation to Me, has no reality. Know it as My illusory energy, that reflection which appears to be in darkness."*

The summary explanation of this verse is: "I am the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Anything present before the eyes that is not Me has no reality. Anything without relation to Me has no reality. Know it as the illusory energy of Me, the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

23 The word 'yathābhasaḥ' gives the example of a reflection. Darkness is here compared to a reflection. Darkness may mean either that there is no light in a certain place although light shines in other places, or darkness may also mean that light does shine in a certain place although the beholder has no eyes to see it. The word 'vidyat' (know), although in the third- person, expresses the meaning of the second-person. This instruction, therefore, is intended for others. The Lord says: "With the power I give, you will be able to see and understand Me. Transcending material vision, you will directly see and understand Me, whose forms and qualities are transcendental. By turning from the illusion of matter, one may understand Me. The conclusion is that My transcendental form and qualities cannot be seen or understood by a person in the thrall of material illusion." For this reason material illusion should be given up. Without giving up material illusion it is not possible to love the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Anuccheda 97

1 In the next verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.9.35) the Lord explains the secret of love for Him:

"O Brahma, please know that the universal elements enter into the cosmos and at the same time do not enter into the cosmos; similarly, I Myself also exist within everything created, and at the same time I am outside of everything."*

2 This verse means: 'The universal elements do not enter the cosmos, that is to say they remain outside, and at the same time they do enter, that is to say they stay within. In the same way I do not enter the material cosmos because I stay in Vaikuntha, which is beyond the material sphere, and at the same time I do enter the cosmos because I stay in the hearts of the virtuous and surrendered devotees.' A certain part of the material elements enters and another part does not enter the cosmos. In the same, a partial expansion of the Lord enters, and another feature of the Lord does not enter the material world. That is the example here. In these words the secret of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, which is attained by the self-controlled, is hinted.

3 The Lord's remaining in the spiritual world is described in Brahma-saṁhita (37):

"I worship Govinda, the primeval Lord, who resides in His own realm, Goloka, with Radha, who resembles His own spiritual figure and who embodies His ecstatic potency (hladini). Their companions are Her confidantes, who embody extensions of Her bodily form and who are embued and permeated with ever-blissful spiritual rasa.”*

4 The Lord’s entrance in the devotees’ hearts is described in these words (Brahma-samhita 38):

“I worship the primeval Lord, Govinda, who is always seen by the devotee whose eyes are anointed with the pulp of love. He is seen in His eternal form of Syamasundara, situated within the heart of the devotee.”*

5 The Lord’s form is filled with inconceivable transcendental qualities. The ointment here is the ointment of love. The Lord appears before a person whose eyes are filled with devotion, having been anointed with that ointment. That is the meaning.

6 The Lord again describes this in Bhagavad-gita (9.29):

“But whoever renders service unto Me in devotion is a friend, is in Me, and I am also a friend to him.”*

7 In this verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.9.35) the Lord says: “As the material elements are simultaneously within and without the cosmos, so I am simultaneously within the devotees’ thoughts, and also outside the devotees, manifest before their senses. Because the devotees dedicate everything to Me, I appear before them in My form filled with bliss and love. That is My secret.

The demigod Brahma also describes this (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.6.34):

8 “O Narada, because I have caught hold of the lotus feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Hari, with great zeal, whatever I say has never proved to have been false. Nor is the progress of my mind ever deterred. Nor are my senses ever degraded by temporary attachment to matter.”*

9 Although the interpretations of this statement (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.9.35) may be given, the meaning here is clear because this statement follows the four important statements of the Lord (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.9.31-34). Other interpretations are also refuted by the words ‘na tesu’ here. In this way the great secret is explained. As a cintamani jewel is hidden in a jewellery case, so materialistic interpretations hide this secret from the wicked and indifferent.

10 The Lord Himself says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.21.35):

“The wise tell My secret. This secret is very dear to Me.”

11 This great secret is explained in many places in Vedic literature. The greatness of this secret is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 5.6.18):

“Those engaged in getting the Lord’s favour attain liberation from the Lord very easily, but He does not very easily give the opportunity to render direct service unto Him.”*

12 The Supreme Personality of Godhead personally told this secret to the two great devotees Arjuna and Uddhava in these words:

“Because you are My very dear friend, I am speaking to you My supreme instruction, the most confidential knowledge of all. Hear this from Me, for it is for your benefit.”*

Bhagavad-gita 18.64

“I will now tell you the most confidential knowledge.”

Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.11.49

13 Brahma revealed this secret to Narada in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.7.51-52):

“O Narada, this science of God, Shrimad Bhagavatam, was spoken to me in summary by the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and it was spoken as the accumulation of His diverse potencies. Please expand this science yourself.*

14 “Please describe the science of Godhead with determination and in a manner by which it will be quite possible for the human being to develop transcendental devotional service unto the Personality of Godhead Hari, the Supersoul of every living being and the summum bonum source of all energies.”*

15 Shrila Shridhara Svami eloquent explains that the word ‘rahasyam’ (secret) here (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.9.31) refers to pure devotional service.

How is this secret, described in the passage beginning Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.9.31 understood? The Supreme Personality of Godhead teaches the method of understanding it in the next verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.9.36):

16 “A person who is searching after the Supreme Absolute Truth, the Personality of Godhead, must certainly search for it up to this, in all circumstances, in all space and time, and both directly and indirectly.”*

17 In this verse the word 'atmanah' means 'of Me, the Supreme Personality of Godhead', 'tattva-jijnasuna' means 'desiring to understand the secret of pure love', 'jijnasyam' means 'may be learned from the spiritual master', and 'anvaya-vyatirekabhyam' means 'with the instruction to do certain acts and refrain from certain acts'. This should be done in all circumstances and all space and time.

18 This is described in Shrimad Bhagavatam (2.2.33):

"For those who are wandering in the material universe, there is no more auspicious means of deliverance than what is aimed at in the direct devotional service of Lord Krishna."*

19 Actions to be done and to be avoided are described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.2.36):

"O King, it is therefore essential that every human being hear about, glorify and remember the Supreme Lord, the Personality of Godhead, always and everywhere."*

20 This should be done, as said in Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.9.36 'in all circumstances, and in all time and space'. In this way the Supreme Personality of Godhead teaches about jnana, vijnana, rahasya, and tad-anga in these four verses (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.9.31-34).

In the beginning of this chapter it is also said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.9.9):

"The Personality of Godhead, being thus very much satisfied with the penance of Lord Brahma, was pleased to manifest His personal abode, Vaikuntha, the supreme planet above all others. This transcendental abode of the Lord is adored by all self-realised persons freed from all kinds of miseries and fear of illusory existence."*

It is then said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.9.14):

"Lord Brahma saw in the Vaikuntha planets the Personality of Godhead, who is the Lord of the entire devotee community, the Lord of the goddess of fortune, the Lord of all sacrifices, and the Lord of the universe, and who is served by the foremost servitors like Nanda, Sunanda, Prabala and Arhana, His immediate associates."*

In these words of Shrimad Bhagavatam, as well as the words of Gopala-tapani Upanisad, Lord Krishna is described as the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Lord Krishna is never described as an incarnation of Lord Narayana, Lord Garbhodakasayi Vishnu, or the purusa-avatars. Because it describes Lord Krishna, the speaker of these four verses (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.9.31-34) as the Supreme Personality of Godhead (Bhagavan), this Maha-Purana is called Shrimad Bhagavatam.

21 That Lord Krishna is the original speaker of Shrimad Bhagavatam is confirmed in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.13.19):

"I meditate upon that pure and spotless supreme Absolute Truth, who is free from suffering and death and who in the beginning personally revealed this incomparable torchlight of knowledge to Brahma. Brahma then spoke it to the sage Narada, who narrated it to Krishna-dvaipayana Vyasa. Shrila Vyasa revealed this Shrimad Bhagavatam to the greatest of sages, Sukadeva Gosvami and Sukadeva mercifully spoke it to Maharaja Pariksit."

The word 'para' in this verse indicates that the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the original speaker of the Bhagavatam.

That Lord Krishna is the original Supreme Personality of Godhead is hinted in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.6.42):

"Karanarnavasayi Vishnu is the first incarnation of the Supreme Lord, and He is the master of eternal time, space, cause and effects, mind, the elements, the material ego, the modes of nature, the senses, the universal form of the Lord, Garbhodakasayi Vishnu, and the sum total of all living beings, both moving and unmoving."*

This statement indicates that Lord Krishna is different (because He is the origin of all incarnations) from the various incarnations of god.

22 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the original speaker of Shrimad Bhagavatam is also confirmed by these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.13.10):

"It was to Lord Brahma that the Supreme Personality of Godhead first revealed the Shrimad Bhagavatam in full. At the time, Brahma, frightened by material existence, was sitting on the lotus flower that had grown from the Lord's navel."

23 The word Bhagavan (Supreme Personality of Godhead) is used in this verse. It was Bhagavan who spoke to Brahma as he sat on the lotus flower grown from Lord Narayana's navel. It was also Bhagavan who revealed the world of Vaikuntha in the passage from Second Canto (2.9.9 and 2.9.14, quoted in text 20).

1 The Supreme Personality of Godhead is described in all the Vedas. This is confirmed in the following words of the Catur-veda-sikha:

"By all the Vedas the Supreme Personality of Godhead is to be known. The Vedas describe no one else. A person who aspires after liberation should study the Vedas, reflect on their words, and try to understand Him."

2 This is again confirmed in these words:

"The demigods, the sages who desire liberation, and the brahmavadis all meditate on the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

Shri Nrsimha-tapani Upanisad 2.4

"All the Vedas meditate on the feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead and all austerities chant His glories."

Katha Upanisad 1.2.15

"Let me approach the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the great Supersoul who sees everything. They who are ignorant of the Vedas cannot understand Him."

Sruti-sastra

"I ask about the Supreme Person, who is described in the Upanisads."

Sruti-sastra

"By all the Vedas, I am to be known. Indeed, I am the compiler of the Vedanta, and I am the knower of the Vedas."*

Lord Krishna, in Bhagavad-gita 15.15

3 In the Padma Purana it is said:

"In conclusion, the Supreme Personality of Godhead Vishnu is described in all the Vedas."

4 In the Skanda Purana it is said:

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is named by all names and worshipped by all the Vedas."

5 In the Vishnu Purana it is said:

"We offer our respectful obeisances to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the eternal author of the Vedas."

6 In the Brahma-tarka it is said:

"In all the Vedas, Itihasas, Puranas, and Yuktika-sastras, only the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and no one else, is to be known."

7 The Supreme Personality of Godhead describes Himself as the conclusion of the Vedas (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.21.43):

"The purpose of Vedic literature is to know Me by different speculations, either by indirect understanding or by dictionary understanding."*

8 In this verse 'mam' means 'Me, the object of the Vedic sacrifices', 'vidhatte' means 'the Vedas ordain', and 'abhidhatte mam' means 'the Vedas set form Me, the form of all Deities and the creator of the sky and the other material elements.' That the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the creator of the sky is confirmed by the following words (Taittiriya Upanisad 2.1.3):

"From the Supreme Personality of Godhead the sky was born."

"Vikalpyapohyate hy aham' means 'speculating that nothing is different from Me."

Anuccheda 99

1 In this way it is proved that the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the subject matter of the Vedas. This is confirmed in the following question of King Pariksit and the answer of Shri Sukadeva Gosvami (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.87.1):

"Since Vedic knowledge generally deals with the subject matter of the three qualities of the material world, how then can it approach the subject matter of transcendence, which is beyond the approach of the three material modes? Since the mind is material and the vibration of words is a material sound, how can the Vedic knowledge, expressing by material sound the thoughts of the mind, approach transcendence?"

Description of a subject matter necessitates describing its source of emanation, its qualities, and its activities. Such description can be possible only by thinking with the material mind and by vibrating material words. Although Brahma, or Absolute Truth, has no material qualities, our power of speaking does not go beyond the material qualities. How then can Brahman, the Absolute Truth, be described by your words? I do not see how it is possible to understand transcendence from such expressions of material sound."*

2 The meaning is that the Vedas consist of words that describe mostly the mode of nature, which begin with goodness, and the Supreme Brahman is beyond the modes of nature, which begin with goodness. For this reason the Supreme Brahman cannot be described. Because it is beyond the actions of the modes of material nature, the Supreme Brahman cannot be described. The words 'sat' and 'asat' here mean 'cause' and 'effect'. Brahman is also beyond cause and effect.

Sometimes words are unambiguous and have only one meaning. An example of this is the word 'dittha' (toy elephant). Some words have a second meaning. An example of this is the phrase 'simho devadattah' (the lion Devadatta), where the word 'lion' actually means 'lionlike'. Sometimes words have a metaphorical meaning. An example of this is the phrase 'gangayam ghosah' (a cowherd village on the Ganga), where the word 'Ganga' does not mean 'in the Ganga' but 'on the Ganga's shore'. How is it possible for the Vedas to describe the Supreme Brahman, which has no material qualities, with words, which have so many ambiguous meanings?

In the statements of the Vedic literature, which do not describe anything but the Supreme, as for example the statement of Vedanta-sutra (1.1.3) 'The Supreme Brahman is the origin of the scriptures' the primary, literal meaning should be accepted. In these self evident statements of the Vedas the literal meaning should be accepted. Why should the literal meaning be accepted? It should be accepted because you (Sukadeva Gosvami) are personally speaking out of great compassion. Otherwise it would not be possible to understand Brahman in the Vedas. How then would it be possible to understand the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is above Brahman, without your explanation? For this reason the path of the self-evident Vedas leads to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is described in this passage, which begins with Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.86.59.

3 Shрила Sukadeva Gosvami answered in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.87.2):

"The sages said: The Supreme Personality of Godhead has created the mind, senses, and living force for the purpose of sense gratification in transmigration from one kind of body to another, as well as for the purpose of allowing liberation from the material conditions."

4 In this verse the compound word beginning with 'buddhi' means 'the various attributes' and 'jananam' means 'of the individual living entities'. To arrange for their sense gratification, the Supreme Personality of Godhead (prabhuh) created their intelligence, mind, senses, and living force. The individual living entities, employing their own knowledge, did not create them. By this statement the vivarta-vada (impersonalists' theory of transformation) is refuted. The word 'mtra' here means 'of the material senses', 'bhava' means 'activities that bring one another birth', 'atmane' means 'to the individual living entity, who has come to the material world to enjoy', and 'akalpanaya' means 'for liberation and freedom from material desire'. Material desire here is the four goals of economic development, material piety, sense gratification and impersonal liberation. Liberation here is the liberation where one sees everything is spirit.

5 Shrimad Bhagavatam (5.19.19-20) explains:

"If one's position is ascertained by a bona fide spiritual master and one is properly trained to engage in the service of Lord Vishnu according to the four social divisions (brahmana, ksatriya, vaisya and sudra) and the four spiritual divisions (brahmachari, grhastha, vanaprastha and sannyasa), one's life becomes perfect.*

"After many, many births, when the results of one's pious activities mature, one gets an opportunity to associate with pure devotees. Then one is able to cut the knot of bondage to ignorance, which bound him because of varied fruitive activities. As a result of associating with devotees, one gradually renders service to Lord Vasudeva, who is transcendental, free from attachment to the material world, beyond the mind and words, and independent of everything else. That bhakti-yoga, devotional service to Lord Vasudeva, is the real path of liberation."*

In this prose passage of the Fifth Canto two kinds of devotional service are described.

6 In both these processes of devotional service (following varnasrama and meeting a devotee) one becomes free from the illusions of material ignorance. The Supreme Personality of Godhead therefore creates the intelligence and senses of the conditioned souls to enable them to engage in devotional service. His sampadana-sakti potency makes all this possible. Because the three goals of economic development, material piety, and sense gratification are external and material, liberation is different from them. Liberation is part of the spiritual potency. Because it is internal and consists of spiritual knowledge and devotional service, and because it breaks the bonds of material existence, it is different from matter. This is described in Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.10.6:

"Liberation is the permanent situation of the living entity after he gives up the changeable gross and subtle material bodies."*

When the living entities are averse to the Lord's devotional service, then their intelligence and senses are under the thrall of the material ignorance potency. When the living entities are under the thrall of the modes of nature the Lord is not manifest, but when they are free from the modes He appears before them. In this way this verse is explained.

7 Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami concludes his answer by says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.87.49):

"Thus I have replied to the question You submitted to me, O king, about how the mind can have access to the Absolute Truth, which is ineffable and devoid of qualities."

8 In this way the spiritual potency reveals the Lord's non material, blissful, forms and qualities. Therefore the Lord can be understood and expressed in words. Later on it will also be proved that the Vedas can describe the Lord's non material forms and qualities. Therefore it is proved that the words of the individual spirit souls can described the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is explained in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.5.1):

"On the other hand, that literature which is full of descriptions of the transcendental glories of the name, fame, forms, pastimes, etc. of the unlimited Supreme Lord is a different creation, full of transcendental words directed toward bringing about a revolution in the impious lives of this world's misdirected civilisation. Such transcendental literatures, even though imperfectly composed, are heard, sung, and accepted by purified men who are thoroughly honest."*

In addition to this it is said that the Vedas are created by the breathing of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. (Thus there are two kinds of description of the Supreme Personality of Godhead: that spoken by the individual living entities, and that spoken by the Supreme Lord Himself.) What more need be said? The Vedas can directly describe the Supreme.

9 In Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.87.14) it will be said:

"O Lord, the Vedas understand You and You enjoy pastimes with Your eternal potency."

In the Twelfth Canto (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.6.41), it will be said about the sacred syllable om:

10 "This omkara, ultimately non material and imperceptible, is heard by the Supersoul without His possessing material ears or any other material senses. The entire expanse of Vedic sound is elaborated from omkara, which appears from the soul, within the sky of the heart. It is the direct designation of the self-originating Absolute truth, the Supersoul, and is the secret essence and eternal seed of all Vedic hymns."

11 In the Sruti-sastra also it is said:

"Om is the name of the Supreme."

12 "Nedistham' here means 'without concealing any of His characteristics". The king's question here is: 'How is it possible for the Vedas to directly describe the Supreme? Please tell.' The idea is that words are not able to describe the Supreme. This idea is refuted in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.87.41):

"O Lord, because You are limitless even the great demigods cannot find where You end. Even You cannot find where You end. Within You the universes move as specks of dust tossed by the wind. Rejecting everything that is not You, the Vedas become fruitful when they find You."

External, superficial readers think the Vedas describe economic development, material piety, and sense gratification. The conclusion of the Vedas is not these external things, but rather the internal, esoteric description of the Supreme.

13 The Vedas are the Supreme Personality of Godhead's breath, manifested by the pastime of His compassion on the wretched living entities outside the eternal spiritual reality. First, to create faith in the unseen and unknown (spiritual reality) the Vedas great easily visible goals, such as the attainment of a son, to the living entities striving for such things. From this, faith (in the Vedas' ability to grant benedictions) is created. With that faith the Vedas show the temporary nature of the material world, create a desire to go to the very wonderful higher worlds of Svargaloka, and give the living entities the Agnistoma-yajna to attain that goal. By again and again practicing religious rituals, the living entity becomes attracted to religion, and with this attraction he becomes pure in heart. He becomes wise and, knowing that his material situation is temporary, becomes tormented with fear of the cycle of repeated birth and death. Then the Vedas give him the desire to attain the bliss of impersonal liberation. From the bliss of impersonal liberation eventually the spiritual form of the Supreme Truth, the Personality of Godhead, appears.

14 This ultimate plan of the Vedas is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.2.9-10):

"All occupational engagements are certainly meant for ultimate liberation. They should never be performed for material gain. Furthermore, according to sages, one who is engaged in the ultimate occupational service should never use material gain to cultivate sense gratification.*

15 "Life's desires should never be directed toward sense gratification. One should desire only a healthy life, or self-preservation, since a human being is meant for inquiry about the Absolute Truth. Nothing else should be the goal of one's works."*

16 To the extent the intelligence and senses are situated in the internal spiritual reality, to that extent they are able to understand the Supreme Truth manifest by the spiritual potency. In this way they are able to cross over the Vedic instructions in relation to the three modes of material nature are able to understand the Supreme Truth beyond the modes.

In the Twelfth Canto (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.6.39) it is said in relation to the sacred syllable om:

17 "From that the sacred syllable omkara, independent, with unmanifest potencies, and the form of Brahman, Paramatma, and Bhagavan, was manifest."

18 The Supreme Truth is manifest in two ways: in the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead and in the form of the impersonal Brahman. The spiritual potency is also manifest in two ways: in the form of self-manifest devotional service and in the form of spiritual knowledge. The devotional service portions of the Vedas lead to the Supreme Personality of Godhead and the knowledge portions of the Vedas lead to the impersonal Brahman. This conclusion is found in the Itihasas.

Anuccheda 100

1 Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.87.12) explains:

"Sanandana said: After the dissolution of the whole cosmic manifestation, the entire energy and the whole creation in its nucleus form enters into the body of Garbhodakasayi Vishnu. The Lord at that time remains asleep for a long, long time, and where there is again necessity of creation, the Vedas personified assemble around the Lord and begin to glorify Him, describing His wonderful transcendental pastimes."*

2 At the time of cosmic annihilation the Lord withdraws (apiya) the universe He had created and lies down to rest with His potencies. Making the material nature, the purusa-avatara, and the portion of His portions all one with Himself, He closes His eyes. When the time of cosmic annihilation is almost over the Vedas awaken the Lord with prayers describing His transcendental qualities. The Lord here is the Supreme Personality of Godhead. He is not a purusa-avatara expansion.

3 That the purusa-avatara also enters the Lord is described in the Third Canto (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.5.23):

"The Personality of Godhead, the master of all living entities, existed prior to the creation as one without a second. It is by His will only that creation is made possible and again everything merges in Him. This Supreme Self is symptomised by different names."*

4 Continuing the description in text 1, the Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.87.13) gives an example:

"Then the Vedas glorify the Lord. It is exactly like a king. When he is asleep in the morning, the appointed reciters come around his bedroom and begin to sing of his chivalrous activities, and while hearing of his glorious activities, the king gradually awakens."*

5 The example here is a powerful king, not an impersonal quality less something, glorified with eloquent prayers. That is the meaning of the words "It is exactly like a king. When he is asleep..." At night the king enjoys pastimes with his queens. He ignores all external duties and stays with His intimate associates in the inner part of his palace. Later, the poets awaken him by reciting many prayers glorifying his prowess. The Supreme Personality of Godhead is compared to this king. Ignoring all in relation to the material universes, He enjoys pastimes with His associates in His own abode hidden from material eyes. The Lord's associates (anujivinah) are they who know the Lord's heart.

6 In this passage the Vedas reveal the truth of the Lord's form, which is directly seen by devotional service, service that allows one to directly see the Lord and also grants transcendental knowledge and a host of transcendental virtues. The Personified Vedas say (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.87.14):

7 "O unconquerable, You are the Supreme Personality. No one is equal to You or greater than You. No one can be more glorious in his activities. All glories unto You! All glories unto You! By Your own transcendental nature You fully possess all six opulences. As such, You are able to deliver all conditioned souls from the clutches of maya. O Lord, we fervently pray that You kindly do so. All the living entities, being Your parts and parcels, are naturally joyful, eternal, and full of knowledge, but due to their own faults they try to imitate You by trying to become the supreme enjoyer; thus they disobey Your supremacy and become offenders. And because of their offenses, Your material energy has taken charge of them; thus, their transcendental qualities of joyfulness, bliss, and wisdom have been covered by the clouds of the three material qualities. This cosmic manifestation, made of the three material qualities, is just like a prison house for the conditioned souls. The conditioned souls are struggling very hard to escape from material bondage, and according to their different conditions of life they have been given different types of engagement. But all engagements are based on Your knowledge. Pious activities can be executed only when inspired by Your mercy, therefore, without taking shelter at Your lotus feet one cannot surpass the influence of material energy. Actually, we, as personified Vedic knowledge, are always engaged in Your service to help the conditioned soul understand You."*

8 "Ajita" here means 'O unconquerable one' and 'jaya jaya' means 'Please reveal Your glory'. 'Jaya' is said twice out of respect. 'Ajita' here is in the vocative case.

9 It is said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.2.10):

"Simply by chanting the holy name of Lord Vishnu, such sinful persons may attract the attention of the Supreme Lord, who therefore considers, 'Because this man has chanted My holy name, My duty is to give him protection.'"

10 From this it may be understood that the Supreme Personality of Godhead is personally present, face-to-face, in the sound of His holy name. He is His name, just as He is His transcendental form. He is not present face-to-face in anything that is different from Him. The Sruti-sastra explains that fear, hatred, and other faults and vices present in the Lord's form are only symbolic. They are not like material fear and hatred. This has already been proved in the Sruti. The form of the Lord appears on the eyes and the holy name of the Lord appears on the voice. The Lord's form and name are the same direct manifestation of the Lord, although appearing in different ways. That more need be said? Using sanketa, rudha, and other literary devices, the Vedas have in many ways explained that the Lord is not different from His name.

The Vedas here say: "O Lord, please reveal Your glories (jaya jaya)!" In this way, without recourse to any indirect literary devices, the Personified Vedas directly say that the Lord's glories and qualities are the most exalted. This is described in the Sruti-sastra in these words:

"O Lord, Your glories are so great even You do not fully understand them."

Sruti-sastra

"No one is equal to or greater than the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

Svetasvatara Upanisad 6.8

11 The Personified Vedas here say 'jaya jaya!' so that the Lord will reveal His devotional service. They do that because the Lord personally appears when there is devotional service. Hearing the Vedas' words 'jaya jaya!', the Supreme Personality of Godhead may ask: 'Which one of My glories shall I manifest?' To this question the Personified Vedas reply: 'ajam jahi', which means 'Please manifest the glory of Your gift of devotional service, which casts away the influence of maya.'

12 Then the Supreme Personality of Godhead may protest: 'My potency of knowledge and My potency of ignorance are both called 'maya', so it 'maya' is cast out, then transcendental knowledge will be destroyed.'

The Personified Vedas then reply: 'This 'maya' is 'dosa-grbhita-guna'.'

'Dosa' here is the fault of ignorance, which makes the living entities forget the Supreme Personality of Godhead. 'Grbhita' means 'accepted' and 'guna' means 'the knowledge that makes the living entities remember the Supreme Personality of Godhead.' This means 'O Lord, when You enter the living entity ignorance is cast out. No matter where, when, how, or whom, ignorance flees from the living entity. Therefore, O Lord, please uproot ignorance and give the living entities pure devotion for Your lotus feet.' This means that the Supreme Personality of Godhead is Himself beyond the influence of the potency of ignorance. He is eternal, full of knowledge, and full of bliss. Rejecting everything that is not Him, the Vedas describe (caranti) the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

13 That the Lord is above the influence of matter is confirmed in the following words of the Vedas:

"One should know that although maya (illusion) is false or temporary, the background of maya is the supreme magician, the Personality of Godhead, who is Mahesvara, the Supreme Controller."*

Svetasvatara Upanisad 4.10

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is beyond the influence of the unborn potency of illusion."

Svetasvatara Upanisad 4.5

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is the master of everything. He is the ruler of all,"

Brhad-aranyaka Upanisad 5.6.1

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is not material. He is not material."

Brhad-aranyaka Upanisad 4.2.21

14 At this point the Supreme Personality of Godhead may protest: 'Is it not so that by praying for the destruction of maya you want to destroy what is one of My opulences?'

To answer this the Personified Vedas say: 'O Lord, You fully possess all six opulences (tvam asi yad atmana samavaruddha-samasta-bhagah).' This means 'O Lord, You are the master of a great multitude of opulences in the spiritual world, which is three quarters of all existence. What is the use of this tiny, insignificant opulence of material illusion?'

15 In his commentary on Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.87.38, Shridhara Svami explains:

"O Supreme Personality of Godhead, O master of multitudes of kamadhenu cows and the potencies of transcendental bliss and knowledge, what do You have to do with the unborn potency of material illusion? You have nothing to do with the eight material opulences limited by time, place and other material boundaries. Your opulences are spiritual and free of all limits."

16 Here (in Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.87.14) the word 'atma' means 'Your form' and 'bhaga' means 'Your qualities.' By using these words for form and qualities the Personified Vedas are able, by using the traditional meaning (rudhi) of words, to describe the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

17 The Sruti-sastra describes the Lord and His potencies:

"The Lord is the Supreme Personality of Godhead. His potencies are manifest from Him."

Sruti-sastra

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead has multifarious potencies."

Svetasvatara Upanisad 6.8

18 In this way all the Vedas describe the Lord's potencies. In this verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.87.14) the word 'aga' means 'the stationary living entities', 'jagat' means 'the moving living entities', and 'okasam' means 'the material bodies that are their homes'. 'Akhila-sakty-avabodhaka' means 'O Lord who awakens all Your potencies, which are the individual living entities (jivas)' and is in the vocative case. This means: 'O Lord, by Your glance manifesting the wonderful potencies of maya, You are like an ocean filled with the waves of all Your potencies.'

At this point the Lord may protest: 'Is it not so that if the maya potency is destroyed then the potency that is the individual living entities (jivas) will inevitably also be destroyed?'

To this the Personified Vedas reply: This is not so because 'aga-jagad-oksam akhila-sakty-avabodhaka' (O Lord, You awaken the moving and stationary living entities). On the contrary, your potency (that eclipses maya) fills the living entities with bliss. In this way the Personified Vedas describe the individual living entities as tatastha-sakti (the Lord's marginal potency).

19 The relationship of the Supreme Personality of Godhead and the individual living entity is described in the Sruti-sastra:

"Who can breathe and who can live if the supreme bliss, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, does not stay in the sky of his heart?"

Taittiriya Upanisad 2.7.1

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is the life-breath of everyone's life."

Kena Upanisad 1.2

"Everything that exists is the reflection of the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

Svetasvatara Upanisad 6.8

This means that the stars and other celestial lights are reflected from the light of the Supreme.

The relationship of the Supreme Personality of Godhead and the individual living entity is also described in these words (Svetasvatara Upanisad):

"Only to those great souls who have implicit faith in both the Lord and the spiritual master are the imports of Vedic knowledge automatically revealed."*

20 At this point the Supreme Personality of Godhead may protest: 'How do you Vedas know that I have no duty to perform for the unborn maya potency, and how do you know that I am eternal and full of knowledge and bliss and by My own potencies are full of all opulences?'

The Vedas answer: "Sometimes we see You when, to create, maintain, and destroy the material worlds, in Your form of the purusa-avatara You enjoy pastimes with the unborn maya potency, or when by the means of Your internal potency You manifest Your personal opulences full of the nectar of eternity, knowledge and bliss, or when You appear as the words to us Vedas or as the Supreme worshipable Lord. In this way we Vedas know everything about You."

In this verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.87.14) the Supreme Personality of Godhead is in the possessive case.

21 The Vedas are divided into two parts, one part dealing with the realm of the three modes of material nature, and the other part dealing with what is beyond the three modes of material nature. The part dealing with the three modes of material nature is in turn again divided into three parts. In the first of these parts the Supreme Personality of Godhead is described as being on the border between the spiritual and material worlds. An example of this part is the statement:

"From the Supreme Personality of Godhead the material elements were born."

Taittiriya Upanisad 3.1.1

In the second of these parts the Supreme Personality of Godhead is described as glorious because He is the controller of all within the realm of the three modes of material nature. An example of this part is the statement:

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is the king of all within the realm of the three modes."

Sruti-sastra

In the third of these parts the Supreme Personality of Godhead is described as the teacher that shows how to transcend the realm of the three modes of material nature.

22 The second part (describing what is beyond the three modes of material nature) of the Vedas may be divided into two parts. The first part states that the Supreme is different from the realm of the three modes and the second part states that the Supreme is identical with the realm of the three modes. An example of the first part is the statement:

"The Supreme is not large and not small. It is not this. It is not that."

Brhad-aranyaka Upanisad 3.8.8.

Examples of the second part are the statements:

"The entire world is Brahman."

Chandogya Upanisad 3.14.1

"You are that."

Chandogya Upanisad 6.8.7

Of the last two quotes the first says that everything is Brahman because everything was born from Brahman. Thus the changeless Supreme Brahman is the shelter of everything and everything is part of it, each part being pure Brahman (spirit).

In the second quote the word 'tvam' (you) means 'the individual living entity, who is the potency of the spiritual form of the Supreme' and 'tat' (that) means 'the Supreme Brahman'. Without understanding the real meaning of the word 'tat' the meaning of 'tvam' will not be understood. Both 'tat' (the Supreme Brahman) and 'tvam' (the individual living entity) are by nature beyond the realm of the three material modes. Here it is clear that the Supreme is the Supreme Personality of Godhead (Bhagavan). It is not at all clear that the Supreme is the impersonal Brahman. In this way the words 'ajaya...carato nucaret' in Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.87.14 are explained.

23 The living entities who have transcended the realm of the three modes are divided into two groups: they who are devoted to the impersonal Brahman and they who are devoted to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The impersonal Brahman is described in these words (Taittiriya Upanisad (3.6):

"Brahman is full of bliss."

24 The Supreme Personality of Godhead is described in these words (Svetasvatara Upanisad 6.8):

"He does not possess bodily form like that of an ordinary living entity. There is no difference between His body and His soul. He is absolute. All His senses are transcendental. Any one of His senses can perform the action of any other sense. Therefore, no one is greater than Him or equal to Him. His potencies are multifarious, and thus His deeds are automatically performed as a natural sequence."*

25 In this way the statement 'atmana carato nucaren nigamah' is explained. In this way it is proved that the Vedas describe the Supreme Personality of Godhead. In the parts of the Vedas that describe what is beyond the three modes of material nature He is directly described. In the other parts He is described indirectly. To prove that He is not material. His various transcendental qualities are described. Leaving behind all partial descriptions, the Vedas directly describe the transcendental form and qualities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. That is the conclusive explanation of the indirect description of the Lord.

26 In conclusion, O Lord, the Vedas become fruitful in the description of You. This is described in the following verses quoted in the commentary of Shripada Madhvacarya:

"Neither eyes, nor ears, nor logic teach of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Only the Sruti and Smrti sastras teach of Him."

Sruti-sastra

"The Supreme Person is described in the Upanisads:

Brhad-aranyaka Upanisad 3.9.26

Anuccheda 101

1 In this way it has been proved that the Vedas describe the Supreme Brahman. That the final conclusion of the Vedas is that the Supreme is the Personality of Godhead is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.87.15):

"O Lord, those who aspire for liberation from this material world must therefore worship You, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the ultimate cause of all causes. You are just like the total mass of earth, from which varieties of earthly pots are manufactured. The pots are made of earthly clay, they rest on the earth, and after being destroyed, their elements ultimately merge back into earth. For this reason the great sages place their thoughts, words, and deeds in You. How can they avoid You? How can men not place their feet on the earth as they walk?"

2 How is the Supreme Brahman (brhat) understood (upalabdham)? After the material universe is destroyed (vikrteḥ), the Supreme Brahman remains (avasesataya). What is that like? It is like earthly clay. As clay is transformed into pots or so many other things, the pots and other things retain their identity as clay. The same may be understood (upalabdham) of the Supreme Brahman (brhat). The Vedas consider (avayanti) that the creation and dissolution of the material world are but transformations (vikrteḥ) of the Supreme Brahman (brhat). The Taittiriya Upanisad (3.1.1) explains:

"Everything has come from the Supreme."

As the pots and other things retain their identity as clay, so the entire world retains its identity as part of the Supreme.

The question may be raised: 'If everything is but a transformation of the Supreme, then why do the Vedas say the Supreme is "Not this, not that?" The answer is given here in the word 'avikrtat' (because the Supreme remains unchanged).

The Supreme as the ultimate origin is again described in Vedanta-sutra (2.1.27):

"Because the Supreme is the root from which the Vedic statements have sprung."

The meaning is that by His inconceivable potency the Lord remains unchanged (even though everything that exists is a transformation of Him).

3 Although the word Brahman (brhat) is used here and it is here said that Brahman has potencies, the real meaning of Brahman here is Bhagavan (Supreme Personality of Godhead). This is so because the Supreme Personality of Godhead cannot be separated from His potencies. Because the Supreme Personality of Godhead is not small or insignificant, He is here called Brahman (the Great). Because the example of earthly clay in this verse indicates that Brahman is the active creator of the worlds, it should be understood that the impersonal Brahman is not indicated here. In the second half of this verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.87.15) the Personified Vedas explain that Brahman is ultimately the Supreme Personality of Godhead. They say:

"O Lord, for this reason the great sages place their thoughts, words, and deeds in You.

The Supreme Personality of Godhead and the impersonal Brahman are one and the same. They are only thought to be different because in one the Lord displays His transcendental qualities and in the other He does not display them.

The sages then say:

"O Lord, how can the Vedas avoid You? How can men not place their feet on the earth as they walk?"

This means: 'How can the Vedas become fruitful? O Lord, they become fruitful only by finding You.'

This is confirmed by the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.32.32):

4 "Philosophical research culminates in understanding the Supreme Personality of Godhead. After achieving this understanding, when one becomes free from the material modes of nature, he attains the stage of devotional service. Either by devotional service directly or by philosophical research, one has to find the same destination, which is the Supreme Personality of Godhead."*

5 In Madhvacarya's commentary the Sruti-sastra is quoted:

"All names are ultimately names of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. As rivers flow to the ocean, so all names enter the Supreme."

6 All the Vedas describe the Supreme as the Supreme Personality of Godhead and also as the impersonal Brahman. These two names of the Lord are true. They are not imaginary. The Personified Vedas explain (10.87.16):

7 "O master of the three Lords of the universe, diving into the nectar ocean of topics about You, which washes away all the sins of the world, the wise become free of all sufferings. O great one, how can we describe the great devotees who, with a pure heart shaking off the vices of this world, the power of time, and the three modes of nature, serve You, who are full of eternal transcendental bliss?"

8 In this verse the word 'try-adhipate' means 'O Lord of the three deities headed by Brahman (Brahma, Vishnu and Siva)'. This means that the purusa-avatara, Lord Narayana is the origin of these three deities, and the Supreme Personality of Godhead (Lord Krishna) is, because He is naturally superior, the master of Lord Narayana.

The next phrase means: 'O master (Krishna) of the master (Narayana) of the masters (Brahma, Vishnu and Siva), because You are the final goal of the Vedas, the intelligent demigods renounce their portions of the Vedic yajnas and without any other activity dive into the nectar ocean of Your glories, which washes away all sins (tava akhila-loka-mala-ksapana-kathamrtabdhim avagahya). 'Kim uta' means 'what can be said?'

The phrase 'tapamsi jahuh' may mean either 'they become free of all sufferings', or ;they perform severe austerities.'

The verse continues: 'With a pure heart shaking off both the vices of this world, the power of time, and the three modes of nature headed by the mode of goodness (sva-dhama-vidhutasaya-kala-gunah), they serve You, the Supreme Truth who is known as Brahman and who is full of eternal transcendental bliss (parama bhajanti ye padam ajasra-sukhanubhavam).'

The sequence of events here is first they dive into the ocean of nectar, then they become free of all sufferings, and then they serve the Lord.

9 The meaning here is that the devotees have given up the idea that the impersonal Brahman is the only feature of the Supreme. Here three kinds of men are described: the bewildered, the intelligent and the successful. It is seen that without any creative speculation, speaking only the truth, the Vedas describe the Supreme Personality of Godhead to these three kinds of men. If it is not seen (that the Vedas describe the Supreme Personality of Godhead) then such readers because of their ignorance do not attain the purification described in the words 'akhila-loka-mala-ksapana.'

When the class of bewildered men do not see this (that the Vedas describe the Supreme Personality of Godhead), then the adage 'like an iron rod untouched by fire' describes the Vedas' inability to purify them.

When the intelligent class does not see this, but instead speculates on the meaning of the Vedas, the adage 'Like a person who does not believe what has heard of the virtues of the barren woman's children' describes their cynical rejection of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Or, this class, even after understanding the truth, will not abandon non devotional duties and serve the Lord. Then the adage 'Like a person who, even after hearing the royal glories of the Ganges refuses to leave his own place to go there' applies to them.

When even the third class, they who are ultimately successful because they have attained self-realisation, curtly declines to dive into the nectar of the topics of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the adage 'like a cynic who declines to dive into a nectar lake because he mistakenly thinks the river must be even more sweet' applies to them.

The true result of hearing the Lord's glories is described in the Vishnu Purana in these words:

"When He enters the ears, Lord Hari kills all sins."

10 This is also described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.87.40):

"Dear Lord, anyone who, by Your grace, has understood the glories of Your lotus feet is callous to material happiness and distress, which arise from You alone. He is callous to praise or condemnation by the ordinary people. If the devotee can thus maintain the transcendental position, in the association of pure devotees daily hearing Your glorious activities in different ages and incarnations, then You guarantee His liberation."

11 This is again described in the First Canto (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.7.11):

"Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami, son of Shrila Vyasadeva, was not only transcendently powerful. He was also very dear to the devotees of the Lord. Thus he underwent the study of this great narration (Shrimad Bhagavatam)."

12 In this way it is proved that the Vedas describe the Supreme Personality of Godhead and His transcendental qualities.

13 This is confirmed by the following words of the Sruti:

"O Vishnu, by chanting Your holy name with a little understanding, we attain profound transcendental knowledge."

Rg Veda 1.156.3

"As water never touches a lotus leaf, so sin never touches a person who knows the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

Chandogya Upanisad 4.14.3

"Work done for the Supreme Personality of Godhead will not bind one to the law of karma."

Isa Upanisad 2

"One who has abandoned all material activities, whether pious or impious, is not touched by sin."

Sruti-sastra

"Meditating on the Supreme Personality of Godhead, he does not think: Why did I not do pious deeds? Why did I sin?"

Taittiriya Upanisad 2.9.1

"They who have attained liberation still worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

Sruti-sastra

In these and other verses describing devotional service the supremacy of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is described. It is not at all refuted by the words of the Sruti-sastra:

14 At this point someone may protest: 'The words that you think describe the Supreme are still material in nature. The Supreme can never be described in words. This is confirmed in the Sruti-sastra:

"Words cannot describe the Supreme. The mind will never reach Him."

Taittiriya Upanisad 2.4.1 and 2.9.1

"Words cannot describe the Supreme."

Sruti-sastra

"The Supreme, who enables us to speak, cannot be described in words."

Kena Upanisad 1.5

"He who gives the ears the power to hear cannot be heard by the ears."

Kena Upanisad 1.8

In this way the idea that the Supreme can be described in words is refuted.

15 To this doubt the answer is given: When something cannot be described directly, it also cannot be described indirectly. Why is this not so? The two kinds of description are not different because both ultimately come within the realm of words. Therefore, as material things may be described directly, so by saying the Supreme cannot be described, an indirect description is given of the Supreme. In this way it is proved that the Supreme can be described.

Anuccheda 102

1 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the ultimate goal and conclusion of the Vedas is confirmed by the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.87.41):

"O Lord, because You are limitless even the great demigods cannot find where You end. Even You cannot find where You end. Within You the universes covered by ten and seven layers move as specks of dust tossed through the ether by the wheel of time. Rejecting everything that is not You, the Vedas become fruitful when they find You."

2 Here it is said that the Lord's transcendental forms and qualities are beyond description in two ways: 1. Because they are infinite and 2. Because they cannot be properly described.

The Personified Vedas describe the infinity of the Lord's form in the words: 'O Lord, because You are limitless (anantataya) even the great demigods, the rulers of Svargaloka and other planets, cannot find where You end.'" Why are You limitless (anantataya)? Because You have no end. Only atheists say You have limits.

Why are You all knowing or all powerful? The Personified Vedas says: "Because You have no limits (anantataya)." The Lord's all knowingness and all powerfulness are real. They are not an imagination, as the horn of a rabbit is. This is described in the Sruti-sastra"

"If someone says he fully understands the Lord of Vaikuntha, then he does not understand Him at all."

In this way the Lord's limitlessness is described.

The Personified Vedas then say: "Within You (yad-antara) the universes (anda-nicayah) covered by ten and seven layers (savarana), move (vanti) as specks of dust (rajamsi) tossed through the ether (khe) by the wheel of time (saha vayasa)." Because limitless universes wander within Him, the Lord is limitless and because He is the shelter of wonderful qualities, His qualities are also limitless.

3 This is also described in Sruti-sastra:

"O Gargi, the Supreme is above heaven, below the earth, and between heaven and earth. The Supreme is, always was, and always will be."

Brhad-aranyaka Upanisad 3.8.4

"The heroic glories of Lord Vishnu are countless as the specks of dust on the earth."

Sruti-sastra

4 The Personified Vedas continue (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.87.41) quoted in text 1): 'O Lord, the Vedas become fruitful when they find You.'" This means: "By describing how You are limitless, the Vedas find their conclusion in You." In the Sruti-sastra it is said that the bliss of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is hundreds of times greater than the bliss of the demigod Brahma (Taittiriya Upanisad 2.4.1):

"Words turn from the Supreme. One cannot attain Him with the mind's help. A wise man who understands the bliss of the Supreme Personality of Godhead never fears anything."

Because the Supreme Personality of Godhead is limitless, His bliss is beyond measuring and beyond the power of words to describe.

5 This is again described in Vedic literature:

"Even when wise men see great Mount Meru they still cannot understand it. In the same way the Supreme Personality of Godhead cannot be understood, described, or imagined."

6 By this explanation of how it is that the Supreme Personality of Godhead cannot be described, it is proved that the Supreme Personality of Godhead can be described.

The form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is directly described in these words (Taittiriya Upanisad 2.1.3):

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is eternal, full of knowledge, and free of all limits."

The Lord's transcendental qualities are described in these words (Svetasvatara Upanisad 6.8):

"The deeds of the Supreme Personality of Godhead display His limitless knowledge and power."

The Personified Vedas continue (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.87.41, quoted in text 1): 'Rejecting everything that is not You, the Vedas become fruitful when they find You.' This means: 'Rejecting the material world, they find their conclusion in You.'

7 That the Lord is the origin of all qualities is described in Bhagavad-gita (10.4-5) where He says:

"Intelligence, knowledge, freedom from doubt and delusion, forgiveness, truthfulness, control of the senses, control of the mind, happiness and distress, birth, death, fear, fearlessness, non violence, equanimity, satisfaction, austerity, charity, fame and infamy - all these various qualities of living beings are created by Me alone."*

It is also said in Vedic literature:

"Shyness, intelligence, fear and everything else, have all come from the heart of the Supreme."

However, material knowledge and other material things are not identical with the Supreme. This is described in Brhad-aranyaka Upanisad (4.4.22):

"This Supreme is not this. The Supreme is not that."

The idea that the material world is the Supreme is again refuted in these words (Svetasvatara Upanisad 6.8):

"All His senses are transcendental. Any one of His senses can perform the action of any other sense."*

The Supreme Personality of Godhead is again described in these words:

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is eternal and full of knowledge. He is free of all limits."

Taittiriya Upanisad 2.1.3

"The deeds of the Supreme Personality of Godhead display His limitless knowledge and power."

Svetasvatara Upanisad 6.8

8 Therefore the Lord's knowledge and qualities are different from matter. The Personified Vedas therefore say: 'Rejecting material knowledge and all other material things, the Vedas find their conclusion in You, O Lord.' Although, because He is beyond the range of the material intelligence, the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead cannot be described, nevertheless, He can actually be described to some extent. The Lord is beyond the realm of the material senses, as is confirmed by the statement 'O Lord, You are the tenth manifestation, beyond the world of matter.' By this statement alone it is seen that the Lord reveals His form only by His own wish. Because by His own wish He is seen in the pure heart of a devotee, the Vedas conclude that He has the power to appear only when He wishes.

9 That the Vedas are identical with the Supreme Personality of Godhead is described in the following words:

"The Vedas and the impersonal Brahman, are both My eternal forms."

The Supreme Personality of Godhead in Vedic literature

"The Vedas are identical with the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.3.43

"The Vedas are directly the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Narayana, and are self-born. This we have heard from Yamaraja."*

Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.1.40

10 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the conclusion of the Vedas is also confirmed in the following words:

"This beautiful Bhagavatam, compiled by the great sage Vyasadeva (in his maturity), is sufficient in itself for God realisation. What is the need of any other scripture? As soon as one attentively and submissively hears the message of Bhagavatam, by this culture of knowledge the Supreme Lord is established within his heart."*

Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.1.2

“The Supreme Personality of Godhead is described in the Upanisads.”

Brhad-aranyaka Upanisad 3.9.26

In this way the Vedas teach that the Supreme Personality of Godhead may be approached through the Upanisads. It is also said:

“Looking through the eye of the Vedas one may see the Supreme Personality of Godhead.”

11 Rejecting the darkness of matter, the Supreme Personality of Godhead personally appears by the means of His self-manifestation-potency, which is the Vedas. Even so, He still cannot be described by ordinary, material words. As the manifestation of the sun is the same as the sun’s reflection in a pot, so the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the master of all potencies, is also the same as His potencies, and then again He and His potencies are also different. In the same way He is described by words and then again words cannot describe Him.

12 This is described in the Garuda Purana:

“Because He is inconceivable, the Supreme cannot be described by words and He can be described by the words of the Vedas. He cannot be approached by logic and He can be approached by logic. He cannot be known and He can be known. This is the conclusion of the Smṛti.”

13 This is also described in the Śruti (Kena Upanisad 1.4):

“The Supreme is different from both the known and the unknown.”

Parasara Muni explains:

“We sages meditate on the Supreme Brahman, who is the abode of all potencies. When Lord Hari enters the ear, faith grows and sins perish.”

14 At this point someone may protest: ‘Is it not so that the Vedas are the self-manifest-potency of the Supreme Brahman, who is known as the Supreme Personality of Godhead? Since the Supreme Personality of Godhead is thus revealed through His potency the Vedas, how is the impersonal Brahman, which has no potencies, revealed?’

Our opinion is that the impersonal Brahman is revealed in the Vedas because it is one of the potencies of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is described in the following words (Śrīmad Bhagavatam 8.24.32):

15 “You will be thoroughly advised and favoured by Me, and because of your inquiries, everything about My glories, which are known as param brahma, will be manifest within your heart. Thus you will know everything about Me.”*

16 Because the impersonal Brahman and the Supreme Personality of Godhead are not different, the impersonal Brahman is not self-manifest. Here this is explained even in plain and ordinary words and it is also explained in the Śruti-saṅgita. All of this does not refute the existence of the Lord’s transcendental form, which is manifested by the Lord’s pastime potency and perceived by devotional service. What is the nature of the Lord’s pastime-potency? It is perfectly pure. This is described in the Suparna-śruti:

“They who smell the scents of matter do not smell the Supreme. They who see matter do not see the Supreme. They who hear matter do not hear the Supreme. They who know matter do not know the Supreme.”

The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by the Personified Vedas to the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Anuccheda 103

1 The potencies and the Lord who is the master of all potencies are one. The most important form of the master of potencies is Bhagavan, or the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The most important potency is Lakṣmī-devī, or the goddess of fortune. How many forms does limitless Lakṣmī-devī manifest? Śrīmad Bhagavatam (10.39.55) names some of Her expansions:

2 “The Lord was served by His potencies Śrī, Pustī, Gīrā, kanti, Kīrti, Tustī, Ilā, Jā, Vidyā, Avidyā, Śakti and Mayā.”

3 The word “Śakti” here means ‘Maha-lakṣmī’. “Śakti” here means the Lord’s first, great, internal potency. ‘Mayā’ here is His external potency. All these potencies beginning with Śrī may be divided into two groups: 1. Spiritual, and 2. Material. These groups are headed by Śrī and Mayā respectively. The first group, the personal opulence of the Lord, is headed by Śrī. It is not headed by Maha-lakṣmī because She is the root from which all (both spiritual and material) potencies come. This has already been explained. The second group, headed by Maya, is the opulence of the material universes.

4 The Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself describes the potency Shri in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.16.7):

"Because I am the servitor of My devotees, My lotus feet have become so sacred that they immediately wipe out all sin, and I have acquired such a disposition that the goddess Shri does not leave Me, even though I have no attachment for her and others praise her beauty and observe sacred vows to secure from her a slight favour."*

At the end of the Fourth canto (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.31.22) Shri Narada describes goddess Shri in these words:

5 "Although the Supreme Personality of Godhead is self-sufficient, He becomes dependent on His devotees. He does not care for the goddess Shri, nor for the kings and demigods who are after the favours of goddess Shri. Where is that person who is actually grateful and will not worship the Personality of Godhead?"*

6 This verse explains that Shri is the patroness of many human kings and others who offer prayers to her. Cursed by Durvasa Muni, she appeared in the three material worlds, where she was born from the ocean of milk and with a glance became the beloved of the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

The material potencies (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.39.55, quoted in text 2) are next described. Ila is the earth, or also the pastime potency. Among the spiritual potencies, Vidya, or knowledge, is the potency that enlightens one about the truth. It is also named Samvit. The pastime potency is divided into knowledge and ignorance potencies. The ignorance potency, which makes one forget the Supreme Lord's powers and opulences, brought the bliss of ecstatic love to Lord Krishna's mother (Yasoda). In the same way it also bewildered the gopis, as is described in the Gopala-tapani Upanisad. This will be described in detail at the proper time. The material ignorance potency makes the conditioned souls in the material world forget the Supreme Personality of Godhead. It covers their true knowledge.

7 From the pastime potency the potencies Sandhini, Samvit, Hladini, Bhakty-adhara-sakti, Murti, Vimala, Jaya, Yoga, Prahvi, Isana, Anugraha, and others are manifested. Sandhini is the potency of eternal existence. Jaya is the potency of glory. Yoga is the potency of Yogamaya. Samvit is the potency of knowledge and ignorance and it is also the potency of pure transcendence. Prahvi is the potency of wonderful, limitless ability. Isana is the potency that makes everything possible. These and other potencies are manifest from the pastime potency. Because the Maya potency is manifest from the external potency, it is not counted among them. Part of the external potency, it remains far away from the Supreme Lord's purusa-avatara.

In the Tenth Canto, Thirty seventh Chapter (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.37.22-23) Narada prays to Shri Krishna:

8 "My Lord, let me offer my respectful obeisances unto Your lotus feet. You are situated completely in the transcendental position in perfect knowledge and bliss. You are complete in Yourself and are beyond all desires. By exhibiting Your internal potency, You have set up the influence of maya. Your unlimited potency cannot even be measured by anyone.*

9 "My dear Lord, You are the supreme controller. You are under Your own internal potency, and it is simply vain to think that You are dependent on any of Your creations. You have taken birth in the Yadu dynasty, or the Vrsni dynasty. Your advent on the surface of the earth in Your original form of eternal blissful knowledge is Your own pastime. You are not dependent on anything but Yourself; therefore I offer my respectful obeisances unto Your lotus feet."*

10 An explanation of these two verses follows. The words 'visuddha-vijnana-ghananm' mean 'the Supreme Truth, whose transcendental form is full of pure knowledge'. 'Sva-samsthaya' means either 'with Your transcendental form' or 'with Your own potencies'. 'Samapta' means either 'eternally perfect' or 'completely full'. 'Sarvartha' means 'all opulences'. 'Amogha-vanchitam' means 'never cheated by insignificant, useless material desires.' Thinking someone might consider the Lord cheated in this way, Narada spoke the next words (which begin with 'sva-tejasa'). 'Sva-tejasa' means 'by the power of Your internal potency'. 'Nitya-nivrtta-maya-guna-pravaham' Means 'far away from the modes of material nature.'

11 The words 'atma-mayaya' mean that the Lord associates with His internal potency, not with His potency of the modes of material nature. 'Bhagavantam imahi' means 'We take shelter of the Supreme Personality of Godhead'. The second verse concludes: 'I offer my respectful obeisances to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is named Shri Krishna and who by His plenary portion is present as the Supersoul in everyone's heart.'

12 What does the word 'isvaram' mean here? The verse says 'svasrayam atma-mayaya', which means 'He is not dependent on His maya potency, which creates various material forms for the individual spirit souls', or it may also mean 'He is the shelter of the maya potency, which creates various material forms for the individual spirit souls.'

What does the word 'tvam' (You) mean here? It means 'Now that You have appeared in this world, Your plenary expansion who acts as the controller of maya has entered within You. At the same time, in order to enjoy many pastimes (kridartham) with Your potencies and because You love Your devotees, You have appeared in a humanlike form (abhyattam manusya-vigraham).'

The humanlike form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is described in Shrimad Bhagavatam:

"The form of the Supreme Brahman is like a human form."

13 The verse continues: 'dhuryam yadu-vrsni-satvatam' (You are the leader of the Yadus, Vrsnis and Satvatas. This shows that the Lord is full of love for His eternal associates.

In the verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.39.55) quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda (text 2), Pusti and the other potencies are all partial expansions of the potency Shri. 'Vidya' there means 'knowledge' and the following word 'avidya' may also be properly understood as 'avidya' (with a long initial a), in which case it means 'the great knowledge'. The great knowledge here is pure devotional service. This is described in Bhagavad-gita (9.2):

"This knowledge (of devotional service) is the king of education, the most secret of all secrets. It is the purest knowledge, and because it gives direct perception of the self by realisation, it is the perfection of religion. It is everlasting, and it is joyfully performed."*

14 In Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.39.55, quoted in text 2, the word 'maya' means 'the external potency'. The spiritual potencies headed by Shri should be understood to be different from the external potency. The other potencies are like the external potency. In the pure description of the Lord it is said that the Lord's internal potency is divided into three according to the Lord's nature of being eternal, full of knowledge, and full of bliss. This is described in Vishnu Purana (1.12.69) where Shri Dhruva says:

15 "O Lord, You are the support of everything. The three attributes hladini, sandhini and samvit exist in You as one spiritual energy. But the material modes, which cause happiness, misery, and mixtures of the two, do not exist in You, for You have no material qualities."*

16 "The word 'hladini' means 'the Lord's internal potency that gives bliss'. 'Tvayi sarva-samsthitau' means 'Everything rests in You. It does not rest in the individual living entities (jivas).' The verse says: 'The three modes of material nature do not stay in You.' These modes are described in the words 'hlada-tapa-kari misra'. 'Hlada' means 'the material mode of goodness, which pleases the heart'. 'Tapa-kari' means 'the material mode of ignorance, which removes all happiness'. 'Misra' means 'the material mode of passion, which gives a mixture of happiness and misery.' The verse here says that these three material modes do not exist in the Lord (guna-varjite).

'In the Sarvajna-sukti it is said:

17 "The Supreme Personality of Godhead, the Supreme Controller, is always full of transcendental bliss and is accompanied by the potencies hladini and samvit. The conditioned soul, however, is always covered by ignorance and embarrassed by the threefold miseries of life. Thus he is a treasure-house of all kinds of tribulations".*

18 In sequence of importance, with the last the most important, these three potencies are listed sandhini, samvit and hladini.

As all pots are made by some potter, so everything that is has a cause somewhere. That the Supreme Personality of Godhead is eternal and is not preceded by a cause that created Him is confirmed by the Sruti-sastra (Chandogya Upanisad 6.2.1):

"O gentle student, before this material world was created, the eternal Supreme existed."

That the Supreme Personality of Godhead exists in all places, times and circumstances, and gives eternal life to others, is effected by His sandhini potency.

That the Supreme Personality of Godhead knows everything and enlightens others is effected by His samvit potency.

That the Supreme Personality of Godhead experiences bliss and gives bliss to others is effected by His hladini potency, which is the best of all.

19 In this way it is proved that the Lord's internal potency is divided in three. The potency by which the Lord personally appears in His transcendental form is called Visuddha-sattva, or the potency of pure goodness. The Lord does not appear in any way other than through this potency, just as He does not know or teach in any way other than through His samvit potency. The Visuddha-sattva potency is called pure because it is untouched by the material potency maya. That the Visuddha-sattva potency is beyond the realm of matter is explained in these words spoken by Markandeya to Narayana Rsi (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.8.45-46):

20 "O my Lord, O supreme friend of the conditioned soul, although for the creation, maintenance and annihilation of this world You accept the modes of goodness, passion and ignorance, which constitute Your illusory potency, You specifically employ the mode of goodness to liberate the conditioned souls. The other two modes simply bring them suffering, illusion and fear."

21 "O Lord, because fearlessness, spiritual happiness and the kingdom of God are all achieved through the mode of pure goodness, Your devotees consider this mode, but never passion and ignorance, to be a direct manifestation of You, the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Intelligent persons thus worship Your beloved transcendental form, composed of pure goodness, along with the spiritual forms of Your pure devotees."

22 An explanation of these two verses follows. These verses mean: 'O Lord (isa), the modes of goodness, passion and ignorance are the potencies You employ in Your pastimes?' How is that? "They are employed for the creation, maintenance and annihilation of the material world." The mode of goodness (sattvamayi) is employed to bring peace (prasantyai) and great happiness. The other two modes, passion and ignorance, are not employed for that purpose. They do not bring peace and they are useless for advancement in service of the Lord. Therefore the words 'vyasana-moha-bhiyah' (suffering, illusion and fear) are used here to describe their employment.

The second verse says: 'O Lord (bhagavan), therefore (tasmāt) intelligent persons (kusalah) serve (bhajanti) Your transcendental form of Lord Vishnu, which is composed of pure goodness. In the same way they also worship the forms of the individual living entities such as Svayambhuva Manu and others who are Your pure devotees, and whose forms are also composed of pure goodness.' They never worship the forms of Brahma, Siva or the other demigods. Why? Because Your form brings peace to the world (loka-prasantyai) it is very dear to them.

23 At this point the Supreme Personality of Godhead may protest: 'In this way you have proved that My form is a manifestation of the mode of goodness. Why do you insist, then, that it is not a product of the illusory potency, maya?'

The reply is given: "O Lord, because fearlessness, spiritual happiness, and the kingdom of God, Vaikunthaloka, are all achieved through the mode of pure goodness, Your devotees consider this mode to be a direct manifestation of You, the Supreme Personality of Godhead." From this it should be understood that the mode of goodness mentioned here is the spiritual potency by which the Lord manifests His form according to His own wish. The goodness here is not a product of matter. This is described by Lord Siva in the following words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.3.23):

24 "I am always engaged in meditating on Lord Vasudeva in pure Krishna consciousness (suddha-sattva, or pure goodness). Krishna consciousness is always pure consciousness (goodness), in which the Supreme Personality of Godhead, known as Vasudeva, is revealed without any covering."*

25 The reason the Supreme Personality of Godhead cannot be understood by the senses of mind is here given: He cannot be understood through the material modes of nature. The impure mode of goodness is material in nature and the Lord cannot be understood through it. The pure mode of goodness, however, is the Lord's spiritual potency, and by its agency one can attain the Lord.

26 The words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.8.46 quoted in Text 21) 'loko yato bhayam utatma-sukham' (fearlessness, spiritual happiness, and the kingdom of God are all achieved through the mode of pure goodness) proof that pure goodness is a spiritual potency of the Lord. That the Lord's form must be manifest by His spiritual potency and cannot be manifest by a material mode of nature is confirmed in Shrimad Bhagavatam (10.3.24):

"My dear Lord, there are different Vedas, some of which describe You as unperceivable through words and the mind. Yet You are the origin of the entire cosmic manifestation. You are Brahman, the greatest of everything, full of effulgence like the sun. You have no material cause, You are free from change and deviation, and You have no material desires. Thus the Vedas say that You are the substance. Therefore, my Lord, You are directly the origin of all Vedic statements, and by understanding You, one gradually understands everything. You are different from the light of Brahman and Paramatma, yet You are not different from them. Everything emanates from You. Indeed, You are the cause of all causes, Lord Vishnu, the light of all transcendental knowledge."*

In Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.8.46 the word 'abhayam' means 'fearlessness' and 'anyat', although one word, means the two words 'passion and ignorance.' In the previous verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.8.45) the word 'anya' also meant both 'passion and ignorance'. In this way the goodness that manifests the Lord's form is different from material goodness. This is also explained in Shrimad Bhagavatam (11.4.4):

"The form of the Lord then entered the three worlds. From His senses the working and knowledge acquiring senses of the embodied beings became manifest. From His potency their knowledge became manifest. From His breathing their actions and the powers of their bodies and senses became manifest. With His three modes headed by goodness, He creates, maintains and destroys the worlds."

The words 'jnanam svatah' are explained by Shrila Shridhara Svami in these words:

"These words mean that from the Lord's own potency of pure goodness the knowledge of the embodied beings is manifest."

27 This is also described at the end of Brahma's prayers (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.11.60):

"These descriptions of Lord Krishna's pastimes with His cowherd boys, His eating with them on the bank of the Yamuna, and Lord Brahma's prayers unto Him, are all transcendental subject matters. Anyone who hears, recites, or chants them surely gets all his spiritual desires fulfilled."*

Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"The word 'vyaktetarat' here means 'transcendental pure goodness, which is different from the world of matter.'"

This is also described by Maharaja Bharata (Shrimad Bhagavatam 5.7.14):

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is situated in pure goodness. He illuminates the entire universe and bestows all benedictions upon His devotees. The Lord has created this universe from His own spiritual potency. According to His desire, the Lord entered this universe as the Supersoul, and by virtue of His different potencies, He is maintaining all living entities desiring material enjoyment. Let me offer my respectful obeisances unto the Lord, who is the giver of intelligence."*

Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"The words 'paro rajah' mean 'beyond the material mode of passion, or situated in the pure mode of goodness.'"

The Vedic literatures explain that the material modes of nature, which begin with material goodness, affect the individual living entity (jiva), but they have no affect on the Supreme Personality of Godhead (isa). This is confirmed by the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.25.12):

"The material modes of goodness, passion and ignorance influence the individual living entities, but they have no influence on Me."

28 The Lord again explains in Shri Bhagavad-gita Upanisad (7.12-14):

"Know that all states of being - be they of goodness, passion or ignorance - are manifested by My energy. I am, in one sense, everything, but I am independent. I am not under the modes of material nature, for they, on the contrary, are within Me.*

29 "Deluded by the three modes (goodness, passion and ignorance), the whole world does not know Me, who am above the modes and inexhaustible.*

30 "This divine energy of Mine, consisting of the three modes of material nature, is difficult to overcome. But those who have surrendered unto Me can easily cross beyond it."*

31 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead is beyond the modes of material nature is also described in the Tenth Canto (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.88.5):

"Shri Hari, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, is situated beyond the range of material nature; therefore He is the supreme transcendental person. He can see everything inside and outside; therefore He is the supreme overseer of all living entities. If someone takes shelter at His lotus feet and worships Him, he also attains a transcendental position."*

32 This is also described in Shri Vishnu Purana (1.9.43):

"May the Supreme Personality of Godhead, in whom material goodness and the other material modes are never present, and who is the first of all who are pure, be pleased with me."

33 By the use of the adjective 'prakṛta' (material) here the existence of other, non material modes is implied. In the word 'prasīdatu' (may He be pleased), the other, non material mode is the source of the Lord's pleasure. This other mode is pure goodness. It is described in Shri Vishnu Purana (1.12.69, quoted in text 15):

"O Lord, You are the support of everything. The three attributes hlādinī, sandhinī, and samvit exist in You as one spiritual energy. But the material modes, which cause happiness, misery and mixtures of the two, do not exist in You, for You have no material qualities."*

34 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead is beyond the touch of the material modes of nature is also described in the Tenth canto, where Indra, the king of the demigods, says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.27.4):

"My dear Lord, You are transcendental to all the material qualities. Your transcendental position is viśuddha-sattva, which is above the platform of the material modes and Your transcendental abode is above the disturbance of the material qualities. Your name, fame, form, quality and pastimes are all beyond the material nature. Your abode is accessible only for one who undergoes severe austerities and penances and is completely freed from the onslaught of material qualities like passion and ignorance. If someone thinks that when You come within this material world You accept the modes of material nature, he is mistaken. The webs of the material qualities are never able to touch You, and You certainly do not accept them when You are present within this world. Your Lordship is never conditioned by the laws of material nature."*

35 An explanation of this verse follows. The word 'dharma' means 'the Lord's internal potency', and the Lord's purity is described by the two adjectives 'dhvasta-rajasa-tamaskam' (free from passion and ignorance) and 'tapomayam' (consisting of transcendental knowledge attained by performing austerities). 'Tapah' here means 'transcendental knowledge attained by performing austerities.' This is described in the Sruti-sastra:

"By performing austerities the sage attained transcendental knowledge."

The meaning is that knowledge attained by performing austerities is free from even the slightest touch of matter. It is spiritual knowledge. It is different from the material mode of goodness. Therefore this verse explains: 'O Lord, material goodness and the other material modes do not exist within You. You do not accept them.'

36 The following statement (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.2.34-35) of the demigods headed by Brahma is an accurate description of the Lord's transcendental position:

"O Lord, during the time of maintenance You manifest several incarnations, all with transcendental bodies, beyond the material modes of nature. When You appear in this way, You bestow all good fortune upon the living entities by teaching them to perform Vedic activities such as ritualistic ceremonies, mystic yoga, austerities, penances, and ultimately samādhi, ecstatic absorption in thoughts of You. Thus You are worshipped by the Vedic principles.*

37 "O Lord, cause of all causes, if Your transcendental body were not beyond the modes of material nature, one could not understand the difference between matter and transcendence. Only by Your presence can one understand the transcendental nature of Your Lordship, who are the controller of material nature. Your transcendental nature is very difficult to understand unless one is influenced by the presence of Your transcendental form."*

38 An explanation of these verses follows. In these words the Lord's form is described as not different from the mode of goodness. How is this mode of goodness described? It is pure goodness (sattva viśuddham). It is described as pure because it is completely free from the slightest touch or mixture of the material modes of passion or ignorance. It is the Lord's internal potency. It is supremely pure because it is not touched by even the smallest particle of matter.

39 Why does the Supreme Personality of Godhead come (srayate) to this world? So the embodied souls (saririnam) may learn to fix their thoughts on His lotus feet and, most important, so the devotees may taste the happiness of devotional service. This is described by Shrimati Kunti-devi in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 1.8.20):

“O Lord, You Yourself descend to propagate the transcendental science of devotional service unto the hearts of the advanced transcendentalists and mental speculators, who are purified by being able to discriminate between matter and spirit.”*

40 What is the nature of the Lord’s form? The answer is ‘sreya-upayanam’, which means ‘it fulfils all the goals of life’. This means it is full of eternal, limitless, spiritual bliss. This means: ‘O Lord, any idea that You and Your form are different is only a playful figure of speech. That idea is not true.’ For this reason the people worship Your transcendental form (tavarhanam). How do they worship You? The answer is given in the words ‘veda-kriya-yoga-tapah-samadhibhih’ (by the Vedic principles, ritualistic ceremonies, mystic yoga, austerities, penances, and ultimately samadhi, ecstatic absorption in thoughts of You).

41 The next verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.2.35, quoted in text 37) means: ‘O Lord, cause of all causes (dhatah), if (cet) the knowledge that reveals You, the potency by which You manifest Yourself, were not a manifestation of pure goodness, then how could it, by revealing You, purify (marjanam) the ignorance of thinking You are different from Your form (ajnana-bhida)?’ The conclusion, therefore, is that Your form is not at all material.

At this point someone may protest: ‘My perception is limited by the mode of material goodness. I cannot perceive higher than that. How, then, will I be able to perceive You?’

The answer is given in the words ‘guna-prakasair anumiyate bhavann’, which mean ‘O Lord, through the material modes of nature You may only be understood theoretically. With their help You cannot be seen directly.’ That is the meaning.

42 Or the phrase ‘vijnanam ajnanbhidapamarjanam guna-prakasair anumiyate bhavan’ may mean ‘If the ignorance of You is not removed, if there is only the help of the material modes, You can be understood only theoretically.’ This means that only when His personal potency of pure goodness is manifest can the Lord be seen directly. The demigods then proceed to describe two ways in which the Lord may be known theoretically. They say: ‘prakasate yasya ca yena va gunah’ (You can be understood by the qualities manifest from You or by the qualities manifest by You). Because You do have an eternal relationship with the external material modes beginning with the mode of material goodness, Your nature can be inferred from the material modes themselves as the sun’s rising can be inferred from the red light of dawn and fire can be inferred from the presence of smoke. In both (ways where You are inferred from the material modes) You are not manifest directly. In this way it is proved that You directly appear only through the potency of the non material mode of pure goodness. They who understand that the spiritual mode of pure goodness is free of any trace of the material modes of passion and ignorance, and who know that the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is a manifestation of pure goodness, become free from any touch of the mode of passion because they are by nature peaceful, they are always neutral, they are unagitated, they are situated in knowledge of the truth, and they do not speculate on the nature of the Lord, guessing it to be other than it is.

43 In the mode of goodness what is otherwise unknown is seen, in the mode of passion a great variety is seen, and in the mode of ignorance that variety disappears. In the mode of goodness one becomes neutral to the comings and goings of matter, in the mode of passion one tries to help others, and in the mode of ignorance one tries to harm others. In this way there is material creation, maintenance, and annihilation, and there is also indifference to all material happenings. If the slightest trace of passion were present, the word ‘pure’ in ‘pure goodness’ would become meaningless. In the state of pure goodness what is the use of stirring up the cauldron of passions?

44 If visuddha-sattva (pure goodness) is present, then sandhini-sakti’s partial expansion, adhara-sakti (maintenance), samvit-sakti’s partial expansion, atma-vidya (spiritual knowledge), and hladini-sakti’s potency, guhya-vidya (confidential knowledge) are also present. Pure goodness is the combined form of these three potencies. By adhara-sakti the abode of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is manifested. This is described in Shrimad Bhagavatam (12.8.46):

"The great devotees know that the transcendental abode of the Lord is manifested from pure goodness."

Atma-vidya (spiritual knowledge) consists of two parts: knowledge, and the actions that lead on to knowledge, and it eventually leads to the knowledge of service to the Lord. Guhya-vidya (confidential knowledge) consists of two parts: devotional service and the actions that lead one to devotional service, and it eventually leads to love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

45 This is clearly described in the prayers to goddess Laksmi in the Shri Vishnu Purana (1.9.118):

"O beautiful goddess, with your potencies of yajna-vidya, maha-vidya, guhya-vidya, and atma-vidya, you give various kinds of fruitive results and various kinds of liberation."

46 In this verse 'yajna-vidya' means 'fruitive actions', 'maha-vidya' means 'astanga-yoga', 'guhya-vidya' means 'devotional service', and 'atma-vidya' means 'speculative knowledge'. The verse means: 'Because you are the shelter of all these, you give various kinds of liberation and various kinds of fruitive results.' That is the meaning.

47 In the mode of pure goodness (visuddha-sattva) the Vasudeva form of the Lord is manifest. Lord Siva describes this in the Fourth canto, Chapter three (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.3.23):

"I am always engaged in meditating on Lord Vasudeva in pure Krishna consciousness. Krishna consciousness is always pure consciousness (visuddha-sattva), in which the Supreme Personality of Godhead, known as Vasudeva, is revealed without any covering."*

48 An explanation of this verse follows. The word 'visuddha' here means 'because it is the Lord's internal potency it is free from even the slightest touch of matter', and that is why the adjective 'suddha' (pure) is used here. This visuddha-sattva is here called 'vasudeva-sattva'. Why is it called 'vasudeva-sattva'? Because the Supreme Personality of Godhead (puman) Lord Vasudeva is manifest (iyate) because of it (yat).

49 Firstly the word 'sattva' is used here because this potency manifests the Supreme Truth and is thus like the 'sattva' (goodness) that enables the unseen to be seen in this world. Secondly, the word 'vasudeva' is used because this potency enables one to understand the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Lord Vasudeva. These two words are then put together into 'vasudeva-sattva', which is the same as 'visuddha-sattva' (pure goodness).

The word 'vasu' means either 'that which gives a home to the Supreme Personality of Godhead' or 'the home in which the Supreme Personality of Godhead resides.' 'Deva' means either 'He who enjoys transcendental pastimes' or 'He who shines with great splendour.' These two words are then combined in the word 'vasudeva'. Another meaning of 'vasu' is 'wealth'. The Lord Himself says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 9.11.39): "The principles of religion are the real wealth desired by men." Therefore because the Supreme Personality of Godhead either possesses or causes other to possess the wealth (vasu) that is religion, He is known as 'vasudeva'. In this way 'vasudeva-sattva' is the same as 'visuddha-sattva' (pure goodness).

50 The knowledge by which one understands the effulgent form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is described by the Lord Himself in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 11.11.25-24):

"Absolute knowledge is in the mode of goodness, knowledge based on duality is in the mode of passion, and foolish, materialistic knowledge is in the mode of ignorance. Knowledge based upon me, however, is understood to be transcendental."

51 In this verse and in many other places in the scriptures, knowledge of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is said to be beyond the touch of the modes of material nature. In this way the word 'visuddha' (pure) should be understood. This is the nature of the internal potency by which the Supreme Personality of Godhead appears according to His own wish. 'Sattva' in this compound word may be understood to be either in the locative case (where Lord Vasudeva is manifest) or the instrumental case (by which Lord Vasudeva is manifest).

52 Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.3.23 (quoted in text 47) clearly describes the Lord's internal potency. The word 'apavrtah' there means 'is revealed without any covering'. If material goodness is manifest it is only a reflection of pure goodness. It is like the reflection of a face in a mirror. The reflection is the 'covered' aspect of the original face. That is the meaning here. Shrimad Bhagavatam explains: 'With all my (me) heart (manasa) I meditate (vidhiyate) on the Supreme Personality of Godhead (bhagavan), who is eternally manifested in the (tasmin) mode of pure goodness (sattve).' The conclusion is that when the heart is situated in pure goodness it is able to meditate on the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

53 At this point someone may protest: "If the Supreme Personality of Godhead can thus be meditated on with the mind, what is the need of the mode of pure goodness?"

Shrimad Bhagavatam answers with the words 'hy adhoksajah'. 'Hy' means 'because' and 'adhoksajah' means 'He is beyond the reach of the senses.' This means the Lord cannot be understood by the material senses.

In other readings the word 'manasa' (by the mind) is replaced by 'namasa' (with respectful obeisances) and 'hi' (because) is replaced by the preposition 'anu'. The sentence then becomes: 'I offer respectful obeisances and serve Lord Vasudeva, who is manifest by His manifesting potency of pure goodness.' The Supreme Personality of Godhead is not manifest in any way other than through this potency. That is the meaning. Whether the Lord appears before us or remains invisible, we serve Him by bowing down to offer our respects. That is the meaning of this passage.

54 The potency of pure goodness, which manifests the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, appears as 'murti' and 'vasudeva'. The 'vasudeva' portion is Maharaja Vasudeva and the 'murti' portion is his religious wife. The potencies led by Sraddha and Pusti are her sisters.

55 Shrimad Bhagavatam (1.3.9) explains:

"In the fourth incarnation, the Lord became Nara and Narayana, the twin sons of the wife of King Dharma."*

The word 'kala' here means 'potency'. Because it is seen that the Lord's incarnations named Nara-Narayana appeared there, this potency should be understood to be the potency of pure goodness, known as suddha-sattva or vasudeva-sattva. It is here named 'murti'.

56 After a description of Sraddha and many others, Murti is mentioned in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 4.1.51):

"Murti, a reservoir of all respectable qualities, gave birth to Shri Nara-Narayana, the Supreme Personality of Godhead."*

57 The verse says: 'Because the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is a reservoir (utpatti) of all (sarva) respectable qualities (guna), appeared within her, she gave birth to Them both.' Because the Supreme Personality of Godhead, whose form (murti) is eternal and full of knowledge and bliss, appeared within her, she is named Murti. In the same way Maharaja Vasudeva is so named because the Lord appears in the potency of vasudeva-sattva (pure goodness).

58 Maharaja Vasudeva is also described in the Ninth Canto (Shrimad Bhagavatam 9.24.30):

"When Vasudeva was born, the demigods from the heavenly kingdom sounded kettledrums (anakadundubhi). Therefore Vasudeva, who provided the proper place for the appearance of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Krishna, was also known as Anakadundubhi."*

59 If Maharaja Vasudeva were not the place where the Supreme Personality of Godhead appeared (hareh sthanam), then his name 'Vasudeva' would have no meaning.

In this way it should be understood that the Supreme Personality of Godhead appears by the employment of His potency of pure goodness, which contains within it the potencies beginning with hladini and the potencies beginning with Shri. These potencies may be divided in three parts: 1. The potency of the opulence of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, 2. The potency that out of kindness gives opulence to others, and 3. The partial expansion of the Lord's opulence. These potencies also may be divided into two parts: 1. The potency by which the Supreme Personality of Godhead appears as the formless Brahman, and 2. The potency by which He displays His many transcendental forms. This is the explanation. The verse quoted at the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Shrila Sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 104

1 Goddess Laksmi is the Lord's limitless internal potency. Her form is a partial expansion of the Lord's form. This is described in these words (Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.11.20):

"Goddess Laksmi is the constant companion of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. She is a direct expansion of Lord Hari."

2 Shrila Shridhara Svami comments:

"The constant companion here is the Lord's own potency. The reason for this is given in the words:

'saksad atmanah' (directly manifested from Lord Hari). Because the Lord's form is perfectly spiritual and because she is not different from His form, she is His internal potency.

3 The word 'saksat' (directly) here confirms that goddess Laksmi is not the same as the illusory potency maya. This is confirmed by the following description of the illusory potency (Shrimad Bhagavatam 2.5.13):

"The illusory energy of the Lord is ashamed to be seen by the Lord."

4 That Goddess Laksmi is the Lord's constant companion is described in the hayasirsa-pancaratra:

"Lord Hari is the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Goddess Laksmi is His potency. Goddess Laksmi is female. Lord Kesava is male. Goddess Laksmi is never away from Lord Vishnu. Lord Hari is never away from Goddess Laksmi."

5 This is also described in Vishnu Purana (1.8.15):

"Goddess Laksmi, the mother of the universe, is the constant companion of Lord Vishnu. O best of brahmanas, as Lord Vishnu is all pervading, so is she."

6 The Vishnu Purana (1.9.40) also explains:

"As Lord Janardana (Krishna), who is the master of the universe and the ruler of the demigods appears in different incarnations, so does His companion Goddess Laksmi."

7 That Laksmi-devi's form is spiritual is described in the Skanda Purana:

"Material nature is eternal. Laksmi-devi, the spiritual potency, which takes shelter of Lord Vishnu, is also eternal. Lord Hari, who possesses all virtues, is also eternal. The wise say these three are eternal."

8 The Vishnu Purana (1.9.44-45) also explains:

"May supremely pure Lord Hari, whose spiritual potency cannot be bound by the string of time knotted with seconds, minutes and hours, be pleased with me.

"May Lord Vishnu, who is said to be the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is the Supersoul present in all embodied beings, and who is served by Laksmi-devi, be pleased with us."

9 Shрила Shridhara Svami comments:

"Because time controls only the material realm and because the Lord's eternal potency Laksmi-devi is not different from the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Laksmi-devi is not under the control of time, which is like a string made of seconds, minutes, and hours. That is the meaning here. This is so because she is not different from the form of the supremely pure Personality of Godhead.

"At this point someone may protest: If Laksmi-devi is not different from Lord Vishnu, then why is He said to be her husband?

"The answer is given in the word 'paramesah'. 'Para' means 'supreme', 'ma' means 'mother', and 'isah' means 'husband'. Therefore 'paramesah' (para+ma+isah) means 'the husband of the supreme mother, Laksmi-devi'. The words 'suddho py upacaratah' (served by Laksmi-devi) are spoken with the intention to explain that although Laksmi-devi is, in some ways, not different from Lord Vishnu, she is also, in other ways, different from Him. The first two lines of this stanza are two separate clauses. That is why the relative pronoun 'yah' (who) is used twice.'

10 That Laksmi-devi is both different from and not different from the Lord may be inferred from these words, where the demigod Brahma prays (Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.9.23):

"The Supreme Lord, the Personality of Godhead, is always the benefactor of the surrendered souls. His activities are always enacted through His internal potency, Rama, or the goddess of fortune. I pray only to engage in His service in the creation of the material world, and I pray that I not be materially affected by my works, for thus I may be able to give up the false prestige of being the creator."*

11 It is also said (Shrimad Bhagavatam 7.9.2):

"The goddess of fortune, Laksmiji, was requested to go before the Lord by all the demigods present, who because of fear could not do so. But even she had never seen such a wonderful and extraordinary form of the Lord, and thus she could not approach Him."*

12 Here Laksmi-devi was frightened because the form of Lord Nrsimadeva had never been seen or heard of before.

In this way Shrimad Bhagavatam 12.11.20 (quoted in text 1) has been explained.

The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Shрила Suta Gosvami.

Anuccheda 105

1 He whose form is eternal and full of knowledge and bliss, who possesses inconceivable, wonderful, unlimited potencies, who is religion and the most religious person, who is not different from anything and who is different from everything in many ways, who has no form and who has form, who is all-pervading and localised, who is an ocean of limitless mutually contradictory qualities, who by His own wish alone manifests His transcendental form which is completely different from the gross and subtle elements of the material world, whose left side is decorated by the present of His personal potency Laksmi-devi whose transcendental form is like His, whose transcendental form is splendidly manifested among His splendid associates in His transcendental abodes, whose potencies, wonderful playful qualities, pastimes, and features fill the great devotees with wonder, who is identical with the impersonal Brahman, who is the shelter and sustenance of the marginal potency that is the individual spirit souls, and whose abhasa-sakti manifests limitless material universes, is known as Bhagavan (the Supreme Personality of Godhead) by the wise.

2 The Supreme Personality of Godhead is different from matter. The materialists cannot see, understand, or imagine Him. He acts to create faith in the wise, who can understand Him. That he cannot be understood by the foolish, and that He can only be known through the revelation of the Vedas, is described in the following words, where the Personified Vedas says (Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.87.24):

3 "Who, recently born and soon to die in this world, can know the Lord, who existed before all and who fathered the great sage Brahma and all the demigods great and small? When the Lord lies down and withdraws everything within Himself, there is no gross or subtle matter, material bodies made of the two, time or scripture."

4 In this verse 'bata' means 'O Lord', 'iha' means 'in this material world', 'agrasaram' means 'You, who were perfect in the beginning', 'avara-janma-layah' means 'who were recently born and are about to die', and 'Veda' means 'knows'.

The verse says: "Which of these persons can know You?" The Personified Vedas say the Supreme Personality of Godhead was perfect in the beginning, and the others, who are all recently born, are not able to understand Him. The words 'yata udagad rsih' means 'from You Brahma was born'. 'Yam anu ubhaye' means 'After Brahma was born the demigods and other individual living entities were born.' All these living entities are recently born.

The Personified Vedas says: "When You take back (avakrsya) to the spiritual world the Vedas (sastran), which teach about You, when You also lie down (sayita), closing Your eyes to the activities of the material universe, then for the individual spirit souls who lie down with you there is no longer any way to understand You. At that time there are no gross material elements (sat) beginning with ether, no subtle material elements (asat) beginning with mahat-tattva, no material bodies made of gross and subtle material elements (ubhayam), and no force of time (kala-jvarah). In this way there are also no senses, no living force, and no other instruments of material life."

At the time of creation the Vedas reveal the truth of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, but the living entities, because they are recently born, born after the moment of creation, because they are bewildered by the presence of material bodies and various material designations, and because they are polluted by the power of time, cannot understand that revelation of the Supreme.

The Vedas say: "At the time of cosmic devastation everything enters within You. At that time, because the Vedas have then disappeared, and because they are overcome with the sleep of ignorance, the living entities also cannot understand You."

This is described in the Sruti-sastra in these words:

5 "O Lord, when the living entities enter within You at the time of cosmic devastation they cannot understand anything about You."

Sruti-sastra

"Words turn from the Supreme Personality of Godhead, for they cannot describe Him. With the material mind one can never attain Him."

Taittiriya Upanisad 2.4

"Who understands the Supreme? In this world who can describe Him?"

Sruti-sastra

"From what has everything come? Who has created this world? The demigods were recently born.

Who knows from whence they have come?"

Sruti-sastra

6 "Although fixed in His abode, the Personality of godhead is swifter than the mind and can overcome all others running. The powerful demigods cannot approach Him. Although in one place, He controls those who supply the air and rain. He surpasses all in excellence."*

Isa Upanisad 8

"Neither the eyes, nor the ears, nor logic, nor memory, but only the Vedas can teach us about the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

Sruti-sastra

Anuccheda 106

1 That the ancient wise sages can directly understand and see the Supreme by serving Him with devotion will be described in three verses from Shrimad Bhagavatam (9.8.21-23) quoted in this anuccheda. The first of these verses (Shrimad Bhagavatam 9.8.21) says:

"My Lord, even Lord Brahma is to this very day unable to understand Your position, which is far beyond himself, either by meditation or by mental speculation. So what to speak of others like us, who have been created by Brahma in various forms as demigods, animals, human beings, birds and beasts? We are completely in ignorance. Therefore, how can we know You, who are the Transcendence?"*

2 This verse states: "Even Lord Brahma (ajanah) is to the very day (adya) unable to see (na pasyati) You (tvam) or to understand (na budhyate) Your position (tvam)." Why can he not see or understand You? The answer is given in the word 'samadhi-yuktibhih', which means 'You cannot be understood by meditation or mental speculation'. The word 'apare' means 'How can others, who are only recently born, see or understand You?' Why are the others said to be recently born? The answer is given in the words 'kuta pare tasya manah-sarira-dhi-visarga-srsta vayam aprakasa', which means 'So what to speak of others like us, whose mind, body, and intelligence have been created by Brahma from the material modes of goodness, passion, and ignorance, and made into in various forms as demigods, animals, and human beings? We are completely in ignorance, therefore, how can we see or know You, who are the Transcendence?"

3 Why can the others (apare) not see the Lord? The answer is given in the next verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 9.8.22):

"My Lord, You are fully situated in everyone's heart, but the living entities, covered by the material body cannot see You, for they are influenced by the external energy, conducted by the three modes of material nature. Their intelligence being covered by sattva-guna, rajo-guna and tamo-guna, they can see only the actions and reactions of these three modes of material nature. Because of the actions and reactions of the mode of ignorance, whether the living entities are awake or sleeping, they can see only the workings of material nature, they cannot see You Lordship."*

4 The verse says: 'My Lord, You are fully situated in everyone's heart, but the living entities, covered by the material body (ye deha-bhajah) cannot see You (na viduh). They see (vipasyanti) only the material modes of nature (gunan). Sometimes they see only the mode of ignorance. Their intelligence overpowered by the three modes, awake or dreaming they see only the material sense-objects. In dreamless sleep they see only the mode of ignorance. They do not see You, who are beyond the three modes of material nature. You are everywhere. Why do they not see You? Because their minds are bewildered by the illusory potency maya, or by Your illusory potency maya, they cannot understand You. Persons like us cannot understand You. Only Your devotees can understand You."

5 The next verse (Shrimad Bhagavatam 9.8.23) explains:

"O my Lord, sages freed from the influence of the three modes of material nature - sages such as the four Kumaras (Sanat, Sanaka, Sanandana, and Sanatana) - are able to think of You, who are concentrated knowledge. But how can an ignorant person like me think of You?"*

6 This verse says: 'My Lord, how can I think of You, who possess many wonderful transcendental potencies? What is Your form like? It is full of knowledge."

That the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is full of knowledge is described in the scriptures in these words:

"The Vishnu-murtis all had eternal, unlimited forms, full of knowledge, and bliss and existing beyond the influence of time.”*

Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.13.54

“The Lord’s form is spiritual and cannot be seen by the non devotees.”

Shri Vishnu-sahasra-nama-stotra

The meaning is that because the Lord’s form is full of transcendental knowledge it cannot be understood by the materialists. The speaker of this verse therefore says: ‘I am a victim of the three modes of material nature. Therefore I am not able to think of You, O Lord.’

7 At this point the Supreme Lord may protest: “What is the proof that I am as you say?”

The speaker of this verse answers: “The proof is that sages freed from the influence of the three modes of material nature - sages such as the four Kumaras (Sanat, Sanaka, Sanandana, and Sanatana) - are able to think of You. Indeed, they are able to see You directly. As owls have no conception of the sun, so some people cannot understand You. Recently born persons cannot understand You at all, although the wise devotees can see You directly. That is the meaning. The Sruti-sastra explains (Katha Upanisad 2.1.1):

8 “Generally speaking, no one can see the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is beyond the grasp of the material senses. However, one who is intelligent and saintly, and who aspires for liberation, can turn his eyes from matter and become able to see the Supreme Personality of Godhead residing within his heart as the Supersoul.”

9 The method of seeing and understanding the Lord is described in these words of the Mathara-sruti:

“Devotional service brings one to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Devotional service enables one to see the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Devotional service conquers the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Devotional service is more powerful than the Lord Himself.”

10 The scriptures also explains (Katha Upanisad 1.2.23 and Mundaka Upanisad 3.2.3):

“The Supreme Lord is not attained by expert explanations, by vast intelligence, or even by much hearing. He is obtained only by one whom He chooses. To such a person He manifests His own form.”*

11 The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Amsuman to Lord Kapiladeva.

In this sandarbha, Brahman and the Supreme Personality of Godhead (Bhagavan) have been described.
